Mercantile Law – Corporation and Securities Law

Case Digest

UNIVERSITY OF SANTO TOMAS
FACULTY OF CIVIL LAW

LIST OF CASES
Corporation and Securities Law

THE CORPORATION CODE

A. Corporation

1. Definition

2. Attributes of the Corporation

- Benny Hung vs. BPI Finance Corporation, G.R. No. 182398, July 20, 2010
- Rebecca Boyer-Roxas and Guillermo Roxas vs. Hon. Court of Appeals and Heirs of Eugenia V. Roxas, Inc., G.R. No. 100866, July 14, 1992
- Ryuichi Yamamoto vs. Nishino Leather Industries, Inc. and Ikuo Nishino, G.R. No. 150283, April 16, 2008

B. Classes of Corporations

- Pioneer Surety & Insurance Corporation vs. Court of Appeal, 175 SCRA 668 (1989)
- Bases Conversion and Development Authority v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, G.R. No. 205925, [June 20, 2018]

1. Corporation by estoppel

- Reynaldo M. Lozano vs. Hon. Eliezer R. De los Santos, Presiding Judge, RTC, Br. 58, Angeles City; and Antonio Anda, G.R. No. 125221, June 19, 1997
- Lim Tong Lim vs. Philippine Fishing Gear Industries, Inc., G.R. No. 136448, November 3, 1999
- People of the Philippines vs. Engr. Carlos Garcia y Pineda, Patricio Botero y Vales, Luisa Miraples (at large) & Patricio Botero y Vales, G.R. No. 117010, April 18, 1997
- Macasaet vs. Francisco, G.R. No. 156759, June 5, 2013

a. De facto corporation

- Sappari K. Sawadjaanvs. the Honorable Court of Appeals, the Civil Service Commission and Al-amanah Investment Bank of the Philippines, G.R. No. 141735, June 8, 2005
- Missionary Sisters of Our Lady of Fatima v. Alzona, G.R. No. 224307, [August 6, 2018]

b. Government corporation

- Baluyot vs. Holganza, 325 SCRA 248 (2000)

- Feliciano vs. Commission on Audit, 464 Philippine 439 (2004)
- Boy Scouts of the Philippines vs. Commission on Audit, G.R. No. 177131, June 7, 2011
- Liban vs. Gordon, GR No. 175352, January 10, 2011
- Carandang vs. Desierto, G.R. No. 148076, January 12, 2011
- Funa vs. Manila Economic and Cultural Office, GR. No. 193462, February 4, 2014

C. Nationality of Corporations

1. Place of Incorporation Test

2. Control Test

- Roy III vs. Herbosa, G.R. No. 207246, Novmber 22, 2016, En Banc, Caguioa, J.
- Marissa R. Unchuan vs. Antonio J.P. Lozada, Anita Lozada and the Register of Deeds of Cebu City, G.R. No. 172671, April 16, 2009
- Wilson P. Gamboa vs. Finance Secretary Margarito B. Teves, et al., G.R. No. 176579, June 28, 2011
- Heirs of Wilson P. Gamboa vs. Finance Secretary Margarito B. Teves, et al., G.R. No. 176579, October 9, 2012

3. Grandfather Rule

- Narra Nickel Mining and Development Corporation, et al., vs. Redmont Consolidated Mines Corporation, G.R. No. 199580, April 21, 2014
- Narra Nickel Mining and Development Corporation, et al. vs. Redmont Consolidated Mines Corporation, G.R. No. 199580, January 28, 2015

D. Corporate Juridical Personality

1. Doctrine of Separate Juridical Personality

- Lim vs. CA, 323 SCRA 102 (2000)
- PNB vs. Ritratto Group, Inc., 362 SCRA 216 (2001)
- Ricardo S. Silverio, Jr., Esses Development Corporation, and Tri-Star Farms, Inc. vs. Filipino Business Consultants, Inc., G.R. No. 143312, August 12, 2005)
- Jardine Davis, Inc. vs. JRB Realty, Inc., 463 SCRA 555 (2005)
- China Banking Corporation vs. Dyne-Sem Electronics Corporation 494 SCRA 493 (2006)
- Spouses Ramon Nisce vs. Equitable PCI Bank 516 SCRA 231 (2007)
- Ryuichi Yamamoto vs. Nishino Leather Industries, Inc. and Ikuo Nishino 551 SCRA 447 (2008)
- Virgilio S. Delima vs. Susan Mercaida Gois 554 SCRA 731 (2008)
- PEA-PTGWO vs. NLRC 581 SCRA 598 (2009)
- Philippine National Bank vs. Merelo B. Aznar, G.R. No. 171805, May 30, 2011

- Stronghold Insurance Company, Inc. vs. Tomas Cuenca, et. al., G.R. No. 173297, March 6, 2013
- Development Bank of the Philippines vs. Hydro Resources Contractors Corporation, GR. No. 167603, March 13, 2013
- Abbot Laboratories vs. Alacaraz, G.R. No. 192571, July 23, 2013
- Nuccio Saverios vs. Puyat, G.R. No. 186433, November 27, 2013
- Girly G. Ico vs. Systems Technology Institute Inc, et al., G.R. 185100, July 9, 2014
- Palm Avenue Holding Co., Inc and Palm Avenue Realty and Development Corporation vs. Sandiganbayan, G.R. No. 173082, August 6, 2014
- Olongapo City vs. Subic Water and Sewerage Co., Inc., G.R. No. 171626, August 6, 2014
- Gerardo Lanuza Jr. and Antonio O. Olbes vs. BF Corporation, et al., G.R. No. 17438, October 1, 2014
- FVR Skills and Services Exponents, Inc., et al. vs. Jovert Seva et al., G.R. No. 200857, October 22, 2014
- Stradcom Corp. v. Orpilla, G.R. No. 206800, [July 2, 2018]

a. Liability for Torts and Crimes

- Philippine National Bank vs. Court of Appeals, et al., G.R. No. L-27155, May 18, 1978
- Sergio F. Naguiat, doing business under the name and style Sergio F. Naguiat Ent., Inc., & Clark Field Taxi, Inc. vs. National Labor Relations Commission (Third Division), National Organization Of Workingmen and its members, Leonardo T. Galang, et al., G.R. No. 116123, March 13, 1997
- Gregorio Singian, Jr. vs. the Honorable Sandiganbayan and the Presidential Commission on Good Government, G.R. Nos. 160577-94, December 16, 2005
- The Executive Secretary, et al. vs. Court of Appeals, et al., G.R. No. 131719, May 25, 2004
- Edward C. Ong vs. the Court of Appeals and the People of the Philippines, G.R. No. 119858, April 29, 2003
- Alfredo Ching vs. the Secretary of Justice, et al., G. R. No. 164317, February 6, 2006
- Metroheights Subdivision Homeowners Association, Inc. v. CMS Construction and Development Corp., G.R. No. 209359, [October 17, 2018]

b. Recovery of Moral Damages

- Filipinas Broadcasting Network, Inc.,vs. AGO Medical And Educational Center-Bicol Christian College of Medicine, (AMEC-BCCM) and Angelita F. Ago, G.R. No. 141994, January 17, 2005
- Manila Electric Company vs. T.E.A.M. Electronics Corporation, Technology Electronics Assembly and Management Pacific Corporation; and Ultra Electronics Instruments, Inc., G.R. No. 131723, December 13, 2007
- Herman C. Crystal, et al. vs. Bank of the Philippine Islands, G.R. No. 172428, November 28, 2008

2. Doctrine of Piercing the Corporate Veil

- Kukan International Corporation vs. Hon. Judge Amor Reyes, G.R. No. 182729, September 29, 2010
- Gold Line Tours vs. Heirs of Maria Concepcion Lacsa, GR No. 159108, June 18, 2012
- Pacific Rehouse Corporation vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 199687, March 24, 2014
- Eric Godfrey Stanley Livesey V .Binswanger Philippines, Inc. And Keith Elliot, G.R. No. 177493, March 19, 2014
- Prince Transport, Inc. vs. Garcia, G.R. No. 167291, January 12, 2011
- Republic Of The Philippines, Petitioner, - Versus - Mega Pacific Esolutions, Inc., Willy U. Yu, Bonnie S. Yu, Enrique T. Tansipek, Rosita Y. Tansipek, Pedro O. Tan, Johnson W. Fong, Bernard I. Fong, And Lauriano A. Barrios, Respondents. (G.R. No. 184666, June 27, 2016, First Division, Sereno, Cj)
- Erson Ang Lee Doing Business As "Super Lamination Services," Petitioner, - Versus - Samahang Manggaga Wa Ng Super Lamination (SMSLSNAFLU-KMU), Respondent. (G.R. No. 193816, First Division, November 21, 2016, SERENO, CJ)
- Manuela Azucena Mayor, Petitioner, - versus - Edwin Tiu And Damiana Charito Marty, Respondents. (G.R. No. 203770, SECOND DIVISION, November 23, 2016, MENDOZA, J.)
- Reyno C. Dimson, Petitioner, - Versus - Gerry T. Chua, Respondent. (G.R. No. 192318, THIRD DIVISION, December 5, 2016, REYES, J.)

a. Grounds for Application of Doctrine

- Villa Rey Transit, Inc. vs. Eusebio E. Ferrer, Pangasinan Transportation Co., Inc.,and Public Service Commission, G.R. No. L-23893, October 29, 1968
- A.C. Ransom Labor Union-CCLU vs. National Labor Relations Commission, et al., G.R. No. L-69494, May 29, 1987
- Times Transportation Company, Inc. vs. Santos Sotelo, et al., G.R. No. 163786, February 16, 2005
- Pamplona Plantation Company, Inc. vs. Tinghil, 450 SCRA 421 (2005)
- Sps. Pedro and Florencia Violago vs. BA Finance Corporation and Avelino Violago, 559 SCRA 69 (2008)
- Claude P. Bautista vs. Auto Plus Traders Inc., 561 SCRA 223 (2008)
- Siain Enterprises, Inc., vs. Cupertino Realty Corporation, Inc.,et. al. 590 SCRA 435 (2009)
- Arco Pulp and Paper Co., Inc., and Candida Santos vs. Dan T. Lim, doing business under the name and style of Quality Papers & Plastics Products Enterprises, G.R. No. 206806, June 25, 2014
- WPM International Trading Inc., and Warlito Manlapaz vs. Fe Corazon Labayen, G.R. No. 182770, September 17, 2014
- Hacienda Cataywa/Manuel Villanueva vs. Rosario Lorenzo, G.R. No. 179640, March 18, 2015
- Dutch Movers, Inc., Cesar Lee And Yolanda Lee V. Edilberto Lequin, Christopher R. Salvador, Reynaldo L. Singsing, And Raffy B. Mascardo, G.R. No. 210032, April 25, 2017, First Division, DEL CASTILLO, J.

- Rommel M. Zambrano, Et. Al V. Philippine Carpet Manufacturing Corporation/ Pacific Carpet Manufacturing Corporation, Et Al. (G.R. No. 224099, June 21, 2017, Mendoza, J.)
- Maricalum Mining Corporation, V. Ely G. Florentino, Glenn Buenviaje, Rudy J. Gomez, G.R. No. 221813, Third Division, July 23, 2018, Gesmundo, J.

b. Test in Determining Applicability

- Heirs of Fe Tan Uy, represented by her heir, Mauling Uy Lim vs. International Exchange Bank, G.R. No. 166282 & 83, February 13, 2013
- Development Bank of the Philippines vs. Hydro Resources Contractors Corporation, GR. No. 167603, March 13, 2013
- California Manufacturing Company, Inc. V. Advanced Technology System, Inc., G.R. No. 202454, April 25, 2017, First Division, Sereno, C.J
- Luis Juan Virata V. Alejandro Ng Wee, G.R. Nos. 220926, 221058, 221109, 221135 & 221218, July 5, 2017, Third Division, Velasco, Jr. J.
- Veterans Federation Of The Philippines V. Eduardo L. Montenejo, Et Al., G.R. No. 184819, November 29, 2017, Third Division, Velasco, Jr., J.
- International Academy Of Management And Economics (I/Ame) Litton And Company, Inc. V. Litton And Company, Inc., G.R. No. 191525, December 13, 2017, First Division, Sereno, C.J.

E. Incorporation and Organization

- Mariano A. Albert vs. University Publishing Co., Inc., G.R. No. L-19118, January 30, 1965
- MISCI-NACUSIP Local Chapter vs. National Wages and Productivity Commission, 269 SCRA 173 (1997)
- Islamic Directorate of the Philippines vs. Court of Appeals, 272 SCRA 454 (1997)
- International Express Travel & Tour Services, Inc. vs. Hon. Court of Appeals, Henri Kahn, Philippine Football Federation, G.R. No. 119002, October 19, 2000
- Samahanng Optometrists saPilipinas, Ilocos Sur-Abra Chapter, et al. vs. Acebedo International Corporation and the Hon. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 117097, March 21, 1997

1. Promoter

a. Liability of Corporation for Promoter's Contracts

- Rizal Light & Ice Co., Inc. vs. the Municipality of Morong, Rizal and the Public Service Commission,G.R. No. L-20993, September 28, 1968

2. Number and Qualifications of Incorporators

- Nautica Canning Corporation, et al. vs. Roberto C. Yumul, G.R. No. 164588, October 19, 2005

3. Corporate Name — Limitations on Use of Corporate Name

- Republic Planters Bank vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 93073, December 21, 1992
- GSIS Family Bank-Thrift Bank vs. BPI Family Bank, G.R. No. 175278, September 23, 2015
- P.C. Javier & Sons, Inc., et al. vs. Paic Savings & Mortgage Bank, Inc., et al., G.R. No. 129552, June 29, 2005
- Zuellig Freight and Cargo Systems vs. National Labor Relations Commission, et al., G.R. No. 157900, July 22, 2013
- Indian Chamber Of Commerce Phils., Inc. Vs. Filipino Indian Chamber Of Commerce In The Philippines, Inc. (G .R. No. 184008, August 3, 2016, Jardeleza, J.)
- De La Salle Montessori International of Malolos, Inc. v. De La Salle Brothers, Inc., G.R. No. 205548, [February 7, 2018]

4. Corporate Term

- Philippine National Bank vs. Court of First Instance of Rizal, Pasig, et al., G.R. No. 63201, May 27, 1992

5. Minimum Capital Stock and Subscription Requirements

- MSCI-NACUSIP Local Chapter vs. National Wages and Productivity Commission and Monomer Sugar Central, Inc., G.R. No. 125198, March 3, 1997

6. Articles of Incorporation

a. Nature and Function of Articles

b. Contents

- Clavecillia Radio System vs. Hon. Agustin Antillon, as City Judge of the Municipal Court of Cagayan de Oro City and New Cagayan Grocery, G.R. No. L-22238, February 18, 1967
- Hyatt Elevators and Escalators Corporation vs. Goldstar Elevators Phils. Inc., G.R. No. 161026, October 24, 2005

c. Amendment

7. Registration and Issuance of Certificate of Incorporation

8. Adoption of By-Laws

a. Nature and Functions of By-Laws

- John Gokongwei, Jr. vs. Securities and Exchange Commission, et al., G.R. No. L-45911, April 11, 1979

- Citibank, N.A. vs. Hon. Segundino G. Chua, et al., G.R. No. 102300, March 17, 1993
- Loyola Grand Villas Homeowners (South) Association, Inc. vs. Hon. Court of Appeals, Home Insurance And Guaranty Corporation, Emden Encarnacion and Horatio Aycardo, G.R. No. 117188, August 7, 1997
- Forest Hills Golf and Country Club Inc. vs. Gardpro Inc., G.R. No. 164686, October 22, 2014

b. Requisites of Valid By-Laws

- Grace Christian High School vs. Court Of Appeals, Grace Village Association, Inc., Alejandro G. Beltran, and Ernesto L. Go, G.R. No. 108905, October 23, 1997

c. Binding Effects

- China Banking Corporation vs. Court of Appeals, and Valley Golf and Country Club, Inc., G.R. No. 117604, March 26, 1997
- PMI Colleges vs. the National Labor Relations Commission and Alejandro Galvan, G.R. No. 121466, August 15, 1997
- Catherine Ching, Lorenzo Ching, Laurence Ching, And Christine Ching, Petitioners, - Versus - Quezon City Sports Club, Inc.; Members Of The Board Of Directors, Namely: Antonio T. Chua, Margaret Mary A. Rodas, Alejandro G. Yabut, Jr., Robert C. Gaw, Edgardo A. Ho, Romulo D. Sales, Bienvenido Alano, Augusto E. Orosa, And The Finance Manager, Lourdes Ruth M. Lopez, Respondents. (G.R. No. 200150, November 7, 2016, First Division, Leonardo-De Castro, J.)

d. Amendment or Revision

- Cebu Country Club, Inc., et al. vs. Ricardo F. Elizagaque, G.R. No. 160273, January 18, 2008

F. Corporate Powers

1. General Powers, Theory of General Capacity

- National Power Corporation vs. Honorable Abraham P. Vera, Presiding Judge, Regional Trial Court, National Capital Judicial Region, Branch 90, Quezon City and Sea Lion International Port Terminal Services, Inc., G.R. No. 83558, February 27, 1989
- Aurbach vs. Sanitary Wares Manufacturing Corporation, 180 SCRA 130 (1989)
- Benjie B. Georg Represented By Benjamin C. Belarmino, Jr. Vs. Holy Trinity College, Inc. (G .R. No. 190408, July 20, 2016, Perez, J.)
- Lylith B. Fausto, Jonathan Fausto, Rico Alvia, Arsenia Tocloy, Lourdes Adolfo And Anecita Mancita, Petitioners, - Versus - Multi Agri-Forest And Community Development Cooperative (Formerly Maf Camarines Sur Employees Cooperative, Inc.), Respondent. (G.R. No. 213939, Third Division, October 12, 2016, Reyes, J.)

- Gabriel Yap, Sr. Duly Represented By Gilbert Yap And Also In His Personal Capacity, Gabriel Yap, Jr., And Hyman Yap, Vs. Letecia Siao, L Ynel Siao, Janelyn Siao, Eleanor Faye Siao, Shelett Siao And Honeylet Siao (G.R. No. 212493)
- Cebu South Memorial Garden, Inc. Vs. Letecia Siao, L Ynel Siao, Janelyn Siao, Eleanor Faye Siao, Shelett Siao And Honeylet Siao (G.R. No. 212504, June 1, 2016, Perez, J.)
- Ligaya Esguerra, et al. vs. Holcim Philippines, Inc., G.R. No. 182571, September 2, 2013
- Mid Pasig Land and Development Corporation vs. Tablante, G.R. No. 162924, February 4, 2010; PNCC Skyway Traffic Management and Security Division Workers Organization vs. PNCC Skyway Corporation, GR No. 171231, February 17, 201
- Esguerra vs. Holcim Philippines G.R. No. 182571, September 2, 2013
- Spouses Afulugencia vs. Metropolitan Bank and Trust Co. G.R. No. 185145, February 05, 2014

2. Specific Powers, Theory of Specific Capacity

a. Power to Extend or Shorten Corporate Term

- Philippine National Bank vs. the Court of First Instance of Rizal, Pasig, et al., G.R. No. 63201, May 27, 1992

b. Power to Increase or Decrease Capital Stock or Incur, Create, Increase Bonded Indebtedness

- Datu Tagoranao Benito vs. Securities & Exchange Commission, 123 SCRA 722 (1983)
- Central Textile Mills, Inc. vs. National Wages and Productivity Commission, et al., G.R. No. 104102, August 7, 1996
- Majority Stockholders of Ruby Industrial Corporation v. Miguel Lim, in his Personal Capacity as Stockholder of Ruby Industrial Corporation and Representing The Minority Stockholders of Ruby Industrial Corporation and The Management Committee of Ruby Industrial Corporation, G.R. No. 165887, June 6, 2011, J. Villarama, Jr.

c. Power to Deny Pre-Emptive Rights

d. Power to Sell or Dispose of Corporate Assets

- Rosita Peña vs. the Court of Appeals, Spouses Rising T. Yap and Catalina Yap, Pampanga Bus Co., Inc., Jesus Domingo, Joaquin Briones, Salvador Bernardez, Marcelino Enriquez and Edgardo A. Zabat, G.R. No. 91478, February 7, 1991
- Islamic Directorate of the Philippines, Manuel F. Perea and Securities & Exchange Commission,vs. Court of Appeals And Iglesia Ni Cristo, G.R. No. 117897, May 14, 1997
- Y-1 Leisure Philippines, Inc. vs. Yu, G.R. No. 207161, September 8, 2015

e. Power to Acquire Own Shares

- Boman Environmental Development Corporation vs. Hon. Court of Appeals and Nilcar Y. Fajilan, G.R. No. 77860, November 22, 1988

f. Power to Invest Corporate Funds in another Corporation or Business

- Heirs of Antonio Pael and Andrea Alcantara and CrisantoPael vs. Court of Appeals, Jorge H. Chin and Renato B. Mallari, G.R. No. 133547, February 10, 2000

g. Power to Declare Dividends

- Madrigal & Company, Inc. vs. Hon. Ronaldo B. Zamora, et al., G.R. No. L-48237, June 30, 1987

h. Power to Enter Into Management Contract

i. Ultra Vires Acts

i. Consequences of Ultra Vires Acts

- Republic of the Philippines vs. Acoje Mining Company, Inc., G.R. No. L-18062, February 28, 1963
- Visayan vs. National Labor Relations Commission, 196 SCRA 410 (1991)
- Yao Ka Sin Trading vs. Court of Appeals, 209 SCRA 763 (1992)
- Metropolitan Bank & Trust Co. vs. Quilts & All, Inc., 222 SCRA 480 (1993); See also Lee vs. Court of Appeals, 345 SCRA 579 (2000)
- Atrium Management Corporation vs. Court of Appeals, et al., G.R. No. 109491, February 28, 2001
- Maria Clara Pirovana, et al. vs. the De La Rama Steamship Co., G.R. No. L-5377, December 29, 1954
- University Of Mindanao, Inc., Petitioner, V. Bangko Sentral Pilipinas, Et Al.,Respondents. (G.R. No. 194964-65, January 11, 2016, Leonen,J.)
- Office Of The Ombudsman V. Antonio Z. De Guzman, G.R. No. 197886, October 4, 2017, Third Division, Leonen, J.
- Development Bank of the Philippines v. Commission on Audit, G.R. No. 210838, [July 3, 2018]

3. How Exercised

a. By the Shareholders

- Citibank, N.A. vs. Chua, G.R. No. 102300, March 17, 1993

b. By the Board of Directors

- Lopez Realty, Inc., and Asuncion Lopez Gonzales vs. Florentina Fontecha, et al., and the National Labor Relations Commission, G.R. No. 76801 August 11, 1995
- Premium Marble Resources, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 96551, November 4, 1996
- Tam Wing Tak vs. Hon. Ramon P. Makasiar, G.R. No. 122452, January 29, 2001

c. By the Officers

- The Board of Liquidators, representing the Government of the Republic of the Philippines vs. Heirs of Maximo M. Kalaw, Juan Bocar, Estate of the deceased Casimiro Garcia, and Leonor Moll, G.R. No. L-18805, August 14, 1967
- Rural Bank Of Milaor (Camarines Sur) vs. Francisca Ocfemia, Rowena Barrogo, Marife O. Niño, Felicisimo Ocfemia, Renato Ocfemia Jr., and Winston Ocfemia, G.R. No. 137686, February 8, 2000
- Westmont Bank (formerly Associated Citizens Bank and now United Overseas Bank, Phils.) And The Provincial Sheriff of Rizal vs. Inland Construction and Development Corp., G.R. No. 123650, March 23, 2009
- Associated Bank vs. Spouses Rafael and Monaliza Pronstroller, G.R. No. 148444, July 14, 2008
- Banate vs. Philippine Countryside Rural Bank (Liloan, Cebu), Inc., G.R. No. 163825, July 13, 2010
- Megan Sugar Corporation vs. RTC of Ilo-ilo Br. 68, G.R. no. 170352, June 1, 2011
- Advance Paper Corporation vs. Arma Traders Corporation, G.R. No 176897, December 11, 2013.

4. Trust Fund Doctrine

- Ong Yong, et al. vs. David S. Tiu, et al., G.R. No. 144476 & G.R. No. 144629, April 8, 2003
- Ryuichi Yamamoto vs. Nishino Leather Industries, Inc. and Ikuo Nishino, G.R. No. 150283, April 16, 2008
- Donnina C. Halley V. Printwell, Inc., G.R. No. 157549, May 30, 2011, J. Bersamin
- Securities And Exchange Commission (Sec) And Insurance Commission (Ic) V. College Assurance Plan Philippines, Inc., G.R. No. 202052, Third Divison, March 07, 2018, Bersamin, J.

G. Board of Directors and Trustees

1. Doctrine of Centralized Management

- Bitong vs. Court of Appeals, 292 SCRA 503 (1998)
- Citibank, N.A. vs. Chua, 220 SCRA 75 (1993)
- Colegio Medico-Farmaceutico De Filipinas, Inc. v. Lim, G.R. No. 212034, [July 2, 2018]

2. Business Judgment Rule

- Sales vs. Securities and Exchange Commission, 169 SCRA 109 (1989)
- Filipinas Port Services, Inc., represented by stockholders, Eliodoro C. Cruz and Mindanao Terminal and Brokerage Services, Inc. vs. Victoriano S. Go, et al., G.R. No. 161886, March 16, 2007
- Matling Industrial and Commercial Corporation, et al. vs. Ricardo R. Coros, G.R. No. 157802, October 13, 2010

3. Tenure, Qualifications and Disqualifications of Directors or Trustees

- Grace Christian High School vs. Court of Appeals, Grace Village Association, Inc., Alejandro G. Beltran, and Ernesto L. Go, G.R. No. 108905, October 23, 1997
- Ramon C. Lee and Antonio DM. Lacdao vs. the Hon. Court of Appeals, Sacoba Manufacturing Corp., Pablo Gonzales, Jr. and Thomas Gonzales, G.R. No. 93695, February 4, 1992

4. Elections

- Paul Lee Tan vs. Paul Sycip and Merritto Lim, G.R. No. 153468, August 17, 2006
- Estate Of Dr. Juvencio P. Ortañez, Represented By Divina Ortañez-Enderes, Ligaya Novicio, And Cesar Ortañez, Petitioners, V. Jose C. Lee, Benjamin C. Lee, Carmencita Tan, Angel Ong, Ma. Paz Casal-Lee, John Oliver Pascual, Conrado Cruz, Jr., Brenda Ortañez, And Julie Ann Parado And John Does, Respondents. (G.R. No. 184251, March 09, 2016, Perez, J.)

a. Cumulative Voting/Straight Voting

- SEC-OGC Opinion No. 14-10, Re: Cumulative Voting in Condominium Corporation, June 2, 2014

b. Quorum

- Lanuza vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 131394, March 28, 2005

5. Removal

- Raniel vs. Jochico, G.R. No. 153413, March 1, 2007

6. Filling of Vacancies

- Valle Verde Country Club, Inc., et al. vs. Victor Africa, G.R. No. 151969, September 4, 2009
- Bernas vs. Cinco, G.R. No. 163356, July 21, 2015

7. Compensation

- Western Institute of Technology, Inc., et al. vs. Ricardo T. Salas, et al., G.R. No. 113032, August 21, 1997

8. Fiduciary Duties and Liability Rules

- Benguet Electric Cooperative, Inc. vs. National Relations Commission, 209 SCRA 55 (1992)
- Cebu Country Club Inc., et al. vs. Elizagaque 542 SCRA 65 (2008)
- Heirs of Fe Tan Uy, represented by her heir, Mauling Uy Lim vs. International Exchange Bank, G.R. No. 166282 & 83, February 13, 2013
- Antonio C. Carag vs. National Labor Relations Commission, et al., G.R. No. 147590, April 2, 2007
- United Coconut Planters Bank vs. Planters Products, Inc., Janet Layson and Gregory Grey, G.R. No. 179015, June 13, 2012
- Mercy Vda. de Roxas vs. Our Lady's Foundation, Inc., G.R. No. 182378, March 6, 2013
- Rolando DS. Torres vs. Rural Bank of San Juan, Inc.,et al., G.R. No. 184520, March 13, 2013
- Polymer Rubber Corporation vs. Ang, G.R. No. 185160, July 24, 2013
- Elizabeth M. Gagui vs. Simeon Dejeroand TeodoroPermejo, G.R. No. 196036, October 23, 2013
- Presidential Commission on Good Government v. Gutierrez, G.R. No. 189800, [July 9, 2018]

9. Responsibility for Crimes and Damages

- Edward C. Ong vs. the Court of Appeals and the People of the Philippines, G.R. No. 119858, April 29, 2003
- Alfredo Ching vs. the Secretary of Justice, et al., G. R. No. 164317, February 6, 2006
- Federated Lpg Dealers Association, Petitioner, -Versus- Ma. Cristina L. Del Rosario, Celso E. Escobido U, Shiela M. Escobido, And Resty P. Capili, Respondents. (G.R. No. 202639, November 9, 2016, Second Division, Del Castillo, J.)

10. Inside Information

11. Contracts

a. By Self-Dealing Directors with the Corporation

b. Between Corporations with Interlocking Directors

- Development Bank of the Philippines vs. Honorable Court of Appeals and Remington Industrial Sales Corporation , G.R. No. 126200, August 16, 2001

12. Executive Committee

- Filipinas Port Services Inc. vs. Go, G.R. No. 161886, March 16, 2007

13. Meetings

- People of the Philippines vs. Hermenegildo Dumlao y Castiliano and Emilio La'o y Gonzales, G.R. No. 168918, March 2, 2009
- Lopez Realty Inc,m and Asuncion Lopez-Gonzales vs. Spouses Reynaldo Tanjangco and Maria Luisa Arguelles-Tanjangco, G.R. No. 154291, November 12, 2014

a. Quorum

- Rosita Peña vs. the Court of Appeals, Spouses Rising T. Yap and Catalina Yap, Pampanga Bus Co., Inc., Jesus Domingo, Joaquin Briones, Salvador Bernardez, Marcelino Enriquez and Edgardo A. Zabat, G.R. No. 91478, February 7, 1991
- Villongco v. Yabut, G.R. Nos. 225022 & 225024, [February 5, 2018]

H. Stockholders and Members

1. Rights of a Stockholder and Members

a. Doctrine of Equality of Shares

- Commissioner of Internal Revenue vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 108576, January 20, 1999.

2. Participation in Management

a. Proxy

- Government Service Insurance System vs. the Hon. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 183905, April 16, 2009

b. Voting Trust

- Lee vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 93695, February 4, 1992

3. Proprietary Rights

a. Right of Appraisal

- Turner vs. Lorenzo Shipping Corporation, G.R. No. 157479, November 24, 2010

b. Right to Inspect

- John Gokongwei, Jr. vs. Securities and Exchange Commission, et al., G.R. No. L-45911, April 11, 1979
- Gonzales vs. Philippine National Bank, 122 SCRA 489 (1983)
- Republic vs. Sandiganbayan, 199 SCRA 39 (1991)
- Victor Africa vs. Presidential Commission on Good Government, et al., G.R. No. 83831, January 9, 1992
- Terelay Investment and Development Corporation vs. Yulo, G.R. No. 160924, August 5, 2015
- Aderito Z. Yujuico and Bonifacio C. Sumbilla vs. Cezar T. Quiambao and Eric C. Pilapil, G.R. No. 180416, June 02, 2014
- Alfredo L. Chua, Tomas L. Chua And Mercedes P. Diaz, Petitioners, - Versus - People Of The Philippines, Respondent. (G.R. No. 216146, August 24, 2016, Third Division, Reyes, J.)
- Alejandro D.C. Roque V. People Of The Philippines (G.R. No. 211108, June 7, 2017, Tijam, J.)

c. Pre-Emptive Right

- SEC Letter-Opinion Dated March 10, 2000
- Majority of Stockholders of Ruby Industrial Corporation vs. Lim, GR No. 165887, June 6, 2011

d. Right to Vote

- Castillo vs. Balinghasay, G.R. No. 150976, October 18, 2004.

e. Right to Dividends

- Nielson & Company, Inc., vs. Lepanto Consolidated Mining Company, G.R. No. L-21601, December 17, 1966
- Nora A. Bitong vs. Court of Appeals, et al., G.R. No. 123553, July 13, 1998)

f. Right of First Refusal

- Republic vs. Sandiganbayan, 346 SCRA 760 (2000)
- J.G. Summit Holdings, Inc.,vs. Court of Appeals, et al. G.R. No. 124293, January 31, 2005

4. Remedial Rights

a. Individual Suit

- Cua Jr. vs. Tan, G.R. No. 181455-56, December 4, 2009

b. Representative Suit

c. Derivative Suit

- Reyes vs. Tan, 3 SCRA 198 (1961)
- Republic Bank vs. Cuaderno, 19 SCRA 671 (1967)
- San Miguel Corporation vs. Kahn, 176 SCRA 448 (1989)
- Bitong vs. Court of Appeals, 292 SCRA 503 (1998)
- Lim vs. Lim-Yu, 352 SCRA 216 (2001)
- Virginia O. Gochan, et al. vs. Richard G. Young, et al., G.R. No. 131889, March 12, 2001
- Oscar C. Reyes vs. Hon. Regional Trial Court of Makati, Branch 142, Zenith Insurance Corporation, and Rodrigo C. Reyes, G.R. No. 165744, August 11, 2008
- Yu vs. Yukayguan, 588 SCRA 589 (2009)
- Hi- Yield, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 590 SCRA 548 (2009)
- Legaspi Towers 300, Inc. vs. Muer, G.R. No. 170783, June 18, 2012
- Ang, for and in behalf of Sunrise Marketing (Bacolod), Inc. vs. Spouses Ang, G.R. No. 201675, June 19, 2013
- Nestor Ching and Andrew Wellington vs. Subic Bay Golf and Country Club Inc., et al., G.R. No. 174353, September 10, 2014
- Alfredo Villamor Jr. vs. John S. Umale in Substitution of Hernando Balmores, G.R. No. 172843, September 24, 2014,
- Marcelino M. Florete, Jr., Maria Elena F. Muyco And Raul A. Muyco, Petitioners, V. Rogelio M. Florete, Imelda C. Florete, Diamel Corporation, Rogelio C. Florete Jr., And Margaret Ruth C. Florete, Respondents. (G.R. No. 174909, January 20, 2016, 2016, Leonen, J.)
- Rogelio M. Florete Sr., Petitioner, V. Marcelino M. Florete, Jr., Maria Elena F. Muyco And Raul A. Muyco, Respondents. (G.R. No. 177275, January 20, 2016, Leonen, J.)
- Concorde Condominium, Inc., By Itself And Comprising The Unit Owners Of Concorde Condominium Building, Petitioner, V. Augusto H. Baculio; New Ppi Corporation; Asian Security And Investigation Agency And Its Security Guards; Engr. Nelson B. Morales, In His Capacity As Building Official Of The Makati City Engineering Department; Supt. Ricardo C. Perdigon, In His Capacity As City Fire Marshal Of The Makati City Fire Station; F/C Supt. Santiago E. Laguna, In His Capacity As Regional Director Of The Bureau Of Fire Protection-Ncr, And Any And All Persons Acting With Or Under Them, Respondents. (G.R. No. 203678, February 17, 2016, Peralta, J.)
- Lu Ym v. Lu Ym, Sr., G.R. Nos. 219902 219903 & 219943-44 (Notice), [January 17, 2018]

5. Obligation of a Stockholder

- Edward A. Keller & Co., Ltd. vs. COB Group Marketing, Inc., 141 SCRA 86 (1986)
- Neugene Marketing, Inc.,vs. Court of Appeals, 303 SCRA 295 (1999)
- DONNINA C. HALLEY v. PRINTWELL, INC., G.R. No. 157549, 30 May 2011, Third Division, Bersamin, J.

6. Meetings

- Corazon H. Ricafort, Jose Manuel H. Ricafort And Marie Grace H. Ricafort,Petitioners, V. The Honorable Isaias P. Dicdican, The Honorable Ramon M. Bato, Jr., And The Honorable Eduardo B. Peralta, Jr., In Their Official Capacities As Members Of The Special Fourteenth Division Of The Court Of Appeals, Nationwide Development Corporation, Roberto R. Romulo, Conrado T. Calalang, Alfredo I. Ayala, John Engle, Leocadio Nitorreda And Luis Manuel Gatmaitan,Respondents. (G.R. Nos. 202647-50, March 09, 2016)
  Corazon H. Ricafort, Jose Manuel H. Ricafort And Marie Grace H. Ricafort,Petitioners, V. Roberto R. Romulo, Conrado T. Calalang, Alfredo I. Ayala, John Engle, Leocadio Nitorreda, Nationwide Development Corporation And Luis Manuel L. Gatmaitan, Respondents. (G.R. Nos. 205921-24, March 09, 2016, Reyes, J.)
- Simny G. Guy, As Minority Stockholder And For And In Behalf Of Goodland Company, Inc., Petitioner, V. Gilbert G. Guy, Alvin Agustin T. Ignacio And John And/Or Jane Does, Respondents. (G.R. No. 184068, April 19, 2016, Sereno, C.J.)
- Lydia Lao V. Yao Bio Lim, G.R. No. 201306, August 9, 2017, Second Division, Leonen, J.

a. Quorum

- Jesus V. Lanuza, et al. vs. Court of Appeals, et al., G.R. No. 131394, March 28, 2005

I. Capital Structure

1. Subscription Agreements

- Ong Yong, et al. vs. David S. Tiu, et al., G.R. No. 144476 & G.R. No. 144629, April 8, 2003
- INTERPORT RESOURCES CORPORATION vs. SECURITIES SPECIALIST, INC., and R.C. LEE SECURITIES INC. (G .R. No. 154069, June 6, 2016, BERSAMIN, J.)

2. Shares of Stock

a. Nature of Stock

- Stockholders of F. Guanson vs. Register of Deeds of Manila, 6 SCRA 373 (1962)
- Philippine National Bank vs. Bitulok Sawmill, Inc., 23 SCRA 1366 (1968)
- Rivera vs. Florendo, 144 SCRA 643 (1986)
- De Erguiga vs. Court of Appeals, 178 SCRA 1 (1989)
- Embassy Farms, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 188 SCRA 492 (1990)
- Tan vs. Securities and Exchange Commission, 206 SCRA 740 (1992)
- Razon vs. Intermediate Appellate Court, 207 SCRA 234 (1992)
- Rural Bank of Salinas, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 210 SCRA 510 (1992)
- Torres vs. Court of Appeals, 270 SCRA 493 (1997)

- China Banking Corporation vs. Court of Appeals, 270 SCRA 503 (1997)
- Bitong vs. Court of Appeals, 292 SCRA 503 (1998)
- Thomson vs. Court of Appeals, 298 SCRA 280 (1998)
- Garcia vs. Jomouad, 323 SCRA 424 (2000)
- Rural Bank of Lipa City, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 366 SCRA 188 (2001). See also Batangas Laguna Tayabas Bus Company, Inc., et al., vs. Benjamin Bitanga, et al., 362 SCRA 635 (2001)
- Ponce vs. Alsons Cement Corporation, 393 SCRA 602 (2002)
- Republic of the Philippines vs. Sandiganbayan and Victor Africa, 402 SCRA 84 (2003)
- Republic vs. Estate of Hans Menzi, 476 SCRA (2005)
- Nautica Canning Corporation vs. Yumul 473 SCRA 415 (2005)
- Trans Middle East (Phils.) vs. Sandiganbayan. 490 SCRA 455 (2006)
- Pacific Basin Securities vs. Oriental Petroleum 531 SCRA 667 (2007)
- Valley Golf and Country Club, Inc., vs. Vda. De Caram 585 SCRA 218 (2009)
- Calatagan Golf Club, Inc. vs. Clemente, Jr. 585 SCRA 300 (2009)
- Joselito Musni Puno vs. Puno Enterprises, Inc., represented by Jesusa Puno, G.R. No. 177066, September 11, 2009
- Marsh Thomson vs. Court of Appeals and the American Champer of Commerce of the Philippines, Inc., G.R. No. 116631, October 28, 1998
- Majority of Stockholders of Ruby Industrial Corporation vs. Lim, G.R. No. 165887, June 6, 2011
- Africa vs. Hon. Sandiganbayan, G.R. Nos. 172222/G.R. No. 174493/ G.R. No. 184636, November 11, 2013

b. Subscription Agreements

- Philippine National Bank vs. Bitulok Sawmill, Inc., et al., G.R. Nos. L-24177-85, June 29, 1968

c. Classes of Shares of Stock

- Republic Planters Bank vs. Hon. Enrique A. Agana, Sr., as Presiding Judge, Court of First Instance of Rizal, Branch XXVIII, Pasay City, Robes-Francisco Realty & Development Corporation and Adalia F. Robes, G.R. No. 51765, March 3, 1997

3. Payment of Balance of Subscription

a. Call by Board of Directors

b. Notice Requirement

c. Sale of Delinquent Shares

i. Effect of Delinquency

- Calatagan Golf Club, Inc. vs. Sixto Clemente, Jr., G.R. No. 165443, April 16, 2009

ii. Call by Resolution of the Board of Directors

- Apocada vs. National Labor Relations Commission, 172 SCRA 442 (1989)

4. Certificate of Stock

a. Nature of the Certificate

- Stockholders of F. Guanzon and Sons, Inc. vs. Register of Deeds of Manila, G.R. No. L-18216, October 30, 1962
- Alfonso S. Tan vs. Securities and Exchange Commission, G.R. No. 95696 March 3, 1992
- Nora A. Bitongvs. Court of Appeals, et al., G.R. No. 123553, July 13, 1998

b. Negotiability

i. Requirements for Valid Transfer of Stocks

- Enrique Razon vs. Intermediate Appellate Court and Vicente B. Chuidian, in his capacity as Administrator of the Estate of the Deceased Juan T. Chuidian, G.R. No. 74306, March 16, 1992

- Rural Bank of Salinas, Inc. vs. Securities and Exchange Commission, et al., G.R. No. 96674, June 26, 1992
- China Banking Corporation vs. Court of Appeals, and Valley Golf and Country Club, Inc., G.R. No. 117604, March 26, 1997
- Nemesio Garcia vs. Nicolas Jomouad, Ex-Officio Provincial Sheriff of Cebu, and Spouses Jose Atinon& Sally Atinon, G.R. No. 133969, January 26, 2000
- The Rural Bank of Lipa City, Inc., et al. vs. Honorable Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 124535, September 28, 2001
- Vicente C. Ponce vs. Alsons Cement Corporation, and Francisco M. Giron, Jr., G.R. No. 139802, December 10, 2002
- Fil-Estate Golf and Development vs. Vertex Sales and Trading Inc., G.R. No. 202079, June 10, 2013
- Forest Hills Golf & Country Club vs. Vertex Sales and Trading Inc.G.R. No. 202205, March 6, 2013
- ANNA TENG, Petitioner, v. SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION (SEC) AND TING PING LAY, Respondents. (G.R. No. 184332, February 17, 2016, REYES, J.)
- JOSEPH OMAR O. ANDAYA vs. RURAL BANK OF CABADBARAN, INC., DEMOSTHENES P. ORAIZ and RICARDO D. GONZALEZ (G.R. No. 188769, August 3, 2016, SERENO, CJ)
- Tee Ling Kiat v. Ayala Corp., G.R. No. 192530, [March 7, 2018]
- Florete, Sr. v. Florete, Jr., G.R. No. 223321, [April 2, 2018]
- Legaspi y Navera v. People, G.R. Nos. 225753 & 225799 , [October 15, 2018]

c. Issuance

i. Full Payment

- Irineo S. Baltazar vs. Lingayen Gulf Electric Power, Co., Inc., G.R. No. L-16236, June 30, 1965

5. Stock and Transfer Book

a. Contents

- Jesus V. Lanuza, et al. vs. Court of Appeals, et al., G.R. No. 131394, March 28, 2005

b. Who May Make Valid Entries

- Manuel A. Torres, Jr., (Deceased), et al. vs. Court of Appeals, et al., G.R. No. 120138, September 5, 1997

J. Dissolution and Liquidation

- Chase vs. Buencamino, 136 SCRA 365 (1985)
- Chung Ka Bio vs. Intermediate Appellate Court, 163 SCRA 534 (1988)
- Aguirre vs. FQB +7, Inc., G.R. No. 170770, January 9 2013
- Alabang Development Corporation vs. Alabang Hills Village Association and Rafael Tinio, G.R. No. 187456, June 02, 2014
- Rich v. Paloma III, G.R. No. 210538, [March 7, 2018]

1. Modes of Dissolution

a. Voluntary

i. Where No Creditors Are Affected

- Teodoro B. Vesagas and Wilfred D. Asis vs. the Honorable Court of Appeals and DelfinoRaniel and HelendaRaniel, G.R. No. 142924, December 5, 2001

ii. Where Creditors Are Affected

iii. By Shortening of Corporate Term

b. Involuntary

i. By Expiration of Corporate Term

- Philippine National Bank vs. Court of First Instance of Rizal, Pasig, et al., G.R. No. 63201, May 27, 1992

ii. Failure to Organize and Commence Business Within 2 Years from Incorporation

iii. Legislative Dissolution

iv. Dissolution by the SEC on Grounds under Existing Laws

- PDIC vs. BIR, G.R. No. 158261, December 18, 2006

2. Methods of Liquidation

a. By the Corporation Itself

- Yu vs. Yukayguan, G.R. No. 177549, June 18, 2009

b. Conveyance to a Trustee within a Three-Year Period

- Carlos Gelano and Guillermina Mendoza De Gelano vs. the Honorable Court of Appeals and Insular Sawmill, Inc., G.R. No. L-39050 February 24, 1981
- Rene Knecht and Knecht, Inc. vs. United Cigarette Corp., represented by Encarnacion Gonzales Wong, and Eduardo Bolima, Sheriff, Regional Trial Court, Branch 151, Pasig City, G.R. No. 139370, July 4, 2002

c. By Management Committee or Rehabilitation Receiver

- Alemar's Sibal & Sons, Inc. vs. Honorable Jesus M. Elbinias, in his capacity as the Presiding Judge of Regional Trial Court, National Capital Region, Branch CXLI (141), Makati, and G.A. Yupangco& Co., Inc., G.R. No. 75414 June 4, 1990
- Alfredo Villamor Jr. vs. John S. Umale in Substitution of Hernando Balmores, G.R. No. 172843, September 24, 2014
- Sps. Aurelio Hiteroza And Cynthia Hiteroza, Petitioners, - Versus - Charito S. Cruzada, President And Chairman, Christ's Achievers Montessori, Inc., And Christ's Achievers Montessori, Inc., Respondents. (G.R. No. 203527, June 27, 2016, Second Division, Brion J)

d. Liquidation after Three Years

- National Abaca & Other Fibers Corporation vs. Pore, 2 SCRA 989 (1961). See, however, Gelano and Reburiano cases, infra
- Clemente vs. Court of Appeals, 242 SCRA 717 (1995) . See also Reburiano vs. Court of Appeals, 301 SCRA 342 (1999)
- Philippine National Bank vs. Bitulok Sawmill Inc., SCRA 269.
- Paramount Insurance Corp. vs. A.C. Ordoñez Corporation and Franklin Suspine, G.R. No. 175109, August 6, 2008
- Lucia Barramedavda. de Ballesteros vs. Rural Bank of Canaman, Inc., represented by its liquidator, the Philippine Deposit Insurance Corporation, G.R. No. 176260, November 24, 2010

- Vigilla vs. Philippine College of Criminology, GR No. 200094, June 10, 2013
- ALABANG DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION vs. ALABANG HILLS VILLAGE ASSOCIATION and RAFAEL TINIO, G.R. No. 187456, June 2, 2014, J. Peralta
- Reyes v. Bancom Development Corp., G.R. No. 190286, [January 11, 2018]

K. Other Corporations

1. Close Corporations

a. Characteristics of a Close Corporation

- Manuel R. Dulay Enterprises, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 225 SCRA 678 (1993)
- San Juan Structural and Steel Fabricators, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, Motorich Sales Corporation, Nenita Lee Gruenberg, ACL Development Corp. and JNM Realty and Development Corp., G.R. No. 129459, September 29, 1998

- Sergio F. Naguiat, doing business under the name and style Sergio F. NaguiatEnt., Inc., & Clark Field Taxi, Inc.,vs. National Labor Relations Commission (Third Division), National Organization Of Workingmen and its members, Leonardo T. Galang, et al., G.R. No. 116123, March 13, 1997
- Bustos v. Millians Shoe, Inc., G.R. No. 185024, April 24, 2017, SERENO, C.J.

b. When Board Meeting is Unnecessary or Improperly Held

- Manuel R.Dulay Enterprises, Inc., VirgilioE. Dulay and Nepomuceno Redovan vs. the Honorable Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 91889 August 27, 1993

e. Pre-Emptive Right
f. Amendment of Articles of Incorporation
g. Deadlocks

2. Non-Stock Corporations

a. Treatment of Profits

b. Distribution of Assets upon Dissolution

- Ao-As vs. CA 491 SCRA 339 (2006)
- Petronilo J. Barayuga vs. Adventist University of the Philippines, through its Board of Trustees, represented by its Chairman, Nestor D. Dayson, G.R. No. 168008, August 17, 2011

3. Foreign Corporations

a. Bases of Authority over Foreign Corporations

i. Consent

- Eriks PTE. Ltd. vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 118843, February 6, 1997

ii. Doctrine of "Doing Business" (related to definition under the Foreign Investments Act, R.A. No. 7042)

- Wang Laboratories, Inc., vs. Mendoza, 156 SCRA 44 (1987)
- Marubeni Nederland B.V. vs. Tensuan, 190 SCRA 105 (1990)
- Merrill Lynch Futures, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 211 SCRA 824 (1992)
- Philip Morris, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 224 SCRA 576 (1993)
- Signetics Corporation vs. Court of Appeals, 225 SCRA 737 (1993)
- George Grotjahn GBBH & Co. vs. Isnani, 235 SCRA 216 (1994)
- Litton Mill, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 256 SCRA 696 (1996)

- Communication Materials and Design, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 260 SCRA 673 (1996)
- Columbia Pictures, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 261 SCRA 144 (1996)
- Hahn vs. Court of Appeals, 266 SCRA 537 (1997)
- Eriks Pte., Ltd. vs. Court of Appeals, 267 SCRA 567 (1997)
- Avon Insurance PLC vs. Court of Appeals, 278 SCRA 312 (1997)
- Hutchison Ports Philippines Limited vs. Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority, 339 SCRA 34 (2000)
- Lorenzo Shipping Corp. vs. Chubb and Sons, 431 SCRA 266 (2004)
- Expertravel & Tours, Inc. vs. CA, 459 SCRA 147 (2005)
- B. Van Zuiden Bros Ltd. vs. GTVL Manufacturing Industries, 523 SCRA 233 (2007)
- Rimbunan Hijau Group of Companies vs. Oriental Wood Processing Corporation, 470 SCRA 650 (2005)
- Aboitiz Shipping Corp. vs. Insurance Co. of North America, 561 SCRA 262 (2008)
- Cargill, Inc., vs. Intra Strata Assurance Corporation, G.R. No. 168266, March 15, 2010
- Hutchison Ports Philippines Limited vs. Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority, International Container Terminal Services Inc., Royal Port Services, Inc., and the Executive Secretary, G.R. No. 131367, August 31, 2000
- The Home Insurance Company vs. Eastern Shipping Lines, G.R. No. L-34382 July 20, 1983
- Steelcase, Inc. vs. Design International Selections, Inc., G.R. No. 171995, April 18, 2012

b. Necessity of a License to Do Business

- Antam Consolidated, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 143 SCRA 534 (1986)

c. Personality to Sue

- Bulakhidas vs. Navarro, 142 SCRA 1 (1986)
- Converse Rubber Corporation vs. Universal Rubber Products Inc., 147 SCRA 154 (1987)

- Top-Weld Manufacturing, Inc. vs. Eced, S.A., 138 SCRA 118. See also Granger Associates vs. Microwave Systems, Inc., 189 SCRA 631 (1990)
- MR Holdings, Ltd. vs. Sheriff Carlos P. Bajar, Sheriff Ferdinand M. Jandusay, Solidbank Corporation, and Marcopper Mining Corporation, G.R. No. 138104, April 11, 2002
- Global Business Holdings, Inc., vs. Surecomp Software, B.V., G.R. No. 173463, October 13, 2010

d. Instances When Unlicensed Foreign Corporations May Be Allowed to Sue Isolated Transactions

- Steelcase, Inc., vs. Design International Selections, Inc., G.R. No. 171995, April 18, 2012

L. Mergers and Consolidations

1. Definition and Concept

- Edward J. Nell Company vs. Pacific Farms, Inc., 15 SCRA 415 (1965)
- Associated Bank vs. Court of Appeals and Lorenzo Sarmiento, Jr., G.R. No. 123793, June 29, 1998
- SME Bank Inc. vs. Gaspar, G.R. No. 186641, October 8, 2013
- Commission of Internal Revenue vs. Bank of Commerce, G.R. No. 180529, November 25, 2013
- Bank of Commerce vs. Radio Philippines Network Inc., et al., G.R. No. 195615, April 21, 2014
- Bank of Commerce v. Heirs of Dela Cruz, G.R. No. 211519, August 14, 2017, Justice Bersamin

2. Constituent vs. Consolidated Corporation

- John F. McLeod vs. National Labor Relations Commission (First Division), et al., G.R. No. 146667, January 23, 2007

3. Effectivity

- Philippine National Bank & National Sugar Development Corporation vs. Andrada Electric & Engineering Company, G.R. No. 142936, April 17, 2002
- Mindanao Savings and Loan Association, Inc., represented by its Liquidator, the Philippine Deposit Insurance Corporation vs. Edward Willkom; Gilda Go; Remedios Uy; Malayo Bantuas, in his capacity as the Deputy Sheriff of Regional Trial Court, Branch 3, Iligan City; and the Register of Deeds of Cagayan de Oro City, G.R. No. 178618, October 11, 2010

4. Effects

- Associated Bank vs. Court of Appeals and Lorenzo Sarmiento, Jr., G.R. No. 123793, June 29, 1998
- Babst vs. Court of Appeals, 350 SCRA 341 (2001)
- Omictin vs. Court of Appeals 512 SCRA 70 (2007)
- Spouses Ramon Nisce vs. Equitable PCI Bank 516 SCRA 231 (2007)
- Bank of the Philippine Islands vs. BPI Employees Union-Davao Chapter-Federation of Unions In Bpi Unibank, G.R. No. 164301, October 19, 2011
- Bank of Philippine Islands vs. Lee, G.R. No. 190144, August 1, 2012
- THE PHILIPPINE GEOTHERMAL, GEOTHERMAL, INC. EMPLOYEES UNION, Petitioner, -versus- UNOCAL PHILIPPINES, INC. (now known as CHEVRON GEOTHERMAL PHILIPPINES HOLDINGS, INC.), Respondent. (GR. No. 190187, September 28, 2016, SECOND DIVISION, LEONEN,J.)
- SUMIFRU (PHILIPPINES) CORPORATION (SURVIVING ENTITY IN A MERGER WITH DAVAO FRUITS CORPORATION AND OTHER COMPANIES) v. BERNABE BAYA, G.R. No. 188269, April 17, 2017, First Division, PERLAS-BERNABE, J.
- Spouses Ong v. BPI Family Savings Bank, Inc., G.R. No. 208638, [January 24, 2018]

M. Miscellaneous Topics

1. Corporate Officers

- Board of Liquidators vs. Kalaw, 20 SCRA 987 (1967)
- AC Ransom Labor Union vs. NLRC 142 SCRA 269 (1986); Villanueva vs. Adre 172 SCRA 876 (1989).
- Prime White Cement Corporation vs. Intermediate Appellate Court, 220 SCRA 103 (1993)
- Tabang vs. National Labor Relations Commission, 266 SCRA 462 (1997)
- Naguiat vs. National Labor Relations Commission, 269 SCRA 564 (1997)
- Llamdo vs. Court of Appeals, 270 SCRA 423 (1997)
- Reahs Corporation vs. National Labor Relations Commission, 271 SCRA 247 (1997)
- Uichico vs. National Labor Relations Commission, 273 SCRA 35 (1997)
- Torres, Jr. vs. Court of Appeals, 278 SCRA 793 (1997)
- San Juan Structure and Steel Fabricators, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 296 SCRA 631 (1998)
- People's Aircagro and Warehousing Company, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, 297 SCRA 170 (1998)
- Restaurante Las Conchas vs. Llego, 314 SCRA 24 (1999) (Please see, however, decisions to the contrary in Carag vs. NLRC and Macleod vs. NLRC, infra)
- Consolidated Food Corporation vs. National Labor Relations, 315 SCRA 129 (1999)
- Rural Bank of Milaor (Camarines Sur) vs. Ocfemia, 325 SCRA 99 (2000); Soler vs. Court of Appeals, 358 SCRA 57 (2001)
- Lao vs. CA, 325 SCRA 694 (2000)
- BA Savings Bank vs. Court of Appeals, 336 SCRA 484 (2000)
- Security Bank and Trust Co. vs. Cuenca, 341 SCRA 781 (2000)
- Atrium Management Corp. vs. Court of Appeals, 353 SCRA 23 (2001)

- Safic Alcan & Cie vs. Imperial Vegetable Co., Inc., 355 SCRA 559 (2001)
- Nakpil vs. Intercontinental Broadcasting Corporation, 379 SCRA 653 (2002)
- Great Asian Sales Center Corporation vs. Court of Appeals, 381 SCRA 557 (2002)
- DBP vs. Sps. Francisco and Leticia Ong, 460 SCRA 170 (2005)
- Litonjua, Jr. vs. Eternity Corporation 490 SCRA 204 (2006)
- Easycall Communications Phils. Inc. vs. Edward King 478 SCRA 102 (2005)
- Elcee Farms, Inc. vs. NLRC 512 SCRA 602 (2007)
- Aratea vs. Suico, 518 SCRA 501 (2007)
- Carag vs. NLRC 520 SCRA 28 (2007)
- Pamplona Plantation Company vs. Ramon Acosta et al., 510 SCRA 249 (2006)
- People of the Philippines vs. Hermenegildo Dumlao and Emilio La'o, 580 SCRA 409 (2009)
- James U. Gosiaco vs. Leticia Ching and Edwin Casta 585 SCRA 471 (2009)

2. Doctrine of Corporate Negligence

- Professional Services, Inc. vs. CA 544 SCRA 170 (2008)

3. Doctrine of Apparent Authority

- Calubad v. Ricarcen Development Corp., G.R. No. 202364, August 30, 2017, Justice Leonen
- Ayala Land, Inc. v. ASB Realty Corp., G.R. No. 210043, [September 26, 2018])
- Engineering Geoscience, Inc. V. Philippine Savings Bank, G.R. No. 187262, Second Division, January 10, 2019, Carpio J.

4. Authority to sign certification against forum shopping

- Digital Microwave Corp. vs. Court of Appeals, 328 SCRA 289 (2000)
- BA Savings Bank vs. Court of Appeals, 336 SCRA 484 (2000)
- Shipside Incorporation vs. Court of Appeals, 352 SCRA 334 (2001)
- San Pablo Manufacturing Corporation vs. Commissioner of Internal Revenue 492 SCRA 192 (2006)

5. Teleconferencing

- Expertravel & Tours, Inc. vs. CA 459 SCRA 147 (2005)

6. Condominium Corporation

- Yamane vs. BA Lepanto Condominium Corporation 474 SCRA 258 (2005)

7. Interest in Investment

- The President of PDIC as Liquidator of Pacific Banking Corporation vs. Reyes 460 SCRA 473 (2005)

8. Penal Provisions

- IENT VS. TULLETT PREBON (G.R. No. 189158, January 11, 2017, J. Leonardo-De Castro)

II. FOREIGN INVESTMENTS ACT (R.A. NO. 7042)

A. Definition of Terms

1. "Doing Business" in the Philippines

- Alfred Hahn vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 113074, January 22, 1997
- Eriks Pte. Ltd. vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 118843, February 6, 1997
- Agilent Technologies Singapore (Pte.) Ltd. vs. Integrated Silicon Technology Philippines Corporation, G.R. No. 154618, April 14, 2004
- Steelcase, Inc. vs. Design International Selections, Inc., G.R. No. 171995, April 18, 2012

B. Foreign Investment Negative List

- Heirs of Wilson Gamboa vs. Finance Secretary Margarito Teves, G.R. No. 176579, October 9, 2012

III. SECURITIES REGULATION CODE (R.A. NO. 8799)

- The Securities And Exchange Commission (Sec) Chairperson Teresita J. Herbosa, Commissioner Ma. Juanita E. Cueto, Commisioner Raul J. Palabrica, Commissioner Manuel Huberto B. Gaite, Commisioner Eladio M. Jala, And The Sec Enforcement And Prosecution Department, Petitioners, - Versus - Cjh Development Corporation And Cjh Suites Corporation, Herein Represented By Its Executive Vicepresident And Chief Operating Officer, Alfredo R. Yniguez Iii, Respondents. (G.R. No. 210316, Third Division, November 28, 2016, Peralta, J.)

A. State Policy, Purpose

- Abacus Securities Corporation vs. Ruben Ampil, G.R. No. 160016, February 27, 2006

B. Securities Required to be Registered

- Betty Gabionza and Isabelita Tan vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No.161057, Sept. 12, 2008
- Power Homes Unlimited Corporation Vs. Securities And Exchange Commission And Noel Manero, G.R. No. 164182, February 26, 2008, C.J. Puno
- Timeshare Realty vs. Cesar Lao, G.R. No. 158941, Feb. 11, 2008
- Securities and Exchange Commission vs. Prosperity.Com, Inc., G.R. No. 164197, Jan. 25, 2012
- Securities and Exchange Commission vs. Oudine Santos, G.R. No. 195542, Mar. 19, 2014
- Abacus Capital and Investment Corp. v. Tabujara, G.R. No. 197624, [July 23, 2018]

1. Exempt Securities

    - Union Bank of the Philippines vs. Securities and Exchange Commission, G.R. No. 138949, June 6, 2001

2. Exempt Transactions

    - Nestle Philippines, Inc.,vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 86738, November 13, 1991

A. Procedure for Registration of Securities

B. Prohibitions of Fraud, Manipulation and Insider Trading

- Onapal Phils. Commodities, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 90707, Feb. 1, 1993

1. Manipulation of Security Prices
2. Short Sales
3. Fraudulent Transactions

- Securities and Exchange Commission v. Price Richardson Corp., G.R. No. 197032, July 26, 2017, Justice Leonen

4. Insider Trading

- Securities and Exchange Commission vs. Interport Resources Corp., G.R. No. 135808, Oct. 6, 2008

C. Protection of Investors

- Phil. Veterans Bank vs. Callangan and/or SEC, G.R. No. 191995, Aug. 3, 2011

1. Tender Offer Rule

- Cemco Holdings, Inc. vs. National Life Ins. Co. of the Phil., G.R. No. 171815, Aug. 7. 2007

2. Rules on Proxy Solicitation

- GSIS vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 183905, Apr. 16, 2009

3. Disclosure Rule

- Securities and Exchange Commission vs. Interport Resources Corp., G.R. No. 135808, Oct. 6, 2008

D. Civil Liability

- Citibank, N.A. vs. Tanco-Gabaldon, et al., G.R. No. 198444, Sep. 4, 2013
- Jose U. Pua vs. Citibank, N.A., G.R. No. 180064, Sep. 16, 2013

H. Miscellaneous Topics

1. Cases under the old rules where the SEC had jurisdiction over intra-corporate disputes

- Philex Mining Corporation vs. Reyes, 118 SCRA 602 (1982)
- Union Glass & Container Corporation vs. Securities & Exchange Commission, 126 SCRA 21 (1983). See also Magalad vs. Premier Financing Corporation, 209 SCRA 260 (1992)
- Philippine School of Business Administration vs. Leano, 127 SCRA 778 (1984)
- DMRC Enterprises vs. Este Del Sol Mountain Reserve, Inc., 132 SCRA 293 (1984)
- Development Bank of the Philippines vs. Ilustre, Jr., 138 SCRA 11 (1985)
- Banez vs. Dimensional Construction Trade and Development Corporation, 140 SCRA 249 (1985)
- Dy vs. The National Labor Relations Commission, 145 SCRA 211 (1986)
- Abejo vs. Dela Cruz, 149 SCRA 654 (1987)
- Malayan Intergrated Industries Corporation vs. Mendoza, 154 SCRA 548 (1987) Please see Reyes vs. RTC of Makati, infra.
- Boman Environmental Corp. vs. Court of Appeals, 167 SCRA 540 (1988)
- Fortune Cement Corporation vs. National Labor Relations Commission, 193 SCRA 391 (1991)
- Andaya vs. Abadia, 228 SCRA 705 (1993)
- Torio vs. Court of Appeals, 230 SCRA 626 (1994)
- Pearson & George, (S.E. Asia), Inc. vs. National Labor Relations Commission, 253 SCRA 136 (1996)
- Ongkingco vs. National Labor Relations Commission, 270 SCRA 613 (1997)
- Garcia vs. Eastern Telecommunications Philippines, Inc 585 SCRA 450 (2009)

2. Cases under the new rule that the RTC exercises jurisdiction over intra-corporate disputes

- Calleja vs. Panday 483 SCRA 680 (2006)
- Orendain vs. BF Homes, Inc., 506 SCRA 348 (2006)
- Ujuico vs. Quiambao 513 SCRA 243 (2007)
- Reyes vs. RTC of Makati, 561 SCRA 593 (2008)
- Unlad Resources Dev't., Corp., et al. vs. Renato P. Dragon, 560 SCRA 63 (2008)
- Roberto L. Abad, et al vs. Philippine Communications Satellite Corporation, G.R. No. 200620, March 18, 2015
- Dy Teban Trading, Inc. v. Dy, G.R. No. 185647, July 26, 2017, Justice Jardeleza

- BELO MEDICAL GROUP INC. v. JOSE SANTOS and VICTORIA BELO, G.R. No. 185894, August 30, 2017, Third Division, LEONEN, J.

- Cacho v. Balagtas, G.R. No. 202974, [February 7, 2018]
- Malcaba v. ProHealth Pharma Philippines, Inc., G.R. No. 209085 , [June 6, 2018]
- Ellao y Dela Vega v. Batangas I Electric Cooperative, Inc., G.R. No. 209166, [July 9, 2018]
- Ku v. RCBC Securities, Inc., G.R. No. 219491, [October 17, 2018]
- Tumagan v. Kairuz, G.R. No. 198124, [September 12, 2018]
- Eizmendi Jr. v. Fernandez, G.R. No. 215280, [September 5, 2018]

3. Regulatory Jurisdiction

- Peneyra vs. Intermediate Appellate Court, 181 SCRA 244 (1990)
- Securities and Exchange Commission vs. Court of Appeals, 246 SCRA 738 (1995)
- Philippine Stock Exchange vs. Securities & Exchange Commission, 281 SCRA 232 (1997)
- Philippine National Construction Corporation vs. Pabion, 320 SCRA 188 (1999)
- TCL Sales Corporation vs. Court of Appeals, 349 SCRA 35 (2001)
- Pilipinas Loan Company, Inc. vs. Securities and Exchange Commission, 356 SCRA 193 (2001)
- Mobilia Products, Inc., vs. Umezawa 452 SCRA736 (2005)
- Abacus Securities vs. Ampil 483 SCRA 315 (2006)
- Securities and Exchange Commission vs. Performance Foreign Exchange Corporation 495 SCRA 579 (2006)
- Philippine Association of Stock Transfer and Registry Agencies, Inc.,v. CA et al. 539 SCRA 61 (2007)
- Eustacio Atwel, et al. vs. Conception Progressive Association, Inc., 551 SCRA 272 (2008)
- Baviera vs. Standard Chartered Bank, et al. 515 SCRA 170 (2007)
- Cemco Holdings vs. National Life Insurance Company, 529 SCRA 355 (2007)
- Provident International Resources Corp., et al. vs. Joaquin T. Venus, et al. 554 SCRA 540 (2008)
- Securities and Exchange Commission vs. Interport Resources Corporation 567 SCRA 354 (2008)
- GSIS vs. Court of Appeals 585 SCRA 679 (2009)

4. Corporate Rehabilitation

- Metropolitan Bank & Trust Co. v. Fortuna Paper Mill & Packaging Corp., G.R. No. 190800, [November 7, 2018]

IV. FINANCIAL REHABILITATION AND INSOLVENCY ACT (FRIA)

- Tyson's Super Concrete, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals 461 SCRA 69 (2005)
- Spouses Sobrejuanite vs. ASB Development Corporation 471 SCRA 763 (2005)

- Sy Chim vs. Sy Siy Ho & Sons, Inc., 480 SCRA 465 (2006)
- Ao-As vs. CA 491 SCRA 339 (2006)
- Danilo G. Punongbayan vs. Perfecto G. Punongbayan, Jr. 491 SCRA 581 (2006)

- New Frontier Sugar Corporation vs. RTC of Ilo-ilo and Equitable PCI Bank, 513 SCRA 601 (2007)
- Philippine Airlines vs. Zamora 514 SCRA 584 (2007)
- Union Bank of the Philippine vs. ASB Devt. Corp., 560 SCRA 578 (2008)
- China Banking Corporation vs. ASB Holdings, Inc., 575 SCRA 247 (2008)
- Garcia vs. Philippine Airlines. G.R. No. 164856 576 SCRA 479 (2009)
- Malayan Insurance Company, Inc. vs. Victorias Milling Company, Inc. 586 SCRA 45 (2009)
- Puerto Azul Land Inc. vs. Pacific Wide Realty Development Corporation, G.R. No. 184000, September 17, 2014
- Robinson's Bank Corporation vs. Hon. Samuel H. Gaerlan, G.R. No. 195289, September 24, 2014
- Philippine Bank of Communications vs. Basic Polyprinters and Packaging Corporation, G.R. No. 187581, October 20, 2014
- Marilyn Victorio-Aquino vs. Pacific Plans Inc., and Mamareto A. Marcelo Jr., G.R. No. 193108, December 10, 2014
- Mervic Realty, Inc. And Viccy Realty, Inc., Petitioners, V. China Banking Corporation, Respondent. (G.R. No. 193748, February 03, 2016, Brion, J.)
- Viva Shipping Lines, Inc., Petitioner, V. Keppel Philippines Mining, Inc., Metropolitan Bank & Trust Company, Pilipinas Shell Petroleum Corporation, City Of Batangas, City Of Lucena, Province Of Quezon, Alejandro Olit, Nida Montilla, Pio Hernandez, Eugenio Baculo, And Harlan Bacaltos, Respondents. (G.R. No. 177382, February 17, 2016, Leonen, J.)
- Philippine Asset Growth Two, Inc. (Successor-In-Interest Of Planters Development Bank) And Planters Development Bank Vs. Fastech Synergy Philippines, Inc. (Formerly First Asia System Technology, Inc.), Fastech Microassembly & Test, Inc., Fastech Electronique, Inc., And Fastech Properties, Inc. (G.R. No. 206528, June 28, 2016, Perlas-Bernabe, J.)
- Metrobank Vs. Liberty Corrugated (Gr 184317, January 25 2017, J. Leonen)
- Land Bank Of The Philippines V. West Bay Colleges, Inc., Pbr Management And Development Corp. And Bcp Trading Co., Inc., G.R. No. 211287, April 17, 2017, Third Division, Reyes, J.:
- Bureau Of Internal Revenue, Assistant Commissioner Alfredo V. Misajon, Group Supervisor Rolando M. Balbido, And Examiner Reynante Dp. Martirez V.Lepanto Ceramics, Inc., G.R. No. 224764, April 24, 2017, First Division, Perlas-Bernabe, J.
- People Of The Philippines V. Ervin Y. Mateo, Evelyn E. Mateo, Carmelita B. Galvez, Romeo L. Esteban, Galileo J. Saporsantos And Nenita S. Saporsantos, Ervin Y. Mateo, G.R. No. 210612, October 9, 2017, Second Division, Peralta, J.
- Steel Corporation Of The Philippines V. Bureau Of Customs, G.R. No. 220502, [February 12, 2018]
- Allied Banking Corp. v. Equitable PCI Bank, Inc., G.R. No. 191939, [March 14, 2018]
- Mañalac v. Gellada, A.M. No. RTJ-18-2535, [October 8, 2018]
- Dela Torre v. Primetown Property Group, Inc., G.R. No. 221932, [February 14, 2018], Second Division, PERALTA, J

A. Corporation

1. Definition

2. Attributes of the Corporation

- Benny Hung vs. BPI Finance Corporation, G.R. No. 182398, July 20, 2010

BENNY Y. HUNG, PETITIONER, VS. BPI CARD FINANCE CORP., RESPONDENT.
G.R. No. 182398, FIRST DIVISION, July 20, 2010, PEREZ, J.

Clearly, petitioner has represented in his dealings with respondent that Guess? Footwear or B & R Footwear Distributors, Inc. is also B & R Sportswear Enterprises. For this reason, the more complete correction on the name of defendant should be from B & R Sportswear Distributor, Inc. to B & R Footwear Distributors, Inc. and Benny Hung. Petitioner is the proper defendant because his sole proprietorship B & R Sportswear Enterprises has no juridical personality apart from him*. Again, the correction only confirms the voluntary correction already made by B & R Footwear Distributors, Inc. or Guess? Footwear which is also B & R Sportswear Enterprises. Correction of this formal defect is also allowed by Section 4, Rule 10 of the Rules of Court.*

FACTS:

Guess? Footwear and BPI Express Card Corporation entered into two merchant agreements whereby Guess? Footwear agreed to honor validly issued BPI Express Credit Cards presented by cardholders in the purchase of its goods and services. In the first agreement, petitioner Benny Hung signed as owner and manager of Guess? Footwear. He signed the second agreement as president of Guess? Footwear which he also referred to as B & R Sportswear Enterprises.

From May 1997 to January 1999, respondent BPI mistakenly credited, through 352 checks amounting to P3,480,427.23 to the account of Guess? Footwear. When informed of the overpayments, petitioner Benny Hung transferred P963,604.03 from the bank account of B & R Sportswear Enterprises to BPIs account as partial payment.

In a letter dated 27 September 1999, BPI demanded the balance payment amounting to P2,516,826.68 but Guess? Footwear failed to pay.

BPI filed a collection suit before the RTC of Makati City naming as defendant B & R Sportswear Distributor, Inc. Although the case was against B & R Sportswear Distributor, Inc., it was B & R Footwear Distributors, Inc., that filed an answer, appeared and participated in the trial. The RTC rendered a decision ordering defendant B & R Sportswear Distributor, Inc., to pay BPI P2,516,826.68 with 6% interest. The RTC ruled that the overpayment of P3,480,427.43 was proven by checks credited to the account of Guess? Footwear and the P963,604.03 partial payment proved that defendant ought to pay P2,516,826.68 more. During the execution of judgment, it was discovered that B & R Sportswear Distributor, Inc., is a non-existing entity. Thus, the trial court failed to execute the judgment.

Consequently, BPI filed a Motion to pierce the corporate veil of B & R Footwear Distributors, Inc. to hold its stockholders and officers, including petitioner Benny Hung, personally liable. The RTC ruled that Hung is liable for the satisfaction of the judgment, since he signed the merchant agreements in his personal capacity.

The Court of Appeals affirmed the order and dismissed petitioners appeal. It ruled that since B & R Sportswear Distributor, Inc. is not a corporation, it therefore has no personality separate from petitioner Benny Hung who induced BPI and the RTC to believe that it is a corporation.

ISSUE:

Whether Benny Hung can be held liable for the satisfaction of the RTCs Decision against B & R Sportswear Distributor, Inc. (YES)

RULING:

But we cannot agree with petitioner that B & R Footwear Distributors, Inc. or Guess? Footwear is the only "real contracting party." The facts show that B & R Sportswear Enterprises is also a contracting party. Petitioner conveniently ignores this fact although he himself signed the second agreement indicating that Guess? Footwear is also referred to as B & R Sportswear Enterprises. Petitioner also tries to soften the significance of his directive to the bank, under the letterhead of B & R Footwear Distributor's, Inc., to transfer the funds belonging to his sole proprietorship B & R Sportswear Enterprises as partial payment to the overpayments made by respondent to Guess? Footwear. He now claims the partial payment as his payment to respondent "in the course of their mutual transactions."

Clearly, petitioner has represented in his dealings with respondent that Guess? Footwear or B & R Footwear Distributors, Inc. is also B & R Sportswear Enterprises. For this reason, the more complete correction on the name of defendant should be from B & R Sportswear Distributor, Inc. to B & R Footwear Distributors, Inc. and Benny Hung. Petitioner is the proper defendant because his sole proprietorship B & R Sportswear Enterprises has no juridical personality apart from him. Again, the correction only confirms the voluntary correction already made by B & R Footwear Distributors, Inc. or Guess? Footwear which is also B & R Sportswear Enterprises. Correction of this formal defect is also allowed by Section 4, Rule 10 of the Rules of Court.

Relatedly, petitioner cannot complain of non-service of summons upon his person. Suffice it to say that B & R Footwear Distributors, Inc. or Guess? Footwear which is also B & R Sportswear Enterprises had answered the summons and the complaint and participated in the trial.

Accordingly, we find petitioner liable to respondent and we affirm, with the foregoing clarification, the finding of the RTC that he signed the second merchant agreement in his personal capacity.

The correction on the name of the defendant has rendered moot any further discussion on the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction. In any event, we have said that whether the separate personality of a corporation should be pierced hinges on facts pleaded and proved. In seeking to pierce the corporate veil of B & R Footwear Distributors, Inc., respondent complained of "deceit, bad faith and illegal scheme/maneuver." As stated earlier, respondent has abandoned such accusation. And respondent's proof - the SEC certification that B & R Sportswear Distributor, Inc. is not an existing corporation - would surely attest to no other fact but the inexistence of a corporation named B & R Sportswear Distributor, Inc. as such name only surfaced because of its own error. Hence, we cannot agree with the Court of Appeals that petitioner has represented a non-existing corporation and induced the respondent and the RTC to believe in his representation.

- Rebecca Boyer-Roxas and Guillermo Roxas vs. Hon. Court of Appeals and Heirs of Eugenia V. Roxas, Inc., G.R. No. 100866, July 14, 1992

REBECCA BOYER-ROXAS and GUILLERMO ROXAS, petitioners, vs. HON. COURT OF APPEALS and HEIRS OF EUGENIA V. ROXAS, INC., respondents.
G.R. No. 100866, THIRD DIVISION, July 14, 1992, GUTIERREZ, JR., J.

The respondent is a bona fide corporation. As such, it has a juridical personality of its own separate from the members composing it. There is no dispute that title over the questioned land where the Hidden Valley Springs Resort is located is registered in the name of the corporation. The records also show that the staff house being occupied by petitioner Rebecca Boyer-Roxas and the recreation hall which was later on converted into a residential house occupied by petitioner Guillermo Roxas are owned by the respondent corporation. Regarding properties owned by a corporation, we stated in the case of Stockholders of F. Guanzon and Sons, Inc. v. Register of Deeds of Manila, (6 SCRA 373 [1962]):

> Properties registered in the name of the corporation are owned by it as an entity separate and distinct from its members. While shares of stock constitute personal property, they do not represent property of the corporation. The corporation has property of its own which consists chiefly of real estate. A share of stock only typifies an aliquot part of the corporation's property, or the right to share in its proceeds to that extent when distributed according to law and equity, but its holder is not the owner of any part of the capital of the corporation. Nor is he entitled to the possession of any definite portion of its property or assets. The stockholder is not a co-owner or tenant in common of the corporate property.*

The petitioners' suggestion that the veil of the corporate fiction should be pierced is untenable. The separate personality of the corporation may be disregarded only when the corporation is used "as a cloak or cover for fraud or illegality, or to work injustice, or where necessary to achieve equity or when necessary for the protection of the creditors." The circumstances in the present cases do not fall under any of the enumerated categories.

FACTS:

In two (2) separate complaints for recovery of possession filed with the Regional Trial Court of Laguna against petitioners Rebecca Boyer-Roxas and Guillermo Roxas respectively, respondent corporation, Heirs of Eugenia V. Roxas, Inc., prayed for the ejectment of the petitioners from buildings inside the Hidden Valley Springs Resort located at Limao, Calauan, Laguna allegedly owned by the respondent corporation.

In the case of petitioner Rebecca Boyer-Roxas (Civil Case No-802-84-C), the respondent corporation alleged that Rebecca is in possession of two (2) houses, one of which is still under construction, built at the expense of the respondent corporation; and that her occupancy on the two (2) houses was only upon the tolerance of the respondent corporation.

In the case of petitioner Guillermo Roxas (Civil Case No. 803-84-C), the respondent corporation alleged that Guillermo occupies a house which was built at the expense of the former during the time when Guillermo's father, Eriberto Roxas, was still living and was the general manager of the respondent corporation; that the house was originally intended as a recreation hall but was converted for the residential use of Guillermo; and that Guillermo's possession over the house and lot was only upon the tolerance of the respondent corporation.

In both cases, the respondent corporation alleged that the petitioners never paid rentals for the use of the buildings and the lots and that they ignored the demand letters for them to vacate the buildings.

In their separate answers, the petitioners traversed the allegations in the complaint by stating that they are heirs of Eugenia V. Roxas and therefore, co-owners of the Hidden Valley Springs Resort; and as co-owners of the property, they have the right to stay within its premises. The plaintiffs alleged, among others, that the veil of corporate fiction should be pierced.

ISSUE:

1. Whether the petitioners are co-owners of the contested property. (NO)
2. Whether there is basis for piercing the veil of the corporation. (NO)

RULING:

1.

The respondent is a bona fide corporation. As such, it has a juridical personality of its own separate from the members composing it. There is no dispute that title over the questioned land where the Hidden Valley Springs Resort is located is registered in the name of the corporation. The records also show that the staff house being occupied by petitioner Rebecca Boyer-Roxas and the recreation hall which was later on converted into a residential house occupied by petitioner Guillermo Roxas are owned by the respondent corporation. Regarding properties owned by a corporation, we stated in the case of Stockholders of F. Guanzon and Sons, Inc. v. Register of Deeds of Manila, (6 SCRA 373 [1962]):

> Properties registered in the name of the corporation are owned by it as an entity separate and distinct from its members. While shares of stock constitute personal property, they do not represent property of the corporation. The corporation has property of its own which consists chiefly of real estate. A share of stock only typifies an aliquot part of the corporation's property, or the right to share in its proceeds to that extent when distributed according to law and equity, but its holder is not the owner of any part of the capital of the corporation. Nor is he entitled to the possession of any definite portion of its property or assets. The stockholder is not a co-owner or tenant in common of the corporate property.

The petitioners point out that their occupancy of the staff house which was later used as the residence of Eriberto Roxas, husband of petitioner Rebecca Boyer--Roxas and the recreation hall which was converted into a residential house were with the blessings of Eufrocino Roxas, the deceased husband of Eugenia V. Roxas, who was the majority and controlling stockholder of the corporation. In his lifetime, Eufrocino Roxas together with Eriberto Roxas, the husband of petitioner Rebecca Boyer-Roxas, and the father of petitioner Guillermo Roxas managed the corporation. The Board of Directors did not object to such an arrangement. The petitioners argue that "x x x the authority thus given by Eufrocino Roxas for the conversion of the recreation hall into a residential house can no longer be questioned by the stockholders of the private respondent and/or its board of directors for they impliedly but no less explicitly delegated such authority to said Eufrocino Roxas."

Again, we must emphasize that the respondent corporation has a distinct personality separate from its members. The corporation transacts its business only through its officers or agents. Whatever authority these officers or agents may have is derived from the board of directors or other governing body unless conferred by the charter of the corporation. An officer's power as an agent of the corporation must be sought from the statute, charter, the by-laws or in a delegation of authority to such officer, from the acts of the board of directors, formally expressed or implied from a habit or custom of doing business.

In the present case, the record shows that Eufrocino V. Roxas who then controlled the management of the corporation, being the majority stockholder, consented to the petitioners' stay within the questioned properties. Specifically, Eufrocino Roxas gave his consent to the conversion of the recreation hall to a residential house, now occupied by petitioner Guillermo Roxas. The Board of Directors did not object to the actions of Eufrocino Roxas. The petitioners were allowed to stay within the questioned properties until August 27, 1983, when the Board of Directors approved a Resolution ejecting the petitioners, to wit:

> "R E S O L U T I O N No. 83-12
>
> RESOLVED, That Rebecca B. Roxas and Guillermo Roxas, and all persons claiming under them, be ejected from their occupancy of the Hidden Valley Springs compound on which their houses have been constructed and/or are being constructed only on tolerance of the Corporation and without any contract therefor, in order to give way to the Corporation's expansion and improvement program and obviate prejudice to the operation of the Hidden Valley Springs Resort by their continued interference.
>
> RESOLVED, Further that the services of Atty. Benito P. Fabie be engaged and that he be authorized as he is hereby authorized to effect the ejectment, including the filing of the corresponding suits, if necessary to do so." (Original Records, p. 327)

We find nothing irregular in the adoption of the Resolution by the Board of Directors. The petitioners' stay within the questioned properties was merely by tolerance of the respondent corporation in deference to the wishes of Eufrocino Roxas, who during his lifetime, controlled and managed the corporation. Eufrocino Roxas' actions could not have bound the corporation forever. The petitioners have not cited any provision of the corporation by-laws or any resolution or act of the Board of Directors which authorized Eufrocino Roxas to allow them to stay within the company premises forever. We rule that in the absence of any existing contract between the petitioners and the respondent corporation, the corporation may elect to eject the petitioners at any time it wishes for the benefit and interest of the respondent corporation.

2.

The petitioners' suggestion that the veil of the corporate fiction should be pierced is untenable. The separate personality of the corporation may be disregarded only when the corporation is used "as a cloak or cover for fraud or illegality, or to work injustice, or where necessary to achieve equity or when necessary for the protection of the creditors." The circumstances in the present cases do not fall under any of the enumerated categories.

- Ryuichi Yamamoto vs. Nishino Leather Industries, Inc. and Ikuo Nishino, G.R. No. 150283, April 16, 2008

RYUICHI YAMAMOTO, Petitioner, v. NISHINO LEATHER INDUSTRIES, INC. and IKUO NISHINO, Respondents.

G.R. NO. 150283, SECOND DIVISION, April 16, 2008, CARPIO MORALES, J.

While the veil of separate corporate personality may be pierced when the corporation is merely an adjunct, a business conduit, or alter ego of a person, the mere ownership by a single stockholder of even all or nearly all of the capital stocks of a corporation is not by itself a sufficient ground to disregard the separate corporate personality.

The elements determinative of the applicability of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction follow:

"1. Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;

2. Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of the plaintiff's legal rights;

3. The aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of.

The absence of any one of these elements prevents "piercing the corporate veil." In applying the 'instrumentality' or 'alter ego' doctrine, the courts are concerned with reality and not form, with how the corporation operated and the individual defendant's relationship to that operation."

In relation to the second element, to disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrongdoing or unjust act in contravention of a plaintiff's legal rights must be clearly and convincingly established; it cannot be presumed. Without a demonstration that any of the evils sought to be prevented by the doctrine is present, it does not apply.

In the case at bar, there is no showing that Nishino used the separate personality of NLII to unjustly act or do wrong to Yamamoto in contravention of his legal rights.

FACTS:

In 1983, petitioner, Ryuichi Yamamoto (Yamamoto), a Japanese national, organized under Philippine laws Wako Enterprises Manila, Incorporated (WAKO), a corporation engaged principally in leather tanning, now known as Nishino Leather Industries, Inc. (NLII), one of herein respondents. In 1987, Yamamoto and the other respondent, Ikuo Nishino (Nishino), also a Japanese national, forged a Memorandum of Agreement under which they agreed to enter into a joint venture wherein Nishino would acquire such number of shares of stock equivalent to 70% of the authorized capital stock of WAKO. Eventually, Nishino and his brother Yoshinobu Nishino (Yoshinobu) acquired more than 70% of the authorized capital stock of WAKO, reducing Yamamoto's investment therein to, by his claim, 10%, less than 10% according to Nishino. The corporate name of WAKO was later changed to, as reflected earlier, its current name NLII. Negotiations subsequently ensued in light of a planned takeover of NLII by Nishino who would buy-out the shares of stock of Yamamoto. In the course of the negotiations, Yoshinobu and Nishinos counsel Atty. Emmanuel G. Doce (Atty. Doce) advised Yamamoto by letter dated October 30, 1991, the pertinent portions of which follow:

"Hereunder is a simple memorandum of the subject matters discussed with me by Mr. Yoshinobu Nishino yesterday, October 29th, based on the letter of Mr. Ikuo Nishino from Japan, and which I am now transmitting to you. Machinery and Equipment:

The following machinery/equipment have been contributed by you to the company:

Splitting machine - 1 unit
Samming machine - 1 unit
Forklift - 1 unit
Drums - 4 units
Toggling machine - 2 units

Regarding the above machines, you may take them out with you (for your own use and sale) if you want, provided, the value of such machines is deducted from your and Wakos capital contributions, which will be paid to you.

On the basis of such letter, Yamamoto attempted to recover the machineries and equipment which were, by Yamamoto's admission, part of his investment in the corporation, but he was frustrated by respondents, drawing Yamamoto to file on January 15, 1992 before the Regional Trial Court (RTC) of Makati a complaint against them for replevin.

ISSUE: Whether Yamamoto may pierce the veil of corporate fiction and retrieve the machineries. (NO)

RULING:

Indeed, without a Board Resolution authorizing respondent Nishino to act for and in behalf of the corporation, he cannot bind the latter. Under the Corporation Law, unless otherwise provided, corporate powers are exercised by the Board of Directors.

Urging this Court to pierce the veil of corporate fiction, Yamamoto argues, viz:

> During the negotiations, the issue as to the ownership of the Machineries never came up. Neither did the issue on the proper procedure to be taken to execute the complete take-over of the Company come up since Ikuo, Yoshinobu, and Yamamoto were the owners thereof, the presence of other stockholders being only for the purpose of complying with the minimum requirements of the law.

What course of action the Company decides to do or not to do depends not on the "other members of the Board of Directors". It depends on what Ikuo and Yoshinobu decide. The Company is but a mere instrumentality of Ikuo [and] Yoshinobu.

x x x

x x x The Company hardly holds board meetings. It has an inactive board, the directors are directors in name only and are there to do the bidding of the Nish[i]nos, nothing more. Its minutes are paper minutes. x x x

x x x

The fact that the parties started at a 70-30 ratio and Yamamoto's percentage declined to 10% does not mean the 20% went to others. x x x The 20% went to no one else but Ikuo himself. x x x Yoshinobu is the younger brother of Ikuo and has no say at all in the business. Only Ikuo makes the decisions. There were, therefore, no other members of the Board who have not given their approval.

While the veil of separate corporate personality may be pierced when the corporation is merely an adjunct, a business conduit, or alter ego of a person, the mere ownership by a single stockholder of even all or nearly all of the capital stocks of a corporation is not by itself a sufficient ground to disregard the separate corporate personality.

The elements determinative of the applicability of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction follow:

"1. Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;

2. Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of the plaintiff's legal rights;

3. The aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of.

The absence of any one of these elements prevents "piercing the corporate veil." In applying the 'instrumentality' or 'alter ego' doctrine, the courts are concerned with reality and not form, with how the corporation operated and the individual defendant's relationship to that operation."

In relation to the second element, to disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrongdoing or unjust act in contravention of a plaintiff's legal rights must be clearly and convincingly established; it cannot be presumed. Without a demonstration that any of the evils sought to be prevented by the doctrine is present, it does not apply.

In the case at bar, there is no showing that Nishino used the separate personality of NLII to unjustly act or do wrong to Yamamoto in contravention of his legal rights.

Yamamoto argues, in another vein, that promissory estoppel lies against respondents, thus:

> Under the doctrine of promissory estoppel, x x x estoppel may arise from the making of a promise, even though without consideration, if it was intended that the promise should be relied upon and in fact it was relied upon, and if a refusal to enforce it would be virtually to sanction the perpetration of fraud or would result in other injustice.
>
> x x x Ikuo and Yoshinobu wanted Yamamoto out of the Company. For this purpose negotiations were had between the parties. Having expressly given Yamamoto, through the Letter and through a subsequent meeting at the Manila Peninsula where Ikuo himself confirmed that Yamamoto may take out the Machinery from the Company anytime, respondents should not be allowed to turn around and do the exact opposite of what they have represented they will do.
>
> In paragraph twelve (12) of the Letter, Yamamoto was expressly advised that he could take out the Machinery if he wanted to so, provided that the value of said machines would be deducted from his capital contribution x x x.
>
> x x x
>
> Respondents cannot now argue that they did not intend for Yamamoto to rely upon the Letter. That was the purpose of the Letter to begin with. Petitioner[s] in fact, relied upon said Letter and such reliance was further strengthened during their meeting at the Manila Peninsula.
>
> To sanction respondents' attempt to evade their obligation would be to sanction the perpetration of fraud and injustice against petitioner.

It bears noting, however, that the aforementioned paragraph 12 of the letter is followed by a request for Yamamoto to give his "comments on all the above, soonest."

What was thus proffered to Yamamoto was not a promise, but a mere offer, subject to his acceptance. Without acceptance, a mere offer produces no obligation.

Thus, under Article 1181 of the Civil Code, "[i]n conditional obligations, the acquisition of rights, as well as the extinguishment or loss of those already acquired, shall depend upon the happening of the event which constitutes the condition." In the case at bar, there is no showing of compliance with the condition for allowing Yamamoto to take the machineries and equipment, namely, his agreement to the deduction of their value from his capital contribution due him in the buy-out of his interests in NLII. Yamamoto's allegation that he agreed to the condition remained just that, no proof thereof having been presented.

The machineries and equipment, which comprised Yamamoto's investment in NLII, thus remained part of the capital property of the corporation.

It is settled that the property of a corporation is not the property of its stockholders or members. Under the trust fund doctrine, the capital stock, property, and other assets of a corporation are regarded as equity in trust for the payment of corporate creditors which are preferred over the stockholders in the distribution of corporate assets. The distribution of corporate assets and property cannot be made to depend on the whims and caprices of the stockholders, officers, or directors of the corporation unless the indispensable conditions and procedures for the protection of corporate creditors are followed.

B. Classes of Corporations

- Pioneer Surety & Insurance Corporation vs. Court of Appeal, 175 SCRA 668 (1989)

PIONEER INSURANCE & SURETY CORPORATION, Petitioner, vs. THE HON. COURT OF APPEALS, BORDER MACHINERY & HEAVY EQUIPMENT, INC., (BORMAHECO), CONSTANCIO M. MAGLANA and JACOB S. LIM, Respondents.
G.R. No. 84197, THIRD DIVISION, July 28, 1989, GUTIERREZ, JR., J.

JACOB S. LIM, Petitioner, vs. COURT OF APPEALS, PIONEER INSURANCE AND SURETY CORPORATION, BORDER MACHINERY and HEAVY EQUIPMENT CO., INC,, FRANCISCO and MODESTO CERVANTES and CONSTANCIO MAGLANA, Respondents.
G.R. No. 84197, THIRD DIVISION, July 28, 1989, GUTIERREZ, JR., J.

While it has been held that as between themselves the rights of the stockholders in a defectively incorporated association should be governed by the supposed charter and the laws of the state relating thereto and not by the rules governing partners, it is ordinarily held that persons who attempt, but fail, to form a corporation and who carry on business under the corporate name occupy the position of partners inter se. Thus, where persons associate themselves together under articles to purchase property to carry on a business, and their organization is so defective as to come short of creating a corporation within the statute, they become in legal effect partners inter se, and their rights as members of the company to the property acquired by the company will be recognized. So, where certain persons associated themselves as a corporation for the development of land for irrigation purposes, and each conveyed land to the corporation, and two of them contracted to pay a third the difference in the proportionate value of the land conveyed by him, and no stock was ever issued in the corporation, it was treated as a trustee for the associates in an action between them for an accounting, and its capital stock was treated as partnership assets, sold, and the proceeds distributed among them in proportion to the value of the property contributed by each. However, such a relation does not necessarily exist, for ordinarily persons cannot be made to assume the relation of partners, as between themselves, when their purpose is that no partnership shall exist, and it should be implied only when necessary to do justice between the parties; thus, one who takes no part except to subscribe for stock in a proposed corporation which is never legally formed does not become a partner with other subscribers who engage in business under the name of the pretended corporation, so as to be liable as such in an action for settlement of the alleged partnership and contribution. A partnership relation between certain stockholders and other stockholders, who were also directors, will not be implied in the absence of an agreement, so as to make the former liable to contribute for payment of debts illegally contracted by the latter.

In the instant case, it is to be noted that the petitioner was declared non-suited for his failure to appear during the pretrial despite notification. In his answer, the petitioner denied having received any amount from respondents Bormaheco, the Cervanteses and Maglana. The trial court and the appellate court, however, found through Exhibit 58, that the petitioner received the amount of P151,000.00 representing the participation of Bormaheco and Atty. Constancio B. Maglana in the ownership of the subject airplanes and spare parts. The record shows that defendant Maglana gave P75,000.00 to petitioner Jacob Lim thru the Cervanteses.

It is therefore clear that the petitioner never had the intention to form a corporation with the respondents despite his representations to them. This gives credence to the cross-claims of the respondents to the effect that they were induced and lured by the petitioner to make contributions. Applying therefore the principles of law earlier cited to the facts of the case, necessarily, no de facto partnership was created among the parties which would entitle the petitioner to a reimbursement of the supposed losses of the proposed corporation. The record shows that the petitioner was acting on his own and not in behalf of his other would-be incorporators in transacting the sale of the airplanes and spare parts.

FACTS:

In 1965, Jacob S. Lim was engaged in the airline business as owner-operator of Southern Air Lines (SAL) a single proprietorship.

Then, Japan Domestic Airlines (JDA) and Lim in Tokyo, Japan entered into and executed a sales contract for the sale and purchase of 2 aircrafts and 1 set of necessary spare parts for the total agreed price of US $109,000.00 to be paid in installments. The 2 aircrafts arrived in Manila. Pioneer Insurance and Surety Corporation as surety executed and issued its surety bond in favor of JDA, in behalf of its principal, Lim, for the balance price of the aircrafts and spare parts.

It appears that Border Machinery and Heavy Equipment Company, Inc. (Bormaheco), Francisco and Modesto Cervantes (Cervanteses) and Constancio Maglana contributed some funds used in the purchase of the above aircrafts and spare parts. The funds were supposed to be their contributions to a new corporation proposed by Lim to expand his airline business. They executed 2 separate indemnity agreements in favor of Pioneer, one signed by Maglana and the other jointly signed by Lim for SAL, Bormaheco and the Cervanteses. The indemnity agreements stipulated that the indemnitors principally agree and bind themselves jointly and severally in favor of Pioneer.

Thereafter, Lim doing business under the name and style of SAL executed in favor of Pioneer as deed of chattel mortgage as security for the latter's suretyship in favor of the former. It was stipulated therein that Lim transfer and convey to the surety the two aircrafts. Lim defaulted on his subsequent installment payments prompting JDA to request payments from the surety. Pioneer paid a total sum of P298,626.12.

Pioneer filed a petition for the extrajudicial foreclosure of the chattel mortgage before the Sheriff of Davao City. The Cervanteses and Maglana, however, filed a third party claim alleging that they are co-owners of the aircrafts, Then, Pioneer filed an action for judicial foreclosure with an application for a writ of preliminary attachment against Lim and respondents, the Cervanteses, Bormaheco and Maglana.

In their Answers, Maglana, Bormaheco and the Cervanteses filed cross-claims against Lim alleging that they were not privies to the contracts signed by Lim and, by way of counterclaim, sought for damages for being exposed to litigation and for recovery of the sums of money they advanced to Lim for the purchase of the aircrafts in question.

After trial on the merits, a decision was rendered holding Lim liable to pay Pioneer but dismissed Pioneer's complaint against all other defendants.

The appellate court modified the trial court's decision in that the plaintiffs complaint against all the defendants was dismissed. In all other respects the trial court's decision was affirmed. Hence the petition which was consolidated by the Court.

ISSUE:

Whether a de facto Corporation exists. (NO)

RULING:

Petitioner Jacob S. Lim poses the following issues:

> l. What legal rules govern the relationship among co-investors whose agreement was to do business through the corporate vehicle but who failed to incorporate the entity in which they had chosen to invest? How are the losses to be treated in situations where their contributions to the intended 'corporation' were invested not through the corporate form? This Petition presents these fundamental questions which we believe were resolved erroneously by the Court of Appeals.

These questions are premised on the petitioner's theory that as a result of the failure of respondents Bormaheco, Spouses Cervantes, Constancio Maglana and petitioner Lim to incorporate, a de facto partnership among them was created, and that as a consequence of such relationship all must share in the losses and/or gains of the venture in proportion to their contribution. The petitioner, therefore, questions the appellate court's findings ordering him to reimburse certain amounts given by the respondents to the petitioner as their contributions to the intended corporation, to wit:

> However, defendant Lim should be held liable to pay his co-defendants' cross-claims in the total amount of P184,878.74 as correctly found by the trial court, with interest from the filing of the cross-complaints until the amount is fully paid. Defendant Lim should pay one-half of the said amount to Bormaheco and the Cervanteses and the other one-half to defendant Maglana. It is established in the records that defendant Lim had duly received the amount of Pl51,000.00 from defendants Bormaheco and Maglana representing the latter's participation in the ownership of the subject airplanes and spare parts. In addition, the cross-party plaintiffs incurred additional expenses, hence, the total sum of P 184,878.74.

We first state the principles.

> While it has been held that as between themselves the rights of the stockholders in a defectively incorporated association should be governed by the supposed charter and the > laws of the state relating thereto and not by the rules governing partners, it is ordinarily held that persons who attempt, but fail, to form a corporation and who carry on business under the corporate name occupy the position of partners inter se. Thus, where persons associate themselves together under articles to purchase property to carry on a business, and their organization is so defective as to come short of creating a corporation within the statute, they become in legal effect partners inter se, and their rights as members of the company to the property acquired by the company will be recognized. So, where certain persons associated themselves as a corporation for the development of land for irrigation purposes, and each conveyed land to the corporation, and two of them contracted to pay a third the difference in the proportionate value of the land conveyed by him, and no stock was ever issued in the corporation, it was treated as a trustee for the associates in an action between them for an accounting, and its capital stock was treated as partnership assets, sold, and the proceeds distributed among them in proportion to the value of the property contributed by each. However, such a relation does not necessarily exist, for ordinarily persons cannot be made to assume the relation of partners, as between themselves, when their purpose is that no partnership shall exist, and it should be implied only when necessary to do justice between the parties; thus, one who takes no part except to subscribe for stock in a proposed corporation which is never legally formed does not become a partner with other subscribers who engage in business under the name of the pretended corporation, so as to be liable as such in an action for settlement of the alleged partnership and contribution. A partnership relation between certain stockholders and other stockholders, who were also directors, will not be implied in the absence of an agreement, so as to make the former liable to contribute for payment of debts illegally contracted by the latter.

In the instant case, it is to be noted that the petitioner was declared non-suited for his failure to appear during the pretrial despite notification. In his answer, the petitioner denied having received any amount from respondents Bormaheco, the Cervanteses and Maglana. The trial court and the appellate court, however, found through Exhibit 58, that the petitioner received the amount of P151,000.00 representing the participation of Bormaheco and Atty. Constancio B. Maglana in the ownership of the subject airplanes and spare parts. The record shows that defendant Maglana gave P75,000.00 to petitioner Jacob Lim thru the Cervanteses.

It is therefore clear that the petitioner never had the intention to form a corporation with the respondents despite his representations to them. This gives credence to the cross-claims of the respondents to the effect that they were induced and lured by the petitioner to make contributions to a proposed corporation which was never formed because the petitioner reneged on their agreement. Maglana alleged in his cross-claim:

> ... that sometime in early 1965, Jacob Lim proposed to Francisco Cervantes and Maglana to expand his airline business. Lim was to procure two DC-3's from Japan and secure the necessary certificates of public convenience and necessity as well as the required permits for the operation thereof. Maglana sometime in May 1965, gave Cervantes his share of P75,000.00 for delivery to Lim which Cervantes did and Lim acknowledged receipt thereof. Cervantes, likewise, delivered his share of the undertaking. Lim in an undertaking sometime on or about August 9,1965, promised to incorporate his airline in accordance with their agreement and proceeded to acquire the planes on his own account. Since then up to the filing of this answer, Lim has refused, failed and still refuses to set up the corporation or return the money of Maglana. (Record on Appeal, pp. 337-338).

while respondents Bormaheco and the Cervanteses alleged in their answer, counterclaim, cross-claim and third-party complaint:

> Sometime in April 1965, defendant Lim lured and induced the answering defendants to purchase two airplanes and spare parts from Japan which the latter considered as their lawful contribution and participation in the proposed corporation to be known as SAL. Arrangements and negotiations were undertaken by defendant Lim. Down payments were advanced by defendants Bormaheco and the Cervanteses and Constancio Maglana (Exh. E- 1). Contrary to the agreement among the defendants, defendant Lim in connivance with the plaintiff, signed and executed the alleged chattel mortgage and surety bond agreement in his personal capacity as the alleged proprietor of the SAL. The answering defendants learned for the first time of this trickery and misrepresentation of the other, Jacob Lim, when the herein plaintiff chattel mortgage (sic) allegedly executed by defendant Lim, thereby forcing them to file an adverse claim in the form of third-party claim. Notwithstanding repeated oral demands made by defendants Bormaheco and Cervanteses, to defendant Lim, to surrender the possession of the two planes and their accessories and or return the amount advanced by the former amounting to an aggregate sum of P 178,997.14 as evidenced by a statement of accounts, the latter ignored, omitted and refused to comply with them. (Record on Appeal, pp. 341-342).

Applying therefore the principles of law earlier cited to the facts of the case, necessarily, no de facto partnership was created among the parties which would entitle the petitioner to a reimbursement of the supposed losses of the proposed corporation. The record shows that the petitioner was acting on his own and not in behalf of his other would-be incorporators in transacting the sale of the airplanes and spare parts.

- Bases Conversion and Development Authority v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, G.R. No. 205925, [June 20, 2018]

BASES CONVERSION AND DEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY, Petitioner, v. COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE, Respondent.
G.R. No. 205925, SECOND DIVISION, June 20, 2018, REYES, JR., J.

Section 2(10) and (13) of the Introductory Provisions of the Administrative Code of 1987 provides for the definition of a government "instrumentality" and a "GOCC", to wit:

> SEC. 2. General Terms Defined. x x x x
>
> (10) Instrumentality refers to any agency of the National Government. not integrated within the department framework, vested with special functions or jurisdiction by law, endowed with some if not all corporate powers*, administering special funds, and enjoying operational autonomy, usually through a charter. x x x.*
>
> x x x x

> (13) Government-owned or controlled corporation refers to any agency organized as a stock or non-stock corporation*, vested with functions relating to public needs whether governmental or proprietary in nature, and owned by the Government directly or through its instrumentalities either wholly, or, where applicable as in the case of stock corporations, to the extent of at least fifty-one (51) percent of its capital stock: x x x.*

Many government instrumentalities are vested with corporate powers but they do not become stock or non-stock corporations, which is a necessary condition before an agency or instrumentality is deemed a [GOCC]. Examples are the Mactan International Airport Authority, the Philippine Ports Authority, the University of the Philippines and Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas. All these government instrumentalities exercise corporate powers but they are not organized as stock or non-stock corporations as required by Section 2 (13) of the Introductory Provisions of the Administrative Code. These government instrumentalities are sometimes loosely called government corporate entities. However, they are not [GOCCs] in the strict sense as understood under the Administrative Code, which is the governing law defining the legal relationship or status of government entities.

As previously mentioned, in order to qualify as a GOCC, one must be organized either as a stock or non-stock corporation. Section 321 of the Corporation Code defines a stock corporation as one whose "capital stock is divided into shares and x x x authorized to distribute to the holders of such shares dividends x x x.''

FACTS:

On October 8, 2010, BCDA filed a petition for review with the CTA in order to preserve its right to pursue its claim for refund of the Creditable Withholding Tax (CWT) in the amount of Php122,079,442.53, which was paid under protest from March 19, 2008 to October 8, 2008. The CWT which BCDA paid under protest was in connection with its sale of the BCDA-allocated units as its share in the Serendra Project pursuant to the Joint Development Agreement with Ayala Land, Inc.

The petition for review was filed with a Request for Exemption from the Payment of Filing Fees in the amount of Php1,209,457.90.

On October 20, 2010, the CTA First Division denied BCDA's Request for Exemption and ordered it to pay the filing fees within five days from notice.

BCDA moved for reconsideration which was denied by the CTA First Division on February 8, 2011. BCDA was once again ordered to pay the filing fees within five days from notice, otherwise, the petition for review will be dismissed.

BCDA filed a petition for review with the CTA En Banc on February 25, 2011, which petition was returned and not deemed filed without the payment of the correct legal fees. BCDA once again emphasized its position that it is exempt from the payment of such fees.

It must be emphasized that payment in full of docket fees within the prescribed period is mandatory. It is an essential requirement without which the decision appealed from would become final and executory as if no appeal had been filed. To repeat, in both original and appellate cases, the court acquires jurisdiction over the case only upon the payment of the prescribed docket fees.

In this case, due to BCDA's non-payment of the prescribed legal fees within the prescribed period, this Court has not acquired jurisdiction over the case. Consequently, it is as if no appeal was ever filed with this Court.

ISSUE:

Whether BCDA is a government instrumentality vested with corporate powers, and as such, exempted from the payment of docket fees . (YES)

RULING:

At the crux of the present petition is the issue of whether or not BCDA is a government instrumentality or a government-owned and – controlled corporation (GOCC). If it is an instrumentality, it is exempt from the payment of docket fees. If it is a GOCC, it is not exempt and as such non-payment thereof would mean that the tax court did not acquire jurisdiction over the case and properly dismissed it for BCDA's failure to settle the fees on time.

Section 2(10) and (13) of the Introductory Provisions of the Administrative Code of 1987 provides for the definition of a government "instrumentality" and a "GOCC", to wit:

> SEC. 2. General Terms Defined. x x x x
>
> (10) Instrumentality refers to any agency of the National Government. not integrated within the department framework, vested with special functions or jurisdiction by law, endowed with some if not all corporate powers, administering special funds, and enjoying operational autonomy, usually through a charter. x x x.
>
> x x x x
>
> (13) Government-owned or controlled corporation refers to any agency organized as a stock or non-stock corporation, vested with functions relating to public needs whether governmental or proprietary in nature, and owned by the Government directly or through its instrumentalities either wholly, or, where applicable as in the case of stock corporations, to the extent of at least fifty-one (51) percent of its capital stock: x x x. (Emphasis Ours)

The grant of these corporate powers is likewise stated in Section 3 of Republic Act (R.A.) No. 7227; also known as The Bases Conversion and Development Act of 1992 which provides for BCDA's manner of creation, to wit:

> Sec. 3. Creation of the Bases Conversion and Development Authority. - There is hereby created a body corporate to be known as the Bases Conversion and Development Authority, which shall have the attribute of perpetual succession and shall be vested with the powers of a corporation. (Emphasis Ours)

From the foregoing, it is clear that a government instrumentality may be endowed with corporate powers and at the same time retain its classification as a government "instrumentality" for all other purposes.

In the 2006 case of Manila International Airport Authority v. CA, the Court, speaking through Associate Justice Antonio T. Carpio, explained in this wise:

> Many government instrumentalities are vested with corporate powers but they do not become stock or non-stock corporations, which is a necessary condition before an agency or instrumentality is deemed a [GOCC]. Examples are the Mactan International Airport Authority, the Philippine Ports Authority, the University of the Philippines and Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas. All these government instrumentalities exercise corporate powers but they are not organized as stock or non-stock corporations as required by Section 2 (13) of the Introductory Provisions of the Administrative Code. These government instrumentalities are sometimes loosely called government corporate entities. However, they are not [GOCCs] in the strict sense as understood under the Administrative Code, which is the governing law defining the legal relationship or status of government entities.

Moreover, in the 2007 case of Philippine Fisheries Development Authority v. CA, the Court reiterated that a government instrumentality retains its classification as such albeit having been endowed with some if not all corporate powers. The relevant portion of said decision reads as follows:

> Indeed, the Authority is not a GOCC but an instrumentality of the government. The Authority has a capital stock but it is not divided into shares of stocks. Also, it has no stockholders or voting shares. Hence, it is not a stock corporation. Neither is it a non-stock corporation because it has no members.
>
> The Authority is actually a national government instrumentality which is define as an agency of the national government, not integrated within the department framework, vested with special functions or jurisdiction by law, endowed with some if not all corporate powers, administering special funds and enjoying operational autonomy, usually through a charter. When the law vests in a government instrumentality corporate powers, the instrumentality does not become a corporation. Unless the government instrumentality is organized as a stock or non-stock corporation, it remains a government instrumentality exercising not only governmental but also corporate powers.

As previously mentioned, in order to qualify as a GOCC, one must be organized either as a stock or non-stock corporation. Section 321 of the Corporation Code defines a stock corporation as one whose "capital stock is divided into shares and authorized to distribute to the holders of such shares dividends.''

Section 6 of R.A. No. 7227 provides for BCDA's capitalization, to wit:

> Sec. 6. Capitalization. – The Conversion Authority shall have an authorized capital of One hundred billion pesos (P100,000,000,000.00) which may be fully subscribed by the Republic of the Philippines and shall either be paid up from the proceeds of the sales of its land assets as provided for in Section 8 of this Act or by transferring to the Conversion Authority properties valued in such amount.
>
> An initial operating capital in the amount of seventy million pesos (P70,000,000.00) is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any funds in the National Treasury not otherwise appropriated which shall be covered by preferred shares of the Conversion Authority retireable within two (2) years.

Based on the foregoing, it is clear that BCDA has an authorized capital of Php100 Billion, however, it is not divided into shares of stock. BCDA has no voting shares. There is likewise no provision which authorizes the distribution of dividends and allotments of surplus and profits to BCDA's stockholders. Hence, BCDA is not a stock corporation.

Section 8 of R.A. No. 7227 provides an enumeration of BCDA's purposes and their corresponding percentage shares in the sales proceeds of BCDA. Section 8 likewise states that after distribution of the proceeds acquired from BCDA's activities, the balance, if any, shall accrue and be remitted to the National Treasury, to wit:

Sec. 8. Funding Scheme.—The capital of the Conversion Authority shall come from the sales proceeds and/or transfers of certain Metro Manila military camps, including all lands covered by Proclamation No. 423, series of 1957, commonly known as Fort Bonifacio and Villamor (Nicholas) Air Base x x x.

x x x x

The President is hereby authorized to sell the above lands, in whole or in part, which are hereby declared alienable and disposable pursuant to the provisions of existing laws and regulations governing sales of government properties: provided, that no sale or disposition of such lands will be undertaken until a development plan embodying projects for conversion shall be approved by the President in accordance with paragraph (b), Sec. 4, of this Act. However, six (6) months after approval of this Act, the President shall authorize the Conversion Authority to dispose of certain areas in Fort Bonifacio and Villamor as the latter so determines. The Conversion Authority shall provide the President a report on any such disposition or plan for disposition within one (1) month from such disposition or preparation of such plan. The proceeds from any sale, after deducting all expenses related to the sale, of portions of Metro Manila military camps as authorized under this Act, shall be used for the following purposes with their corresponding percent shares of proceeds:

(1) Thirty-two and five-tenths percent (35.5%) — To finance the transfer of the AFP military camps and the construction of new camps, the self-reliance and modernization program of the AFP, the concessional and long-term housing loan assistance and livelihood assistance to AFP officers and enlisted men and their families, and the rehabilitation and expansion of the AFP's medical facilities;

(2) Fifty percent (50%) — To finance the conversion and the commercial uses of the Clark and subic military reservations and their extentions;

(3) Five Percent (5%) — To finance the concessional and long-term housing loan assistance for the homeless of Metro Manila, Olongapo City, Angeles City and other affected municipalities contiguous to the base areas as mandated herein: and

> (4) The balance shall accrue and be remitted to the National Treasury to be appropriated thereafter by Congress for the sole purpose of financing programs and projects vital for the economic upliftment of the Filipino people. (Emphasis Ours)

The remaining balance, if any, from the proceeds of BCDA's activities shall be remitted to the National Treasury. The National Treasury is not a stockholder of BCDA Hence, none of the proceeds from BCDA's activities will be allotted to its stockholders.

BCDA also does not qualify as a non-stock corporation because it is not organized for any of the purposes mentioned under Section 88 of the Corporation Code, to wit:

> Sec. 88. Purposes. – Non-stock corporations may be formed or organized tor charitable, religious, educational, professional, cultural, fraternal, literary, scientific, social, civic service, or similar purposes, like trade industry, agricultural and like chambers, or any combination thereof: subject to the special provisions of this Title governing particular classes of non-stock corporations.

A cursory reading of Section 4 of R.A. No. 7227 shows that BCDA is organized for a specific purpose - to own, hold and/or administer the military reservations in the country and implement its conversion to other productive uses, to wit:

> Sec. 4. Purposes of the Conversion Authority. — The Conversion Authority shall have the following purposes:
>
> (a) To own, hold and/or administer the military reservations of John Hay Air Station, Wallace Air Station, O'Donnell Transmitter Station, San Miguel Naval Communications Station. Mt. Sta. Rita Station (Hermosa, Bataan) and those portions of Metro Manila military camps which may be transferred to it by the President:
>
> (b) To adopt, prepare and implement a comprehensive and detailed development plan embodying a list of projects including but not limited to those provided in the Legislative-Executive Bases Council (LEBC) framework plan for the sound and balanced conversion of the Clark and Subic military reservations and their extensions consistent with ecological and environmental standards, into other productive uses to promote the economic and social development of Central Luzon in particular and the country in general;
>
> (c) To encourage the active participation of the private sector in transforming the Clark and Subic military reservations and their extensions into other productive uses;
>
> (d) To serve as the holding company of subsidiary companies created pursuant to Section 16 of this Act and to invest in Special Economic Zones declared under Sections 12 and 15 of this Act;
>
> (e) To manage and operate through private sector companies developmental projects outside the jurisdiction of subsidiary companies and Special Economic Zones declared by presidential proclamations and established under this Act;

(f) To establish a mechanism in coordination with the appropriate local government units to effect meaningful consultation regarding the plans, programs and projects within the regions where such plans, programs and/or project development are part of the conversion of the Clark and Subic military reservations and their extensions and the surrounding communities as envisioned in this Act; and

(g) To plan, program and undertake the readjustment, relocation, or resettlement of population within the Clark and Subic military reservations and their extensions as may be deemed necessary and beneficial by the Conversion Authority, in coordination with the appropriate government agencies and local government units. (Emphases Ours)

From the foregoing, it is clear that BCDA is neither a stock nor a non-stock corporation. BCDA is a government instrumentality vested with corporate powers. Under Section 21, Rule 141 of the Rules of Court, agencies and instrumentalities of the Republic of the Philippines are exempt from paying legal or docket fees. Hence, BCDA is exempt from the payment of docket fees.

1. Corporation by estoppel

- Reynaldo M. Lozano vs. Hon. Eliezer R. De los Santos, Presiding Judge, RTC, Br. 58, Angeles City; and Antonio Anda, G.R. No. 125221, June 19, 1997

REYNALDO M. LOZANO, Petitioner, v. HON. ELIEZER R. DE LOS SANTOS, Presiding Judge, RTC, Br. 58, Angeles City; and ANTONIO ANDA, Respondents.
G.R. No. 125221, SECOND DIVISION, June 19, 1997, PUNO, J

The KAMAJDA and SAMAJODA to which petitioner and private respondent belong are duly registered with the SEC, but these associations are two separate entities. The dispute between petitioner and private respondent is not within the KAMAJDA nor the SAMAJODA. It is between members of separate and distinct associations. Petitioner and private respondent have no intracorporate relation much less do they have an intracorporate dispute. The SEC therefore has no jurisdiction over the complaint.

The doctrine of corporation by estoppel advanced by private respondent cannot override jurisdictional requirements. Jurisdiction is fixed by law and is not subject to the agreement of the parties. It cannot be acquired through or waived, enlarged or diminished by, any act or omission of the parties, neither can it be conferred by the acquiescence of the court.

Corporation by estoppel is founded on principles of equity and is designed to prevent injustice and unfairness. It applies when persons assume to form a corporation and exercise corporate functions and enter into business relations with third persons. Where there is no third person involved and the conflict arises only among those assuming the form of a corporation, who therefore know that it has not been registered there is no corporation by estoppel*.*

FACTS:

The facts are undisputed. On December 19, 1995, petitioner Reynaldo M. Lozano filed Civil Case No. 1214 for damages against respondent Antonio Anda before the Municipal Circuit Trial Court (MCTC), Mabalacat and Magalang, Pampanga. Petitioner alleged that he was the president of the Kapatirang Mabalacat-Angeles Jeepney Drivers' Association, Inc. (KAMAJDA) while respondent Anda was the president of the Samahang Angeles-Mabalacat Jeepney Operators' and Drivers' Association, Inc. (SAMAJODA); in August 1995, upon the request of the Sangguniang Bayan of Mabalacat, Pampanga, petitioner and private respondent agreed to consolidate their respective associations and form the Unified Mabalacat-Angeles Jeepney Operators' and Drivers' Association, Inc. (UMAJODA); petitioner and private respondent also agreed to elect one set of officers who shall be given the sole authority to collect the daily dues from the members of the consolidated association; elections were held on October 29, 1995 and both petitioner and private respondent ran for president; petitioner won; private respondent protested and, alleging fraud, refused to recognize the results of the election; private respondent also refused to abide by their agreement and continued collecting the dues from the members of his association despite several demands to desist. Petitioner was thus constrained to file the complaint to restrain private respondent from collecting the dues and to order him to pay damages in the amount of P25,000.00 and attorney's fees of P500.00.

Private respondent moved to dismiss the complaint for lack of jurisdiction, claiming that jurisdiction was lodged with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). The MCTC denied the motion on February 9, 1996. It denied reconsideration on March 8, 1996.

ISSUE:

Whether the doctrine of corporation by estoppel is applicable. (NO)

RULING:

The grant of jurisdiction to the SEC must be viewed in the light of its nature and function under the law. This jurisdiction is determined by a concurrence of two elements: (1) the status or relationship of the parties; and (2) the nature of the question that is the subject of their controversy.

The first element requires that the controversy must arise out of intracorporate or partnership relations between and among stockholders, members, or associates; between any or all of them and the corporation, partnership or association of which they are stockholders, members or associates, respectively; and between such corporation, partnership or association and the State in so far as it concerns their individual franchises. The second element requires that the dispute among the parties be intrinsically connected with the regulation of the corporation, partnership or association or deal with the internal affairs of the corporation, partnership or association. After all, the principal function of the SEC is the supervision and control of corporations, partnerships and associations with the end in view that investments in these entities may be encouraged and protected, and their activities pursued for the promotion of economic development.

There is no intracorporate nor partnership relation between petitioner and private Respondent. The controversy between them arose out of their plan to consolidate their respective jeepney drivers' and operators' associations into a single common association. This unified association was, however, still a proposal. It had not been approved by the SEC, neither had its officers and members submitted their articles of consolidation in accordance with Sections 78 and 79 of the Corporation Code. Consolidation becomes effective not upon mere agreement of the members but only upon issuance of the certificate of consolidation by the SEC. When the SEC, upon processing and examining the articles of consolidation, is satisfied that the consolidation of the corporations is not inconsistent with the provisions of the Corporation Code and existing laws, it issues a certificate of consolidation which makes the reorganization official. The new consolidated corporation comes into existence and the constituent corporations dissolve and cease to exist.

The KAMAJDA and SAMAJODA to which petitioner and private respondent belong are duly registered with the SEC, but these associations are two separate entities. The dispute between petitioner and private respondent is not within the KAMAJDA nor the SAMAJODA. It is between members of separate and distinct associations. Petitioner and private respondent have no intracorporate relation much less do they have an intracorporate dispute. The SEC therefore has no jurisdiction over the complaint.

The doctrine of corporation by estoppel advanced by private respondent cannot override jurisdictional requirements. Jurisdiction is fixed by law and is not subject to the agreement of the parties. It cannot be acquired through or waived, enlarged or diminished by, any act or omission of the parties, neither can it be conferred by the acquiescence of the court.

Corporation by estoppel is founded on principles of equity and is designed to prevent injustice and unfairness. It applies when persons assume to form a corporation and exercise corporate functions and enter into business relations with third persons. Where there is no third person involved and the conflict arises only among those assuming the form of a corporation, who therefore know that it has not been registered there is no corporation by estoppel.

- Lim Tong Lim vs. Philippine Fishing Gear Industries, Inc., G.R. No. 136448, November 3, 1999

LIM TONG LIM, Petitioner, v. PHILIPPINE FISHING GEAR INDUSTRIES, INC, Respondent.
G.R. No. 136448, THIRD DIVISION, November 3, 1999, PANGANIBAN, J.

The doctrine of corporation by estoppel may apply to the alleged corporation and to a third party*. In the first instance, an unincorporated association, which represented itself to be a corporation, will be estopped from denying its corporate capacity in a suit against it by a third person who relied in good faith on such representation. It cannot allege lack of personality to be sued to evade its responsibility for a contract it entered into and by virtue of which it received advantages and benefits.*

On the other hand, a third party who, knowing an association to be unincorporated, nonetheless treated it as a corporation and received benefits from it, may be barred from denying its corporate existence in a suit brought against the alleged corporation*. In such case, all those who benefited from the transaction made by the ostensible corporation, despite knowledge of its legal defects, may be held liable for contracts they impliedly assented to or took advantage of.*

Technically, it is true that petitioner did not directly act on behalf of the corporation. However, having reaped the benefits of the contract entered into by persons with whom he previously had an existing relationship, he is deemed to be part of said association and is covered by the scope of the doctrine of corporation by estoppel*.*

FACTS:

Lim Tong Lim requested Peter Yao to engage in commercial fishing with him and one Antonio Chua. The three agreed to purchase two fishing boats but since they do not have the money they borrowed from one Jesus Lim (brother of Lim Tong Lim). Antonio Chua and Peter Yao, on behalf of "Ocean Quest Fishing Corporation," entered into a Contract with Philippine Fishing Gear Industries, Inc. for the purchase of fishing nets of various sizes. Chua and Yao claimed that they were engaged in a business venture with Lim Tong Lim, who was not a signatory to the contract.

The buyers failed to pay for items; and the private respondent filed a collection suit against them, including Lim Tong Lim, with a prayer for a writ of preliminary attachment. The suit was filed against them in their capacities as general partners, on the allegation that Ocean Quest Fishing Corporation was a nonexistent. The lower court issued a Writ of Preliminary Attachment, by attaching the fishing nets on board F/B Lourdes which was then docked at the Fisheries Port, Navotas, Metro Manila. Chua, instead of answering the Complaint, filed a Manifestation admitting his liability and requesting a reasonable time to pay and turned over to some of the nets in his possession. Yao filed an Answer. Lim Tong Lim, filed an Answer with Counterclaim and Crossclaim and moved for the lifting of the Writ of Attachment. The trial court maintained the Writ and ordered the sale of the fishing nets. Philippine Fishing Gear Industries won the bidding and deposited with the said court the sales proceeds of P900,000.

On November 18, 1992, the trial court rules that Philippine Fishing was entitled to the Writ of Attachment and that Chua, Yao and Lim, as general partners, were jointly liable to pay respondent. The trial court ruled that a partnership among Lim, Chua and Yao existed based: (1) on the testimonies of the witnesses presented; (2) on a Compromise Agreement executed by the three in Civil Case No. 1492-MN which Chua and Yao had brought against Lim in the RTC of Malabon, Branch 72; and 3) That the parties plaintiffs & Lim Tong Lim agree to have the four (4) vessels sold in the amount of P5,750,000.00 including the fishing net. This P5,750,000.00 shall be applied as full payment for P3,250,000.00 in favor of JL Holdings Corporation and/or Lim Tong Lim.

The trial court noted that the Compromise Agreement was silent as to the nature of theirobligations, but that joint liability could be presumed from the equal distribution of the profit and loss.

Lim appealed to the Court of Appeals (CA) which, as already stated, affirmed the RTC. The ruling of the Court of Appeals, in affirming the trial court, the CA held that a partnerhip existed among may be held liable as a such for the fishing nets and floats purchased by and for the use of the partnership. The appellate court ruled: The evidence establishes that the defendants including Lim Tong Lim undertook a partnership for commercial fishing x x x. Obviously, the ultimate undertaking of the defendants was to divide the profits among themselves which is what a partnership essentially is x x x. By a contract of partnership, two or more persons bind themselves to contribute money, property or industry to a common fund with the intention of dividing the profits among themselves.

ISSUE:

Whether petitioner should be held liable along with Chua and Yao. (YES)

RULING:
Section 21 of the Corporation Code of the Philippines provides:

> "SECTION 21. Corporation by estoppel. — All persons who assume to act as a corporation knowing it to be without authority to do so shall be liable as general partners for all debts, liabilities and damages incurred or arising as a result thereof: Provided however, That when any such ostensible corporation is sued on any transaction entered by it as a corporation or on any tort committed by it as such, it shall not be allowed to use as a defense its lack of corporate personality.

"One who assumes an obligation to an ostensible corporation as such, cannot resist performance thereof on the ground that there was in fact no corporation."

Thus, even if the ostensible corporate entity is proven to be legally nonexistent, a party may be estopped from denying its corporate existence. "The reason behind this doctrine is obvious — an unincorporated association has no personality and would be incompetent to act and appropriate for itself the power and attributes of a corporation as provided by law; it cannot create agents or confer authority on another to act in its behalf; thus, those who act or purport to act as its representatives or agents do so without authority and at their own risk. And as it is an elementary principle of law that a person who acts as an agent without authority or without a principal is himself regarded as the principal, possessed of all the right and subject to all the liabilities of a principal, a person acting or purporting to act on behalf of a corporation which has no valid existence assumes such privileges and obligations and becomes personally liable for contracts entered into or for other acts performed as such agent."

The doctrine of corporation by estoppel may apply to the alleged corporation and to a third party. In the first instance, an unincorporated association, which represented itself to be a corporation, will be estopped from denying its corporate capacity in a suit against it by a third person who relied in good faith on such representation. It cannot allege lack of personality to be sued to evade its responsibility for a contract it entered into and by virtue of which it received advantages and benefits.

On the other hand, a third party who, knowing an association to be unincorporated, nonetheless treated it as a corporation and received benefits from it, may be barred from denying its corporate existence in a suit brought against the alleged corporation. In such case, all those who benefited from the transaction made by the ostensible corporation, despite knowledge of its legal defects, may be held liable for contracts they impliedly assented to or took advantage of.

There is no dispute that the respondent, Philippine Fishing Gear Industries, is entitled to be paid for the nets it sold. The only question here is whether petitioner should be held jointly liable with Chua and Yao. Petitioner contests such liability, insisting that only those who dealt in the name of the ostensible corporation should be held liable. Since his name does not appear on any of the contracts and since he never directly transacted with the respondent corporation, ergo, he cannot be held liable.

Unquestionably, petitioner benefited from the use of the nets found inside F/B Lourdes, the boat which has earlier been proven to be an asset of the partnership. He in fact questions the attachment of the nets, because the Writ has effectively stopped his use of the fishing vessel.

It is difficult to disagree with the RTC and the CA that Lim, Chua and Yao decided to form a corporation. Although it was never legally formed for unknown reasons, this fact alone does not preclude the liabilities of the three as contracting parties in representation of it. Clearly, under the law on estoppel, those acting on behalf of a corporation and those benefited by it, knowing it to be without valid existence, are held liable as general partners.

Technically, it is true that petitioner did not directly act on behalf of the corporation. However, having reaped the benefits of the contract entered into by persons with whom he previously had an existing relationship, he is deemed to be part of said association and is covered by the scope of the doctrine of corporation by estoppel. We reiterate the ruling of the Court in Alonso v. Villamor:

> "A litigation is not a game of technicalities in which one, more deeply schooled and skilled in the subtle art of movement and position, entraps and destroys the other. It is, rather, a contest in which each contending party fully and fairly lays before the court the facts in issue and then, brushing aside as wholly trivial and indecisive all imperfections of form and technicalities of procedure, asks that justice be done upon the merits. Lawsuits, unlike duels, are not to be won by a rapier's thrust. Technicality, when it deserts its proper office as an aid to justice and becomes its great hindrance and chief enemy, deserves scant consideration from courts. There should be no vested rights in technicalities."

- People of the Philippines vs. Engr. Carlos Garcia y Pineda, Patricio Botero y Vales, Luisa Miraples (at large) & Patricio Botero y Vales, G.R. No. 117010, April 18, 1997

PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINES, Plaintiff-Appellee, v. ENGR. CARLOS GARCIA y PINEDA, PATRICIO BOTERO y VALES, LUISA MIRAPLES (at large), Accused, PATRICIO BOTERO y VALES, Accused-Appellant.
G.R. No. 117010, SECOND DIVISION, April 18, 1997, PUNO, J.

The evidence shows that appellant Botero was one of the incorporators of Ricorn. For reasons that cannot be discerned from the records, Ricorn's incorporation was not consummated. Even then, appellant cannot avoid his liabilities to the public as an incorporator of Ricorn. He and his co-accused Garcia held themselves out to the public as officers of Ricorn. They received money from applicants who availed of their services. They are thus estopped from claiming that they are not liable as corporate officials of Ricorn. Section 25 of the Corporation Code provides that" (a)ll persons who assume to act as a corporation knowing it to be without authority to do so shall be liable as general partners for all the debts, liabilities and damages incurred or arising as a result thereof : Provided, however, That when any such ostensible corporation is sued on any transaction entered by it as a corporation or on any tort committed by it as such, it shall not be allowed to use as a defense its lack of corporate personality."

FACTS:

Six (6) out of the sixteen (16) complainants testified that on various dates in March 1992, they went to Ricorn Philippine International Shipping Lines, Inc. (hereinafter Ricorn), an entity which recruits workers for overseas employment, with office at Rm. 410, Jovan Building, 600 Shaw Blvd., Mandaluyong, Metro Manila. They applied as seamen, cook, waiter, chambermaid or laundrywoman overseas and were required to submit their NBI and police clearance, birth certificate, passport, seaman's book and Survival of Life at Sea (SOLAS). As they did not have the last three (3) documents, they were asked to pay five thousand pesos (P5,000.00) as processing fee. They paid to Ricorn's treasurer, Luisa Miraples who issued receipts signed by her under Ricorn's heading.

Garcia was represented as Ricorn's president and Botero as vice-president of Ricorn. Both assured complainants of employment after the May 1992 election. However, after election, when complainants went back to check on their applications, Ricorn has abandoned its office, Garcia and Botero were nowhere to be found. They also checked with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) and discovered that Ricorn was not yet incorporated. They also found that Ricorn was not licensed by the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) to engage in recruitment activities.

According to Garcia, the group of Botero and Miraples approached him at a baptismal party to join Ricorn and was asked to contribute P100,000. He met them once more at Ricorn's office at Jovan Bldg. where there were many applicants for overseas jobs. This time, they asked him to become Ricorn's president and to contribute only twenty thousand pesos (P20,000.00). He declined the offer. Allegedly, he already knew that Ricorn was not licensed. On the other hand, Botero testified that he dealt with accused Garcia who claimed to be the President of Ricorn when he applied for overseas employment as a machinist. Eventually, he gained the trust of Garcia and became an employee of Ricorn. As a former seaman, he was familiar with the processing of passport, seaman's book and SOLAS. His job consisted in following-up these documents. He left Ricorn when he discovered it was not licensed by the POEA nor was it registered with the SEC.

However, on cross-examination, he admitted that in February 1992, he met Garcia in TADE recruitment agency. Garcia convinced him to become one of the incorporators of Ricorn. He gave money to Garcia for Ricorn's registration with the SEC.

ISSUE:

Whether Botero is guilty of illegal recruitment on large scale. (YES)

RULING:

All the essential elements of the crime of illegal recruitment in large scale are present in this case, to wit:

> "(1) the accused engages in the recruitment and placement of workers, as defined under Article 13 (b) or in any prohibited activities under Article 34 of the Labor Code;chanroblesvirtualawlibrary
>
> "(2) accused has not complied with the guidelines issued by the Secretary of Labor and Employment, particularly with respect to the securing of a license or an authority to recruit and deploy workers, either locally or overseas; and
>
> "(3) accused commits the same against three (3) or more persons, individually or as a group."

It is a fact that Ricorn had no license to recruit from DOLE. In the office of Ricorn, a notice was posted informing job applicants that its recruitment license is still being processed. Yet, Ricorn already entertained applicants and collected fees for processing their travel documents.

For engaging in recruitment of workers without obtaining the necessary license from the POEA, Botero should suffer the consequences of Ricorn's illegal act for" (i)f the offender is a corporation, partnership, association or entity, the penalty shall be imposed upon the officer or officers of the corporation, partnership, association or entity responsible for violation; . . ." The evidence shows that appellant Botero was one of the incorporators of Ricorn. For reasons that cannot be discerned from the records, Ricorn's incorporation was not consummated. Even then, appellant cannot avoid his liabilities to the public as an incorporator of Ricorn. He and his co-accused Garcia held themselves out to the public as officers of Ricorn. They received money from applicants who availed of their services. They are thus estopped from claiming that they are not liable as corporate officials of Ricorn. Section 25 of the Corporation Code provides that" (a)ll persons who assume to act as a corporation knowing it to be without authority to do so shall be liable as general partners for all the debts, liabilities and damages incurred or arising as a result thereof : Provided, however, That when any such ostensible corporation is sued on any transaction entered by it as a corporation or on any tort committed by it as such, it shall not be allowed to use as a defense its lack of corporate personality."

- Macasaet vs. Francisco, G.R. No. 156759, June 5, 2013

ALLEN A. MACASAET, NICOLAS V. QUIJANO, JR., ISAIAS ALBANO, LILY REYES, JANET BAY, JESUS R. GALANG, AND RANDY HAGOS, Petitioners, vs. FRANCISCO R. CO, JR., Respondent.
G.R. No. 156759, FIRST DIVISION, June 5, 2013, BERSAMIN, J.

Nor can we sustain petitioners' contention that Abante Tonite could not be sued as a defendant due to its not being either a natural or a juridical person. In rejecting their contention, the CA categorized Abante Tonite as a corporation by estoppel as the result of its having represented itself to the reading public as a corporation despite its not being incorporated*. Thereby, the CA concluded that the RTC did not gravely abuse its discretion in holding that the non-incorporation of Abante Tonite with the Securities and Exchange Commission was of no consequence, for, otherwise, whoever of the public who would suffer any damage from the publication of articles in the pages of its tabloids would be left without recourse. We cannot disagree with the CA, considering that the editorial box of the daily tabloid disclosed that basis, nothing in the box indicated that Monica Publishing Corporation had owned Abante Tonite.*

FACTS:

Respondent sued pertitioners, including Abante Tonite, claiming damages because of an allegedly libelous article petitioner published said tabloid. RTC issued summons to be served on each petitioners, including Abante Tonite, at their business address. RTC Sheriff Medina proceeded to the address to effect the personal service of the summons. But his efforts to personally serve each were futile because the petitioners were out of the office and unavailable. He returned in the afternoon on the same day to make a second attempt at serving the summons, but he was informed that petitioners were still out of the office. He decided to resort to substituted service of the summons.

Petitioners moved for dismissal of the complaint alleging lack of jurisdiction over their persons because of the invalid and ineffectual substituted service of summons asserting that sheriff made no prior attempt to serve the summons personally, and that Abante Tonite, being neither a natural nor a juridical person, could not be made a party in the action. RTC denied the motion to dismiss. Considering that summonses cannot be served within a reasonable time to the persons of all the defendants, hence substituted service of summonses was validly applied. More importantly, "Abante Tonite" is a daily tabloid of general circulation. The information written on the said newspaper will affect the person, natural as well as juridical, who was stated or implicated in the news. All of these facts imply that "Abante Tonite" falls within the provision of the New Civil Code on juridical persons. Assuming arguendo that "Abante Tonite" is not registered with the SEC, it is deemed a corporation by estoppel considering that it possesses attributes of a juridical person, otherwise it cannot be held liable for damages and injuries it may inflict to other persons. CA affirmed RTC's decision.

ISSUE:

Whether Abante Tonite can be considered as a corporation by estoppel. (YES)

RULING:

Nor can we sustain petitioners' contention that Abante Tonite could not be sued as a defendant due to its not being either a natural or a juridical person. In rejecting their contention, the CA categorized Abante Tonite as a corporation by estoppel as the result of its having represented itself to the reading public as a corporation despite its not being incorporated. Thereby, the CA concluded that the RTC did not gravely abuse its discretion in holding that the non-incorporation of Abante Tonite with the Securities and Exchange Commission was of no consequence, for, otherwise, whoever of the public who would suffer any damage from the publication of articles in the pages of its tabloids would be left without recourse. We cannot disagree with the CA, considering that the editorial box of the daily tabloid disclosed that basis, nothing in the box indicated that Monica Publishing Corporation had owned Abante Tonite.

c. De facto corporation

- Sappari K. Sawadjaanvs. the Honorable Court of Appeals, the Civil Service Commission and Al-amanah Investment Bank of the Philippines, G.R. No. 141735, June 8, 2005

SAPPARI K. SAWADJAAN, petitioner, vs. THE HONORABLE COURT OF APPEALS, THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION and AL-AMANAH INVESTMENT BANK OF THE PHILIPPINES, respondents.

G.R. No. 141735, EN BANC, June 8, 2005, CHICO-NAZARIO, J.

The AIIBP was created by Rep. Act No. 6848. It has a main office where it conducts business, has shareholders, corporate officers, a board of directors, assets, and personnel. It is, in fact, here represented by the Office of the Government Corporate Counsel, "the principal law office of government-owned corporations, one of which is respondent bank." At the very least, by its failure to submit its by-laws on time, the AIIBP may be considered a de facto corporation whose right to exercise corporate powers may not be inquired into collaterally in any private suit to which such corporations may be a party.

Moreover, a corporation which has failed to file its by-laws within the prescribed period does not ipso facto lose its powers as such*. The SEC Rules on Suspension/Revocation of the Certificate of Registration of Corporations, details the procedures and remedies that may be availed of before an order of revocation can be issued. There is no showing that such a procedure has been initiated in this case.*

FACTS:

Petitioner Sappari K. Sawadjaan was among the first employees of the Philippine Amanah Bank (PAB) when it was created by virtue of Presidential Decree No. 264 on 02 August 1973. He rose through the ranks, working his way up from his initial designation as security guard, to settling clerk, bookkeeper, credit investigator, project analyst, appraiser/ inspector, and eventually, loans analyst.

In February 1988, while still designated as appraiser/investigator, Sawadjaan was assigned to inspect the properties offered as collaterals by Compressed Air Machineries and Equipment Corporation (CAMEC) for a credit line of Five Million Pesos (P5,000,000.00). The properties consisted of two parcels of land covered by Transfer Certificates of Title (TCTs) No. N-130671 and No. C-52576. On the basis of his Inspection and Appraisal Report, the PAB granted the loan application. When the loan matured on 17 May 1989, CAMEC requested an extension of 180 days, but was granted only 120 days to repay the loan. In the meantime, Sawadjaan was promoted to Loans Analyst I on 01 July 1989. In January 1990, Congress passed Republic Act 6848 creating the AIIBP and repealing P.D. No. 264 (which created the PAB). All assets, liabilities and capital accounts of the PAB were transferred to the AIIBP, and the existing personnel of the PAB were to continue to discharge their functions unless discharged.

In the ensuing reorganization, Sawadjaan was among the personnel retained by the AIIBP. When CAMEC failed to pay despite the given extension, the bank, now referred to as the AIIBP, discovered that TCT No. N-130671 was spurious, the property described therein non-existent, and that the property covered by TCT No. C-52576 had a prior existing mortgage in favor of one Divina Pablico. On 08 June 1993, the Board of Directors of the AIIBP created an Investigating Committee to look into the CAMEC transaction, which had cost the bank Six Million Pesos (P6,000,000.00) in losses.

The subsequent events, as found and decided upon by the Court of Appeals, are as follows: On 18 June 1993, petitioner received a memorandum from Islamic Bank [AIIBP] Chairman Roberto F. De Ocampo charging him with Dishonesty in the Performance of Official Duties and/or Conduct Prejudicial to the Best Interest of the Service and preventively suspending him. In his memorandum dated 8 September 1993, petitioner informed the Investigating Committee that he could not submit himself to the jurisdiction of the Committee because of its alleged partiality. For his failure to appear before the hearing set on 17 September 1993, after the hearing of 13 September 1993 was postponed due to the Manifestation of even date filed by petitioner, the Investigating Committee declared petitioner in default and the prosecution was allowed to present its evidence ex parte.

ISSUE:

Whether AIIBP is a de facto corporation. (NO)

RULING:

Even if we were to overlook this fact in the broader interests of justice and treat this as a special civil action for certiorari under Rule 65, the petition would nevertheless be dismissed for failure of the petitioner to show grave abuse of discretion. Petitioner's recurrent argument, tenuous at its very best, is premised on the fact that since respondent AIIBP failed to file its by-laws within the designated 60 days from the effectivity of Rep. Act No. 6848, all proceedings initiated by AIIBP and all actions resulting therefrom are a patent nullity. Or, in his words, the AIIBP and its officers and Board of Directors,

> . . . [H]ave no legal authority nor jurisdiction to manage much less operate the Islamic Bank, file administrative charges and investigate petitioner in the manner they did and allegedly passed Board Resolution No. 2309 on December 13, 1993 which is null and void for lack of an (sic) authorized and valid by-laws. The CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION was therefore affirming, erroneously, a null and void "Resolution No. 2309 dated December 13, 1993 of the Board of Directors of Al-Amanah Islamic Investment Bank of the Philippines" in CSC Resolution No. 94-4483 dated August 11, 1994. A motion for reconsideration thereof was denied by the CSC in its Resolution No. 95-2754 dated April 11, 1995. Both acts/resolutions of the CSC are erroneous, resulting from fraud, falsifications and misrepresentations of the alleged Chairman and CEO Roberto F. de Ocampo and the alleged Director Farouk A. Carpizo and his group at the alleged Islamic Bank.

Nowhere in petitioner's voluminous pleadings is there a showing that the court a quo committed grave abuse of discretion amounting to lack or excess of jurisdiction reversible by a petition for certiorari. Petitioner already raised the question of AIIBP's corporate existence and lack of jurisdiction in his Motion for New Trial/Motion for Reconsideration of 27 May 1997 and was denied by the Court of Appeals. Despite the volume of pleadings he has submitted thus far, he has added nothing substantial to his arguments.

The AIIBP was created by Rep. Act No. 6848. It has a main office where it conducts business, has shareholders, corporate officers, a board of directors, assets, and personnel. It is, in fact, here represented by the Office of the Government Corporate Counsel, "the principal law office of government-owned corporations, one of which is respondent bank." At the very least, by its failure to submit its by-laws on time, the AIIBP may be considered a de facto corporation whose right to exercise corporate powers may not be inquired into collaterally in any private suit to which such corporations may be a party.

Moreover, a corporation which has failed to file its by-laws within the prescribed period does not ipso facto lose its powers as such. The SEC Rules on Suspension/Revocation of the Certificate of Registration of Corporations, details the procedures and remedies that may be availed of before an order of revocation can be issued. There is no showing that such a procedure has been initiated in this case.

- Missionary Sisters of Our Lady of Fatima v. Alzona, G.R. No. 224307, [August 6, 2018]

THE MISSIONARY SISTERS OF OUR LADY OF FATIMA (PEACH SISTERS OF LAGUNA), REPRESENTED BY REV. MOTHER MA. CONCEPCION R. REALON, ET AL., Petitioners, v. AMANDO V. ALZONA, ET AL., Respondents.
G.R. No. 224307, SECOND DIVISION, August 06, 2018, REYES, JR., J.

Jurisprudence settled that "[t]he filing of articles of incorporation and the issuance of the certificate of incorporation are essential for the existence of a de facto corporation." In fine, it is the act of registration with SEC through the issuance of a certificate of incorporation that marks the beginning of an entity's corporate existence.
The doctrine of corporation by estoppel is founded on principles of equity and is designed to prevent injustice and unfairness. It applies when a non-existent corporation enters into contracts or dealings with third persons. In which case, the person who has contracted or otherwise dealt with the non-existent corporation is estopped to deny the latter's legal existence in any action leading out of or involving such contract or dealing. While the doctrine is generally applied to protect the sanctity of dealings with the public, nothing prevents its application in the reverse, in fact the very wording of the law which sets forth the doctrine of corporation by estoppel permits such interpretation. Such that a person who has assumed an obligation in favor of a non- existent corporation, having transacted with the latter as if it was duly incorporated, is prevented from denying the existence of the latter to avoid the enforcement of the contract.

At the outset, it must be stated that as correctly pointed out by the CA, the RTC erred in holding that the petitioner is a de facto corporation. Petitioner filed its Articles of Incorporation and by-laws on August 28, 2001. However, the SEC issued the corresponding Certificate of Incorporation only on August 31, 2001, two (2) days after Purificacion executed a Deed of Donation on August 29, 2001. Clearly, at the time the donation was made, the Petitioner cannot be considered a corporation de facto. Rather, a review of the attendant circumstances reveals that it calls for the application of the doctrine of corporation by estoppel as provided for under Section 21 of the Corporation Code.

FACTS:

The Missionary Sisters of Our Lady of Fatima, known as the Peach Sisters of Laguna, is a religious and charitable group established under the patronage of the Roman Catholic Bishop of San. Its primary mission is to take care of the abandoned and neglected elderly persons. The petitioner came into being as a corporation by virtue of a Certificate issued by the SEC on August 31, 2001. Mother Concepcion is the petitioner's Superior General. The respondents, on the other hand, are the legal heirs of the late Purificacion Y. Alzona.

Purificacion, is the registered owner of parcels of land located in Calamba City, Laguna. In 1996, Purificacion, impelled by her unmaterialized desire to be nun, decided to devote the rest of her life in helping others. In the same year, she then became a benefactor of the petitioner by giving support to the community and its works. In 1997, during a doctor's appointment, Purificacion then accompanied by Mother Concepcion, discovered that she has been suffering from lung cancer. Considering the restrictions in her movement, Purificacion requested Mother Concepcion to take care of her in her house, to which the latter agreed.

In October 1999, Purificacion called Mother Concepcion and handed her a handwritten letter dated October 1999. Therein, Purificacion stated that she is donating her house and lot at Calamba, Laguna, to the petitioner through Mother Concepcion. Purificacion, instructed her nephew to give a share of the harvest to Mother Concepcion, and informed her niece that she had given her house to Mother Concepcion.

Sometime in August 2001, at the request of Purificacion, Mother Concepcion went to see Atty. Arcillas in Los Baños, Laguna. During their meeting, Atty. Arcillas asked Mother Concepcion whether their group is registered with the SEC, to which the latter replied in the negative. Acting on the advice given by Atty. Arcillas, Mother Concepcion went to SEC and filed the corresponding registration application on August 28, 2001

On August 29, 2001, Purificacion executed a Deed of Donation Inter Vivos in favor of the petitioner, conveying to her the properties. The Deed was notarized by Atty. Arcillas and witnessed by Purificacion's nephews Francisco and Diosdado Alzona, and grandnephew, Atty. Fernando M. Alonzo. The donation was accepted on even date by Mother Concepcion for and in behalf of the petitioner.

Thereafter, Mother Concepcion filed an application before the BIR that the petitioner be exempted from donor's tax as a religious organization. The application was granted by the BIR. Subsequently, the Deed, together with the owner's duplicate copies, and the exemption letter from the BIR was presented for registration. The Register of Deeds, however, denied the registration on account of the Affidavit of Adverse Claim dated September 26, 2001 filed by the brother of Purificacion, respondent Amando.

On October 30, 2001, Purificacion died without any issue, and survived only by her brother of full blood, Amando, who nonetheless died during the pendency of this case and is now represented and substituted by his legal heirs, joined as herein respondents.

On April 9, 2002, Amando filed a Complaint before the RTC, seeking to annul the Deed executed between Purificacion and the petitioner, on the ground that at the time the donation was made, the latter was not registered with the SEC and therefore has no juridical personality and cannot legally accept the donation.

RTC dismissed the petition. CA modified, declaring the donation void.

ISSUE:

1. Whether or not the Deed executed by Purificacion in favor of the petitioner is valid and binding. (YES)
2. Whether or not petitioner as done has the legal capacity, as donee, to accept the donation, and the authority Mother Concepcion to act on behalf of the petitioner in accepting the donation (YES)

RULING:

At the outset, it must be stated that as correctly pointed out by the CA, the RTC erred in holding that the petitioner is a de facto corporation. Petitioner filed its Articles of Incorporation and by-laws on August 28, 2001. However, the SEC issued the corresponding Certificate of Incorporation only on August 31, 2001, two (2) days after Purificacion executed a Deed of Donation on August 29, 2001. Clearly, at the time the donation was made, the Petitioner cannot be considered a corporation de facto. Rather, a review of the attendant circumstances reveals that it calls for the application of the doctrine of corporation by estoppel as provided for under Section 21 of the Corporation Code.

In this controversy, Purificacion dealt with the petitioner as if it were a corporation. This is evident from the fact that Purificacion executed two (2) documents conveying her properties in favor of the petitioner – first, on October 11, 1999 via handwritten letter, and second, on August 29, 2001 through a Deed; the latter having been executed the day after the petitioner filed its application for registration with the SEC.

In this case, while the underlying contract which is sought to be enforced is that of a donation, and thus rooted on liberality, it cannot be said that Purificacion, as the donor failed to acquire any benefit therefrom so as to prevent the application of the doctrine of corporation by estoppel. To recall, the subject properties were given by Purificacion, as a token of appreciation for the services rendered to her during her illness. In fine, the subject deed partakes of the nature of a remuneratory or compensatory donation, having been made "for the purpose of rewarding the donee for past services, which services do not amount to a demandable debt."
Precisely, the existence of the petitioner as a corporate entity is upheld in this case for the purpose of validating the Deed to ensure that the primary objective for which the donation was intended is achieved, that is, to convey the property for the purpose of aiding the petitioner in the pursuit of its charitable objectives.

Further, apart from the foregoing, the subsequent act by Purificacion of re-conveying the property in favor of the petitioner is a ratification by conduct of the otherwise defective donation.

In this controversy, while the initial conveyance is defective, the genuine intent of Purificacion to donate the subject properties in favor of the petitioner is indubitable. Also, while the petitioner is yet to be incorporated, it cannot be said that the initial conveyance was tainted with fraud or misrepresentation. Contrarily, Purificacion acted with full knowledge of circumstances of the Petitioner. This is evident from Purificacion's act of referring Mother Concepcion to Atty. Arcillas, who, in turn, advised the petitioner to apply for registration. Further, with the execution of two (2) documents of conveyance in favor of the petitioner, it is clear that what Purificacion intended was for the sisters comprising the petitioner to have ownership of her properties to aid them in the pursuit of their charitable activities, as a token of appreciation for the services they rendered to her during her illness. To put it differently, the reference to the petitioner was merely a descriptive term used to refer to the sisters comprising the congregation collectively. Accordingly, the acceptance of Mother Concepcion for the sisters comprising the congregation is sufficient to perfect the donation and transfer title to the property to the petitioner. Ultimately, the subsequent incorporation of the petitioner and its affirmation of Mother Concepcion's authority to accept on its behalf cured whatever defect that may have attended the acceptance of the donation.

The Deed sought to be enforced having been validly entered into by Purificacion, the respondents' predecessor-in-interest, binds the respondents who succeed the latter as heirs.

d. Government corporation

- Baluyot vs. Holganza, 325 SCRA 248 (2000)

FRANCISCA S. BALUYOT, Petitioner, v. PAUL E. HOLGANZA and the OFFICE OF THE OMBUDSMAN (VISAYAS) represented by its Deputy Ombudsman for the Visayas ARTURO C.

MOJICA, Director VIRGINIA PALANCA-SANTIAGO, and Graft Investigation Officer I ANNA MARIE P. MILITANTE, Respondents.
G. R. No. 136374, SECOND DIVISION, February 9, 2000, DE LEON, JR., J.

Following the ruling in Camporedondo v. National Labor Relations Commission, et. al., Philippine National Red Cross (PNRC) is a government owned and controlled corporation, with an original charter under Republic Act No. 95, as amended. The test to determine whether a corporation is government owned or controlled, or private in nature is simple. Is it created by its own charter for the exercise of a public function, or by incorporation under the general corporation law? Those with special charters are government corporations subject to its provisions, and its employees are under the jurisdiction of the Civil Service Commission, and are compulsory members of the Government Service Insurance System. The PNRC was not "impliedly converted to a private corporation" simply because its charter was amended to vest in it the authority to secure loans, be exempted from payment of all duties, taxes, fees and other charges of all kinds on all importations and purchases for its exclusive use, on donations for its disaster relief work and other services and in its benefits and fund raising drives, and be allotted one lottery draw a year by the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office for the support of its disaster relief operation in addition to its existing lottery draws for blood program.

FACTS:

During a spot audit conducted on March 21, 1977 by a team of auditors from the Philippine National Red Cross (PNRC) headquarters, a cash shortage of P154,350.13 was discovered in the funds of its Bohol chapter. The chapter administrator, petitioner Francisca S. Baluyot, was held accountable for the shortage. Thereafter, private respondent Paul E. Holganza, in his capacity as a member of the board of directors of the Bohol chapter, filed an affidavit-complaint before the Office of the Ombudsman charging petitioner of malversation under Article 217 of the Revised Penal Code.
However, upon recommendation by respondent Anna Marie P. Militante, Graft Investigation.

Officer I, an administrative docket for dishonesty was also opened against petitioner. On March 14, 1998, petitioner filed her counter-affidavit, raising principally the defense that public respondent had no jurisdiction over the controversy. She argued that the Ombudsman had authority only over government-owned or controlled corporations, which the PNRC was not, or so she claimed. Petitioner contends that the Ombudsman has no jurisdiction over the subject matter of the controversy since the PNRC is allegedly a private voluntary organization. The following circumstances, she insists, are indicative of the private character of the organization: (1) the PNRC does not receive any budgetary support from the government, and that all money given to it by the latter and its instrumentalities become private funds of the organization; (2) funds for the payment of personnel's salaries and other emoluments come from yearly fund campaigns, private contributions and rentals from its properties; and (3) it is not audited by the Commission on Audit. Petitioner states that the PNRC falls under the International Federation of Red Cross, a Switzerland based organization, and that the power to discipline employees accused of misconduct, malfeasance, or immorality belongs to the PNRC Secretary General by virtue of its by-laws. She threatens that "to classify the PNRC as a government-owned or controlled corporation would create a dangerous precedent as it would lose its neutrality, independence and impartiality.

ISSUE:

Whether the Philippine National Red Cross is a Government-owned and controlled Corporation. (YES)

RULING:

Following the ruling in Camporedondo v. National Labor Relations Commission, et. al., Philippine National Red Cross (PNRC) is a government owned and controlled corporation, with an original charter under Republic Act No. 95, as amended. The test to determine whether a corporation is government owned or controlled, or private in nature is simple. Is it created by its own charter for the exercise of a public function, or by incorporation under the general corporation law? Those with special charters are government corporations subject to its provisions, and its employees are under the jurisdiction of the Civil Service Commission, and are compulsory members of the Government Service Insurance System. The PNRC was not "impliedly converted to a private corporation" simply because its charter was amended to vest in it the authority to secure loans, be exempted from payment of all duties, taxes, fees and other charges of all kinds on all importations and purchases for its exclusive use, on donations for its disaster relief work and other services and in its benefits and fund raising drives, and be allotted one lottery draw a year by the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office for the support of its disaster relief operation in addition to its existing lottery draws for blood program.

- Feliciano vs. Commission on Audit, 464 Philippine 439 (2004)

ENGR. RANULFO C. FELICIANO, in his capacity as General Manager of the Leyte Metropolitan Water District (LMWD), Tacloban City, Petitioner, v. COMMISSION ON AUDIT, Chairman CELSO D. GANGAN, Commissioners RAUL C. FLORES and EMMANUEL M. DALMAN, and Regional Director of COA Region VIII, Respondents.
G.R. NO. 147402, EN BANC, January 14, 2004, CARPIO, J.

In short, Congress cannot enact a law creating a private corporation with a special charter. Such legislation would be unconstitutional. Private corporations may exist only under a general law. If the corporation is private, it must necessarily exist under a general law. Stated differently, only corporations created under a general law can qualify as private corporations. Under existing laws, that general law is the Corporation Code, except that the Cooperative Code governs the incorporation of cooperatives.

The Constitution authorizes Congress to create government-owned or controlled corporations through special charters. Since private corporations cannot have special charters, it follows that Congress can create corporations with special charters only if such corporations are government-owned or controlled*.*

Obviously, LWDs are not private corporations because they are not created under the Corporation Code. LWDs are not registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Section 14 of the Corporation Code states that "[A]ll corporations organized under this code shall file with the Securities and Exchange Commission articles of incorporation x x x." LWDs have no articles of incorporation, no incorporators and no stockholders or members. There are no stockholders or members to elect the board directors of LWDs as in the case of all corporations registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The local mayor or the provincial governor appoints the directors of LWDs for a fixed term of office. This Court has ruled that LWDs are not created under the Corporation Code, thus:

From the foregoing pronouncement, it is clear that what has been excluded from the coverage of the CSC are those corporations created pursuant to the Corporation Code. Significantly, petitioners are not created under the said code, but on the contrary, they were created pursuant to a special law and are governed primarily by its provision.

FACTS:

A Special Audit Team from COA Regional Office No. VIII audited the accounts of Leyte Metropolitan Water District (LMWD). Subsequently, LMWD received a letter from COA requesting payment of auditing fees. As General Manager of LMWD, Feliciano sent a reply informing COA's Regional Director that the water district could not pay the auditing fees. Petitioner cited as basis for his action Sections 6 and 20 of PD 198 as well as Section 18 of RA 6785. Petitioner wrote COA through the Regional Director asking for refund of all auditing fees LMWD previously paid to COA. On 16 March 2000, petitioner received COA Chairman Celso D. Gangan's Resolution dated 3 January 2000 denying his requests. Petitioner filed a motion for reconsideration on 31 March 2000, which COA denied on 30 January 2001. The COA ruled that the Court has already settled COA's audit jurisdiction over local water districts in Davao City Water District v. Civil Service Commission and Commission on Audit, where it was held that Section 3(b) of PD 198 gives the local executives of the local subdivision unit where such water districts are located the power to appoint the members who will comprise the Board of Directors. In contrast, the members of the Board of Directors or the trustees of a private corporation are elected from among members or stockholders thereof. It would not be amiss at this point to emphasize that a private corporation is created for the private purpose, benefit, aim and end of its members or stockholders. Necessarily, said members or stockholders should be given a free hand to choose who will compose the governing body of their corporation. But this is not the case here and this clearly indicates that local water districts are not private corporations. Hence, Feliciano filed the petition and to the petition were resolutions of the Visayas Association of Water Districts (VAWD) and the Philippine Association of Water Districts (PAWD) supporting the petition.

ISSUE:

Whether a Local Water District ("LWD") created under PD 198, as amended, is a government-owned or controlled corporation. (YES)

RULING:

Petitioner seeks to revive a well-settled issue. Petitioner asks for a re-examination of a doctrine backed by a long line of cases culminating in Davao City Water District v. Civil Service Commission and just recently reiterated in De Jesus v. Commission on Audit. Petitioner maintains that LWDs are not government-owned and controlled corporations with original charters. Petitioner even argues that LWDs are private corporations. Petitioner asks the Court to consider certain interpretations of the applicable laws, which would give a "new perspective to the issue of the true character of water districts."

Petitioner theorizes that what PD 198 created was the Local Waters Utilities Administration ("LWUA") and not the LWDs. Petitioner claims that LWDs are created "pursuant to" and not created directly by PD 198. Thus, petitioner concludes that PD 198 is not an "original charter" that would place LWDs within the audit jurisdiction of COA as defined in Section 2(1), Article IX-D of the Constitution. Petitioner elaborates that PD 198 does not create LWDs since it does not expressly direct the creation of such entities, but only provides for their formation on an optional or voluntary basis. Petitioner adds that the operative act that creates an LWD is the approval of the Sanggunian Resolution as specified in PD 198.

Petitioners contention deserves scant consideration.

We begin by explaining the general framework under the fundamental law. The Constitution recognizes two classes of corporations. The first refers to private corporations created under a general law. The second refers to government-owned or controlled corporations created by special charters. Section 16, Article XII of the Constitution provides:

> Sec. 16. The Congress shall not, except by general law, provide for the formation, organization, or regulation of private corporations. Government-owned or controlled corporations may be created or established by special charters in the interest of the common good and subject to the test of economic viability.

The Constitution emphatically prohibits the creation of private corporations except by a general law applicable to all citizens. The purpose of this constitutional provision is to ban private corporations created by special charters, which historically gave certain individuals, families or groups special privileges denied to other citizens.

In short, Congress cannot enact a law creating a private corporation with a special charter. Such legislation would be unconstitutional. Private corporations may exist only under a general law. If the corporation is private, it must necessarily exist under a general law. Stated differently, only corporations created under a general law can qualify as private corporations. Under existing laws, that general law is the Corporation Code, except that the Cooperative Code governs the incorporation of cooperatives.

The Constitution authorizes Congress to create government-owned or controlled corporations through special charters. Since private corporations cannot have special charters, it follows that Congress can create corporations with special charters only if such corporations are government-owned or controlled.

Obviously, LWDs are not private corporations because they are not created under the Corporation Code. LWDs are not registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Section 14 of the Corporation Code states that "[A]ll corporations organized under this code shall file with the Securities and Exchange Commission articles of incorporation x x x." LWDs have no articles of incorporation, no incorporators and no stockholders or members. There are no stockholders or members to elect the board directors of LWDs as in the case of all corporations registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The local mayor or the provincial governor appoints the directors of LWDs for a fixed term of office. This Court has ruled that LWDs are not created under the Corporation Code, thus:

> From the foregoing pronouncement, it is clear that what has been excluded from the coverage of the CSC are those corporations created pursuant to the Corporation Code. Significantly, petitioners are not created under the said code, but on the contrary, they were created pursuant to a special law and are governed primarily by its provision.

LWDs exist by virtue of PD 198, which constitutes their special charter. Since under the Constitution only government-owned or controlled corporations may have special charters, LWDs can validly exist only if they are government-owned or controlled. To claim that LWDs are private corporations with a special charter is to admit that their existence is constitutionally infirm.

- Boy Scouts of the Philippines vs. Commission on Audit, G.R. No. 177131, June 7, 2011

BOY SCOUTS OF THE PHILIPPINES, PETITIONER, VS. COMMISSION ON AUDIT, RESPONDENT.
G.R. No. 177131, EN BANC, June 07, 2011, LEONARDO-DE CASTRO, J.

After looking at the legislative history of its amended charter and carefully studying the applicable laws and the arguments of both parties, we find that the BSP is a public corporation and its funds are subject to the COA's audit jurisdiction.

The BSP Charter (Commonwealth Act No. 111, approved on October 31, 1936), entitled "An Act to Create a Public Corporation to be Known as the Boy Scouts of the Philippines, and to Define its Powers and Purposes" created the BSP as a "public corporation" to serve the following public interest or purpose:

> Sec. 3.The purpose of this corporation shall be to promote through organization and cooperation with other agencies, the ability of boys to do useful things for themselves and others, to train them in scoutcraft, and to inculcate in them patriotism, civic consciousness and responsibility, courage, self-reliance, discipline and kindred virtues, and moral values, using the method which are in common use by boy scouts.

As presently constituted, the BSP still remains an instrumentality of the national government. It is a public corporation created by law for a public purpose, attached to the DECS pursuant to its Charter and the Administrative Code of 1987. It is not a private corporation which is required to be owned or controlled by the government and be economically viable to justify its existence under a special law.

Therefore, even though the amended BSP charter did away with most of the governmental presence in the BSP Board, this was done to more strongly promote the BSP's objectives, which were not supported under Presidential Decree No. 460. The BSP objectives, as pointed out earlier, are consistent with the public purpose of the promotion of the well-being of the youth, the future leaders of the country. The amendments were not done with the view of changing the character of the BSP into a privatized corporation. The BSP remains an agency attached to a department of the government, the DECS, and it was not at all stripped of its public character.

FACTS:

COA issued Resolution No. 99-0115 ("the COA Resolution"), with the subject "Defining the Commission's policy with respect to the audit of the Boy Scouts of the Philippines." In its whereas clauses, the COA Resolution stated that the BSP was created as a public corporation under Commonwealth Act No. 111, as amended by Presidential Decree No. 460 and Republic Act No. 7278; that in Boy Scouts of the Philippines v. National Labor Relations Commission, the Supreme Court ruled that the BSP, as constituted under its charter, was a "government-controlled corporation within the meaning of Article IX(B)(2)(1) of the Constitution"; and that "the BSP is appropriately regarded as a government instrumentality under the 1987 Administrative Code."

The BSP sought reconsideration of the COA Resolution in a letter stating that Republic Act No. 7278 which amended the BSP's charter after the cited case was decided. The most salient of all amendments in RA No. 7278 is the alteration of the composition of the National Executive Board of the BSP. The said RA virtually eliminated the "substantial government participation" in the National Executive Board by removing: (i) the President of the Philippines and executive secretaries, with the exception of the Secretary of Education, as members thereof; and (ii) the appointment and confirmation power of the President of the Philippines, as Chief Scout, over the members of the said Board. The BSP believes that the cited case has been superseded by RA 7278. Thereby weakening the case's conclusion that the BSP is a government-controlled corporation. The 1987 Administrative Code itself, of which the BSP vs. NLRC relied on for some terms, defines government-owned and controlled corporations as agencies organized as stock or non-stock corporations which the BSP, under its present charter, is not. Also, the Government, like in other GOCCs, does not have funds invested in the BSP. What RA 7278 only provides is that the Government or any of its subdivisions, branches, offices, agencies and instrumentalities can from time to time donate and contribute funds to the BSP. The BSP is not an entity administering special funds. It is not even included in the DECS National Budget

BSP's CONTENTIONS:
The BSP contends that Boy Scouts of the Philippines v. National Labor Relations Commission is inapplicable for purposes of determining the audit jurisdiction of the COA as the issue therein was the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Commission over a case for illegal dismissal and unfair labor practice filed by certain BSP employees.

While the BSP concedes that its functions do relate to those that the government might otherwise completely assume on its own, it avers that this alone was not determinative of the COA's audit jurisdiction over it. The BSP further avers that the Court in Boy Scouts of the Philippines v. National Labor Relations Commission "simply stated x x x that in respect of functions, the BSP is akin to a public corporation" but this was not synonymous to holding that the BSP is a government corporation or entity subject to audit by the COA.

The BSP contends that Republic Act No. 7278 introduced crucial amendments to its charter; hence, the findings of the Court in Boy Scouts of the Philippines v. National Labor Relations Commission are no longer valid as the government has ceased to play a controlling influence in it. The BSP claims that the pronouncements of the Court therein must be taken only within the context of that case; that the Court had categorically found that its assets were acquired from the Boy Scouts of America and not from the Philippine government, and that its operations are financed chiefly from membership dues of the Boy Scouts themselves as well as from property rentals; and that "the BSP may correctly be characterized as non-governmental, and hence, beyond the audit jurisdiction of the COA." It further claims that the designation by the Court.

In its comment, the COA argues as follows:

1. The BSP is a public corporation created under Commonwealth Act No. 111 dated October 31, 1936, and whose functions relate to the fostering of public virtues of citizenship and patriotism and the general improvement of the moral spirit and fiber of the youth. The manner of creation and the purpose for which the BSP was created indubitably prove that it is a government agency.

2. Being a government agency, the funds and property owned or held in trust by the BSP are subject to the audit authority of respondent Commission on Audit pursuant to Section 2 (1), Article IX-D of the 1987 Constitution.

3. Republic Act No. 7278 did not change the character of the BSP as a government-owned or controlled corporation and government instrumentality

ISSUE:

Whether BSP is a public corporation. (YES)

RULING:

After looking at the legislative history of its amended charter and carefully studying the applicable laws and the arguments of both parties, we find that the BSP is a public corporation and its funds are subject to the COA's audit jurisdiction.

The BSP Charter (Commonwealth Act No. 111, approved on October 31, 1936), entitled "An Act to Create a Public Corporation to be Known as the Boy Scouts of the Philippines, and to Define its Powers and Purposes" created the BSP as a "public corporation" to serve the following public interest or purpose:

> Sec. 3.The purpose of this corporation shall be to promote through organization and cooperation with other agencies, the ability of boys to do useful things for themselves and others, to train them in scoutcraft, and to inculcate in them patriotism, civic consciousness and responsibility, courage, self-reliance, discipline and kindred virtues, and moral values, using the method which are in common use by boy scouts.

Presidential Decree No. 460, approved on May 17, 1974, amended Commonwealth Act No. 111 and provided substantial changes in the BSP organizational structure.

There are three classes of juridical persons under Article 44 of the Civil Code and the BSP, as presently constituted under Republic Act No. 7278, falls under the second classification. Article 44 reads:

> Art. 44. The following are juridical persons:
>
> (1) The State and its political subdivisions;
>
> (2) Other corporations, institutions and entities for public interest or purpose created by law; their personality begins as soon as they have been constituted according to law;
>
> (3) Corporations, partnerships and associations for private interest or purpose to which the law grants a juridical personality, separate and distinct from that of each shareholder, partner or member. (Emphases supplied.)

The BSP, which is a corporation created for a public interest or purpose, is subject to the law creating it under Article 45 of the Civil Code, which provides:

> Art. 45. Juridical persons mentioned in Nos. 1 and 2 of the preceding article are governed by the laws creating or recognizing them.
>
> Private corporations are regulated by laws of general application on the subject. Partnerships and associations for private interest or purpose are governed by the provisions of this Code concerning partnerships. (Emphasis and underscoring supplied.)

The purpose of the BSP as stated in its amended charter shows that it was created in order to implement a State policy declared in Article II, Section 13 of the Constitution, which reads:

ARTICLE II - DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES AND STATE POLICIES

> Section 13. The State recognizes the vital role of the youth in nation-building and shall promote and protect their physical, moral, spiritual, intellectual, and social well-being. It shall inculcate in the youth patriotism and nationalism, and encourage their involvement in public and civic affairs.

Evidently, the BSP, which was created by a special law to serve a public purpose in pursuit of a constitutional mandate, comes within the class of "public corporations" defined by paragraph 2, Article 44 of the Civil Code and governed by the law which creates it, pursuant to Article 45 of the same Code.

The BSP's Classification Under the Administrative Code of 1987

The public, rather than private, character of the BSP is recognized by the fact that, along with the Girl Scouts of the Philippines, it is classified as an attached agency of the DECS under Executive Order No. 292, or the Administrative Code of 1987, which states:

TITLE VI – EDUCATION, CULTURE AND SPORTS

Chapter 8 – Attached Agencies

SEC. 20. Attached Agencies. – The following agencies are hereby attached to the Department:

x x x x

(12) Boy Scouts of the Philippines;

(13) Girl Scouts of the Philippines.

The administrative relationship of an attached agency to the department is defined in the Administrative Code of 1987 as follows:

BOOK IV

THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH

Chapter 7 – ADMINISTRATIVE RELATIONSHIP

> SEC. 38. Definition of Administrative Relationship. – Unless otherwise expressly stated in the Code or in other laws defining the special relationships of particular agencies, administrative relationships shall be categorized and defined as follows:
>
> x x x x
>
> (3) Attachment. – (a) This refers to the lateral relationship between the department or its equivalent and the attached agency or corporation for purposes of policy and program coordination. The coordination may be accomplished by having the department represented in the governing board of the attached agency or corporation, either as chairman or as a member, with or without voting rights, if this is permitted by the charter; having the attached corporation or agency comply with a system of periodic reporting which shall reflect the progress of programs and projects; and having the department or its equivalent provide general policies through its representative in the board, which shall serve as the framework for the internal policies of the attached corporation or agency.

As an attached agency, the BSP enjoys operational autonomy, as long as policy and program coordination is achieved by having at least one representative of government in its governing board, which in the case of the BSP is the DECS Secretary. In this sense, the BSP is not under government control or "supervision and control." Still this characteristic does not make the attached chartered agency a private corporation covered by the constitutional proscription in question.

Assuming for the sake of argument that the BSP ceases to be owned or controlled by the government because of reduction of the number of representatives of the government in the BSP Board, it does not follow that it also ceases to be a government instrumentality as it still retains all the characteristics of the latter as an attached agency of the DECS under the Administrative Code. Vesting corporate powers to an attached agency or instrumentality of the government is not constitutionally prohibited and is allowed by the above-mentioned provisions of the Civil Code and the 1987 Administrative Code.

As presently constituted, the BSP still remains an instrumentality of the national government. It is a public corporation created by law for a public purpose, attached to the DECS pursuant to its Charter and the Administrative Code of 1987. It is not a private corporation which is required to be owned or controlled by the government and be economically viable to justify its existence under a special law.

Therefore, even though the amended BSP charter did away with most of the governmental presence in the BSP Board, this was done to more strongly promote the BSP's objectives, which were not supported under Presidential Decree No. 460. The BSP objectives, as pointed out earlier, are consistent with the public purpose of the promotion of the well-being of the youth, the future leaders of the country. The amendments were not done with the view of changing the character of the BSP into a privatized corporation. The BSP remains an agency attached to a department of the government, the DECS, and it was not at all stripped of its public character.

The ownership and control test is likewise irrelevant for a public corporation like the BSP. To reiterate, the relationship of the BSP, an attached agency, to the government, through the DECS, is defined in the Revised Administrative Code of 1987. The BSP meets the minimum statutory requirement of an attached government agency as the DECS Secretary sits at the BSP Board ex officio, thus facilitating the policy and program coordination between the BSP and the DECS.

- Liban vs. Gordon, GR No. 175352, January 10, 2011

DANTE V. LIBAN, REYNALDO M. BERNARDO, and SALVADOR M. VIARI, Petitioners, v. RICHARD J. GORDON, Respondent.
G.R. NO. 175352, EN BANC, July 15, 2009, CARPIO, J.

Petitioners anchor their petition on the 1999 case of Camporedondo v. NLRC, which ruled that the PNRC is a government-owned or controlled corporation. In ruling that the PNRC is a government owned or controlled corporation, the simple test used was whether the corporation was created by its own special charter for the exercise of a public function or by incorporation under the general corporation law. Since the PNRC was created under a special charter, the Court then ruled that it is a government corporation. However, the Camporedondo ruling failed to consider the definition of a government-owned or controlled corporation as provided under Section 2(13) of the Introductory Provisions of the Administrative Code of 1987:

> " Government-owned or controlled corporation refers to any agency organized as a stock or non-stock corporation, vested with functions relating to public needs whether governmental or proprietary in nature, and owned by the Government directly or through its instrumentalities either wholly, or where applicable as in the case of stock corporations, to the extent of at least fifty-one (51) percent of its capital stock*:"*

A government-owned or controlled corporation must be owned by the government, and in the case of a stock corporation, at least a majority of its capital stock must be owned by the government*. In the case of a non-stock corporation, by analogy at least a majority of the members must be government officials holding such membership by appointment or designation by the government. Under this criterion, and as discussed earlier, the government does not own or control PNRC. The PNRC Charter is Violative of the Constitutional Proscription against the Creation of Private Corporations by Special Law.*

In Feliciano v. Commission on Audit, the Court held that the Local Water Districts are government owned or controlled corporations since they exist by virtue of Presidential Decree No. 198, which constitutes their special charter. Just like the Local Water Districts, the PNRC was created through a special charter. However, unlike the Local Water Districts, the elements of government ownership and control are clearly lacking in the PNRC.

Thus, although the PNRC is created by a special charter, it cannot be considered a government-owned or controlled corporation in the absence of the essential elements of ownership and control by the government*. In creating the PNRC as a corporate entity, Congress was in fact creating a private corporation. However, the constitutional prohibition against the creation of private corporations by special charters provides no exception even for non-profit or charitable corporations.*

Consequently, the PNRC Charter, insofar as it creates the PNRC as a private corporation and grants it corporate powers, is void for being unconstitutional*.*

FACTS:

Petitioners Dante V. Liban, Reynaldo M. Bernardo, and Salvador M. Viari (petitioners) are officers of the Board of Directors of the Quezon City Red Cross Chapter while respondent is Chairman of the Philippine National Red Cross (PNRC) Board of Governors. During respondent's incumbency as a member of the Senate of the Philippines, he was elected Chairman of the PNRC during the 23 February 2006 meeting of the PNRC Board of Governors. Petitioners allege that by accepting the chairmanship of the PNRC Board of Governors, respondent has ceased to be a member of the Senate as provided in Section 13, Article VI of the Constitution, which reads:

> "SEC. 13. No Senator or Member of the House of Representatives may hold any other office or employment in the Government, or any subdivision, agency, or instrumentality thereof, including government-owned or controlled corporations or their subsidiaries, during his term without forfeiting his seat"

Petitioners cite Camporedondo v. NLRC,which held that the PNRC is a government-owned or controlled corporation. Petitioners claim that in accepting and holding the position of Chairman of the PNRC Board of Governors, respondent has automatically forfeited his seat in the Senate, pursuant to Flores v. Drilon, which held that incumbent national legislators lose their elective posts upon their appointment to another government office. In his Comment, respondent asserts that petitioners have no standing to file this petition which appears to be an action for quo warranto, since the petition alleges that respondent committed an act which, by provision of law, constitutes a ground for forfeiture of his public office. Petitioners do not claim to be entitled to the Senate office of respondent. If the petition is one for quo warranto, it is already barred by prescription since the respondent has been working as a Red Cross volunteer for the past 40 years. Respondent was already Chairman of the PNRC Board of Governors when he was elected Senator in May 2004, having been elected Chairman in 2003 and reelected in 2005. Respondent contends that even if the present petition is treated as a taxpayer's suit, petitioners cannot be allowed to raise a constitutional question in the absence of any claim that they suffered some actual damage or threatened injury as a result of the allegedly illegal act of respondent. Furthermore, taxpayers are allowed to sue only when there is a claim of illegal disbursement of public funds, or that public money is being diverted to any improper purpose, or where petitioners seek to restrain respondent from enforcing an invalid law that results in wastage of public funds. Respondent also maintains that if the petition is treated as one for declaratory relief, this Court would have no jurisdiction since original jurisdiction for declaratory relief lies with the Regional Trial Court. Respondent further insists that the PNRC is not a government-owned or controlled corporation and that the prohibition under Section 13, Article VI of the Constitution does not apply in the present case since volunteer service to the PNRC is neither an office nor an employment. In their Reply, petitioners claim that their petition is neither an action for quo warranto nor an action for declaratory relief. Petitioners maintain that the present petition is a taxpayer's suit questioning the unlawful disbursement of funds, considering that respondent has been drawing his salaries and other compensation as a Senator even if he is no longer entitled to his office. Petitioners point out that this Court has jurisdiction over this petition since it involves a legal or constitutional issue which is of transcendental importance.

ISSUE:

Wether the office of the PNRC Chairman is a government office or an office in a GOCC for purposes of the prohibition in Section 13, Article VI of the Constitution. (NO)

RULING:

PNRC is a Private Organization Performing Public Functions. The PNRC is a non-profit, donorfunded, voluntary, humanitarian organization, whose mission is to bring timely, effective, and compassionate humanitarian assistance for the most vulnerable without consideration of nationality, race, religion, gender, social status, or political affiliation. The PNRC is a member National Society of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement (Movement), The PNRC, as a member National Society of the Movement, has the duty to uphold the Fundamental Principles and ideals of the Movement. In order to be recognized as a National Society, the PNRC has to be autonomous and must operate in conformity with the Fundamental Principles of the Movement.

The reason for this autonomy is fundamental. To be accepted by warring belligerents as neutral workers during international or internal armed conflicts, the PNRC volunteers must not be seen as belonging to any side of the armed conflict. In the Philippines where there is a communist insurgency and a Muslim separatist rebellion, the PNRC cannot be seen as government-owned or controlled, and neither can the PNRC volunteers be identified as government personnel or as instruments of government policy. Otherwise, the insurgents or separatists will treat PNRC volunteers as enemies when the volunteers tend to the wounded in the battlefield or the displaced civilians in conflict areas. To ensure and maintain its autonomy, neutrality, and independence, the PNRC cannot be owned or controlled by the government. Indeed, the Philippine government does not own the PNRC. The PNRC does not have government assets and does not receive any appropriation from the Philippine Congress. The PNRC is financed primarily by contributions from private individuals and private entities obtained through solicitation campaigns organized by its Board of Governors, as provided under Section 11 of the PNRC Charter.

The government does not control the PNRC. Under the PNRC Charter, as amended, only six of the thirty members of the PNRC Board of Governors are appointed by the President of the Philippines. Thus, twenty-four members, or four-fifths (4/5), of the PNRC Board of Governors are not appointed by the President.

The PNRC Board of Governors, which exercises all corporate powers of the PNRC, elects the PNRC Chairman and all other officers of the PNRC. The incumbent Chairman of PNRC, respondent Senator Gordon, was elected, as all PNRC Chairmen are elected, by a private sector-controlled PNRC Board four-fifths of whom are private sector members of the PNRC. The PNRC Chairman is not appointed by the President or by any subordinate government official.

The President does not appoint the Chairman of the PNRC. Neither does the head of any department, agency, commission or board appoint the PNRC Chairman. Thus, the PNRC Chairman is not an official or employee of the Executive branch since his appointment does not fall under Section 16, Article VII of the Constitution. Certainly, the PNRC Chairman is not an official or employee of the Judiciary or Legislature.

This leads us to the obvious conclusion that the PNRC Chairman is not an official or employee of the Philippine Government. Not being a government official or employee, the PNRC Chairman, as such, does not hold a government office or employment and the proscription does not apply.
Under Section 17, Article VII of the Constitution, the President exercises control over all government offices in the Executive branch. If an office is legally not under the control of the President, then such office is not part of the Executive branch.

The PNRC Board exercises all corporate powers of the PNRC. The PNRC is controlled by private sector individuals. Decisions or actions of the PNRC Board are not reviewable by the President. The President cannot reverse or modify the decisions or actions of the PNRC Board. Neither can the President reverse or modify the decisions or actions of the PNRC Chairman. It is the PNRC Board that can review, reverse or modify the decisions or actions of the PNRC Chairman. This proves again that the office of the PNRC Chairman is a private office, not a government office.
The PNRC is not government-owned but privately owned. The vast majority of the thousands of PNRC members are private individuals, including students. Under the PNRC Charter, those who contribute to the annual fund campaign of the PNRC are entitled to membership in the PNRC for one year.
Thus, the PNRC is a privately owned, privately funded, and privately run charitable organization. The PNRC is not a government-owned or controlled corporation.

Petitioners anchor their petition on the 1999 case of Camporedondo v. NLRC, which ruled that the PNRC is a government-owned or controlled corporation. In ruling that the PNRC is a government owned or controlled corporation, the simple test used was whether the corporation was created by its own special charter for the exercise of a public function or by incorporation under the general corporation law. Since the PNRC was created under a special charter, the Court then ruled that it is a government corporation. However, the Camporedondo ruling failed to consider the definition of a government-owned or controlled corporation as provided under Section 2(13) of the Introductory Provisions of the Administrative Code of 1987:

> " Government-owned or controlled corporation refers to any agency organized as a stock or non-stock corporation, vested with functions relating to public needs whether governmental or proprietary in nature, and owned by the Government directly or through its instrumentalities either wholly, or where applicable as in the case of stock corporations, to the extent of at least fifty-one (51) percent of its capital stock:"

A government-owned or controlled corporation must be owned by the government, and in the case of a stock corporation, at least a majority of its capital stock must be owned by the government. In the case of a non-stock corporation, by analogy at least a majority of the members must be government officials holding such membership by appointment or designation by the government. Under this criterion, and as discussed earlier, the government does not own or control PNRC. The PNRC Charter is Violative of the Constitutional Proscription against the Creation of Private Corporations by Special Law

In Feliciano v. Commission on Audit, the Court held that the Local Water Districts are government owned or controlled corporations since they exist by virtue of Presidential Decree No. 198, which constitutes their special charter. Just like the Local Water Districts, the PNRC was created through a special charter. However, unlike the Local Water Districts, the elements of government ownership and control are clearly lacking in the PNRC.

Thus, although the PNRC is created by a special charter, it cannot be considered a government-owned or controlled corporation in the absence of the essential elements of ownership and control by the government. In creating the PNRC as a corporate entity, Congress was in fact creating a private corporation. However, the constitutional prohibition against the creation of private corporations by special charters provides no exception even for non-profit or charitable corporations. Consequently, the PNRC Charter, insofar as it creates the PNRC as a private corporation and grants it corporate powers, is void for being unconstitutional.

In sum, we hold that the office of the PNRC Chairman is not a government office or an office in a government-owned or controlled corporation for purposes of the prohibition in Section 13, Article VI of the 1987 Constitution. However, since the PNRC Charter is void insofar as it creates the PNRC as a private corporation, the PNRC should incorporate under the Corporation Code and register with the Securities and Exchange Commission if it wants to be a private corporation.

- Carandang vs. Desierto, G.R. No. 148076, January 12, 2011

ANTONIO M. CARANDANG, Petitioner, v. HONORABLE ANIANO A. DESIERTO, OFFICE OF THE OMBUDSMAN, Respondent.
G.R. No. 148076, THIRD DIVISION, January 12, 2011, BERSAMIN, J.

ANTONIO M. CARANDANG, Petitioner, v. SANDIGANBAYAN (FIFTH DIVISION), Respondent.
G.R. No. 153161, THIRD DIVISION, January 12, 2011, BERSAMIN, J.

It is clear, therefore, that a corporation is considered a government-owned or -controlled corporation only when the Government directly or indirectly owns or controls at least a majority or 51% share of the capital stock*. Applying this statutory criterion, the Court ruled in Leyson, Jr. v. Office of the Ombudsman:*

> But these jurisprudential rules invoked by petitioner in support of his claim that the CIIF companies are government owned and/or controlled corporations are incomplete without resorting to the definition of "government owned or controlled corporation" contained in par. (13), Sec.2, Introductory Provisions of the Administrative Code of 1987, i.e., any agency organized as a stock or non-stock corporation vested with functions relating to public needs whether governmental or proprietary in nature, and owned by the government directly or indirectly through its instrumentalities either wholly, or where applicable as in the case of stock corporations to the extent of at least fifty-one (51) percent of its capital stock. The definition mentions three (3) requisites, namely, first, any agency organized as a stock or non-stock corporation; second, vested with functions relating to public needs whether governmental or proprietary in nature; and, third, owned by the Government directly or through its instrumentalities either wholly, or, where applicable as in the case of stock corporations, to the extent of at least fifty-one (51) of its capital stock*.*

Consequently, RPN was neither a government-owned nor a controlled corporation because of the Government's total share in RPN's capital stock being only 32.4%.

FACTS:

Roberto S. Benedicto (Benedicto) was a stockholder of Radio Philippines Network Inc., (RPN), a private corporation duly registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). In March 1986, the Government ordered the sequestration of RPN's properties, assets, and business. On November 3, 1990, the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) entered into a compromise agreement with Benedicto, whereby he ceded to the Government, through the PCGG, all his shares of stock in RPN. Consequently, upon motion of the PCGG, the Sandiganbayan (Second Division) directed the president and corporate secretary of RPN to transfer to the PCGG Benedicto's shares representing 72.4% of the total issued and outstanding capital stock of RPN.

However, Benedicto moved for a reconsideration, contending that his RPN shares ceded to the Government, through the PCGG, represented only 32.4% of RPN's outstanding capital stock, not 72.4%. Benedicto's motion for reconsideration has remained unresolved to this date

On July 28, 1998, Carandang assumed office as general manager and chief operating officer of RPN.

On April 19, 1999, Carandang and other RPN officials were charged with grave misconduct before the Ombudsman. The charge alleged that Carandang, in his capacity as the general manager of RPN, had entered into a contract with AF Broadcasting Incorporated despite his being an incorporator, director, and stockholder of that corporation; that he had thus held financial and material interest in a contract that had required the approval of his office; and that the transaction was prohibited under Section 7 (a) and Section 9 of Republic Act No. 6713 (Code of Conduct and Ethical Standards for Public Officials and Employees), thereby rendering him administratively liable for grave misconduct.

Carandang sought the dismissal of the administrative charge on the ground that the Ombudsman had no jurisdiction over him because RPN was not a government-owned or -controlled corporation.

On May 7, 1999, the Ombudsman suspended Carandang from his positions in RPN.

On September 8, 1999, Carandang manifested that he was no longer interested and had no further claim to his positions in RPN. He was subsequently replaced by Edgar San Luis.

ISSUE:

Whether RPN is a GOCC. (NO)

RULING:

Similarly, the law defines what are government-owned or -controlled corporations. For one, Section 2 of Presidential Decree No. 2029 (Defining Government Owned or Controlled Corporations and Identifying Their Role in National Development) states: chanrob1esvirtwallawlibrary

> Section 2. A government-owned or controlled corporation is a stock or a non-stock corporation, whether performing governmental or proprietary functions, which is directly chartered by a special law or if organized under the general corporation law is owned or controlled by the government directly, or indirectly through a parent corporation or subsidiary corporation, to the extent of at least a majority of its outstanding capital stock or of its outstanding voting capital stock.

Section 2 (13) of Executive Order No. 292 (Administrative Code of 1987) renders a similar definition of government-owned or -controlled corporations: chanrob1esvirtwallawlibrary

> Section 2. General Terms Defined. - Unless the specific words of the text or the context as a whole or a particular statute, shall require a different meaning: chanrob1esvirtwallawlibrary
>
> x x x
>
> (13) government-owned or controlled corporations refer to any agency organized as a stock or non-stock corporation vested with functions relating to public needs whether governmental or proprietary in nature, and owned by the government directly or indirectly through its instrumentalities either wholly, or where applicable as in the case of stock corporations to the extent of at least 51% of its capital stock.

It is clear, therefore, that a corporation is considered a government-owned or -controlled corporation only when the Government directly or indirectly owns or controls at least a majority or 51% share of the capital stock. Applying this statutory criterion, the Court ruled in Leyson, Jr. v. Office of the Ombudsman:

> But these jurisprudential rules invoked by petitioner in support of his claim that the CIIF companies are government owned and/or controlled corporations are incomplete without resorting to the definition of "government owned or controlled corporation" contained in par. (13), Sec.2, Introductory Provisions of the Administrative Code of 1987, i.e., any agency organized as a stock or non-stock corporation vested with functions relating to public needs whether governmental or proprietary in nature, and owned by the government directly or indirectly through its instrumentalities either wholly, or where applicable as in the case of stock corporations to the extent of at least fifty-one (51) percent of its capital stock. The definition mentions three (3) requisites, namely, first, any agency organized as a stock or non-stock corporation; second, vested with functions relating to public needs whether governmental or proprietary in nature; and, third, owned by the Government directly or through its instrumentalities either wholly, or, where applicable as in the case of stock corporations, to the extent of at least fifty-one (51) of its capital stock.

In the present case, all three (3) corporations comprising the CIIF companies were organized as stock corporations.The UCPB-CIIF owns 44.10% of the shares of LEGASPI OIL, xxx. Obviously, the below 51% shares of stock in LEGASPI OIL removes this firm from the definition of a government owned or controlled corporation. x x x The Court thus concludes that the CIIF are, as found by public respondent, private corporations not within the scope of its jurisdiction.

Consequently, RPN was neither a government-owned nor a controlled corporation because of the Government's total share in RPN's capital stock being only 32.4%.

- Funa vs. Manila Economic and Cultural Office, GR. No. 193462, February 4, 2014

DENNIS A.B. FUNA, Petitioner, v. MANILA ECONOMIC AND CULTURAL OFFICE AND THE COMMISSION ON AUDIT, Respondents.
G.R. No. 193462, EN BANC, February 04, 2014, PEREZ, J.

GOCCs, therefore, are "stock or non–stock" corporations "vested with functions relating to public needs" that are "owned by the Government directly or through its instrumentalities." By definition, three attributes thus make an entity a GOCC: first, its organization as stock or non–stock corporation;second, the public character of its function; and third, government ownership over the same.

Possession of all three attributes is necessary to deem an entity a GOCC.

In this case, there is not much dispute that the MECO possesses the first and second attributes. It is the third attribute, which the MECO lacks.

FACTS:

On 23 August 2010, petitioner Funa sent a letter to the COA requesting for a "copy of the latest financial and audit report" of the MECO invoking, for that purpose, his "constitutional right to information on matters of public concern." The petitioner made the request on the belief that the MECO, being under the "operational supervision" of the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), is a government owned and controlled corporation (GOCC) and thus subject to the audit jurisdiction of the COA. On 25 August 2010, Assistant Commissioner Naranjo issued a memorandum20 referring the petitioner's request to COA Assistant Commissioner Emma M. Espina for "further disposition." In this memorandum, however, Assistant Commissioner Naranjo revealed that the MECO was "not among the agencies audited by any of the three Clusters of the Corporate Government Sector."

Taking the 25 August 2010 memorandum as an admission that the COA had never audited and examined the accounts of the MECO, the petitioner filed the instant petition for mandamus on 8 September 2010. Petitioner filed the suit in his capacities as "taxpayer, concerned citizen, a member of the Philippine Bar and law book author." He impleaded both the COA and the MECO.

Petitioner posits that by failing to audit the accounts of the MECO, the COA is neglecting its duty under Section 2(1), Article IX-D of the Constitution to audit the accounts of an otherwise bona fide GOCC or government instrumentality. It is the adamant claim of the petitioner that the MECO is a GOCC without an original charter or, at least, a government instrumentality, the funds of which partake the nature of public funds.

MECO's CONTENTIONS:
1. It is not owned or controlled by the government. Contrary to the allegations of the petitioner, the President of the Philippines does not appoint its board of directors.39 "desire letter" that the President transmits is merely recommendatory and not binding on the corporation. As a corporation organized under the Corporation Code, matters relating to the election of its directors and officers, as well as its membership, are governed by the appropriate provisions of the said code, its articles of incorporation and its by-laws. Thus, it is the directors who elect the corporation's officers; the members who elect the directors; and the directors who admit the members by way of a unanimous resolution. All of its officers, directors, and members are private individuals and are not government officials.

2. The government merely has policy supervision over it. Policy supervision is a lesser form of supervision wherein the government's oversight is limited only to ensuring that the corporation's activities are in tune with the country's commitments under the One China policy of the PROC. The day-to-day operations of the corporation, however, remain to be controlled by its duly elected board of directors.

ISSUE:

Whether MECO is a GOCC. (NO)

RULING:

The Administrative Code defines a GOCC:

> (13) Government–owned or controlled corporation refers to any agency organized as a stock or non–stock corporation, vested with functions relating to public needs whether governmental or proprietary in nature, and owned by the Government directly or through its instrumentalities either wholly, or, where applicable as in the case of stock corporations, to the extent of at least fifty–one (51) per cent of its capital stock: x x x.

The above definition is, in turn, replicated in the more recent Republic Act No. 10149 or the GOCC Governance Act of 2011, to wit:

> (o) Government–Owned or –Controlled Corporation (GOCC) refers to any agency organized as a stock or non–stock corporation, vested with functions relating to public needs whether governmental or proprietary in nature, and owned by the Government of the Republic of the Philippines directly or through its instrumentalities either wholly or, where applicable as in the case of stock corporations, to the extent of at least a majority of its outstanding capital stock: x x x.

GOCCs, therefore, are "stock or non–stock" corporations "vested with functions relating to public needs" that are "owned by the Government directly or through its instrumentalities." By definition, three attributes thus make an entity a GOCC: first, its organization as stock or non–stock corporation; second, the public character of its function; and third, government ownership over the same.

Possession of all three attributes is necessary to deem an entity a GOCC.

In this case, there is not much dispute that the MECO possesses the first and second attributes. It is the third attribute, which the MECO lacks.

The MECO Is Organized as a Non–Stock Corporation

The organization of the MECO as a non–stock corporation cannot at all be denied. Records disclose that the MECO was incorporated as a non–stock corporation under the Corporation Code on 16 December 1977. The incorporators of the MECO were Simeon R. Roxas, Florencio C. Guzon, Manuel K. Dayrit, Pio K. Luz and Eduardo B. Ledesma, who also served as the corporation's original members and directors.

The purposes for which the MECO was organized are somewhat analogous to those of a trade, business or industry chamber, but only on a much larger scale i.e., instead of furthering the interests of a particular line of business or industry within a local sphere, the MECO seeks to promote the general interests of the Filipino people in a foreign land.

Finally, it is not disputed that none of the income derived by the MECO is distributable as dividends to any of its members, directors or officers.

Verily, the MECO is organized as a non–stock corporation.

The MECO Performs Functions with a Public Aspect.

The public character of the functions vested in the MECO cannot be doubted either. Indeed, to a certain degree, the functions of the MECO can even be said to partake of the nature of governmental functions. As earlier intimated, it is the MECO that, on behalf of the people of the Philippines, currently facilitates unofficial relations with the people in Taiwan.

Consistent with its corporate purposes, the MECO was "authorized" by the Philippine government to perform certain "consular and other functions" relating to the promotion, protection and facilitation of Philippine interests in Taiwan. The full extent of such authorized functions are presently detailed in Sections 1 and 2 of EO No. 15, s. 2001.

A perusal of the functions of the MECO reveals its uncanny similarity to some of the functions typically performed by the DFA itself, through the latter's diplomatic and consular missions. The functions of the MECO, in other words, are of the kind that would otherwise be performed by the Philippines' own diplomatic and consular organs, if not only for the government's acquiescence that they instead be exercised by the MECO.

Evidently, the functions vested in the MECO are impressed with a public aspect.

The MECO Is Not Owned or Controlled by the Government

Organization as a non–stock corporation and the mere performance of functions with a public aspect, however, are not by themselves sufficient to consider the MECO as a GOCC. In order to qualify as a GOCC, a corporation must also, if not more importantly, be owned by the government.

The government owns a stock or non–stock corporation if it has controlling interest in the corporation. In a stock corporation, the controlling interest of the government is assured by its ownership of at least fifty–one percent (51%) of the corporate capital stock. In a non–stock corporation, like the MECO, jurisprudence teaches that the controlling interest of the government is affirmed when "at least majority of the members are government officials holding such membership by appointment or designation" or there is otherwise "substantial participation of the government in the selection" of the corporation's governing board.

The fact of the incorporation of the MECO under the Corporation Code is key. The MECO was correct in postulating that, as a corporation organized under the Corporation Code, it is governed by the appropriate provisions of the said code, its articles of incorporation and its by–laws. In this case, it is the by–laws of the MECO that stipulates that its directors are elected by its members; its officers are elected by its directors; and its members, other than the original incorporators, are admitted by way of a unanimous board resolution.

C. Nationality of Corporations

1. Place of Incorporation Test

2. Control Test

- ROY III vs. HERBOSA, G.R. No. 207246, Novmber 22, 2016, EN BANC, CAGUIOA, J.

JOSE M. ROY III, Petitioner,- versus - CHAIRPERSON TERESITA HERBOSA,THESECURITIESAND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, and PHILIPPINE LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE COMPANY, Respondents.

WILSON C. GAMBOA, JR., DANIEL V. CARTAGENA, JOHN WARREN P. GABINETE, ANTONIO V. PESINA, JR., MODESTO MARTINY. MAMON i l l , and GERARDO C. EREBAREN, Petitioners-in Intervention,
PHILIPPINE STOCK EXCHANGE, INC., Respondent-in-Intervention, SHAREHOLDERS' ASSOCIATION OF THE PHILIPPINES, INC., Respondent-in-Intervention.
G.R. No. 207246, November 22, 2016, EN BANC, CAGUIOA, J.

The pronouncement of the Court in the Gamboa Resolution -the constitutional requirement to "apply uniformly and across the board to all classes of shares, regardless of nomenclature and category, comprising the capital of a corporation - is clearly an obiter dictum that cannot override the Court's unequivocal definition of the term "capital" in both the Gamboa Decision and Resolution.

Nowhere in the discussion of the definition of the term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the 1987 Constitution in the Gamboa Decision did the Court mention the 60% Filipino equity requirement to be applied to each class of shares. The definition of "Philippine national" in the FIA and expounded in its IRR, which the Court adopted in its interpretation of the term "capital", does not support such application. In fact, even the Final Word of the Gamboa Resolution does not even intimate or suggest the need for a clarification or re-interpretation.

*To revisit or even clarify the unequivocal definition of the term "capital" as referring "only to shares of stock entitled to vote in the election of directors" and apply the 60% Filipino ownership requirement to each class of share is effectively and unwarrantedly amending or changing the Gamboa Decision and Resolution. The Gamboa Decision and Resolution Doctrine did NOT make any definitive ruling that the 60% Filipino ownership requirement was intended to apply to each class of share.

The fallo or decretal/dispositive portions of both the Gamboa Decision and Resolution are definite, clear and unequivocal. While there is a passage in the body of the Gamboa Resolution that might have appeared contrary to the fallo of the Gamboa Decision – capitalized upon by petitioners to espouse a restrictive re-interpretation of "capital" - the definiteness and clarity of the fallo of the Gamboa Decision must control over the obiter dictum in the Gamboa Resolution regarding the application of the 60-40 Filipino-foreign ownership requirement to "each class of shares, regardless of differences in voting rights, privileges and restrictions."

FACTS:

The petitions before the Court are special civil actions for certiorari under Rule 65 of the Rules of Court seeking to annul Memorandum Circular No. 8, Series of 2013 ("SEC-MC No. 8") issued by the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") for allegedly being in violation of the Court's Decision *("Gamboa Decision") and Resolution *("Gamboa Resolution") in Gamboa v. Finance Secretary Teves, G.R. No. 176579 which jurisprudentially established the proper interpretation of Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution.

On May 20, 2013, the SEC, through respondent Chairperson Teresita J. Herbosa, issued SEC-MC No. 8 entitled "Guidelines on Compliance with the Filipino-Foreign Ownership Requirements Prescribed in the Constitution and/or Existing Laws by Corporations Engaged in Nationalized and Partly Nationalized Activities." Section 2 of SEC-MC No. 8 provides:

> Section 2. All covered corporations shall, at all times, observe the constitutional or statutory ownership requirement. For purposes of determining compliance therewith, the required percentage of Filipino ownership shall be applied to BOTH (a) the total number of outstanding shares of stock entitled to vote in the election of directors; AND (b) the total number of outstanding shares of stock, whether or not entitled to vote in the election of directors.
>
> Corporations covered by special laws which provide specific citizenship requirements shall comply with the provisions of said law.

On June 10, 2013, petitioner Roy, as a lawyer and taxpayer, filed the Petition, 15 assailing the validity of SEC-MC No. 8 for not conforming to the letter and spirit of the Gamboa Decision and Resolution and for having been issued by the SEC with grave abuse of discretion. Petitioner Roy seeks to apply the 60-40 Filipino ownership requirement separately to each class of shares of a public utility corporation, whether common, preferred nonvoting, preferred voting or any other class of shares. He prays that the Court declare SEC-MC No. 8 unconstitutional and direct the SEC to issue new guidelines regarding the determination of compliance with Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution in accordance with Gamboa.

ISSUE:

Whether the SEC-MC No. 8 is in conformity with the Gamboa Decision and Gamboa Resolution.

RULING:

The Court finds SEC-MC No. 8 to have been issued in conformity to the Gamboa Decision and Resolution.

The ratio in the Gamboa Decision and Gamboa Resolution.

The Court, in the Gamboa Decision and Gamboa Resolution, defined the term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the 1987 Constitution in furtherance of "the intent and letter of the Constitution that the State shall develop a self-reliant and independent national economy effectively controlled* by Filipinos.

To recall, the sole issue in the Gamboa case was: "whether the term 'capital' in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution refers to the total common shares only or to the total outstanding capital stock (combined total of common and non-voting preferred shares) of PLDT, a public utility." The Court directly answered the issue and consistently defined the term "capital" as follows:

> x x x The term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution refers only to shares of stock entitled to vote in the election of directors, and thus in the present case only to common shares, and not to the total outstanding capital stock comprising both common and nonvoting preferred shares.
>
> Considering that common shares have voting rights which translate to control, as opposed to preferred shares which usually have no voting rights, the term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution refers only to common shares. However, if the preferred shares also have the right to vote in the election of directors, then the term "capital" shall include such preferred shares because the right to participate in the control or management of the corporation is exercised through the right to vote in the election of directors. In short, the term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution refers only to shares of stock that can vote in the election of directors.

The decretal portion of the Gamboa Decision follows the definition of the term "capital" in the body of the decision, to wit: "x x x we x x x rule that the term "capital' in Section 11, Article XII of the 1987 Constitution refers only to shares of stock entitled to vote in the election of directors, and thus in the present case only to common shares, and not to the total outstanding capital stock (common and nonvoting preferred shares)."

The Court observed further in the Gamboa Decision that reinforcing this interpretation of the term "capital", as referring to interests or shares entitled to vote, is the definition of a Philippine national in the Foreign Investments Act of 1991 ("FIA"), which is explained in the Implementing Rules and Regulations of the FIA ("FIA-IRR"). The FIA-IRR provides:

> Compliance with the required Filipino ownership of a corporation shall be determined on the basis of outstanding capital stock whether fully paid or not, but only such stocks which are generally entitled to vote are considered.
>
> For stocks to be deemed owned and held by Philippine citizens or Philippine nationals, mere legal title is not enough to meet the required Filipino equity. Full beneficial ownership of the stocks, coupled with appropriate voting rights is essential. Thus, stocks, the voting rights of which have been assigned or transferred to aliens cannot be considered held by Philippine citizens or Philippine nationals.

In effect, the FIA clarifies, reiterates and confirms the interpretation that the term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the 1987 Constitution refers to shares with voting rights, as well as with full beneficial ownership. This is precisely because the right to vote in the election of directors, coupled with full beneficial ownership of stocks, translates to effective control of a corporation.

The assailed SEC-MC No. 8.

Section 2 of SEC-MC No. 8 clearly incorporates the Voting Control Test or the controlling interest requirement. In fact, Section 2 goes beyond requiring a 60-40 ratio in favor of Filipino nationals in the voting stocks; it moreover requires the 60-40 percentage ownership in the total number of outstanding shares of stock, whether voting or not. The SEC formulated SEC-MC No. 8 to adhere to the Court's unambiguous pronouncement that "full beneficial ownership of 60 percent of the outstanding capital stock, coupled with 60 percent of the voting rights is required."

A simple illustration involving Company X with three kinds of shares of stock, easily shows how compliance with the requirements of SEC-MC No. 8 will necessarily result to full and faithful compliance with the Gamboa Decision as well as the Gamboa Resolution.

The following is the composition of the outstanding capital stock of Company X:

- 100 common shares
- 100 Class A preferred shares (with right to elect directors)
- 100 Class B preferred shares (without right to elect directors)

SEC-MC No. 8	GAMBOA DECISION	APPLICATION
(1) 60% (required percentage of Filipino) applied to the total number of outstanding shares of stock entitled to vote in the election of directors	"shares of stock entitled to vote in the election of directors"(60% of the voting rights)	If at least a total of 120 of common shares and Class A preferred shares (in any combination) are owned and controlled by Filipinos, Company X is compliant with the 60% of the voting rights in favor of Filipinos requirement of both SEC-MC No. 8 and the Gamboa Decision.

(2) 60% (required percentage of Filipino) applied to BOTH (a) the total number of outstanding shares of stock, entitled to vote in the election of directors; AND (b) the total number of outstanding shares of stock, whether or not entitled to vote in the election of directors.	"Full beneficial ownership of 60 percent of the outstanding capital stock, coupled with 60 percent of the voting rights" or "Full beneficial ownership of the stocks, coupled with appropriate voting rights x x x shares with voting rights, as well as with full beneficial ownership"	If at least a total of 180 shares of all the outstanding capital stock of Company X are owned and controlled by Filipinos, provided that among those 180 shares a total of 120 of the common shares and Class A preferred shares (in any combination) are owned and controlled by Filipinos, then Company X is compliant with both requirements of voting rights and beneficial ownership under SEC-MC No. 8 and the Gamboa Decision and Resolution.

While SEC-MC No. 8 does not expressly mention the Beneficial Ownership Test or full beneficial ownership of stocks requirement in the FIA, this will not render it invalid - meaning, it does not follow that the SEC will not apply this test in determining whether the shares claimed to be owned by Philippine nationals are Filipino, i.e., are held by them by mere title or in full beneficial ownership.

The restrictive re-interpretation of "capital" as insisted by the petitioners is unwarranted.

Petitioners' insistence that the 60% Filipino equity requirement must be applied to each class of shares is simply beyond the literal text and contemplation of Section 11, Article XII of the 1987 Constitution. As worded, effective control by Filipino citizens of a public utility is already assured in the provision. With respect to a stock corporation engaged in the business of a public utility, the constitutional provision mandates three safeguards: (1) 60% of its capital must be owned by Filipino citizens; (2) participation of foreign investors in its board of directors is limited to their proportionate share in its capital; and (3) all its executive and managing officers must be citizens of the Philippines.

In the exhaustive review made by the Court in the Gamboa Resolution of the deliberations of the Constitutional Commission, the opinions of the framers of the 1987 Constitution, the opinions of the SEC and the DOJ as well as the provisions of the FIA, its implementing rules and its predecessor statutes, the intention to apply the voting control test and the beneficial ownership test was not mentioned in reference to "each class of shares." Even the Gamboa Decision was silent on this point.

The application of the 60-40 Filipino-foreign ownership requirement separately to each class of shares fails to understand and appreciate the nature and features of stocks as financial instruments. There are basically only two types of shares or stocks, i.e., common stock and preferred stock. However, the classes and variety of shares that a corporation may issue are dictated by the confluence of the corporation's financial position and needs, business opportunities, short-term and longterm targets, risks involved, to name a few; and they can be classified and re-classified from time to time. As an example, a mandatory redeemable preference shares may be issued by a corporation to augment its financing. In form, the mandatory redeemable preference shares are equity instruments but in substance, they are debt instruments and a liabilities of the issuing corporation because the fixed dividend payment and the mandatory redemption feature constitute a contractual obligation to deliver cash. Thus, to require Filipino shareholders to acquire preferred shares that are substantially debts, in order to meet the "restrictive" Filipino ownership requirement that petitioners espouse, may not bode well for the Philippine corporation and its Filipino shareholders. That stock corporations are allowed to create shares of different classes with varying features is a flexibility that is granted, among others, for the corporation to attract and generate capital (funds) from both local and foreign capital markets. This access to capital - which a stock corporation may need for expansion, debt relief/repayment, working capital requirement and other corporate pursuits - will be greatly eroded with further unwarranted limitations that are not articulated in the Constitution.

Going back to the illustration above, the restrictive meaning of the term "capital" espoused by petitioners will definitely be complied with if 60% of each of the three classes of shares of Company X, consisting of 100 common shares, 100 Class A preferred shares (with right to elect directors) and 100 Class B preferred shares (without right to elect directors), is owned by Filipinos. However, what if the 60% Filipino ownership in each class of preferred shares, i.e., 60 Class A preferred shares and 60 Class B preferred shares, is not fully subscribed or achieved because there are not enough Filipino takers? Company X will be deprived of capital that would otherwise be accessible to it were it not for this unwarranted "restrictive" meaning of "capital".

Moreover, the restrictive interpretation of the term "capital" would have a tremendous impact on the country as a whole - and to all Filipinos. The PSE's Comment-in-Intervention warns that:

> If the "Effective Control Test" were applied, the total value of shares that would be deemed in excess of the foreign-ownership limits based on stock prices as of 30 April 2014 is One Hundred Fifty Nine Billion Six Hundred Thirty Eight Million Eight Hundred Forty Five Thousand Two Hundred Six Pesos and Eighty Nine Cents (Php159,638,845,206.89). The aforementioned value of investments would have to be discharged by foreign holders, and consequently must be absorbed by Filipino investors. Needless to state, the lack of investments may lead to shutdown of the affected enterprises and to immeasurable consequences to the Philippine economy.

In view of the foregoing, the pronouncement of the Court in the Gamboa Resolution -the constitutional requirement to "apply uniformly and across the board to all classes of shares, regardless of nomenclature and category, comprising the capital of a corporation - is clearly an obiter dictum that cannot override the Court's unequivocal definition of the term "capital" in both the Gamboa Decision and Resolution.

Nowhere in the discussion of the definition of the term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the 1987 Constitution in the Gamboa Decision did the Court mention the 60% Filipino equity requirement to be applied to each class of shares. The definition of "Philippine national" in the FIA and expounded in its IRR, which the Court adopted in its interpretation of the term "capital", does not support such application. In fact, even the Final Word of the Gamboa Resolution does not even intimate or suggest the need for a clarification or re-interpretation.

To revisit or even clarify the unequivocal definition of the term "capital" as referring "only to shares of stock entitled to vote in the election of directors" and apply the 60% Filipino ownership requirement to each class of share is effectively and unwarrantedly amending or changing the Gamboa Decision and Resolution. The Gamboa Decision and Resolution Doctrine did NOT make any definitive ruling that the 60% Filipino ownership requirement was intended to apply to each class of share.

- Marissa R. Unchuan vs. Antonio J.P. Lozada, Anita Lozada and the Register of Deeds of Cebu City, G.R. No. 172671, April 16, 2009

MARISSA R. UNCHUAN, Petitioner, v. ANTONIO J.P. LOZADA, ANITA LOZADA and THE REGISTER OF DEEDS OF CEBU CITY, Respondents.
G.R. NO. 172671, SECOND DIVISION, April 16, 2009, QUISUMBING, J.

In this case, we find nothing to show that the sale between the sisters Lozada and their nephew Antonio violated the public policy prohibiting aliens from owning lands in the Philippines. Even as Dr. Lozada advanced the money for the payment of Antonio's share, at no point were the lots registered in Dr. Lozada's name. Nor was it contemplated that the lots be under his control for they are actually to be included as capital of Damasa Corporation. According to their agreement, Antonio and Dr. Lozada are to hold 60% and 40% of the shares in said corporation, respectively. Under Republic Act No. 7042, particularly Section 3, a corporation organized under the laws of the Philippines of which at least 60% of the capital stock outstanding and entitled to vote is owned and held by citizens of the Philippines, is considered a Philippine National*. As such, the corporation may acquire disposable lands in the Philippines. Neither did petitioner present proof to belie Antonio's capacity to pay for the lots subjects of this case.*

FACTS:

Sisters Anita Lozada Slaughter and Peregrina Lozada Saribay were the registered co-owners of Lot Nos. 898-A-3 and 898-A-4 covered by Transfer Certificates of Title (TCT) Nos. 532585 and 532576 in Cebu City.

The sisters, who were based in the United States, sold the lots to their nephew Antonio J.P. Lozada (Antonio) under a Deed of Sale7 dated March 11, 1994. Armed with a Special Power of Attorney from Anita, Peregrina went to the house of their brother, Dr. Antonio Lozada (Dr. Lozada). Dr. Lozada agreed to advance the purchase price of US$367,000 or P10,000,000 for Antonio, his nephew. The Deed of Sale was later notarized and authenticated at the Philippine Consul's Office. Dr. Lozada then forwarded the deed, special power of attorney, and owners' copies of the titles to Antonio in the Philippines. Upon receipt of said documents, the latter recorded the sale with the Register of Deeds of Cebu. Accordingly, TCT Nos. 12832210 and 12832311 were issued in the name of Antonio Lozada.

Pending registration of the deed, petitioner Marissa R. Unchuan caused the annotation of an adverse claim on the lots. Marissa claimed that Anita donated an undivided share in the lots to her under an unregistered Deed of Donation dated February 4, 1987.

Antonio and Anita brought a case against Marissa for quieting of title with application for preliminary injunction and restraining order. Marissa for her part, filed an action to declare the Deed of Sale void and to cancel TCT Nos. 128322 and 128323. On motion, the cases were consolidated and tried jointly.

At the trial, respondents presented a notarized and duly authenticated sworn statement, and a videotape where Anita denied having donated land in favor of Marissa. Dr. Lozada testified that he agreed to advance payment for Antonio in preparation for their plan to form a corporation. The lots are to be eventually infused in the capitalization of Damasa Corporation, where he and Antonio are to have 40% and 60% stake, respectively.

Petitioner contends that the appellate court violated her right to due process when it did not rule on the validity of the sale between the sisters Lozada and their nephew, Antonio. Marissa finds it anomalous that Dr. Lozada, an American citizen, had paid the lots for Antonio. Thus, she accuses the latter of being a mere dummy of the former. Petitioner begs the Court to review the conflicting factual findings of the trial and appellate courts on Peregrina's medical condition on March 11, 1994 and Dr. Lozada's financial capacity to advance payment for Antonio. Likewise, petitioner assails the ruling of the Court of Appeals which nullified the donation in her favor and declared her case barred by laches. Petitioner finally challenges the admissibility of the videotaped statement of Anita who was not presented as a witness.

On their part, respondents pray for the dismissal of the petition for petitioner's failure to furnish the Register of Deeds of Cebu City with a copy thereof in violation of Sections 316 and 4,17 Rule 45 of the Rules. In addition, they aver that Peregrina's unauthenticated medical records were merely falsified to make it appear that she was confined in the hospital on the day of the sale. Further, respondents question the credibility of Dr. Fuentes who was neither presented in court as an expert witness18 nor professionally involved in Peregrina's medical care.

ISSUE:

Whether Damasa Corporation may acquire lands in the Philippines. (YES)

RULING:

In this case, we find nothing to show that the sale between the sisters Lozada and their nephew Antonio violated the public policy prohibiting aliens from owning lands in the Philippines. Even as Dr. Lozada advanced the money for the payment of Antonio's share, at no point were the lots registered in Dr. Lozada's name. Nor was it contemplated that the lots be under his control for they are actually to be included as capital of Damasa Corporation. According to their agreement, Antonio and Dr. Lozada are to hold 60% and 40% of the shares in said corporation, respectively. Under Republic Act No. 7042, particularly Section 3, a corporation organized under the laws of the Philippines of which at least 60% of the capital stock outstanding and entitled to vote is owned and held by citizens of the Philippines, is considered a Philippine National. As such, the corporation may acquire disposable lands in the Philippines. Neither did petitioner present proof to belie Antonio's capacity to pay for the lots subjects of this case.

- Wilson P. Gamboa vs. Finance Secretary Margarito B. Teves, et al., G.R. No. 176579, June 28, 2011

WILSON P. GAMBOA, Petitioner, vs. FINANCE SECRETARY MARGARITO B. TEVES, FINANCE UNDERSECRETARY JOHN P. SEVILLA, AND COMMISSIONER RICARDO ABCEDE OF THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION ON GOOD GOVERNMENT (PCGG) IN THEIR CAPACITIES AS CHAIR AND MEMBERS, RESPECTIVELY, OF THE PRIVATIZATION COUNCIL, CHAIRMAN ANTHONI SALIM OF FIRST PACIFIC CO., LTD. IN HIS CAPACITY AS DIRECTOR OF METRO PACIFIC ASSET HOLDINGS INC., CHAIRMAN MANUEL V. PANGILINAN OF PHILIPPINE LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE COMPANY (PLDT) IN HIS CAPACITY AS MANAGING DIRECTOR OF FIRST PACIFIC CO., LTD., PRESIDENT NAPOLEON L. NAZARENO OF PHILIPPINE LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE COMPANY, CHAIR FE BARIN OF THE SECURITIES EXCHANGE

COMMISSION, and PRESIDENT FRANCIS LIM OF THE PHILIPPINE STOCK EXCHANGE, Respondents. PABLITO V. SANIDAD and ARNO V. SANIDAD, Petitioners-in-Intervention.
G.R. No. 176579, EN BANC, June 28, 2011, CARPIO, J.

Indisputably, one of the rights of a stockholder is the right to participate in the control or management of the corporation. This is exercised through his vote in the election of directors because it is the board of directors that controls or manages the corporation. In the absence of provisions in the articles of incorporation denying voting rights to preferred shares, preferred shares have the same voting rights as common shares. However, preferred shareholders are often excluded from any control, that is, deprived of the right to vote in the election of directors and on other matters, on the theory that the preferred shareholders are merely investors in the corporation for income in the same manner as bondholders. In fact, under the Corporation Code only preferred or redeemable shares can be deprived of the right to vote. Common shares cannot be deprived of the right to vote in any corporate meeting, and any provision in the articles of incorporation restricting the right of common shareholders to vote is invalid.

Considering that common shares have voting rights which translate to control, as opposed to preferred shares which usually have no voting rights, the term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution refers only to common shares. However, if the preferred shares also have the right to vote in the election of directors, then the term "capital" shall include such preferred shares because the right to participate in the control or management of the corporation is exercised through the right to vote in the election of directors*. In short, the term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution refers only to shares of stock that can vote in the election of directors.*

FACTS:

The petitioner, Wilson P. Gamboa, was a stockholder of Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company (PLDT). According to him, Act. No. 3436 was enacted by the Philippine Legislature on November 28, 1928, granting PLDT a franchise and the right to engage in telecommunications business. In 1969, General Telephone and Electronics Corporation (GTE), an American company and a major PLDT stockholder, sold 26% of the outstanding common shares of PLDT to Philippine Trade and Investment Center (PTIC). In 1977, Prime Holdings, Inc. (PHI), became the owner of 111,415 shares which represent about 46.125% of the outstanding capital stock of PTIC by virtue of three Deeds of Assignment executed by PTIC stockholders, Ramon Cojuangco and Luis Tirso Rivilla. In 1986, the said shares of stock of PTIC held by PHI were sequestered by the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG), and were later declared by this Court to be owned by the Republic of the Philippines.

In 1999, First Pacific, a Bermuda-registered, Hong Kong-based investment firm, acquired the remaining 54% of the outstanding capital stock of PTIC. On November 20, 2006, the Inter-Agency Privatization Council (IPC) of the Philippine Government sold the 111,415 PTIC shares in a public bidding where Parallax was the winning bidder. Thereafter, First Pacific announced that it would exercise its right of first refusal as a PTIC stockholder but it failed to do so. Instead, it yielded its right to PTIC itself. On February 14, 2007, First Pacific, through its subsidiary, MPAH, entered into a Conditional Sale and Purchase Agreement of the 111,415 PTIC shares with the Philippine Government. The said sale was completed on February 28 of the same year.

Since PTIC was a stockholder of PLDT, the sale by the Philippine Government of the 46.125% of PTIC shares was actually an indirect sale of 12 million shares or about 6.3% of the outstanding common shares of PLDT. With the sale, First Pacific's common shareholdings in PLDT increased from 30.7% to 37%, thereby increasing the common shareholdings of foreigners in PLDT to about 81.47%. This violated Section 11, Article XII of the 1987 Philippine Constitution which limits foreign ownership of the capital of a public utility to not more than 40%.

On the other hand, public respondents, Finance Secretary Margarito B. Teves, Undersecretary John P. Sevilla, and PCGG Commissioner Ricardo Abcede alleged the same facts but argued that when the House of Representatives Committee on Good Government conducted a public hearing on the particulars of the then impending sale of the 111,415 PTIC shares, respondents, Teves and Sevilla, were among the attendees. The HR Committee Report No. 2270 concluded that: (a) the auction of the government's 111,415 PTIC shares bore due diligence, transparency and conformity with existing legal procedures; and (b) First Pacific's intended acquisition of the government's 111,415 PTIC shares resulting in First Pacific's 100% ownership of PTIC will not violate the 40% constitutional limit on foreign ownership of a public utility since PTIC holds only 13.847% of the total outstanding common shares of PLDT. On 28 February 2007, First Pacific completed the acquisition of the 111,415 shares of stock of PTIC. Likewise, respondent, Manuel V. Pangilinan admitted that indeed, the IPC conducted a public bidding for the sale of the said 111,415 PTIC shares, Parallax was the highest bidder, and MPAH, a First Pacific affiliate, exercised its right of first refusal by matching the highest bid by Parallax, and on February 28, 2007, the sale was consummated.

On February 28, 2007, the petitioner filed the instant petition for prohibition, injunction, declaratory relief, and declaration of nullity of sale of the 111,415 PTIC shares, claiming, among others, that the said sale would result in an increase in First Pacific's common shareholdings in PLDT, and this, combined with Japanese NTT DoCoMo's, would result to a total foreign common shareholdings in PLDT of 51.56 percent which is over the 40 percent constitutional limit. Petitioners-in-intervention, Pablito V. Sanidad and Arno V. Sanidad, joined the petitioner in seeking the nullification of the said

ISSUE:

Whether the term capital in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution refers to the total common shares only of PLDT, a public utility. (YES)

RULING:

We agree with petitioner and petitioners-in-intervention. The term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution refers only to shares of stock entitled to vote in the election of directors, and thus in the present case only to common shares, and not to the total outstanding capital stock comprising both common and non-voting preferred shares.

The Corporation Code of the Philippines classifies shares as common or preferred, thus:

> Sec. 6. Classification of shares. - The shares of stock of stock corporations may be divided into classes or series of shares, or both, any of which classes or series of shares may have such rights, privileges or restrictions as may be stated in the articles of incorporation: Provided, That no share may be deprived of voting rights except those classified and issued as "preferred" or "redeemable" shares, unless otherwise provided in this Code: Provided, further, That there shall always be a class or series of shares which have complete voting rights. Any or all of the shares or series of shares may have a par value or have no par value as may be provided for in the articles of incorporation: Provided, however, That banks, trust companies, insurance companies, public utilities, and building and loan associations shall not be permitted to issue no-par value shares of stock.

Preferred shares of stock issued by any corporation may be given preference in the distribution of the assets of the corporation in case of liquidation and in the distribution of dividends, or such other preferences as may be stated in the articles of incorporation which are not violative of the provisions of this Code: Provided, That preferred shares of stock may be issued only with a stated par value. The Board of Directors, where authorized in the articles of incorporation, may fix the terms and conditions of preferred shares of stock or any series thereof: Provided, That such terms and conditions shall be effective upon the filing of a certificate thereof with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Shares of capital stock issued without par value shall be deemed fully paid and non-assessable and the holder of such shares shall not be liable to the corporation or to its creditors in respect thereto: Provided; That shares without par value may not be issued for a consideration less than the value of five (₱5.00) pesos per share: Provided, further, That the entire consideration received by the corporation for its no-par value shares shall be treated as capital and shall not be available for distribution as dividends.

A corporation may, furthermore, classify its shares for the purpose of insuring compliance with constitutional or legal requirements.

Except as otherwise provided in the articles of incorporation and stated in the certificate of stock, each share shall be equal in all respects to every other share.

Where the articles of incorporation provide for non-voting shares in the cases allowed by this Code, the holders of such shares shall nevertheless be entitled to vote on the following matters:

1. Amendment of the articles of incorporation;

2. Adoption and amendment of by-laws;

3. Sale, lease, exchange, mortgage, pledge or other disposition of all or substantially all of the corporate property;

4. Incurring, creating or increasing bonded indebtedness;

5. Increase or decrease of capital stock;

6. Merger or consolidation of the corporation with another corporation or other corporations;

7. Investment of corporate funds in another corporation or business in accordance with this Code; and

8. Dissolution of the corporation.

Except as provided in the immediately preceding paragraph, the vote necessary to approve a particular corporate act as provided in this Code shall be deemed to refer only to stocks with voting rights.

Indisputably, one of the rights of a stockholder is the right to participate in the control or management of the corporation. This is exercised through his vote in the election of directors because it is the board of directors that controls or manages the corporation. In the absence of provisions in the articles of incorporation denying voting rights to preferred shares, preferred shares have the same voting rights as common shares. However, preferred shareholders are often excluded from any control, that is, deprived of the right to vote in the election of directors and on other matters, on the theory that the preferred shareholders are merely investors in the corporation for income in the same manner as bondholders. In fact, under the Corporation Code only preferred or redeemable shares can be deprived of the right to vote. Common shares cannot be deprived of the right to vote in any corporate meeting, and any provision in the articles of incorporation restricting the right of common shareholders to vote is invalid.

Considering that common shares have voting rights which translate to control, as opposed to preferred shares which usually have no voting rights, the term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution refers only to common shares. However, if the preferred shares also have the right to vote in the election of directors, then the term "capital" shall include such preferred shares because the right to participate in the control or management of the corporation is exercised through the right to vote in the election of directors. In short, the term "capital" in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution refers only to shares of stock that can vote in the election of directors.

This interpretation is consistent with the intent of the framers of the Constitution to place in the hands of Filipino citizens the control and management of public utilities. As revealed in the deliberations of the Constitutional Commission, "capital" refers to the voting stock or controlling interest of a corporation.

- Heirs of Wilson P. Gamboa vs. Finance Secretary Margarito B. Teves, et al., G.R. No. 176579, October 9, 2012

HEIRS OF WILSON P. GAMBOA, Petitioners, vs. FINANCE SECRETARYMARGARITO B. TEVES, FINANCE UNDERSECRETARYJOHN P. SEVILLA, AND COMMISSIONER RICARDO ABCEDE OF THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION ON GOOD GOVERNMENT(PCGG) IN THEIR CAPACITIES AS CHAIR AND MEMBERS, RESPECTIVELY, OF THE PRIVATIZATION COUNCIL, CHAIRMAN ANTHONI SALIM OF FIRST PACIFIC CO., LTD. IN HIS CAPACITY AS DIRECTOR OF METRO PACIFIC ASSET HOLDINGS INC., CHAIRMAN MANUEL V. PANGILINAN OF PHILIPPINE LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE COMPANY (PLDT) IN HIS CAPACITY AS MANAGING DIRECTOR OF FIRST PACIFIC CO., LTD., PRESIDENT NAPOLEON L. NAZARENO OF PHILIPPINE LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE COMPANY, CHAIR FE BARIN OF THE SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, and PRESIDENT FRANCIS LIM OF THE PHILIPPINE STOCK EXCHANGE, Respondents. PABLITO V. SANIDAD and ARNO V. SANIDAD, Petitioner-in-Intervention.
G.R. No. 176579, EN BANC, October 9, 2012, CARPIO, J.

Since a specific class of shares may have rights and privileges or restrictions different from the rest of the shares in a corporation, the 60-40 ownership requirement in favor of Filipino citizens in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution must apply not only to shares with voting rights but also to shares without voting rights. Preferred shares, denied the right to vote in the election of directors, are anyway still entitled to vote on the eight specific corporate matters mentioned above. Thus, if a corporation, engaged in a partially nationalized industry, issues a mixture of common and preferred non-voting shares, at least 60 percent of the common shares and at least 60 percent of the preferred non-voting shares must be owned by Filipinos*. Of course, if a corporation issues only a single class of shares, at least 60 percent of such shares must necessarily be owned by Filipinos.* In short, the 60-40 ownership requirement in favor of Filipino citizens must apply separately to each class of shares, whether common, preferred non-voting, preferred voting or any other class of shares*. This uniform application of the 60-40 ownership requirement in favor of Filipino citizens clearly breathes life to the constitutional command that the ownership and operation of public utilities shall be reserved exclusively to corporations at least 60 percent of whose capital is Filipino-owned. Applying uniformly the 60-40 ownership requirement in favor of Filipino citizens to each class of shares, regardless of differences in voting rights, privileges and restrictions, guarantees effective Filipino control of public utilities, as mandated by the Constitution.*

FACTS:

In 1969, General Telephone and Electronics Corporation (GTE), an American company and a major PLDT stockholder, sold 26 percent of the outstanding common shares of PLDT to PTIC. In 1977, Prime Holdings, Inc. (PHI) was incorporated and subsequently became the owner of 111,415 shares of stock of PTIC. In 1986, the 111,415 shares of stock of PTIC held by PHI were sequestered by the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG). The 111,415 PTIC shares, which represent about 46.125 percent of the outstanding capital stock of PTIC, were later declared by this Court to be owned by the Republic of the Philippines.

In 1999, First Pacific, a Bermuda-registered, Hong Kong-based investment firm, acquired the remaining 54 percent of the outstanding capital stock of PTIC. In 2006, the Inter-Agency Privatization Council (IPC) of the Philippine Government announced that it would sell the 111,415 PTIC shares, or 46.125 percent of the outstanding capital stock of PTIC, through a public bidding. Only two bidders, Parallax Venture Fund XXVII (Parallax) and Pan-Asia Presidio Capital, submitted their bids and Parallax won with a bid of P25.6 billion or US$510 million.

Thereafter, First Pacific announced that it would exercise its right of first refusal as a PTIC stockholder and buy the 111,415 PTIC shares by matching the bid price of Parallax. However, First Pacific failed to do so on the deadline set by IPC and instead, yielded its right to PTIC itself which was then given by IPC until 2 March 2007 to buy the PTIC shares. In 2007, First Pacific, through its subsidiary, MPAH, entered into a Conditional Sale and Purchase Agreement of the 111,415 PTIC shares, or 46.125 percent of the outstanding capital stock of PTIC, with the Philippine Government for the price of P25,217,556,000 or US$510,580,189. Since PTIC is a stockholder of PLDT, the sale by the Philippine Government of 46.125 percent of PTIC shares is actually an indirect sale of 12 million shares or about 6.3 percent of the outstanding common shares of PLDT. With the sale, First Pacifics common shareholdings in PLDT increased from 30.7 percent to 37 percent, thereby increasing the common shareholdings of foreigners in PLDT to about 81.47 percent. This violates Section 11, Article XII of the 1987 Philippine Constitution which limits foreign ownership of the capital of a public utility to not more than 40 percent.

ISSUE:

Whether the term capital in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution refers to the total common shares only of PLDT, a public utility. (NO)

RULING:

The 28 June 2011 Decision declares that the 60 percent Filipino ownership required by the Constitution to engage in certain economic activities applies not only to voting control of the corporation, but also to the beneficial ownership of the corporation. To repeat, we held:

> Mere legal title is insufficient to meet the 60 percent Filipino-owned "capital" required in the Constitution. Full beneficial ownership of 60 percent of the outstanding capital stock, coupled with 60 percent of the voting rights, is required. The legal and beneficial ownership of 60 percent of the outstanding capital stock must rest in the hands of Filipino nationals in accordance with the constitutional mandate. Otherwise, the corporation is "considered as non-Philippine national[s]." (Emphasis supplied)

This is consistent with Section 3 of the FIA which provides that where 100% of the capital stock is held by "a trustee of funds for pension or other employee retirement or separation benefits," the trustee is a Philippine national if "at least sixty percent (60%) of the fund will accrue to the benefit of Philippine nationals." Likewise, Section 1(b) of the Implementing Rules of the FIA provides that "for stocks to be deemed owned and held by Philippine citizens or Philippine nationals, mere legal title is not enough to meet the required Filipino equity. Full beneficial ownership of the stocks, coupled with appropriate voting rights, is essential."

Since the constitutional requirement of at least 60 percent Filipino ownership applies not only to voting control of the corporation but also to the beneficial ownership of the corporation, it is therefore imperative that such requirement apply uniformly and across the board to all classes of shares, regardless of nomenclature and category, comprising the capital of a corporation. Under the Corporation Code, capital stock consists of all classes of shares issued to stockholders, that is, common shares as well as preferred shares, which may have different rights, privileges or restrictions as stated in the articles of incorporation.

The Corporation Code allows denial of the right to vote to preferred and redeemable shares, but disallows denial of the right to vote in specific corporate matters. Thus, common shares have the right to vote in the election of directors, while preferred shares may be denied such right. Nonetheless, preferred shares, even if denied the right to vote in the election of directors, are entitled to vote on the following corporate matters: (1) amendment of articles of incorporation; (2) increase and decrease of capital stock; (3) incurring, creating or increasing bonded indebtedness; (4) sale, lease, mortgage or other disposition of substantially all corporate assets; (5) investment of funds in another business or corporation or for a purpose other than the primary purpose for which the corporation was organized; (6) adoption, amendment and repeal of by-laws; (7) merger and consolidation; and (8) dissolution of corporation.

Since a specific class of shares may have rights and privileges or restrictions different from the rest of the shares in a corporation, the 60-40 ownership requirement in favor of Filipino citizens in Section 11, Article XII of the Constitution must apply not only to shares with voting rights but also to shares without voting rights. Preferred shares, denied the right to vote in the election of directors, are anyway still entitled to vote on the eight specific corporate matters mentioned above. Thus, if a corporation, engaged in a partially nationalized industry, issues a mixture of common and preferred non-voting shares, at least 60 percent of the common shares and at least 60 percent of the preferred non-voting shares must be owned by Filipinos. Of course, if a corporation issues only a single class of shares, at least 60 percent of such shares must necessarily be owned by Filipinos. In short, the 60-40 ownership requirement in favor of Filipino citizens must apply separately to each class of shares, whether common, preferred non-voting, preferred voting or any other class of shares. This uniform application of the 60-40 ownership requirement in favor of Filipino citizens clearly breathes life to the constitutional command that the ownership and operation of public utilities shall be reserved exclusively to corporations at least 60 percent of whose capital is Filipino-owned. Applying uniformly the 60-40 ownership requirement in favor of Filipino citizens to each class of shares, regardless of differences in voting rights, privileges and restrictions, guarantees effective Filipino control of public utilities, as mandated by the Constitution.

Moreover, such uniform application to each class of shares insures that the "controlling interest" in public utilities always lies in the hands of Filipino citizens. This addresses and extinguishes Pangilinan's worry that foreigners, owning most of the non-voting shares, will exercise greater control over fundamental corporate matters requiring two-thirds or majority vote of all shareholders.

3. Grandfather Rule

- Narra Nickel Mining and Development Corporation, et al., vs. Redmont Consolidated Mines Corporation, G.R. No. 199580, April 21, 2014

NARRA NICKEL MINING AND DEVELOPMENT CORP., TESORO MINING AND DEVELOPMENT, INC., and MCARTHUR MINING, INC., Petitioners, vs. REDMONT CONSOLIDATED MINES CORP., Respondent.

G.R. No. 195580, THIRD DIVISION, April 21, 2014, VELASCO, JR., J.

The second case is the Strict Rule or the Grandfather Rule Proper and pertains to the portion in said Paragraph 7 of the 1967 SEC Rules which states, "but if the percentage of Filipino ownership in the corporation or partnership is less than 60%, only the number of shares corresponding to such percentage shall be counted as of Philippine nationality." Under the Strict Rule or Grandfather Rule Proper, the combined totals in the Investing Corporation and the Investee Corporation must be traced (i.e., "grandfathered") to determine the total percentage of Filipino ownership.

Moreover, the ultimate Filipino ownership of the shares must first be traced to the level of the Investing Corporation and added to the shares directly owned in the Investee Corporation x.

*In other words, based on the said SEC Rule and DOJ Opinion, the Grandfather Rule or the second part of the SEC Rule applies only when the 60-40 Filipino-foreign equity ownership is in doubt (i.e., in cases where the joint venture corporation with Filipino and foreign stockholders with less than 60% Filipino stockholdings [or 59%] invests in other joint venture corporation which is either 60-

40% Filipino-alien or the 59% less Filipino). Stated differently, where the 60-40 Filipino- foreign equity ownership is not in doubt, the Grandfather Rule will not apply.*

After a scrutiny of the evidence extant on record, the Court finds that this case calls for the application of the grandfather rule since, as ruled by the POA and affirmed by the OP, doubt prevails and persists in the corporate ownership of petitioners. Also, as found by the CA, doubt is present in the 60-40 Filipino equity ownership of petitioners Narra, McArthur and Tesoro, since their common investor, the 100% Canadian corporation––MBMI, funded them.

Obviously, the instant case presents a situation which exhibits a scheme employed by stockholders to circumvent the law, creating a cloud of doubt in the Court's mind. To determine, therefore, the actual participation, direct or indirect, of MBMI, the grandfather rule must be used.

FACTS:

Sometime in December 2006, respondent Redmont Consolidated Mines Corp. (Redmont), a domestic corporation organized and existing under Philippine laws, took interest in mining and exploring certain areas of the province of Palawan. After inquiring with the DENR, it learned that the areas where it wanted to undertake exploration and mining activities where already covered by Mineral Production Sharing Agreement (MPSA) applications of petitioners Narra, Tesoro and McArthur.

Petitioner McArthur, through its predecessor-in-interest Sara Marie Mining, Inc. (SMMI), filed an application for an MPSA and Exploration Permit (EP) with the Mines and Geo-Sciences Bureau (MGB), Region IV-B, Office of the DENR.

Subsequently, SMMI was issued an MPSA. The MPSA and EP were then transferred to Madridejos Mining Corporation (MMC) and, on November 6, 2006, assigned to petitioner McArthur.

Petitioner Narra acquired its MPSA from Alpha Resources and Development Corporation and Patricia Louise Mining & Development Corporation (PLMDC) which previously filed an application for an MPSA with the MGB, Region IV-B, DENR on January 6, 1992. Subsequently, PLMDC conveyed, transferred and/or assigned its rights and interests over the MPSA application in favor of Narra.

Another MPSA application of SMMI was filed with the DENR Region IV-B, labeled as MPSA-AMA-IVB-154 (formerly EPA-IVB-47) over 3,402 hectares in Barangays Malinao and Princesa Urduja, Municipality of Narra, Province of Palawan. SMMI subsequently conveyed, transferred and assigned its rights and interest over the said MPSA application to Tesoro.

On January 2, 2007, Redmont filed before the Panel of Arbitrators (POA) of the DENR three (3) separate petitions for the denial of petitioners' applications for MPSA.

In the petitions, Redmont alleged that at least 60% of the capital stock of McArthur, Tesoro and Narra are owned and controlled by MBMI Resources, Inc. (MBMI), a 100% Canadian corporation. Redmont reasoned that since MBMI is a considerable stockholder of petitioners, it was the driving force behind petitioners' filing of the MPSAs over the areas covered by applications since it knows that it can only participate in mining activities through corporations which are deemed Filipino citizens. Redmont argued that given that petitioners' capital stocks were mostly owned by MBMI, they were likewise disqualified from engaging in mining activities through MPSAs, which are reserved only for Filipino citizens.

ISSUE:

Whether the grandfather rule should be applied. (YES)

RULING:

Basically, there are two acknowledged tests in determining the nationality of a corporation: the control test and the grandfather rule. Paragraph 7 of DOJ Opinion No. 020, Series of 2005, adopting the 1967 SEC Rules which implemented the requirement of the Constitution and other laws pertaining to the controlling interests in enterprises engaged in the exploitation of natural resources owned by Filipino citizens, provides:

> Shares belonging to corporations or partnerships at least 60% of the capital of which is owned by Filipino citizens shall be considered as of Philippine nationality, but if the percentage of Filipino ownership in the corporation or partnership is less than 60%, only the number of shares corresponding to such percentage shall be counted as of Philippine nationality. Thus, if 100,000 shares are registered in the name of a corporation or partnership at least 60% of the capital stock or capital, respectively, of which belong to Filipino citizens, all of the shares shall be recorded as owned by Filipinos. But if less than 60%, or say, 50% of the capital stock or capital of the corporation or partnership, respectively, belongs to Filipino citizens, only 50,000 shares shall be counted as owned by Filipinos and the other 50,000 shall be recorded as belonging to aliens.

The first part of paragraph 7, DOJ Opinion No. 020, stating "shares belonging to corporations or partnerships at least 60% of the capital of which is owned by Filipino citizens shall be considered as of Philippine nationality," pertains to the control test or the liberal rule. On the other hand, the second part of the DOJ Opinion which provides, "if the percentage of the Filipino ownership in the corporation or partnership is less than 60%, only the number of shares corresponding to such percentage shall be counted as Philippine nationality," pertains to the stricter, more stringent grandfather rule.

Prior to this recent change of events, petitioners were constant in advocating the application of the "control test" under RA 7042, as amended by RA 8179, otherwise known as the Foreign Investments Act (FIA), rather than using the stricter grandfather rule. The pertinent provision under Sec. 3 of the FIA provides:

> SECTION 3. Definitions. - As used in this Act:
>
> a.) The term Philippine national shall mean a citizen of the Philippines; or a domestic partnership or association wholly owned by the citizens of the Philippines; a corporation organized under the laws of the Philippines of which at least sixty percent (60%) of the capital stock outstanding and entitled to vote is wholly owned by Filipinos or a trustee of funds for pension or other employee retirement or separation benefits, where the trustee is a Philippine national and at least sixty percent (60%) of the fund will accrue to the benefit of Philippine nationals: Provided, That were a corporation and its non-Filipino stockholders own stocks in a Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) registered enterprise, at least sixty percent (60%) of the capital stock outstanding and entitled to vote of each of both corporations must be owned and held by citizens of the Philippines and at least sixty percent (60%) of the members of the Board of Directors, in order that the corporation shall be considered a Philippine national.

The grandfather rule, petitioners reasoned, has no leg to stand on in the instant case since the definition of a "Philippine National" under Sec. 3 of the FIA does not provide for it. They further claim that the grandfather rule "has been abandoned and is no longer the applicable rule." They also opined that the last portion of Sec. 3 of the FIA admits the application of a "corporate layering" scheme of corporations. Petitioners claim that the clear and unambiguous wordings of the statute preclude the court from construing it and prevent the court's use of discretion in applying the law. They said that the plain, literal meaning of the statute meant the application of the control test is obligatory.

We disagree. "Corporate layering" is admittedly allowed by the FIA; but if it is used to circumvent the Constitution and pertinent laws, then it becomes illegal. Further, the pronouncement of petitioners that the grandfather rule has already been abandoned must be discredited for lack of basis.

Under the SEC Rules, there are two cases in determining the nationality of the Investee Corporation. The first case is the 'liberal rule', later coined by the SEC as the Control Test in its 30 May 1990 Opinion, and pertains to the portion in said Paragraph 7 of the 1967 SEC Rules which states, '(s)hares belonging to corporations or partnerships at least 60% of the capital of which is owned by Filipino citizens shall be considered as of Philippine nationality.' Under the liberal Control Test, there is no need to further trace the ownership of the 60% (or more) Filipino stockholdings of the Investing Corporation since a corporation which is at least 60% Filipino-owned is considered as Filipino.

The second case is the Strict Rule or the Grandfather Rule Proper and pertains to the portion in said Paragraph 7 of the 1967 SEC Rules which states, "but if the percentage of Filipino ownership in the corporation or partnership is less than 60%, only the number of shares corresponding to such percentage shall be counted as of Philippine nationality." Under the Strict Rule or Grandfather Rule Proper, the combined totals in the Investing Corporation and the Investee Corporation must be traced (i.e., "grandfathered") to determine the total percentage of Filipino ownership.

Moreover, the ultimate Filipino ownership of the shares must first be traced to the level of the Investing Corporation and added to the shares directly owned in the Investee Corporation x x x.

In other words, based on the said SEC Rule and DOJ Opinion, the Grandfather Rule or the second part of the SEC Rule applies only when the 60-40 Filipino-foreign equity ownership is in doubt (i.e., in cases where the joint venture corporation with Filipino and foreign stockholders with less than 60% Filipino stockholdings [or 59%] invests in other joint venture corporation which is either 60-40% Filipino-alien or the 59% less Filipino). Stated differently, where the 60-40 Filipino- foreign equity ownership is not in doubt, the Grandfather Rule will not apply.

After a scrutiny of the evidence extant on record, the Court finds that this case calls for the application of the grandfather rule since, as ruled by the POA and affirmed by the OP, doubt prevails and persists in the corporate ownership of petitioners. Also, as found by the CA, doubt is present in the 60-40 Filipino equity ownership of petitioners Narra, McArthur and Tesoro, since their common investor, the 100% Canadian corporation––MBMI, funded them. However, petitioners also claim that there is "doubt" only when the stockholdings of Filipinos are less than 60%.

The assertion of petitioners that "doubt" only exists when the stockholdings are less than 60% fails to convince this Court. DOJ Opinion No. 20, which petitioners quoted in their petition, only made an example of an instance where "doubt" as to the ownership of the corporation exists. It would be ludicrous to limit the application of the said word only to the instances where the stockholdings of non-Filipino stockholders are more than 40% of the total stockholdings in a corporation. The corporations interested in circumventing our laws would clearly strive to have "60% Filipino Ownership" at face value. It would be senseless for these applying corporations to state in their respective articles of incorporation that they have less than 60% Filipino stockholders since the applications will be denied instantly. Thus, various corporate schemes and layerings are utilized to circumvent the application of the Constitution.

Obviously, the instant case presents a situation which exhibits a scheme employed by stockholders to circumvent the law, creating a cloud of doubt in the Court's mind. To determine, therefore, the actual participation, direct or indirect, of MBMI, the grandfather rule must be used.

After applying the grandfather rule, it is quite safe to say that petitioners McArthur, Tesoro and Narra are not Filipino since MBMI, a 100% Canadian corporation, owns 60% or more of their equity interests. Such conclusion is derived from grandfathering petitioners' corporate owners, namely: MMI, SMMI and PLMDC. Going further and adding to the picture, MBMI's Summary of Significant Accounting Policies statement– –regarding the "joint venture" agreements that it entered into with the "Olympic" and "Alpha" groups––involves SMMI, Tesoro, PLMDC and Narra. Noticeably, the ownership of the "layered" corporations boils down to MBMI, Olympic or corporations under the "Alpha" group wherein MBMI has joint venture agreements with, practically exercising majority control over the corporations mentioned. In effect, whether looking at the capital structure or the underlying relationships between and among the corporations, petitioners are NOT Filipino nationals and must be considered foreign since 60% or more of their capital stocks or equity interests are owned by MBMI.

- Narra Nickel Mining and Development Corporation, et al. vs. Redmont Consolidated Mines Corporation, G.R. No. 199580, January 28, 2015

NARRA NICKEL MINING AND DEVELOPMENT CORP., TESORO MINING AND DEVELOPMENT, INC., AND MCARTHUR MINING, INC., Petitioners, v. REDMONT CONSOLIDATED MINES CORP., Respondent.

G.R. No. 195580, SPECIAL THIRD DIVISION January 28, 2015, VELASCO JR., J.

The Control Test can be, as it has been, applied jointly with the Grandfather Rule to determine the observance of foreign ownership restriction in nationalized economic activities. The Control Test and the Grandfather Rule are not, as it were, incompatible ownership-determinant methods that can only be applied alternative to each other. Rather, these methods can, if appropriate, be used cumulatively in the determination of the ownership and control of corporations engaged in fully or partly nationalized activities, as the mining operation involved in this case or the operation of public utilities.

The Grandfather Rule, standing alone, should not be used to determine the Filipino ownership and control in a corporation, as it could result in an otherwise foreign corporation rendered qualified to perform nationalized or partly nationalized activities. Hence, it is only when the Control Test is first complied with that the Grandfather Rule may be applied*. Put in another manner, if the subject corporation's Filipino equity falls below the threshold 60%, the corporation is immediately considered foreign-owned, in which case, the need to resort to the Grandfather Rule disappears.*

On the other hand, a corporation that complies with the 60-40 Filipino to foreign equity requirement can be considered a Filipino corporation if there is no doubt as to who has the "beneficial ownership" and "control" of the corporation. In that instance, there is no need for a dissection or further inquiry on the ownership of the corporate shareholders in both the investing and investee corporation or the application of the Grandfather Rule*. As a corollary rule, even if the 60-40 Filipino to foreign equity ratio is apparently met by the subject or investee corporation,* a resort to the Grandfather Rule is necessary if doubt exists as to the locus of the "beneficial ownership" and "control*." In this case, a further investigation as to the nationality of the personalities with the beneficial ownership and control of the corporate shareholders in both the investing and investee corporations is necessary.*

*As explained in the April 21, 2012 Decision, the "doubt" that demands the application of the Grandfather Rule in addition to or in tandem with the Control Test is not confined to, or more bluntly, does not refer to the fact that the apparent Filipino ownership of the corporation's equity falls below the 60% threshold. Rather, "*doubt" refers to various indicia that the "beneficial ownership" and "control" of the corporation do not in fact reside in Filipino shareholders but in foreign stakeholders.

FACTS:

Respondent Redmont Consolidated Mines Corp. (Redmont), a domestic corporation organized and existing under Philippine laws, took interest in mining and exploring certain areas of the province of Palawan. After inquiring with the DENR, it learned that the areas where it wanted to undertake exploration and mining activities where already covered by Mineral Production Sharing Agreement (MPSA) applications of petitioners Narra, Tesoro and McArthur. Petitioners Narra, Tesoro and McArthur applied for an MPSA and Exploration Permit which was subsequently issued.
Redmont filed before the Panel of Arbitrators (POA) of the DENR three (3) separate petitions for the denial of petitioners' applications for MPSA. Redmont alleged that at least 60% of the capital stock of McArthur,Tesoro and Narra are owned and controlled by MBMI Resources, Inc. (MBMI), a 100% Canadian corporation. Redmont reasoned that since MBMI is a considerable stockholder of petitioners, it was the driving force behind petitioners' filing of the MPSAs over the areas covered by applications since it knows that it can only participate in mining activities through corporations which are deemed Filipino citizens. Redmont argued that given that petitioners' capital stocks were mostly owned by MBMI, they were likewise disqualified from engaging in mining activities through MPSAs, which are reserved only for Filipino citizens.

Petitioners averred that they were qualified persons under Section 39 (aq) of Republic Act No. (RA) 7942 or the Philippine Mining Act of 1995. They stated that their nationality as applicants is immaterial because they also applied for Financial or Technical Assistance Agreements (FTAA) which are granted to foreign-owned corporations. Nevertheless, they claimed that the issue on nationality should not be raised since McArthur, Tesoro and Narra are in fact Philippine Nationals as 60% of their capital is owned by citizens of the Philippines.

POA issued a Resolution disqualifying petitioners from gaining MPSAs considering petitioners as foreign corporations being "effectively controlled" by MBMI, a 100% Canadian company and declared their MPSAs null and void.
Pending the resolution of the appeal filed by petitioners with the MAB, Redmont filed a Complaint with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), seeking the revocation of the certificates for registration of petitioners on the ground that they are foreign-owned or controlled corporations engaged in mining in violation of Philippine laws.

CA found that there was doubt as to the nationality of petitioners when it realized that petitioners had a common major investor, MBMI, a corporation composed of 100% Canadians. Pursuant to the first sentence of paragraph 7 of Department of Justice (DOJ) Opinion No. 020, Series of 2005, adopting the 1967 SEC Rules which implemented the requirement of the Constitution and other laws pertaining to the exploitation of natural resources, the CA used the "grandfather rule" to determine the nationality of petitioners.

ISSUE:

Whether the Petitioners are foreign corporations. (YES)

RULING:

Admittedly, an ongoing quandary obtains as to the role of the Grandfather Rule in determining compliance with the minimum Filipino equity requirement vis-à-vis the Control Test. This confusion springs from the erroneous assumption that the use of one method forecloses the use of the other.

As exemplified by the above rulings, opinions, decisions and this Court's April 21, 2014 Decision, the Control Test can be, as it has been, applied jointly with the Grandfather Rule to determine the observance of foreign ownership restriction in nationalized economic activities. The Control Test and the Grandfather Rule are not, as it were, incompatible ownership-determinant methods that can only be applied alternative to each other. Rather, these methods can, if appropriate, be used cumulatively in the determination of the ownership and control of corporations engaged in fully or partly nationalized activities, as the mining operation involved in this case or the operation of public utilities.

The Grandfather Rule, standing alone, should not be used to determine the Filipino ownership and control in a corporation, as it could result in an otherwise foreign corporation rendered qualified to perform nationalized or partly nationalized activities. Hence, it is only when the Control Test is first complied with that the Grandfather Rule may be applied. Put in another manner, if the subject corporation's Filipino equity falls below the threshold 60%, the corporation is immediately considered foreign-owned, in which case, the need to resort to the Grandfather Rule disappears.

On the other hand, a corporation that complies with the 60-40 Filipino to foreign equity requirement can be considered a Filipino corporation if there is no doubt as to who has the "beneficial ownership" and "control" of the corporation. In that instance, there is no need for a dissection or further inquiry on the ownership of the corporate shareholders in both the investing and investee corporation or the application of the Grandfather Rule. As a corollary rule, even if the 60-40 Filipino to foreign equity ratio is apparently met by the subject or investee corporation, a resort to the Grandfather Rule is necessary if doubt exists as to the locus of the "beneficial ownership" and "control." In this case, a further investigation as to the nationality of the personalities with the beneficial ownership and control of the corporate shareholders in both the investing and investee corporations is necessary.

As explained in the April 21, 2012 Decision, the "doubt" that demands the application of the Grandfather Rule in addition to or in tandem with the Control Test is not confined to, or more bluntly, does not refer to the fact that the apparent Filipino ownership of the corporation's equity falls below the 60% threshold. Rather, "doubt" refers to various indicia that the "beneficial ownership" and "control" of the corporation do not in fact reside in Filipino shareholders but in foreign stakeholders. As provided in DOJ Opinion No. 165, Series of 1984, which applied the pertinent provisions of the Anti-Dummy Law in relation to the minimum Filipino equity requirement in the Constitution, "significant indicators of the dummy status" have been recognized in view of reports "that some Filipino investors or businessmen are being utilized or [are] allowing themselves to be used as dummies by foreign investors" specifically in joint ventures for national resource exploitation. These indicators are:

> 1. That the foreign investors provide practically all the funds for the joint investment undertaken by these Filipino businessmen and their foreign partner;
>
> 2. That the foreign investors undertake to provide practically all the technological support for the joint venture;
>
> 3. That the foreign investors, while being minority stockholders, manage the company and prepare all economic viability studies.

Thus, In the Matter of the Petition for Revocation of the Certificate of Registration of Linear Works Realty Development Corporation, the SEC held that when foreigners contribute more capital to an enterprise, doubt exists as to the actual control and ownership of the subject corporation even if the 60% Filipino equity threshold is met. Hence, the SEC in that one ordered a further investigation, viz:

> x x x The [SEC Enforcement and Prosecution Department (EPD)] maintained that the basis for determining the level of foreign participation is the number of shares subscribed, regardless of the par value. Applying such an interpretation, the EPD rules that the foreign equity participation in Linear works Realty Development Corporation amounts to 26.41% of the corporation's capital stock since the amount of shares subscribed by foreign nationals is 1,795 only out of the 6,795 shares. Thus, the subject corporation is compliant with the 40% limit on foreign equity participation. Accordingly, the EPD dismissed the complaint, and did not pursue any investigation against the subject corporation.
>
> x x x x
>
> x x x [I]n this respect we find no error in the assailed order made by the EPD. The EPD did not err when it did not take into account the par value of shares in determining compliance with the constitutional and statutory restrictions on foreign equity. However, we are aware that some unscrupulous individuals employ schemes to circumvent the constitutional and statutory restrictions on foreign equity. In the present case, the fact that the shares of the Japanese nationals have a greater par value but only have similar rights to those held by Philippine citizens having much lower par value, is highly suspicious. This is because a > reasonable investor would expect to have greater control and economic rights than other investors who invested less capital than him. Thus, it is reasonable to suspect that there may be secret arrangements between the corporation and the stockholders wherein the Japanese nationals who subscribed to the shares with greater par value actually have greater control and economic rights contrary to the equality of shares based on the articles of incorporation.

>
> With this in mind, we find it proper for the EPD to investigate the subject corporation. The EPD is advised to avail of the Commission's subpoena powers in order to gather sufficient evidence, and file the necessary complaint.

As will be discussed, even if at first glance the petitioners comply with the 60-40 Filipino to foreign equity ratio, doubt exists in the present case that gives rise to a reasonable suspicion that the Filipino shareholders do not actually have the requisite number of control and beneficial ownership in petitioners Narra, Tesoro, and McArthur. Hence, a further investigation and dissection of the extent of the ownership of the corporate shareholders through the Grandfather Rule is justified.

Parenthetically, it is advanced that the application of the Grandfather Rule is impractical as tracing the shareholdings to the point when natural persons hold rights to the stocks may very well lead to an investigation ad infinitum. Suffice it to say in this regard that, while the Grandfather Rule was originally intended to trace the shareholdings to the point where natural persons hold the shares, the SEC had already set up a limit as to the number of corporate layers the attribution of the nationality of the corporate shareholders may be applied.

In a 1977 internal memorandum, the SEC suggested applying the Grandfather Rule on two (2) levels of corporate relations for publicly-held corporations or where the shares are traded in the stock exchanges, and to three (3) levels for closely held corporations or the shares of which are not traded in the stock exchanges. These limits comply with the requirement in Palting v. San Jose Petroleum, Inc. that the application of the Grandfather Rule cannot go beyond the level of what is reasonable.

In the Decision subject of this recourse, the Court applied the Grandfather Rule to determine the matter of true ownership and control over the petitioners as doubt exists as to the actual extent of the participation of MBMI in the equity of the petitioners and their investing corporations.

We considered the following membership and control structures and like nuances:

Tesoro

Supposedly Filipino corporation Sara Marie Mining, Inc. (Sara Marie) holds 59.97% of the 10,000 common shares of petitioner Tesoro while the Canadian-owned company, MBMI, holds 39.98% of its shares.

In turn, the Filipino corporation Olympic Mines & Development Corp. (Olympic) holds 66.63% of Sara Marie's shares while the same Canadian company MBMI holds 33.31% of Sara Marie's shares. Nonetheless, it is admitted that Olympic did not pay a single peso for its shares. On the contrary, MBMI paid for 99% of the paid-up capital of Sara Marie.

The fact that MBMI had practically provided all the funds in Sara Marie and Tesoro creates serious doubt as to the true extent of its (MBMI) control and ownership over both Sara Marie and Tesoro since, as observed by the SEC, "a reasonable investor would expect to have greater control and economic rights than other investors who invested less capital than him." The application of the Grandfather Rule is clearly called for, and as shown below, the Filipinos' control and economic benefits in petitioner Tesoro (through Sara Marie) fall below the threshold 60%, viz:

Filipino participation in petitioner Tesoro: 40.01%
66.67 (Filipino equity in Sara Marie) x59.97 (Sara Marie's share in Tesoro) = 39.98%
100

39.98% + .03% (shares of individual Filipino shareholders [SHs] in Tesoro)
=40.01%
=====
Foreign participation in petitioner Tesoro: 59.99%
33.33 (Foreign equity in Sara Marie) x 59.97 (Sara Marie's share in Tesoro) = 19.99%
100

19.99% + 39.98% (MBMI's direct participation in Tesoro) + .02% (shares of foreign individual SHs in Tesoro)
= 59.99%
=====
With only 40.01% Filipino ownership in petitioner Tesoro, as compared to 59.99% foreign ownership of its shares, it is clear that petitioner Tesoro does not comply with the minimum Filipino equity requirement imposed in Sec. 2, Art. XII of the Constitution. Hence, the appellate court's observation that Tesoro is a foreign corporation not entitled to an MPSA is apt.

McArthur

Petitioner McArthur follows the corporate layering structure of Tesoro, as 59.97% of its 10, 000 common shares is owned by supposedly Filipino Madridejos Mining Corporation (Madridejos), while 39.98% belonged to the Canadian MBMI.

In turn, 66.63% of Madridejos' shares were held by Olympic while 33.31% of its shares belonged to MBMI. Yet again, Olympic did not contribute to the paid-up capital of Madridejos and it was MBMI that provided 99.79% of the paid-up capital of Madridejos.

Again, the fact that MBMI had practically provided all the funds in Madridejos and McArthur creates serious doubt as to the true extent of its control and ownership of MBMI over both Madridejos and McArthur. The application of the Grandfather Rule is clearly called for, and as will be shown below, MBMI,along with the other foreign shareholders, breached the maximum limit of 40% ownership in petitioner McArthur, rendering the petitioner disqualified to an MPSA:

Filipino participation in petitioner McArthur: 40.01%

66.67 (Filipino equity in Madridejos) x 59.97 (Madridejos' share in McArthur) = 39.98%
100

39.98% + .03% (shares of individual Filipino SHs in McArthur)
=40.01%
=====

Foreign participation in petitioner McArthur: 59.99%

33.33 (Foreign equity in Madridejos) x 59.97 (Madridejos' share in McArthur) = 19.99%
100

19.99% + 39.98% (MBMI's direct participation in McArthur) + .02% (shares of foreign individual SHs in McArthur)
= 59.99%
=====

As with petitioner Tesoro, with only 40.01% Filipino ownership in petitioner McArthur, as compared to 59.99% foreign ownership of its shares, it is clear that petitioner McArthur does not comply with the minimum Filipino equity requirement imposed in Sec. 2, Art. XII of the Constitution. Thus, the appellate court did not err in holding that petitioner McArthur is a foreign corporation not entitled to an MPSA.

Narra

As for petitioner Narra, 59.97% of its shares belonged to Patricia Louise Mining & Development Corporation (PLMDC), while Canadian MBMI held 39.98% of its shares.

PLMDC's shares, in turn, were held by Palawan Alpha South Resources Development Corporation (PASRDC), which subscribed to 65.96% of PLMDC's shares, and the Canadian MBMI, which subscribed to 33.96% of PLMDC's shares.

Yet again, PASRDC did not pay for any of its subscribed shares, while MBMI contributed 99.75% of PLMDC's paid-up capital. This fact creates serious doubt as to the true extent of MBMI's control and ownership over both PLMDC and Narra since "a reasonable investor would expect to have greater control and economic rights than other investors who invested less capital than him." Thus, the application of the Grandfather Rule is justified. And as will be shown, it is clear that the Filipino ownership in petitioner Narrafalls below the limit prescribed in both the Constitution and the Philippine Mining Act of 1995.

Filipino participation in petitioner Narra: 39.64%

66.02 (Filipino equity in PLMDC) x 59.97 (PLMDC's share in Narra) = 39.59%
100

39.59% + .05% (shares of individual Filipino SHs in McArthur)
=39.64%
====
Foreign participation in petitioner Narra: 60.36%

33.98 (Foreign equity in PLMDC) x 59.97 (PLMDC's share in Narra) = 20.38%
100

20.38% + 39.96% (MBMI's direct participation in Narra) + .02% (shares of foreign individual SHs in McArthur)
= 60.36%
=====

With 60.36% foreign ownership in petitioner Narra, as compared to only 39.64% Filipino ownership of its shares, it is clear that petitioner Narra does not comply with the minimum Filipino equity requirement imposed in Section 2, Article XII of the Constitution. Hence, the appellate court did not err in holding that petitioner McArthur is a foreign corporation not entitled to an MPSA.

D. Corporate Juridical Personality

1. Doctrine of Separate Juridical Personality

- Lim vs. CA, 323 SCRA 102 (2000)

RUFINA LUY LIM, Petitioner, v. COURT OF APPEALS, AUTO TRUCK TBA CORPORATION, SPEED DISTRIBUTING, INC., ACTIVE DISTRIBUTORS, ALLIANCE MARKETING CORPORATION, ACTION COMPANY, INC. respondents.
G. R. No. 124715, SECOND DIVISION, January 24, 2000, BUENA, J.

Rudimentary is the rule that a corporation is invested by law with a personality distinct and separate from its stockholders or members*. In the same vein, a corporation by legal fiction and convenience is an entity shielded by a protective mantle and imbued by law with a character alien to the persons comprising it. The corporate mask may be lifted and the corporate veil may be pierced when a corporation is just but the alter ego of a person or of another corporation. Where badges of fraud exist, where public convenience is defeated; where a wrong is sought to be justified thereby, the corporate fiction or the notion of legal entity should come to naught.*

Further, the test in determining the applicability of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction is as follows: 1) Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination*, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own; (2) Such control must have been* used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of plaintiffs legal right*; and (3) The aforesaid control and breach of duty* must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of. The absence of any of these elements prevents "piercing the corporate veil".

Inasmuch as the real properties included in the inventory of the estate of the Late Pastor Y. Lim are in the possession of and are registered in the name of private respondent corporations, which under the law possess a personality separate and distinct from their stockholders, and in the absence of any cogency to shred the veil of corporate fiction, the presumption of conclusiveness of said titles in favor of private respondents should stand undisturbed.

FACTS:

On 11 June 1994, Pastor Y. Lim died intestate. Herein petitioner, as surviving spouse and duly represented by her nephew George Luy, filed a joint petition for the administration of the estate of Pastor Y. Lim before the Regional Trial Court of Quezon City. Private respondent corporations, whose properties were included in the inventory of the estate of Pastor Y. Lim, then filed a motion for the lifting of lis pendens and motion for exclusion of certain properties from the estate of the decedent. Rufina Luy Lim subsequently filed an amended petition which averred that deceased personally owned during his lifetime the private respondent corporations itself and its properties since the incorporators of such were mere dummies of the deceased for purposes of registration with the SEC. Petitioner attached affidavits executed by Teresa Lim and Lani Wencelao which contained averments that the incorporators of the Uniwide Distibuting, Inc. included in the list had no actual and participation in the organization and incorporation of said corporation. They are mere dummies since they did not actually contributed any amount to the capital stock of the corporation and have been merely asked by the deceased to affix their signatures thereon. The private respondents consistently prayed for the exclusion of such in the inventory of the estate of the deceased since these were corporations formed, organized and existing under Philippine laws and which owned real properties covered under the Torrens system.

Petitioner, duly represented by her nephew, George Luy filed a joint petition for the administration of the estate of Pastor Y. Lim before the RTC of Q.C. Private Respondents filed a motion for the lifting of lis pendens and motion for exclusion of certain properties from the estate of the decedent. The RTC granted private respondents' twin motions. Petitioner filed an amended petition and the RTC acted on it by reversing its previous order and directed the RD to reinstate the annotation of lis pendens. The probate court appointed petitioner as special administrator and denied private respondents' motion for exclusion. Private Respondent filed a special civil action for certiorari before the CA questioning such order of the probate court. The CA ruled in favor of the private respondents. Petitioner then filed a petition under Rule 45 of the Rules of Court before the SC assailing that the CA erred in reversing the orders ignoring the provisions of the law and preventing her from performing her duty as special administrator.

ISSUE:

Whether the corporation may be included in the inventory of estate of Pastor Y. Lim. (NO)

RULING:

Rudimentary is the rule that a corporation is invested by law with a personality distinct and separate from its stockholders or members. In the same vein, a corporation by legal fiction and convenience is an entity shielded by a protective mantle and imbued by law with a character alien to the persons comprising it. The corporate mask may be lifted and the corporate veil may be pierced when a corporation is just but the alter ego of a person or of another corporation. Where badges of fraud exist, where public convenience is defeated; where a wrong is sought to be justified thereby, the corporate fiction or the notion of legal entity should come to naught.

Further, the test in determining the applicability of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction is as follows: 1) Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own; (2) Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of plaintiffs legal right; and (3) The aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of. The absence of any of these elements prevents "piercing the corporate veil".

Mere ownership by a single stockholder or by another corporation of all or nearly all of the capital stock of a corporation is not of itself a sufficient reason for disregarding the fiction of separate corporate personalities.

Moreover, to disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrong-doing must be clearly and convincingly established. It cannot be presumed.

Granting arguendo that the Regional Trial Court in this case was not merely acting in a limited capacity as a probate court, petitioner nonetheless failed to adduce competent evidence that would have justified the court to impale the veil of corporate fiction.

Inasmuch as the real properties included in the inventory of the estate of the Late Pastor Y. Lim are in the possession of and are registered in the name of private respondent corporations, which under the law possess a personality separate and distinct from their stockholders, and in the absence of any cogency to shred the veil of corporate fiction, the presumption of conclusiveness of said titles in favor of private respondents should stand undisturbed.

- PNB vs. Ritratto Group, Inc., 362 SCRA 216 (2001)

PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK, petitioner, vs. RITRATTO GROUP INC., RIATTO INTERNATIONAL, INC., and DADASAN GENERAL MERCHANDISE, respondents.
G.R. No. 142616, FIRST DIVISION, July 31, 2001, KAPUNAN, J.

The general rule is that as a legal entity, a corporation has a personality distinct and separate from its individual stockholders or members, and is not affected by the personal rights, obligations and transactions of the latter*. The mere fact that a corporation owns all of the stocks of another corporation, taken alone is not sufficient to justify their being treated as one entity. If used to perform legitimate functions, a subsidiary's separate existence may be respected, and the liability of the parent corporation as well as the subsidiary will be confined to those arising in their respective business. The courts may in the exercise of judicial discretion step in to prevent the abuses of separate entity privilege and pierce the veil of corporate entity. Also, the ruling in Koppel is not applicable. In said case, this Court disregarded the separate existence of the parent and the subsidiary on the ground that the latter was formed merely for the purpose of evading the payment of higher taxes. Here, respondents fail to show any cogent reason why the separate entities of the PNB and PNB-IFL should be disregarded.*

Aside from the fact that PNB-IFL is a wholly owned subsidiary of petitioner PNB, there is no showing of the indicative factors that the former corporation is a mere instrumentality of the latter are present. Neither is there a demonstration that any of the evils sought to be prevented by the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil exists. Inescapably, therefore, the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil based on the alter ego or instrumentality doctrine finds no application in the case at bar.

FACTS:

On May 29, 1996, PNB International Finance Ltd. (PNB-IFL) a subsidiary company of PNB, organized and doing business in Hong Kong, extended a letter of credit in favor of the respondents in the amount of US$300,000.00 secured by real estate mortgages constituted over four (4) parcels of land in Makati City. This credit facility was later increased. However, as of April 30, 1998, their outstanding obligations stood at US$1,497,274.70. Pursuant to the terms of the real estate mortgages, PNB-IFL, through its attorney-in-fact PNB, notified the respondents of the foreclosure of all the real estate mortgages and that the properties subject thereof were to be sold at a public auction. Respondents filed a complaint for injunction for which the petitioner opposed and filed a motion to dismiss on the grounds of failure to state a cause of action and the absence of any privity between the petitioner and respondents. Thereafter, petitioner filed a petition for certiorari and prohibition before the CA which was denied. Petitioner seeks recourse before the SC claiming that the complaint against it must be dismissed because it is not the real party in interest being a mere attorney-in-fact authorized to enforce an ancillary contract.

Respondents argue that even assuming arguendo that petitioner and PNB-IFL are two separate entities, petitioner is still the party-in-interest in the application for preliminary injunction because it is tasked to commit acts of foreclosing respondents' properties. Respondents maintain that the entire credit facility is void as it contains stipulations in violation of the principle of mutuality of contracts. In addition, respondents justified the act of the court a quo in applying the doctrine of "Piercing the Veil of Corporate Identity" by stating that petitioner is merely an alter ego or a business conduit of PNB-IFL.

ISSUE:

Whether Petitioner PNB is merely an alter ego of PNB-IFL justifying the application of the doctrine of "Piercing the Veil of Corporate Identity". (NO)

RULING:

The general rule is that as a legal entity, a corporation has a personality distinct and separate from its individual stockholders or members, and is not affected by the personal rights, obligations and transactions of the latter. The mere fact that a corporation owns all of the stocks of another corporation, taken alone is not sufficient to justify their being treated as one entity. If used to perform legitimate functions, a subsidiary's separate existence may be respected, and the liability of the parent corporation as well as the subsidiary will be confined to those arising in their respective business. The courts may in the exercise of judicial discretion step in to prevent the abuses of separate entity privilege and pierce the veil of corporate entity. Also, the ruling in Koppel is not applicable. In said case, this Court disregarded the separate existence of the parent and the subsidiary on the ground that the latter was formed merely for the purpose of evading the payment of higher taxes. Here, respondents fail to show any cogent reason why the separate entities of the PNB and PNB-IFL should be disregarded.

While there exists no definite test of general application in determining when a subsidiary may be treated as a mere instrumentality of the parent corporation, some factors have been identified that will justify the application of the treatment of the doctrine of the piercing of the corporate veil in the case of Garrett vs. Southern Railway Co. The Tennessee Supreme Court outlined the circumstances which may be useful in the determination of whether the subsidiary is but a mere instrumentality of the parent-corporation:

The Circumstance rendering the subsidiary an instrumentality. It is manifestly impossible to catalogue the infinite variations of fact that can arise but there are certain common circumstances which are important and which, if present in the proper combination, are controlling. These are as follows:

(a) The parent corporation owns all or most of the capital stock of the subsidiary.
(b) The parent and subsidiary corporations have common directors or officers.
(c) The parent corporation finances the subsidiary.
(d) The parent corporation subscribes to all the capital stock of the subsidiary or otherwise causes its incorporation.
(e) The subsidiary has grossly inadequate capital.
(f) The parent corporation pays the salaries and other expenses or losses of the subsidiary.
(g) The subsidiary has substantially no business except with the parent corporation or no assets except those conveyed to or by the parent corporation.
(h) In the papers of the parent corporation or in the statements of its officers, the subsidiary is described as a department or division of the parent corporation, or its business or financial responsibility is referred to as the parent corporation's own.
(i) The parent corporation uses the property of the subsidiary as its own.
(j) The directors or executives of the subsidiary do not act independently in the interest of the subsidiary but take their orders from the parent corporation.
(k) The formal legal requirements of the subsidiary are not observed.

Similarly, in this jurisdiction, we have held that the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil is an equitable doctrine developed to address situations where the separate corporate personality of a corporation is abused or used for wrongful purposes. The doctrine applies when the corporate fiction is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud or defend crime, or when it is made as a shield to confuse the legitimate issues, or where a corporation is the mere alter ego or business conduit of a person, or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation.

In Concept Builders, Inc. v. NLRC, we have laid the test in determining the applicability of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction, to wit:

1. Control, not mere majority or complete control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own.
2. Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and, unjust act in contravention of plaintiffs legal rights; and,
3. The aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of.

The absence of any one of these elements prevents "piercing the corporate veil." In applying the "instrumentality" or "alter ego" doctrine, the courts are concerned with reality and not form, with how the corporation operated and the individual defendant's relationship to the operation.

Aside from the fact that PNB-IFL is a wholly owned subsidiary of petitioner PNB, there is no showing of the indicative factors that the former corporation is a mere instrumentality of the latter are present. Neither is there a demonstration that any of the evils sought to be prevented by the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil exists. Inescapably, therefore, the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil based on the alter ego or instrumentality doctrine finds no application in the case at bar. In any case, the parent-subsidiary relationship between PNB and PNB-IFL is not the significant legal relationship involved in this case since the petitioner was not sued because it is the parent company of PNB-IFL. Rather, the petitioner was sued because it acted as an attorney-in-fact of PNB-IFL in initiating the foreclosure proceedings. A suit against an agent cannot without compelling reasons be considered a suit against the principal.

- Ricardo S. Silverio, Jr., Esses Development Corporation, and Tri-Star Farms, Inc. vs. Filipino Business Consultants, Inc., G.R. No. 143312, August 12, 2005)

RICARDO S. SILVERIO, JR., ESSES DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, and TRI-STAR FARMS, INC., Petitioners, v. FILIPINO BUSINESS CONSULTANTS, INC., Respondent.
G.R. NO. 143312, FIRST DIVISION, August 12, 2005, CARPIO, J.

A corporation is a juridical person distinct from the members composing it. Properties registered in the name of the corporation are owned by it as an entity separate and distinct from its members*. While shares of stock constitute personal property, they do not represent property of the corporation. The corporation has property of its own which consists chiefly of real estate. A share of stock only typifies an aliquot part of the corporation's property, or the right to share in its proceeds to that extent when distributed according to law and equity, but its holder is not the owner of any part of the capital of the corporation. Nor is he entitled to the possession of any definite portion of its property or assets. The stockholder is not a co-owner or tenant in common of the corporate property.*

Thus, FBCI's alleged controlling shareholdings in Esses and Tri-Star merely represent a proportionate or aliquot interest in the properties of the two corporations. Such controlling shareholdings do not vest FBCI with any legal right or title to any of Esses and Tri-Star's corporate properties. As a stockholder, FBCI has an interest in Esses and Tri-Star's corporate properties that is only equitable or beneficial in nature. Even assuming that FBCI is the controlling shareholder of Esses and Tri-Star, it does not legally make it the owner of the Calatagan Property, which is legally owned by Esses and Tri-Star as distinct juridical persons. As such, FBCI is not entitled to the possession of any definite portion of the Calatagan Property or any of Esses and Tri-Star's properties or assets. FBCI is not a co-owner or tenant in common of the Calatagan Property or any of Esses and Tri-Star's corporate properties.

FACTS:

The parties are wrangling over possession of a 62 hectare-land in Calatagan, Batangas ("Calatagan Property"). Silverio, Jr. is the President of Esses and Tri-Star. Esses and Tri-Star were in possession of the Calatagan Property and registered in the names of Esses and Tri-Star. On 22 September 1995, Esses and Tri-Star executed a Deed of Sale with Assumption of Mortgage in favor of FBCI. Esses and Tri-Star failed to redeem the Calatagan Property.

FBCI filed a Petition for Consolidation of Title of the Calatagan Property with the RTC Balayan. The RTC Balayan issued a writ of possession in FBCI's favor. FBCI then entered the Calatagan Property. When Silverio, Jr., Esses and Tri-Star learned of the judgment by default and writ of possession, they filed a petition for relief from judgment and the recall of the writ of possession. The RTC Balayan nullified and set aside the judgment by default and the writ of possession. The RTC Balayan found that the summons and the complaint were not served on Silverio, Jr., Esses and TriStar. The RTC Balayan denied FBCI's motion for reconsideration of the order. FBCI then filed a petition for certiorari with the Court of Appeals questioning the RTC Balayan's 28 December 1998 Order. On 28 April 2000, the Court of Appeals denied FBCI's petition. The Court of Appeals also denied FBCI's motion for reconsideration. On 13 August 2001, the Supreme Court denied FBCI's petition. On 14 April 1999, the RTC Balayan modified its 28 December 1998 Order by upholding FBCI's possession of the Calatagan Property. The RTC Balayan ruled that FBCI could not be deprived of possession of the Calatagan Property because FBCI made substantial improvements on it. Possession could revert to Silverio, Jr., Esses and Tri-Star only if they reimburse FBCI.

Silverio, Jr., Esses and Tri-Star moved for the partial reconsideration of the 14 April 1999 Order.

On 9 November 1999, the RTC Balayan reversed its 14 April 1999 Order by holding that Silverio, Jr., Esses and Tri-Star had no duty to reimburse FBCI. The 9 November 1999 Order also restored possession of the Calatagan Property to Silverio, Jr., Esses and Tri-Star pursuant to Rule 39, Section 5 of the 1997 Rules of Civil Procedure. This provision provides for restitution in case of reversal of an executed judgment. On 7 January 2000, the RTC Balayan denied FBCI's motion for reconsideration. On 8 May 2000, the RTC Balayan issued the writ of possession to Silverio, Jr., Esses and Tri-Star.

FBCI filed with the RTC Balayan a Manifestation and Motion to Recall Writ of Possession on the ground that the decision of the Court of Appeals in CA-G.R. SP No. 56924 was not yet final and FBCI's motion for reconsideration was still pending. On 23 May 2000, FBCI filed with the RTC Balayan an Urgent Ex-Parte Motion to Suspend Enforcement of Writ of Possession. FBCI pointed out that it is now the new owner of Esses and Tri-Star having purchased the "substantial and controlling shares of stocks" of the two corporations.

On the 26 May 2000 hearing, FBCI reiterated its claim of a supervening event, its ownership of Esses and Tri-Star. FBCI informed the RTC Balayan that a new board of directors for Esses and Tri-Star had been convened following the resignation of the members of the board of directors.

The previous actions of the former board of directors have been abandoned and the services of Atty. Vicente B. Chuidian, the counsel of petitioners Silverio, Jr., Esses and Tri-Star, have been terminated. On the same day, the RTC Balayan issued the order suspending the writ of possession it had earlier issued to Silverio, Jr., Esses and Tri-Star.

ISSUE:

Whether FBCI may take possession of the Calatagan property after purchasing substantial and controlling shakes of stocks of Esses and TriStar. (NO)

RULING:

FBCI's acquisition of the "substantial and controlling shares of stocks" of Esses and Tri-Star does not create a substantial change in the rights or relations of the parties that would entitle FBCI to possession of the Calatagan Property, a corporate property of Esses and Tri-Star. Esses and TriStar, just like FBCI, are corporations. A corporation has a personality distinct from that of its stockholders. As early as the case of Stockholders of F. Guanzon and Sons, Inc. v. Register of Deeds of Manila, the Court explained the principle of separate juridical personality in this wise:

> A corporation is a juridical person distinct from the members composing it. Properties registered in the name of the corporation are owned by it as an entity separate and distinct from its members. While shares of stock constitute personal property, they do not represent property of the corporation. The corporation has property of its own which consists chiefly of real estate. A share of stock only typifies an aliquot part of the corporation's property, or the right to share in its proceeds to that extent when distributed according to law and equity, but its holder is not the owner of any part of the capital of the corporation. Nor is he entitled to the possession of any definite portion of its property or assets. The stockholder is not a co-owner or tenant in common of the corporate property.

Thus, FBCI's alleged controlling shareholdings in Esses and Tri-Star merely represent a proportionate or aliquot interest in the properties of the two corporations. Such controlling shareholdings do not vest FBCI with any legal right or title to any of Esses and Tri-Star's corporate properties. As a stockholder, FBCI has an interest in Esses and Tri-Star's corporate properties that is only equitable or beneficial in nature. Even assuming that FBCI is the controlling shareholder of Esses and Tri-Star, it does not legally make it the owner of the Calatagan Property, which is legally owned by Esses and Tri-Star as distinct juridical persons. As such, FBCI is not entitled to the possession of any definite portion of the Calatagan Property or any of Esses and Tri-Star's properties or assets. FBCI is not a co-owner or tenant in common of the Calatagan Property or any of Esses and Tri-Star's corporate properties.

We see no reason why the execution of the writ of possession has been long delayed. Possession of the Calatagan Property must be restored to Esses and Tri-Star through their representative, Silverio, Jr. There is no proof on record that Silverio, Jr. has ceased to be the representative of Esses and Tri-Star in this case.

- Jardine Davis, Inc. vs. JRB Realty, Inc., 463 SCRA 555 (2005)

JARDINE DAVIES, INC., Petitioners, v. JRB REALTY, INC., Respondent.
G.R. NO. 151438, SECOND DIVISION, July 15, 2005, CALLEJO, SR., J.

It is an elementary and fundamental principle of corporation law that a corporation is an artificial being invested by law with a personality separate and distinct from its stockholders and from other corporations to which it may be connected*. While a corporation is allowed to exist solely for a lawful purpose, the law will regard it as an association of persons or in case of two corporations, merge them into one, when this corporate legal entity is used as a cloak for fraud or illegality. This is the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction which applies only when such corporate fiction is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud or defend crime. The rationale behind piercing a corporation's identity is to remove the barrier between the corporation from the persons comprising it to thwart the fraudulent and illegal schemes of those who use the corporate personality as a shield for undertaking certain proscribed activities.*

While it is true that Aircon is a subsidiary of the petitioner, it does not necessarily follow that Aircon's corporate legal existence can just be disregarded. In Velarde v. Lopez, Inc., the Court categorically held that a subsidiary has an independent and separate juridical personality, distinct from that of its parent company; hence, any claim or suit against the latter does not bind the former, and vice versa. In applying the doctrine, the following requisites must be established: (1) control, not merely majority or complete stock control; (2) such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest acts in contravention of plaintiff's legal rights; and (3) the aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of.

FACTS:

In 1979-1980, respondent JRB Realty, Inc. built a nine-storey building, named Blanco Center. An air conditioning system was needed for the Blanco Law Firm housed at the second floor of the building. On March 13, 1980, the respondent's Executive Vice-President, Jose R. Blanco, accepted the contract quotation of Mr. A.G. Morrison, President of Aircon and Refrigeration Industries, Inc. (Aircon), for two (2) sets of Fedders Adaptomatic 30,000 kcal air conditioning equipment with a net total selling price of P99,586.00. Thereafter, two (2) brand new packaged air conditioners of 10 tons capacity each to deliver 30,000 kcal or 120,000 were installed by Aircon. When the units with rotary compressors were installed, they could not deliver the desired cooling temperature. Despite several adjustments and corrective measures, the respondent conceded that Fedders Air Conditioning USA's technology for rotary compressors for big capacity conditioners like those installed at the Blanco Center had not yet been perfected. The parties thereby agreed to replace the units with reciprocating/semi-hermetic compressors instead. In a Letter dated March 26, 1981, Aircon stated that it would be replacing the units currently installed with new ones using rotary compressors, at the earliest possible time. Regrettably, however, it could not specify a date when delivery could be effected.

TempControl Systems, Inc. (a subsidiary of Aircon until 1987) undertook the maintenance of the units, inclusive of parts and services. In October 1987, the respondent learned, through newspaper ads, that Maxim Industrial and Merchandising Corporation (Maxim, for short) was the new and exclusive licensee of Fedders Air Conditioning USA in the Philippines for the manufacture, distribution, sale, installation and maintenance of Fedders air conditioners. The respondent requested that Maxim honor the obligation of Aircon, but the latter refused. Considering that the ten-year period of prescription was fast approaching, to expire on March 13, 1990, the respondent then instituted, on January 29, 1990, an action for specific performance with damages against Aircon & Refrigeration Industries, Inc., Fedders Air Conditioning USA, Inc., Maxim Industrial & Merchandising Corporation and petitioner Jardine Davies, Inc. The latter was impleaded as defendant, considering that Aircon was a subsidiary of the petitioner.

ISSUE:

Whether a suit can be brought against petitioner considering that Aircon was its subsidiary. (NO)

RULING:

It is an elementary and fundamental principle of corporation law that a corporation is an artificial being invested by law with a personality separate and distinct from its stockholders and from other corporations to which it may be connected. While a corporation is allowed to exist solely for a lawful purpose, the law will regard it as an association of persons or in case of two corporations, merge them into one, when this corporate legal entity is used as a cloak for fraud or illegality. This is the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction which applies only when such corporate fiction is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud or defend crime. The rationale behind piercing a corporation's identity is to remove the barrier between the corporation from the persons comprising it to thwart the fraudulent and illegal schemes of those who use the corporate personality as a shield for undertaking certain proscribed activities.

While it is true that Aircon is a subsidiary of the petitioner, it does not necessarily follow that Aircon's corporate legal existence can just be disregarded. In Velarde v. Lopez, Inc., the Court categorically held that a subsidiary has an independent and separate juridical personality, distinct from that of its parent company; hence, any claim or suit against the latter does not bind the former, and vice versa. In applying the doctrine, the following requisites must be established: (1) control, not merely majority or complete stock control; (2) such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest acts in contravention of plaintiff's legal rights; and (3) the aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of.

The records bear out that Aircon is a subsidiary of the petitioner only because the latter acquired Aircon's majority of capital stock. It, however, does not exercise complete control over Aircon; nowhere can it be gathered that the petitioner manages the business affairs of Aircon. Indeed, no management agreement exists between the petitioner and Aircon, and the latter is an entirely different entity from the petitioner.

Jardine Davies, Inc., incorporated as early as June 28, 1946, is primarily a financial and trading company. Its Articles of Incorporation states among many others that the purposes for which the said corporation was formed, are as follows:

> (a) To carry on the business of merchants, commission merchants, brokers, factors, manufacturers, and agents;
>
> (b) Upon complying with the requirements of law applicable thereto, to act as agents of companies and underwriters doing and engaging in any and all kinds of insurance business.

On the other hand, Aircon, incorporated on December 27, 1952, is a manufacturing firm. Its Articles of Incorporation states that its purpose is mainly -

To carry on the business of manufacturers of commercial and household appliances and accessories of any form, particularly to manufacture, purchase, sell or deal in air conditioning and refrigeration products of every class and description as well as accessories and parts thereof, or other kindred articles; and to erect, or buy, lease, manage, or otherwise acquire manufactories, warehouses, and depots for manufacturing, assemblage, repair and storing, buying, selling, and dealing in the aforesaid appliances, accessories and products.

The existence of interlocking directors, corporate officers and shareholders, which the respondent court considered, is not enough justification to pierce the veil of corporate fiction, in the absence of fraud or other public policy considerations. But even when there is dominance over the affairs of the subsidiary, the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction applies only when such fiction is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud or defend crime. To warrant resort to this extraordinary remedy, there must be proof that the corporation is being used as a cloak or cover for fraud or illegality, or to work injustice. Any piercing of the corporate veil has to be done with caution. The wrongdoing must be clearly and convincingly established. It cannot just be presumed.

In the instant case, there is no evidence that Aircon was formed or utilized with the intention of defrauding its creditors or evading its contracts and obligations. There was nothing fraudulent in the acts of Aircon in this case. Aircon, as a manufacturing firm of air conditioners, complied with its obligation of providing two air conditioning units for the second floor of the Blanco Center in good faith, pursuant to its contract with the respondent. Unfortunately, the performance of the air conditioning units did not satisfy the respondent despite several adjustments and corrective measures. In a Letter dated October 22, 1980, the respondent even conceded that Fedders Air Conditioning USA has not yet perhaps perfected its technology of rotary compressors, and agreed to change the compressors with the semi-hermetic type. Thus, Aircon substituted the units with serviceable ones which delivered the cooling temperature needed for the law office. After enjoying ten (10) years of its cooling power, respondent cannot now complain about the performance of these units, nor can it demand a replacement thereof.

- China Banking Corporation vs. Dyne-Sem Electronics Corporation 494 SCRA 493 (2006)

CHINA BANKING CORPORATION, Petitioner, v. DYNE-SEM ELECTRONICS CORPORATION, Respondent.

G.R. NO. 149237, SECOND DIVISION, June 11, 2006, CORONA, J.

The general rule is that a corporation has a personality separate and distinct from that of its stockholders and other corporations to which it may be connected. This is a fiction created by law for convenience and to prevent injustice.

The veil of separate corporate personality may be lifted when such personality is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud or defend crime; or used as a shield to confuse the legitimate issues; or when the corporation is merely an adjunct, a business conduit or an alter ego of another corporation or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation; or when the corporation is used as a cloak or cover for fraud or illegality, or to work injustice, or where necessary to achieve equity or for the protection of the creditors. In such cases, the corporation will be considered as a mere association of persons. The liability will directly attach to the stockholders or to the other corporation.

To disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrongdoing must be proven clearly and convincingly.*

In this case, petitioner failed to prove that Dyne-Sem was organized and controlled, and its affairs conducted, in a manner that made it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of Dynetics, or that it was established to defraud Dynetics' creditors, including petitioner.

FACTS:

On June 19 and 26, 1985, Dynetics, Inc. (Dynetics) and Elpidio O. Lim borrowed a total of P8,939,000 from petitioner China Banking Corporation. The loan was evidenced by six promissory notes.

The borrowers failed to pay when the obligations became due. Petitioner consequently instituted a complaint for sum of money on June 25, 1987 against them. The complaint sought payment of the unpaid promissory notes plus interest and penalties.

Summons was not served on Dynetics, however, because it had already closed down. Lim, on the other hand, filed his answer on December 15, 1987 denying that "he promised to pay [the obligations] jointly and severally to [petitioner]."

On September 23, 1988, an amended complaint was filed by petitioner impleading respondent Dyne-Sem Electronics Corporation (Dyne-Sem) and its stockholders Vicente Chuidian, Antonio Garcia and Jacob Ratinoff. According to petitioner, respondent was formed and organized to be Dynetics' alter ego as established by the following circumstances:

> Dynetics, Inc. and respondent are both engaged in the same line of business of manufacturing, producing, assembling, processing, importing, exporting, buying, distributing, marketing and testing integrated circuits and semiconductor devices;
>
> The principal office and factory site of Dynetics, Inc. located at Avocado Road, FTI Complex, Taguig, Metro Manila, were used by respondent as its principal office and factory site;
>
> Respondent acquired some of the machineries and equipment of Dynetics, Inc. from banks which acquired the same through foreclosure;
>
> Respondent retained some of the officers of Dynetics, Inc.

ISSUE:

Whether the veil of corporate fiction should be pierced. (NO)

RULING:

The general rule is that a corporation has a personality separate and distinct from that of its stockholders and other corporations to which it may be connected. This is a fiction created by law for convenience and to prevent injustice.

Nevertheless, being a mere fiction of law, peculiar situations or valid grounds may exist to warrant the disregard of its independent being and the piercing of the corporate veil. In Martinez v. Court of Appeals, we held:

> The veil of separate corporate personality may be lifted when such personality is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud or defend crime; or used as a shield to confuse the legitimate issues; or when the corporation is merely an adjunct, a business conduit or an alter ego of another corporation or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation; or when the corporation is used as a cloak or cover for fraud or illegality, or to work injustice, or where necessary to achieve equity or for the protection of the creditors. In such cases, the corporation will be considered as a mere association of persons. The liability will directly attach to the stockholders or to the other corporation.

To disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrongdoing must be proven clearly and convincingly.

In this case, petitioner failed to prove that Dyne-Sem was organized and controlled, and its affairs conducted, in a manner that made it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of Dynetics, or that it was established to defraud Dynetics' creditors, including petitioner.

The similarity of business of the two corporations did not warrant a conclusion that respondent was but a conduit of Dynetics. As we held in Umali v. Court of Appeals, "the mere fact that the businesses of two or more corporations are interrelated is not a justification for disregarding their separate personalities, absent sufficient showing that the corporate entity was purposely used as a shield to defraud creditors and third persons of their rights."

Likewise, respondent's acquisition of some of the machineries and equipment of Dynetics was not proof that respondent was formed to defraud petitioner. As the Court of Appeals found, no merger took place between Dynetics and respondent Dyne-Sem. What took place was a sale of the assets of the former to the latter. Merger is legally distinct from a sale of assets. Thus, where one corporation sells or otherwise transfers all its assets to another corporation for value, the latter is not, by that fact alone, liable for the debts and liabilities of the transferor.

Petitioner itself admits that respondent acquired the machineries and equipment not directly from Dynetics but from the various corporations which successfully bidded for them in an auction sale. The contracts of sale executed between the winning bidders and respondent showed that the assets were sold for considerable amounts. The Court of Appeals thus correctly ruled that the assets were not "diverted" to respondent as an alter ego of Dynetics. The machineries and equipment were transferred and disposed of by the winning bidders in their capacity as owners. The sales were therefore valid and the transfers of the properties to respondent legal and not in any way in contravention of petitioner's rights as Dynetics' creditor.

Finally, it may be true that respondent later hired Dynetics' former Vice-President Luvinia Maglaya and Assistant Corporate Counsel Virgilio Gesmundo. From this, however, we cannot conclude that respondent was an alter ego of Dynetics. In fact, even the overlapping of incorporators and stockholders of two or more corporations will not necessarily lead to such inference and justify the piercing of the veil of corporate fiction. Much more has to be proven.

- Spouses Ramon Nisce vs. Equitable PCI Bank 516 SCRA 231 (2007)

SPOUSES RAMON M. NISCE and A. NATIVIDAD PARAS-NISCE, Petitioners, v. EQUITABLE PCI BANK, INC., Respondent.
G.R. NO. 167434, THIRD DIVISION, February 19, 2007, CALLEJO, SR., J

Admittedly, PCI Capital is a subsidiary of respondent Bank. Even then, PCI Capital [PCI Express Padala (HK) Ltd.] has an independent and separate juridical personality from that of the respondent Bank, its parent company; hence, any claim against the subsidiary is not a claim against the parent company and vice versa. The evidence on record shows that PCIB, which had been merged with Equitable Bank, owns almost all of the stocks of PCI Capital. However, the fact that a corporation owns all of the stocks of another corporation, taken alone, is not sufficient to justify their being treated as one entity*. If used to perform legitimate functions, a subsidiary's separate existence shall be respected, and the liability of the parent corporation, as well as the subsidiary shall be confined to those arising in their respective business.* A corporation has a separate personality distinct from its stockholders and from other corporations to which it may be conducted*. This separate and distinct personality of a corporation is a fiction created by law for convenience and to prevent injustice.*

Petitioners failed to adduce sufficient evidence to justify the piercing of the veil of corporate entity and render respondent Bank liable for the US$20,000.00 deposit of petitioner Natividad Nisce as debtor.

FACTS:

Spouses Ramon and Natividad Nisce contracted loans evidenced by promissory notes amounting to P34, 087,725.76 with Equitable PCI Bank, secured by a real estate mortgage of the Petitioners land. Having defaulted, respondents as creditor-mortgagee filed a petition for extrajudicial foreclosure. Petitioner alleged, among others, that the bank should have set off their debt with their dollar account which they maintain with PCI Capital Asia Ltd. (Hong Kong), a subsidiary of Equitable. The Bank, for its part, contends that although the spouses' debt was restructured, they nevertheless failed to pay. Moreover, it alleged that there cannot be legal compensation because PCI Capital had a separate and distinct personality from the PCIB, and a claim against the former cannot be made against the latter.

On November 26, 2002, Equitable PCI Bank (Bank) as creditor-mortgagee filed a petition for extrajudicial foreclosure before the Office of the Clerk of Court as Ex-Officio Sheriff of the Regional Trial Court (RTC) of Makati City.

The Nisce spouses filed before the RTC of Makati City a complaint for "nullity of the Suretyship Agreement, damages and legal compensation" with prayer for injunctive relief against the Bank and the Ex-Officio Sheriff. They had requested the bank (through their lawyer-son Atty. Rosanno P. Nisce) to set off the peso equivalent of their obligation against their US dollar account with PCI Capital Asia Limited (Hong Kong), a subsidiary of the Bank, the Bank accepted their offer and requested for an estimate of the balance of their account; they complied with the Bank's request and in a letter dated February 11, 2002, informed it that the estimated balance of their account as of December 1991 (including the 11.875% per annum interest) was US$51,000.42, and that as of December 2002, Natividad's US dollar deposit with it amounted to at least ₱9,000,000.00; they were surprised when they received a letter from the Bank demanding payment of their loan account, and later a petition for extrajudicial foreclosure.

In its Answer to the complaint, the Bank alleged that the spouses had no cause of action for legal compensation since PCI Capital was a different corporation with a separate and distinct personality; if at all, offsetting may occur only with respect to the spouses' US$500.00 deposit account in its Paseo de Roxas branch.

On March 24, 2003, the RTC issued an Order47 granting the spouses Nisce's plea for a writ of preliminary injunction on a bond of ₱10,000,000.00. The Bank opted not to file a motion for reconsideration of the order, and instead assailed the trial court's order before the CA via petition for certiorari under Rule 65 of the Rules of Court. The CA rendered judgment granting the petition and nullifying the assailed Order of the RTC.

ISSUE:

Whether the Spouses Nisce may set off their obligation with Equitable PCI bank with their foreign deposit from PCI Capital Asia Limited being a subsidiary of Equitable. (NO)

RULING:

Article 1980 of the New Civil Code provides that fixed, savings and current deposits of money in banks and similar institutions shall be governed by the provisions concerning simple loans. Under Article 1953, of the same Code, a person who secures a loan of money or any other fungible thing acquires the ownership thereof, and is bound to pay the creditor an equal amount of the same kind and quality. The relationship of the depositors and the Bank or similar institution is that of creditor-debtor. Such deposit may be setoff against the obligation of the depositor with the bank or similar institution.

When petitioner Natividad Nisce deposited her US$20,500.00 with the PCIB on July 19, 1984, PCIB became the debtor of petitioner. However, when upon petitioner's request, the amount of US$20,000.00 was transferred to PCI Capital, PCI Capital, in turn, became the debtor of Natividad Nisce. Indeed, a certificate of deposit is a written acknowledgment by a bank or borrower of the receipt of a sum of money or deposit which the Bank or borrower promises to pay to the depositor, to the order of the depositor; or to some other person; or to his order whereby the relation of debtor and creditor between the bank and the depositor is created. The issuance of a certificate of deposit in exchange for currency creates a debtor-creditor relationship.

Admittedly, PCI Capital is a subsidiary of respondent Bank. Even then, PCI Capital [PCI Express Padala (HK) Ltd.] has an independent and separate juridical personality from that of the respondent Bank, its parent company; hence, any claim against the subsidiary is not a claim against the parent company and vice versa. The evidence on record shows that PCIB, which had been merged with Equitable Bank, owns almost all of the stocks of PCI Capital. However, the fact that a corporation owns all of the stocks of another corporation, taken alone, is not sufficient to justify their being treated as one entity. If used to perform legitimate functions, a subsidiary's separate existence shall be respected, and the liability of the parent corporation, as well as the subsidiary shall be confined to those arising in their respective business. A corporation has a separate personality distinct from its stockholders and from other corporations to which it may be conducted. This separate and distinct personality of a corporation is a fiction created by law for convenience and to prevent injustice.

This Court, in Martinez v. Court of Appeals held that, being a mere fiction of law, peculiar situations or valid grounds can exist to warrant, albeit sparingly, the disregard of its independent being and the piercing of the corporate veil. The veil of separate corporate personality may be lifted when, inter alia, the corporation is merely an adjunct, a business conduit or an alter ego of another corporation or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation; or when the corporation is used as a cloak or cover for fraud or illegality; or to work injustice; or where necessary to achieve equity or for the protection of the creditors. In those cases where valid grounds exist for piercing the veil of corporate entity, the corporation will be considered as a mere association of persons. The liability will directly attach to them.

The Court likewise declared in the same case that the test in determining the application of the instrumentality or alter ego doctrine is as follows:

> 1. Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete dominion, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;
>
> 2. Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of plaintiff's legal rights; and
>
> 3. The aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complaint of.

The Court emphasized that the absence of any one of these elements prevents "piercing the corporate veil." In applying the "instrumentality" or "alter ego" doctrine, the courts are concerned with reality and not form, with how the corporation operated and the individual defendant's relationship to that operation.

Petitioners failed to adduce sufficient evidence to justify the piercing of the veil of corporate entity and render respondent Bank liable for the US$20,000.00 deposit of petitioner Natividad Nisce as debtor.

On hindsight, petitioners could have spared themselves the expenses and tribulation of a litigation had they just withdrawn their deposit from the PCI Capital and remitted the same to respondent.
However, petitioner insisted on their contention of setoff

- Ryuichi Yamamoto vs. Nishino Leather Industries, Inc. and Ikuo Nishino 551 SCRA 447 (2008)

RYUICHI YAMAMOTO, Petitioner, v. NISHINO LEATHER INDUSTRIES, INC. and IKUO NISHINO, Respondents.

G.R. NO. 150283, SECOND DIVISION, April 16, 2008, CARPIO MORALES, J.

While the veil of separate corporate personality may be pierced when the corporation is merely an adjunct, a business conduit, or alter ego of a person, the mere ownership by a single stockholder of even all or nearly all of the capital stocks of a corporation is not by itself a sufficient ground to disregard the separate corporate personality*.*

The elements determinative of the applicability of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction follow:

"1. Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;

2. Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of the plaintiff's legal rights;

3. The aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of.

The absence of any one of these elements prevents "piercing the corporate veil." In applying the 'instrumentality' or 'alter ego' doctrine, the courts are concerned with reality and not form, with how the corporation operated and the individual defendant's relationship to that operation."

In relation to the second element, to disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrongdoing or unjust act in contravention of a plaintiff's legal rights must be clearly and convincingly established; it cannot be presumed. Without a demonstration that any of the evils sought to be prevented by the doctrine is present, it does not apply.

In the case at bar, there is no showing that Nishino used the separate personality of NLII to unjustly act or do wrong to Yamamoto in contravention of his legal rights.

FACTS:

In 1983, petitioner, Ryuichi Yamamoto (Yamamoto), a Japanese national, organized under Philippine laws Wako Enterprises Manila, Incorporated (WAKO), a corporation engaged principally in leather tanning, now known as Nishino Leather Industries, Inc. (NLII), one of herein respondents. In 1987, Yamamoto and the other respondent, Ikuo Nishino (Nishino), also a Japanese national, forged a Memorandum of Agreement under which they agreed to enter into a joint venture wherein Nishino would acquire such number of shares of stock equivalent to 70% of the authorized capital stock of WAKO. Eventually, Nishino and his brother Yoshinobu Nishino (Yoshinobu) acquired more than 70% of the authorized capital stock of WAKO, reducing Yamamoto's investment therein to, by his claim, 10%, less than 10% according to Nishino. The corporate name of WAKO was later changed to, as reflected earlier, its current name NLII. Negotiations subsequently ensued in light of a planned takeover of NLII by Nishino who would buy-out the shares of stock of Yamamoto. In the course of the negotiations, Yoshinobu and Nishinos counsel Atty. Emmanuel G. Doce (Atty. Doce) advised Yamamoto by letter dated October 30, 1991, the pertinent portions of which follow:

"Hereunder is a simple memorandum of the subject matters discussed with me by Mr. Yoshinobu Nishino yesterday, October 29th, based on the letter of Mr. Ikuo Nishino from Japan, and which I am now transmitting to you. Machinery and Equipment:

The following machinery/equipment have been contributed by you to the company:
Splitting machine - 1 unit
Samming machine - 1 unit
Forklift - 1 unit
Drums - 4 units
Toggling machine - 2 units

Regarding the above machines, you may take them out with you (for your own use and sale) if you want, provided, the value of such machines is deducted from your and Wakos capital contributions, which will be paid to you.

On the basis of such letter, Yamamoto attempted to recover the machineries and equipment which were, by Yamamoto's admission, part of his investment in the corporation, but he was frustrated by respondents, drawing Yamamoto to file on January 15, 1992 before the Regional Trial Court (RTC) of Makati a complaint against them for replevin.

ISSUE: Whether Yamamoto may pierce the veil of corporate fiction and retrieve the machineries. (NO)

RULING:

Indeed, without a Board Resolution authorizing respondent Nishino to act for and in behalf of the corporation, he cannot bind the latter. Under the Corporation Law, unless otherwise provided, corporate powers are exercised by the Board of Directors.

Urging this Court to pierce the veil of corporate fiction, Yamamoto argues, viz:

> During the negotiations, the issue as to the ownership of the Machineries never came up. Neither did the issue on the proper procedure to be taken to execute the complete take-over of the Company come up since Ikuo, Yoshinobu, and Yamamoto were the owners thereof, the presence of other stockholders being only for the purpose of complying with the minimum requirements of the law.
>
> What course of action the Company decides to do or not to do depends not on the "other members of the Board of Directors". It depends on what Ikuo and Yoshinobu decide. The Company is but a mere instrumentality of Ikuo [and] Yoshinobu.
>
> x x x
>
> x x x The Company hardly holds board meetings. It has an inactive board, the directors are directors in name only and are there to do the bidding of the Nish[i]nos, nothing more. Its minutes are paper minutes. x x x
>
> x x x
>
> The fact that the parties started at a 70-30 ratio and Yamamoto's percentage declined to 10% does not mean the 20% went to others. x x x The 20% went to no one else but Ikuo himself. x > x x Yoshinobu is the younger brother of Ikuo and has no say at all in the business. Only Ikuo makes the decisions. There were, therefore, no other members of the Board who have not given their approval.

While the veil of separate corporate personality may be pierced when the corporation is merely an adjunct, a business conduit, or alter ego of a person, the mere ownership by a single stockholder of even all or nearly all of the capital stocks of a corporation is not by itself a sufficient ground to disregard the separate corporate personality.

The elements determinative of the applicability of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction follow:

> "1. Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;
>
> 2. Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of the plaintiff's legal rights;
>
> 3. The aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of.
>
> The absence of any one of these elements prevents "piercing the corporate veil." In applying the 'instrumentality' or 'alter ego' doctrine, the courts are concerned with reality and not form, with how the corporation operated and the individual defendant's relationship to that operation."

In relation to the second element, to disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrongdoing or unjust act in contravention of a plaintiff's legal rights must be clearly and convincingly established; it cannot be presumed. Without a demonstration that any of the evils sought to be prevented by the doctrine is present, it does not apply.

In the case at bar, there is no showing that Nishino used the separate personality of NLII to unjustly act or do wrong to Yamamoto in contravention of his legal rights.

Yamamoto argues, in another vein, that promissory estoppel lies against respondents, thus:

> Under the doctrine of promissory estoppel, x x x estoppel may arise from the making of a promise, even though without consideration, if it was intended that the promise should be relied upon and in fact it was relied upon, and if a refusal to enforce it would be virtually to sanction the perpetration of fraud or would result in other injustice.
>
> x x x Ikuo and Yoshinobu wanted Yamamoto out of the Company. For this purpose negotiations were had between the parties. Having expressly given Yamamoto, through the Letter and through a subsequent meeting at the Manila Peninsula where Ikuo himself confirmed that Yamamoto may take out the Machinery from the Company anytime, > respondents should not be allowed to turn around and do the exact opposite of what they have represented they will do.

>
> In paragraph twelve (12) of the Letter, Yamamoto was expressly advised that he could take out the Machinery if he wanted to so, provided that the value of said machines would be deducted from his capital contribution x x x.
>
> x x x
>
> Respondents cannot now argue that they did not intend for Yamamoto to rely upon the Letter. That was the purpose of the Letter to begin with. Petitioner[s] in fact, relied upon said Letter and such reliance was further strengthened during their meeting at the Manila Peninsula.
>
> To sanction respondents' attempt to evade their obligation would be to sanction the perpetration of fraud and injustice against petitioner.

It bears noting, however, that the aforementioned paragraph 12 of the letter is followed by a request for Yamamoto to give his "comments on all the above, soonest."

What was thus proffered to Yamamoto was not a promise, but a mere offer, subject to his acceptance. Without acceptance, a mere offer produces no obligation.

Thus, under Article 1181 of the Civil Code, "[i]n conditional obligations, the acquisition of rights, as well as the extinguishment or loss of those already acquired, shall depend upon the happening of the event which constitutes the condition." In the case at bar, there is no showing of compliance with the condition for allowing Yamamoto to take the machineries and equipment, namely, his agreement to the deduction of their value from his capital contribution due him in the buy-out of his interests in NLII. Yamamoto's allegation that he agreed to the condition remained just that, no proof thereof having been presented.

The machineries and equipment, which comprised Yamamoto's investment in NLII, thus remained part of the capital property of the corporation.

It is settled that the property of a corporation is not the property of its stockholders or members. Under the trust fund doctrine, the capital stock, property, and other assets of a corporation are regarded as equity in trust for the payment of corporate creditors which are preferred over the stockholders in the distribution of corporate assets. The distribution of corporate assets and property cannot be made to depend on the whims and caprices of the stockholders, officers, or directors of the corporation unless the indispensable conditions and procedures for the protection of corporate creditors are followed.

- Virgilio S. Delima vs. Susan Mercaida Gois 554 SCRA 731 (2008)

VIRGILIO S. DELIMA, Petitioner, v. SUSAN MERCAIDA GOIS, Respondent.
G.R. NO. 178352, THIRD DIVISION, June 17, 2008, YNARES-SANTIAGO, J

A corporation has a personality distinct and separate from its individual stockholders or members and from that of its officers who manage and run its affairs. The rule is that obligations incurred by the corporation, acting through its directors, officers and employees, are its sole liabilities. Thus, property belonging to a corporation cannot be attached to satisfy the debt of a stockholder and vice versa, the latter having only an indirect interest in the assets and business of the former.*

Since the Decision of the Labor Arbiter dated April 29, 2005 directed only Golden to pay the petitioner the sum of P115,561.05 and the same was not joint and solidary obligation with Gois, then the latter could not be held personally liable since Golden has a separate and distinct personality of its own. It remains undisputed that the subject vehicle was owned by Gois, hence it should not be attached to answer for the liabilities of the corporation. Unless they have exceeded their authority, corporate officers are, as a general rule, not personally liable for their official acts, because a corporation, by legal fiction, has a personality separate and distinct from its officers, stockholders and members. No evidence was presented to show that the termination of the petitioner was done with malice or in bad faith for it to hold the corporate officers, such as Gois, solidarily liable with the corporation.

FACTS:

A case for illegal dismissal was filed by petitioner Virgilio S. Delima against Golden Union Aquamarine Corporation (Golden), Prospero Gois and herein respondent Susan Mercaida Gois before the Regional Arbitration Branch No. VIII of the National Labor Relations Commission on October 29, 2004, docketed as NLRC RAB VIII Case No. 10-0231-04.

On April 29, 2005, Labor Arbiter Philip B. Montaces rendered a decision, ordering respondent Golden Union Aquamarine Corporation to pay complainant the sum of P115,561.05.

Golden failed to appeal the aforesaid decision; hence, it became final and executory. A writ of execution was issued and an Isuzu Jeep with plate number PGE-531 was attached.

Thereafter, respondent Gois filed an Affidavit of Third Party Claim claiming that the attachment of the vehicle was irregular because said vehicle was registered in her name and not Golden's; and that she was not a party to the illegal dismissal case filed by Delima against Golden.

In an Order dated December 29, 2005, the Labor Arbiter denied respondent's third-party claim on grounds that respondent was named in the complaint as one of the respondents; that summons were served upon her and Prospero Gois; that both verified Golden's Position Paper and alleged therein that they are the respondents; and that respondent is one of the incorporators/officers of the corporation.

ISSUE:

Whether Gois can be held liable for the decision of the Labor Arbiter against Golden. (NO)

RULING:

A corporation has a personality distinct and separate from its individual stockholders or members and from that of its officers who manage and run its affairs. The rule is that obligations incurred by the corporation, acting through its directors, officers and employees, are its sole liabilities. Thus, property belonging to a corporation cannot be attached to satisfy the debt of a stockholder and vice versa, the latter having only an indirect interest in the assets and business of the former.

Since the Decision of the Labor Arbiter dated April 29, 2005 directed only Golden to pay the petitioner the sum of P115,561.05 and the same was not joint and solidary obligation with Gois, then the latter could not be held personally liable since Golden has a separate and distinct personality of its own. It remains undisputed that the subject vehicle was owned by Gois, hence it should not be attached to answer for the liabilities of the corporation. Unless they have exceeded their authority, corporate officers are, as a general rule, not personally liable for their official acts, because a corporation, by legal fiction, has a personality separate and distinct from its officers, stockholders and members. No evidence was presented to show that the termination of the petitioner was done with malice or in bad faith for it to hold the corporate officers, such as Gois, solidarily liable with the corporation.

We note that in the dispositive portion of its Decision, the appellate court ordered petitioner to return to respondent the cash bond earlier released to him. However, petitioner admitted that the monies were spent to defray the medical expenses of his ailing mother. Considering that petitioner is legally entitled to receive said amount, Golden must reimburse respondent Gois the amount of P115,561.05. To rule otherwise would result in unjust enrichment of Golden. The corporation has benefited from the payment made by Gois because it was relieved from its obligation to pay to petitioner the judgment debt.

- PEA-PTGWO vs. NLRC 581 SCRA 598 (2009)

PANTRANCO EMPLOYEES ASSOCIATION (PEA-PTGWO) and PANTRANCO RETRENCHED EMPLOYEES ASSOCIATION (PANREA), Petitioners, v. NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS COMMISSION (NLRC), PANTRANCO NORTH EXPRESS, INC. (PNEI), PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK (PNB), PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK-MANAGEMENT AND DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION (PNB-MADECOR), and MEGA PRIME REALTY AND HOLDINGS CORPORATION (MEGA PRIME), Respondents.
G.R. NO. 170689, THIRD DIVISION, March 17, 2009, NACHURA, J.

PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK, Petitioner, v. PANTRANCO EMPLOYEES ASSOCIATION, INC. (PEA-PTGWO), PANTRANCO RETRENCHED EMPLOYEES ASSOCIATION (PANREA) AND PANTRANCO ASSOCIATION OF CONCERNED EMPLOYEES (PACE), ET AL., PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK-MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION (PNB-MADECOR), and MEGA PRIME REALTY HOLDINGS, INC., Respondents.
G.R. NO. 170705, THIRD DIVISION, March 17, 2009, NACHURA, J.

The general rule is that a corporation has a personality separate and distinct from those of its stockholders and other corporations to which it may be connected*. This is a fiction created by law for convenience and to prevent injustice. Obviously, PNB, PNB-Madecor, Mega Prime, and PNEI are corporations with their own personalities. The "separate personalities" of the first three corporations had been recognized by this Court in PNB v. Mega Prime Realty and Holdings Corporation/Mega Prime Realty and Holdings Corporation v. PNB where we stated that PNB was only a stockholder of PNB-Madecor which later sold its shares to Mega Prime; and that PNB-Madecor was the owner of the Pantranco properties. Moreover, these corporations are registered as separate entities and, absent any valid reason, we maintain their separate identities and we cannot treat them as one.*

Neither can we merge the personality of PNEI with PNB simply because the latter acquired the former. Settled is the rule that where one corporation sells or otherwise transfers all its assets to another corporation for value, the latter is not, by that fact alone, liable for the debts and liabilities of the transferor.

FACTS:

The Gonzales family owned two corporations, namely, the PNEI and Macris Realty Corporation (Macris). PNEI provided transportation services to the public, and had its bus terminal at the corner of Quezon and Roosevelt Avenues in Quezon City. The Gonzales family later incurred huge financial losses despite attempts of rehabilitation and loan infusion. In March 1975, their creditors took over the management of PNEI and Macris. By 1978, full ownership was transferred to one of their creditors, the National Investment Development Corporation (NIDC), a subsidiary of the PNB.

Macris was later renamed as the National Realty Development Corporation (Naredeco) and eventually merged with the National Warehousing Corporation (Nawaco) to form the new PNB subsidiary, the PNB-Madecor.

In 1985, NIDC sold PNEI to North Express Transport, Inc. (NETI). In 1986, PNEI was among the several companies placed under sequestration by the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) shortly after the historic events in EDSA. In January 1988, PCGG lifted the sequestration order to pave the way for the sale of PNEI back to the private sector through the Asset Privatization Trust (APT). APT thus took over the management of PNEI.

In 1992, PNEI applied with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) for suspension of payments. As a cost-saving measure, the committee likewise suggested the retrenchment of several PNEI employees. Eventually, PNEI ceased its operation. Along with the cessation of business came the various labor claims commenced by the former employees of PNEI where the latter obtained favorable decisions.

On July 5, 2002, the Labor Arbiter issued the Sixth Alias Writ of Execution commanding the NLRC Sheriffs to levy on the assets of PNEI in order to satisfy the P722,727,150.22 due its former employees, as full and final satisfaction of the judgment awards in the labor cases. The sheriffs were likewise instructed to proceed against PNB, PNB-Madecor and Mega Prime. In implementing the writ, the sheriffs levied upon the four valuable pieces of real estate located at the corner of Quezon and Roosevelt Avenues, on which the former Pantranco Bus Terminal stood. Having been notified of the auction sale, motions to quash the writ were separately filed by PNB-Madecor and Mega Prime, and PNB. They likewise filed their Third-Party Claims. PNB-Madecor anchored its motion on its right as the registered owner of the Pantranco properties, and Mega Prime as the successor-in-interest. For its part, PNB sought the nullification of the writ on the ground that it was not a party to the labor case. In its Third-Party Claim, PNB alleged that PNB-Madecor was indebted to the former and that the Pantranco properties would answer for such debt. As such, the scheduled auction sale of the aforesaid properties was not legally in order.

On September 10, 2002, the Labor Arbiter declared that the subject Pantranco properties were owned by PNB-Madecor. It being a corporation with a distinct and separate personality, its assets could not answer for the liabilities of PNEI. Considering, however, that PNB-Madecor executed a promissory note in favor of PNEI for P7,884,000.00, the writ of execution to the extent of the said amount was concerned was considered valid.

On appeal to the NLRC, the same was denied and the Labor Arbiter's disposition was affirmed.

The parties' separate motions for reconsideration were likewise denied. Thereafter, the matter was elevated to the CA by PANREA, PEA-PTGWO and the Pantranco Association of Concerned Employees.

On June 3, 2005, the CA rendered the assailed decision affirming the NLRC resolutions.

The appellate court pointed out that PNB, PNB-Madecor and Mega Prime are corporations with personalities separate and distinct from PNEI. As such, there being no cogent reason to pierce the veil of corporate fiction, the separate personalities of the above corporations should be maintained. The CA added that the Pantranco properties were never owned by PNEI; rather, their titles were registered under the name of PNB-Madecor. If PNB and PNB-Madecor could not answer for the liabilities of PNEI, with more reason should Mega Prime not be held liable being a mere successor-in-interest of PNB-Madecor.

ISSUE:

Whether PNEI employees can attach the properties (specifically the Pantranco properties) of PNB, PNB-Madecor and Mega Prime to satisfy their unpaid labor claims against PNEI. (NO)

RULING:

First, the subject property is not owned by the judgment debtor, that is, PNEI. Nowhere in the records was it shown that PNEI owned the Pantranco properties. Petitioners, in fact, never alleged in any of their pleadings the fact of such ownership. What was established, instead, in PNB MADECOR v. Uy and PNB v. Mega Prime Realty and Holdings Corporation/Mega Prime Realty and Holdings Corporation v. PNB was that the properties were owned by Macris, the predecessor of PNB-Madecor. Hence, they cannot be pursued against by the creditors of PNEI.

We would like to stress the settled rule that the power of the court in executing judgments extends only to properties unquestionably belonging to the judgment debtor alone. To be sure, one man's goods shall not be sold for another man's debts. A sheriff is not authorized to attach or levy on property not belonging to the judgment debtor, and even incurs liability if he wrongfully levies upon the property of a third person.

Second, PNB, PNB-Madecor and Mega Prime are corporations with personalities separate and distinct from that of PNEI. PNB is sought to be held liable because it acquired PNEI through NIDC at the time when PNEI was suffering financial reverses. PNB-Madecor is being made to answer for petitioners' labor claims as the owner of the subject Pantranco properties and as a subsidiary of PNB. Mega Prime is also included for having acquired PNB's shares over PNB-Madecor.

The general rule is that a corporation has a personality separate and distinct from those of its stockholders and other corporations to which it may be connected. This is a fiction created by law for convenience and to prevent injustice. Obviously, PNB, PNB-Madecor, Mega Prime, and PNEI are corporations with their own personalities. The "separate personalities" of the first three corporations had been recognized by this Court in PNB v. Mega Prime Realty and Holdings Corporation/Mega Prime Realty and Holdings Corporation v. PNB where we stated that PNB was only a stockholder of PNB-Madecor which later sold its shares to Mega Prime; and that PNB-Madecor was the owner of the Pantranco properties. Moreover, these corporations are registered as separate entities and, absent any valid reason, we maintain their separate identities and we cannot treat them as one.

Neither can we merge the personality of PNEI with PNB simply because the latter acquired the former. Settled is the rule that where one corporation sells or otherwise transfers all its assets to another corporation for value, the latter is not, by that fact alone, liable for the debts and liabilities of the transferor.

Lastly, while we recognize that there are peculiar circumstances or valid grounds that may exist to warrant the piercing of the corporate veil, none applies in the present case whether between PNB and PNEI; or PNB and PNB-Madecor.

Under the doctrine of "piercing the veil of corporate fiction," the court looks at the corporation as a mere collection of individuals or an aggregation of persons undertaking business as a group, disregarding the separate juridical personality of the corporation unifying the group. Another formulation of this doctrine is that when two business enterprises are owned, conducted and controlled by the same parties, both law and equity will, when necessary to protect the rights of third parties, disregard the legal fiction that two corporations are distinct entities and treat them as identical or as one and the same.

Whether the separate personality of the corporation should be pierced hinges on obtaining facts appropriately pleaded or proved. However, any piercing of the corporate veil has to be done with caution, albeit the Court will not hesitate to disregard the corporate veil when it is misused or when necessary in the interest of justice. After all, the concept of corporate entity was not meant to promote unfair objectives.

As between PNB and PNEI, petitioners want us to disregard their separate personalities, and insist that because the company, PNEI, has already ceased operations and there is no other way by which the judgment in favor of the employees can be satisfied, corporate officers can be held jointly and severally liable with the company. Petitioners rely on the pronouncement of this Court in A.C. Ransom Labor Union-CCLU v. NLRC and subsequent cases.

This reliance fails to persuade. We find the aforesaid decisions inapplicable to the instant case.

Clearly, what can be inferred from the earlier cases is that the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil applies only in three (3) basic areas, namely: 1) defeat of public convenience as when the corporate fiction is used as a vehicle for the evasion of an existing obligation; 2) fraud cases or when the corporate entity is used to justify a wrong, protect fraud, or defend a crime; or 3) alter ego cases, where a corporation is merely a farce since it is a mere alter ego or business conduit of a person, or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation. In the absence of malice, bad faith, or a specific provision of law making a corporate officer liable, such corporate officer cannot be made personally liable for corporate liabilities.

In PNB v. Ritratto Group, Inc., we outlined the circumstances which are useful in the determination of whether a subsidiary is but a mere instrumentality of the parent-corporation, to wit:

1. The parent corporation owns all or most of the capital stock of the subsidiary;

2. The parent and subsidiary corporations have common directors or officers;

3. The parent corporation finances the subsidiary;

4. The parent corporation subscribes to all the capital stock of the subsidiary or otherwise causes its incorporation;

5. The subsidiary has grossly inadequate capital;

6. The parent corporation pays the salaries and other expenses or losses of the subsidiary;

7. The subsidiary has substantially no business except with the parent corporation or no assets except those conveyed to or by the parent corporation;

8. In the papers of the parent corporation or in the statements of its officers, the subsidiary is described as a department or division of the parent corporation, or its business or financial responsibility is referred to as the parent corporation's own;

9. The parent corporation uses the property of the subsidiary as its own;

10. The directors or executives of the subsidiary do not act independently in the interest of the subsidiary, but take their orders from the parent corporation;

11. The formal legal requirements of the subsidiary are not observed.

None of the foregoing circumstances is present in the instant case. Thus, piercing of PNB-Madecor's corporate veil is not warranted. Being a mere successor-in-interest of PNB-Madecor, with more reason should no liability attach to Mega Prime.

- Philippine National Bank vs. Merelo B. Aznar, G.R. No. 171805, May 30, 2011

PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK, PETITIONER, VS. MERELO B. AZNAR; MATIAS B. AZNAR III; JOSE L. AZNAR (DECEASED), REPRESENTED BY HIS HEIRS; RAMON A. BARCENILLA; ROSARIO T. BARCENILLA; JOSE B. ENAD (DECEASED), REPRESENTED BY HIS HEIRS; AND RICARDO GABUYA (DECEASED), REPRESENTED BY HIS HEIRS, RESPONDENTS.
G.R. No. 171805, FIRST DIVISION, May 30, 2011, LEONARDO-DE CASTRO, J.

MERELO B. AZNAR AND MATIAS B. AZNAR III, PETITIONERS, VS. PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK, RESPONDENT.
G.R. NO. 172021, FIRST DIVISION, May 30, 2011, LEONARDO-DE CASTRO, J.

A corporation has a personality separate and distinct from those of its stockholders and other corporations to which it may be connected. Thus, we had previously ruled in Magsaysay-Labrador v. Court of Appeals that the interest of the stockholders over the properties of the corporation is merely inchoate and therefore does not entitle them to intervene in litigation involving corporate property*, to wit:*

> Here, the interest, if it exists at all, of petitioners-movants is indirect, contingent, remote, conjectural, consequential and collateral. At the very least, their interest is purely inchoate, or in sheer expectancy of a right in the management of the corporation and to share in the profits thereof and in the properties and assets thereof on dissolution, after payment of the corporate debts and obligations.
>
> While a share of stock represents a proportionate or aliquot interest in the property of the corporation, it does not vest the owner thereof with any legal right or title to any of the property, his interest in the corporate property being equitable or beneficial in nature. Shareholders are in no legal sense the owners of corporate property, which is owned by the corporation as a distinct legal person.

Verily, Aznar, et al., who are stockholders of RISCO, cannot claim ownership over the properties at issue in this case on the strength of the Minutes which, at most, is merely evidence of a loan agreement between them and the company. There is no indication or even a suggestion that the ownership of said properties were transferred to them which would require no less that the said properties be registered under their names. For this reason, the complaint should be dismissed since Aznar, et al., have no cause to seek a quieting of title over the subject properties.

FACTS:

In 1958, RISCO (RURAL INSURANCE & SURETY CO. INC.) ceased operation due to business reverses. In plaintiffs' (Aznar) desire to rehabilitate RISCO, they contributed a total amount of ₱212,720.00 which was used in the purchase of the three (3) parcels of land. After the purchase of the above lots, titles were issued in the name of RISCO. The amount contributed by plaintiffs constituted as liens and encumbrances on the aforementioned properties as annotated in the titles of said lots. Such annotation was made pursuant to the Minutes of the Special Meeting of the Board of Directors of RISCO.

Thereafter, various subsequent annotations were made on the same titles, including the Notice of Attachment and Writ of Execution both dated August 3, 1962 in favor of herein defendant PNB. As a result, a Certificate of Sale was issued in favor of Philippine National Bank, being the lone and highest bidder of the three (3) parcels of land.

Plaintiffs-appellees to file the instant complaint seeking the quieting of their supposed title to the subject properties, declaratory relief, cancellation of TCT and reconveyance with temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction. Plaintiffs alleged that the subsequent annotations on the titles are subject to the prior annotation of their liens and encumbrances.

Defendant PNB on the other hand countered that plaintiffs have no right of action for quieting of title since the order of the court directing the issuance of titles to PNB had already become final and executory and their validity cannot be attacked except in a direct proceeding for their annulment. Defendant further asserted that plaintiffs, as mere stockholders of RISCO do not have any legal or equitable right over the properties of the corporation. PNB posited that even if plaintiff's monetary lien had not expired, their only recourse was to require the reimbursement or refund of their contribution.

Plaintiffs-appellees to file the instant complaint seeking the quieting of their supposed title to the subject properties, declaratory relief, cancellation of TCT and reconveyance with temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction. The trial court rendered the November 18, 1998 Decision, which ruled against PNB on the basis that there was an express trust created over the subject properties whereby RISCO was the trustee and the stockholders, Aznar, et al., were the beneficiaries or the cestui que trust.

PNB appealed the adverse ruling to the Court of Appeals which, set aside the judgment of the trial court. Although the Court of Appeals agreed with the trial court that a judgment on the pleadings was proper, the appellate court opined that the monetary contributions made by Aznar, et al., to RISCO can only be characterized as a loan secured by a lien on the subject lots, rather than an express trust.

ISSUE:

Whether Aznar, et. Al., have the right to ask for the quieting of title of the properties at issue. (NO)

RULING:

Indeed, we find that Aznar, et al., have no right to ask for the quieting of title of the properties at issue because they have no legal and/or equitable rights over the properties that are derived from the previous registered owner which is RISCO, the pertinent provision of the law is Section 2 of the Corporation Code (Batas Pambansa Blg. 68), which states that "[a] corporation is an artificial being created by operation of law, having the right of succession and the powers, attributes and properties expressly authorized by law or incident to its existence."

As a consequence thereof, a corporation has a personality separate and distinct from those of its stockholders and other corporations to which it may be connected. Thus, we had previously ruled in Magsaysay-Labrador v. Court of Appeals that the interest of the stockholders over the properties of the corporation is merely inchoate and therefore does not entitle them to intervene in litigation involving corporate property, to wit:

> Here, the interest, if it exists at all, of petitioners-movants is indirect, contingent, remote, conjectural, consequential and collateral. At the very least, their interest is purely inchoate, or in sheer expectancy of a right in the management of the corporation and to share in the profits thereof and in the properties and assets thereof on dissolution, after payment of the corporate debts and obligations.
>
> While a share of stock represents a proportionate or aliquot interest in the property of the corporation, it does not vest the owner thereof with any legal right or title to any of the property, his interest in the corporate property being equitable or beneficial in nature. Shareholders are in no legal sense the owners of corporate property, which is owned by the corporation as a distinct legal person.

In the case at bar, there is no allegation, much less any proof, that the corporate existence of RISCO has ceased and the corporate property has been liquidated and distributed to the stockholders. The records only indicate that, as per Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) Certification dated June 18, 1997, the SEC merely suspended RISCO's Certificate of Registration beginning on September 5, 1988 due to its non-submission of SEC required reports and its failure to operate for a continuous period of at least five years.

Verily, Aznar, et al., who are stockholders of RISCO, cannot claim ownership over the properties at issue in this case on the strength of the Minutes which, at most, is merely evidence of a loan agreement between them and the company. There is no indication or even a suggestion that the ownership of said properties were transferred to them which would require no less that the said properties be registered under their names. For this reason, the complaint should be dismissed since Aznar, et al., have no cause to seek a quieting of title over the subject properties.

At most, what Aznar, et al., had was merely a right to be repaid the amount loaned to RISCO. Unfortunately, the right to seek repayment or reimbursement of their contributions used to purchase the subject properties is already barred by prescription.

- Stronghold Insurance Company, Inc. vs. Tomas Cuenca, et. al., G.R. No. 173297, March 6, 2013

STRONGHOLD INSURANCE COMPANY, INC., Petitioner, v. TOMAS CUENCA, MARCELINA CUENCA, MILAGROS CUENCA, BRAMIE T. TAYACTAC, and MANUEL D. MARANON, JR., Respondent.

G.R. No. 173297, FIRST DIVISION, March 6, 2013, BERSAMIN, J.

There is no dispute that the properties subject to the levy on attachment belonged to Arc Cuisine, Inc. alone, not to the Cuencas and Tayactac in their own right. They were only stockholders of Arc Cuisine, Inc., which had a personality distinct and separate from that of any or all of them*. The damages occasioned to the properties by the levy on attachment, wrongful or not, prejudiced Arc Cuisine, Inc., not them. As such, only Arc Cuisine, Inc. had the right under the substantive law to claim and recover such damages. This right could not also be asserted by the Cuencas and Tayactac unless they did so in the name of the corporation itself. But that did not happen herein, because Arc Cuisine, Inc. was not even joined in the action either as an original party or as an intervenor.*

The Cuencas and Tayactac were clearly not vested with any direct interest in the personal properties coming under the levy on attachment by virtue alone of their being stockholders in Arc Cuisine, Inc. Their stockholdings represented only their proportionate or aliquot interest in the properties of the corporation, but did not vest in them any legal right or title to any specific properties of the corporation*. Without doubt, Arc Cuisine, Inc. remained the owner as a distinct legal person.*

FACTS:

Marañon filed a complaint in the RTC against the Cuencas for the collection of a sum of money and damages. His complaint included an application for the issuance of a writ of preliminary attachment.

The RTC granted the application for the issuance of the writ of preliminary attachment conditioned upon the posting of a bond of P1,000,000.00 executed in favor of the Cuencas, the complaint also implead Tayactac, as a defendant. Maranion posted a bond, in the amount of one million, issued by Stronghold Insurance. Hence, RTC issued the writ of preliminary attachment. Thus, sheriff levied personal properties belonging to Arc Cuisines Inc., that were found in the leased corporate office of the corporation.

In defense, Cuencas filed a motion to dismiss and to quash writ of preliminary attachment on the grounds that action involved intra-corporate matters, which is within the jurisdiction of SEC. The RTC denied the motion, because the action was recovery of sum of money. On appeal to CA, CA reversed the RTC, and remanded it back to determine damages sustained by private respondents, from the enforcement of attachment.

Based on the sheriff report, the attached properties were missing, as the warehouse recommended by Maranon, is now tenanted by a new lessee.

Thus, the respondents filed a motion to require sheriff to deliver attached properties and to set case for hearing, regarding recovery of damages amounting to 1,721,557.20, as value of the lost attached properties.

Petitioner filed a comment arguing that attached properties belonged to Arc Cuisine, 50% of which owned by respondents, it should follow that 50% constituted liquidated dividends, being liable only for 100,000.

ISSUE:

Whether the Cuencas and Tayactac are real party in interest. (NO)

RULING:

There is no dispute that the properties subject to the levy on attachment belonged to Arc Cuisine, Inc. alone, not to the Cuencas and Tayactac in their own right. They were only stockholders of Arc Cuisine, Inc., which had a personality distinct and separate from that of any or all of them. The damages occasioned to the properties by the levy on attachment, wrongful or not, prejudiced Arc Cuisine, Inc., not them. As such, only Arc Cuisine, Inc. had the right under the substantive law to claim and recover such damages. This right could not also be asserted by the Cuencas and Tayactac unless they did so in the name of the corporation itself. But that did not happen herein, because Arc Cuisine, Inc. was not even joined in the action either as an original party or as an intervenor.

The Cuencas and Tayactac were clearly not vested with any direct interest in the personal properties coming under the levy on attachment by virtue alone of their being stockholders in Arc Cuisine, Inc. Their stockholdings represented only their proportionate or aliquot interest in the properties of the corporation, but did not vest in them any legal right or title to any specific properties of the corporation. Without doubt, Arc Cuisine, Inc. remained the owner as a distinct legal person.

Given the separate and distinct legal personality of Arc Cuisine, Inc., the Cuencas and Tayactac lacked the legal personality to claim the damages sustained from the levy of the formers properties. According to Asset Privatization Trust v. Court of Appeals, even when the foreclosure on the assets of the corporation was wrongful and done in bad faith the stockholders had no standing to recover for themselves moral damages; otherwise, they would be appropriating and distributing part of the corporations assets prior to the dissolution of the corporation and the liquidation of its debts and liabilities. Moreover, in Evangelista v. Santos, the Court, resolving whether or not the minority stockholders had the right to bring an action for damages against the principal officers of the corporation for their own benefit, said:

> As to the second question, the complaint shows that the action is for damages resulting from mismanagement of the affairs and assets of the corporation by its principal officer, it being alleged that defendants maladministration has brought about the ruin of the corporation and the consequent loss of value of its stocks. The injury complained of is thus primarily to the corporation, so that the suit for the damages claimed should be by the corporation rather than by the stockholders (3 Fletcher, Cyclopedia of Corporation pp. 977-980). The stockholders may not directly claim those damages for themselves for that would result in the appropriation by, and the distribution among them of part of the corporate assets before the dissolution of the corporation and the liquidation of its debts and liabilities, something which cannot be legally done in view of section 16 of the Corporation Law, which provides:
>
> No corporation shall make or declare any stock or bond dividend or any dividend whatsoever except from the surplus profits arising from its business, or divide or distribute its capital stock or property other than actual profits among its members or stockholders until after the payment of its debts and the termination of its existence by limitation or lawful dissolution.

- Development Bank of the Philippines vs. Hydro Resources Contractors Corporation, GR. No. 167603, March 13, 2013

DEVELOPMENT BANK OF THE PHILIPPINES, Petitioner, v. HYDRO RESOURCES CONTRACTORS CORPORATION, Respondent.
G.R. NO. 167603, FIRST DIVISION, March 13, 2013, LEONARDO-DE CASTRO, J.

A corporation is an artificial entity created by operation of law. It possesses the right of succession and such powers, attributes, and properties expressly authorized by law or incident to its existence. It has a personality separate and distinct from that of its stockholders and from that of other corporations to which it may be connected*. As a consequence of its status as a distinct legal entity and as a result of a conscious policy decision to promote capital formation, a corporation incurs its own liabilities and is legally responsible for payment of its obligations. In other words, by virtue of the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the corporate debt or credit is not the debt or credit of the stockholder. This protection from liability for shareholders is the principle of limited liability.*

The doctrine of piercing the corporate veil applies only in three (3) basic areas, namely: 1) defeat of public convenience as when the corporate fiction is used as a vehicle for the evasion of an existing obligation; 2) fraud cases or when the corporate entity is used to justify a wrong, protect fraud, or defend a crime; or 3) alter ego cases, where a corporation is merely a farce since it is a mere alter ego or business conduit of a person, or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation.

There being a total absence of evidence pointing to a fraudulent, illegal or unfair act committed against HRCC by DBP and PNB under the guise of NMIC, there is no basis to hold that NMIC was a mere alter ego of DBP and PNB.

FACTS:

Sometime in 1984, petitioners DBP and PNB foreclosed on certain mortgages made on the properties of Marinduque Mining and Industrial Corporation (MMIC). As a result of the foreclosure, DBP and PNB acquired substantially all the assets of MMIC and resumed the business operations of the defunct MMIC by organizing Nonoc Mining and Industrial Corporation (NMIC). DBP and PNB owned 57% and 43% of the shares of NMIC, respectively, except for five qualifying shares. As of September 1984, the members of the Board of Directors of NMIC, namely, Jose Tengco, Jr., Rolando Zosa, Ruben Ancheta, Geraldo Agulto, and Faustino Agbada, were either from DBP or PNB.

Subsequently, NMIC engaged the services of Hercon, Inc., for NMIC's Mine Stripping and Road Construction Program in 1985 for a total contract price of ₱35,770,120. After computing the payments already made by NMIC under the program and crediting the NMIC's receivables from Hercon, Inc., the latter found that NMIC still has an unpaid balance of ₱8,370,934.74.10 Hercon, Inc. made several demands on NMIC, including a letter of final demand dated August 12, 1986, and when these were not heeded, a complaint for sum of money was filed in the RTC of Makati, Branch 136 seeking to hold petitioners NMIC, DBP, and PNB solidarily liable for the amount owing Hercon, Inc. Subsequent to the filing of the complaint, Hercon, Inc. was acquired by HRCC in a merger.

Thereafter, on December 8, 1986, then President Corazon C. Aquino issued Proclamation No. 50 creating the APT for the expeditious disposition and privatization of certain government corporations and/or the assets thereof. Pursuant to the said Proclamation, on February 27, 1987, DBP and PNB executed their respective deeds of transfer in favor of the National Government assigning, transferring and conveying certain assets and liabilities, including their respective stakes in NMIC. In turn and on even date, the National Government transferred the said assets and liabilities to the APT as trustee under a Trust Agreement. Thus, the complaint was amended for the second time to implead and include the APT as a defendant.

In its answer, NMIC claimed that HRCC had no cause of action. It also asserted that its contract with HRCC was entered into by its then President without any authority. Moreover, the said contract allegedly failed to comply with laws, rules and regulations concerning government contracts. NMIC further claimed that the contract amount was manifestly excessive and grossly disadvantageous to the government. NMIC made counterclaims for the amounts already paid to Hercon, Inc. and attorney's fees, as well as payment for equipment rental for four trucks, replacement of parts and other services, and damage to some of NMIC's properties.

For its part, DBP's answer raised the defense that HRCC had no cause of action against it because DBP was not privy to HRCC's contract with NMIC. Moreover, NMIC's juridical personality is separate from that of DBP. DBP further interposed a counterclaim for attorney's fees.

APT set up the following defenses in its answer: lack of cause of action against it, lack of privity between Hercon, Inc. and APT, and the National Government's preferred lien over the assets of NMIC. The respective motions for reconsideration of DBP, PNB, and APT were denied.

RTC of Makati rendered decision in favor of HRCC, it pierced veil of NMIC and held DBP and PNB solidarily liable with NMIC. It dismissed the complaint against ATP however as a trustee of NMIC it directed ATP to ensure compliance with its decision. The Court of Appeals rendered the Decision dated November 30, 2004, affirmed the piercing of the veil of the corporate personality of NMIC and held DBP, PNB, and APT solidarily liable with NMIC. The respective motions for reconsideration of DBP, PNB, and APT were denied. Hence, they filed consolidated petitions to the Supreme Court.

ISSUE:

Whether HRCC has a cause of action against DBP and PNB. (NO)

RULING:

A corporation is an artificial entity created by operation of law. It possesses the right of succession and such powers, attributes, and properties expressly authorized by law or incident to its existence. It has a personality separate and distinct from that of its stockholders and from that of other corporations to which it may be connected. As a consequence of its status as a distinct legal entity and as a result of a conscious policy decision to promote capital formation, a corporation incurs its own liabilities and is legally responsible for payment of its obligations. In other words, by virtue of the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the corporate debt or credit is not the debt or credit of the stockholder. This protection from liability for shareholders is the principle of limited liability.

Equally well-settled is the principle that the corporate mask may be removed or the corporate veil pierced when the corporation is just an alter ego of a person or of another corporation. For reasons of public policy and in the interest of justice, the corporate veil will justifiably be impaled only when it becomes a shield for fraud, illegality or inequity committed against third persons.

However, the rule is that a court should be careful in assessing the milieu where the doctrine of the corporate veil may be applied. Otherwise an injustice, although unintended, may result from its erroneous application. Thus, cutting through the corporate cover requires an approach characterized by due care and caution.

Hence, any application of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil should be done with caution. A court should be mindful of the milieu where it is to be applied. It must be certain that the corporate fiction was misused to such an extent that injustice, fraud, or crime was committed against another, in disregard of its rights. The wrongdoing must be clearly and convincingly established; it cannot be presumed.

The doctrine of piercing the corporate veil applies only in three (3) basic areas, namely: 1) defeat of public convenience as when the corporate fiction is used as a vehicle for the evasion of an existing obligation; 2) fraud cases or when the corporate entity is used to justify a wrong, protect fraud, or defend a crime; or 3) alter ego cases, where a corporation is merely a farce since it is a mere alter ego or business conduit of a person, or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation.

This Court finds that none of the tests has been satisfactorily met in this case.

There being a total absence of evidence pointing to a fraudulent, illegal or unfair act committed against HRCC by DBP and PNB under the guise of NMIC, there is no basis to hold that NMIC was a mere alter ego of DBP and PNB.

- Abbot Laboratories vs. Alacaraz, G.R. No. 192571, July 23, 2013

ABBOTT LABORATORIES, PHILIPPINES, CECILLE A. TERRIBLE, EDWIN D. FEIST, MARIA OLIVIA T. YABUTMISA, TERESITA C. BERNARDO, AND ALLAN G. ALMAZAR, Petitioners, vs. PEARLIE ANN F. ALCARAZ, Respondent.
G.R. No. 192571, EN BANC, July 23, 2013, PERLAS-BERNABE, J.

It is hornbook principle that personal liability of corporate directors, trustees or officers attaches only when: (a) they assent to a patently unlawful act of the corporation, or when they are guilty of bad faith or gross negligence in directing its affairs, or when there is a conflict of interest resulting in damages to the corporation, its stockholders or other persons; (b) they consent to the issuance of watered down stocks or when, having knowledge of such issuance, do not forthwith file with the corporate secretary their written objection; (c) they agree to hold themselves personally and solidarily liable with the corporation; or (d) they are made by specific provision of law personally answerable for their corporate action*.*

A judicious perusal of the records show that other than her unfounded assertions on the matter, there is no evidence to support the fact that the individual petitioners herein, in their capacity as Abbott's officers and employees, acted in bad faith or were motivated by ill will in terminating Alcaraz's services. The fact that Alcaraz was made to resign and not allowed to enter the workplace does not necessarily indicate bad faith on Abbott's part since a sufficient ground existed for the latter to actually proceed with her termination.

FACTS:

On June 27, 2004, petitioner Abbott Laboratories, Philippines (Abbott) caused the publication in a major broadsheet newspaper of its need for a Medical and Regulatory Affairs Manager (Regulatory Affairs Manager). Alcaraz - who was then a Regulatory Affairs and Information Manager at Aventis Pasteur Philippines, Incorporated (another pharmaceutical company like Abbott) – showed interest and submitted her application on October 4, 2004.

On December 7, 2004, Abbott formally offered Alcaraz the abovementioned position. In Abbott's offer sheet. it was stated that Alcaraz was to be employed on a probationary basis. Later that day, she accepted the said offer and received an electronic mail (e-mail) from Abbott's Recruitment Officer, petitioner Teresita C. Bernardo (Bernardo), confirming the same. Attached to Bernardo's e-mail were Abbott's organizational chart and a job description of Alcaraz's work.

During the course of her employment, Alcaraz noticed that some of the staff had disciplinary problems. Thus, she would reprimand them for their unprofessional behavior such as non-observance of the dress code, moonlighting, and disrespect of Abbott officers. However, Alcaraz's method of management was considered by Walsh to be "too strict." Alcaraz approached Misa to discuss these concerns and was told to "lie low" and let Walsh handle the matter. Misa even assured her that Abbott's HRD would support her in all her management decisions.

On May 16, 2005, Alcaraz was called to a meeting with Walsh and Terrible where she was informed that she failed to meet the regularization standards for the position of Regulatory Affairs Manager. Thereafter, Walsh and Terrible requested Alcaraz to tender her resignation, else they be forced to terminate her services. She was also told that, regardless of her choice, she should no longer report for work and was asked to surrender her office identification cards. She requested to be given one week to decide on the same, but to no avail.

On May 17, 2005, Alcaraz told her administrative assistant, Claude Gonzales (Gonzales), that she would be on leave for that day. However, Gonzales told her that Walsh and Terrible already announced to the whole Hospira ALSU staff that Alcaraz already resigned due to health reasons.

On May 23, 2005, Walsh, Almazar, and Bernardo personally handed to Alcaraz a letter stating that her services had been terminated effective May 19, 2005. The letter detailed the reasons for Alcaraz's termination – particularly, that Alcaraz: (a) did not manage her time effectively; (b) failed to gain the trust of her staff and to build an effective rapport with them; (c) failed to train her staff effectively; and (d) was not able to obtain the knowledge and ability to make sound judgments on case processing and article review which were necessary for the proper performance of her duties. On May 27, 2005, Alcaraz received another copy of the said termination letter via registered mail.

Alcaraz felt that she was unjustly terminated from her employment and thus, filed a complaint for illegal dismissal and damages against Abbott and its officers, namely, Misa, Bernardo, Almazar, Walsh, Terrible, and Feist. She claimed that she should have already been considered as a regular and not a probationary employee given Abbott's failure to inform her of the reasonable standards for her regularization upon her engagement as required under Article 295 of the Labor Code. In this relation, she contended that while her employment contract stated that she was to be engaged on a probationary status, the same did not indicate the standards on which her regularization would be based. She further averred that the individual petitioners maliciously connived to illegally dismiss her when: (a) they threatened her with termination; (b) she was ordered not to enter company premises even if she was still an employee thereof; and (c) they publicly announced that she already resigned in order to humiliate her.

ISSUE:

Whether the individual petitioners can be held personally liable for dismissing Alcaraz. (NO)

RULING:

It is hornbook principle that personal liability of corporate directors, trustees or officers attaches only when: (a) they assent to a patently unlawful act of the corporation, or when they are guilty of bad faith or gross negligence in directing its affairs, or when there is a conflict of interest resulting in damages to the corporation, its stockholders or other persons; (b) they consent to the issuance of watered down stocks or when, having knowledge of such issuance, do not forthwith file with the corporate secretary their written objection; (c) they agree to hold themselves personally and solidarily liable with the corporation; or (d) they are made by specific provision of law personally answerable for their corporate action.

In this case, Alcaraz alleges that the individual petitioners acted in bad faith with regard to the supposed crude manner by which her probationary employment was terminated and thus, should be held liable together with Abbott. In the same vein, she further attributes the loss of some of her remaining belongings to them.

Alcaraz's contention fails to persuade.

A judicious perusal of the records show that other than her unfounded assertions on the matter, there is no evidence to support the fact that the individual petitioners herein, in their capacity as Abbott's officers and employees, acted in bad faith or were motivated by ill will in terminating Alcaraz's services. The fact that Alcaraz was made to resign and not allowed to enter the workplace does not necessarily indicate bad faith on Abbott's part since a sufficient ground existed for the latter to actually proceed with her termination. On the alleged loss of her personal belongings, records are bereft of any showing that the same could be attributed to Abbott or any of its officers. It is a well-settled rule that bad faith cannot be presumed and he who alleges bad faith has the onus of proving it. All told, since Alcaraz failed to prove any malicious act on the part of Abbott or any of its officers, the Court finds the award of moral or exemplary damages unwarranted.

- Nuccio Saverios vs. Puyat, G.R. No. 186433, November 27, 2013

NUCCIO SAVERIO AND NS INTERNATIONAL, INC., Petitioners, v. ALFONSO G. PUYAT, Respondent.
G.R. No. 186433, SECOND DIVISION November 27, 2013, BRION, J.

The rule is settled that a corporation is vested by law with a personality separate and distinct from the persons composing it*. Following this principle, a stockholder, generally, is not answerable for the acts or liabilities of the corporation, and vice versa.* The obligations incurred by the corporate officers, or other persons acting as corporate agents, are the direct accountabilities of the corporation they represent, and not theirs*. A director, officer or employee of a corporation is generally not held personally liable for obligations incurred by the corporation and while there may be instances where solidary liabilities may arise, these circumstances are exceptional.*

Incidentally, we have ruled that mere ownership by a single stockholder or by another corporation of all or nearly all of the capital stocks of the corporation is not, by itself, a sufficient ground for disregarding the separate corporate personality. Other than mere ownership of capital stocks, circumstances showing that the corporation is being used to commit fraud or proof of existence of absolute control over the corporation have to be proven. In short, before the corporate fiction can be disregarded, alter-ego elements must first be sufficiently established.

The records of the case, however, do not show that Nuccio had control or domination over NSI's finances. The mere fact that it was Nuccio who, in behalf of the corporation, signed the MOA is not sufficient to prove that he exercised control over the corporation's finances. Neither the absence of a board resolution authorizing him to contract the loan nor NSI's failure to object thereto supports this conclusion. These may be indicators that, among others, may point the proof required to justify the piercing the veil of corporate fiction, but by themselves, they do not rise to the level of proof required to support the desired conclusion.

FACTS:

On July 22, 1996, the respondent granted a loan to NSI. The loan was made pursuant to the Memorandum of Agreement and Promissory Note (MOA) between the respondent and NSI, represented by Nuccio. It was agreed that the respondent would extend a credit line with a limit of P500,000.00 to NSI, to be paid within thirty (30) days from the time of the signing of the document.

The loan carried an interest rate of 17% per annum, or at an adjusted rate of 25% per annum if payment is beyond the stipulated period. The petitioners received a total amount of P300,000.00 and certain machineries intended for their fertilizer processing plant business (business). The proposed business, however, failed to materialize.

On several occasions, Nuccio made personal payments amounting to P600,000.00. However, as of December 16, 1999, the petitioners allegedly had an outstanding balance of P460,505.86. When the petitioners defaulted in the payment of the loan, the respondent filed a collection suit with the RTC, alleging mainly that the petitioners still owe him the value of the machineries as shown by the Breakdown of Account he presented.

The petitioners refuted the respondent's allegation and insisted that they have already paid the loan, evidenced by the respondent's receipt for the amount of P600,000.00. They submitted that their remaining obligation to pay the machineries' value, if any, had long been extinguished by their business' failure to materialize. They posited that, even assuming without conceding that they are liable, the amount being claimed is inaccurate, the penalty and the interest imposed are unconscionable, and an independent accounting is needed to determine the exact amount of their liability.

RTC found that aside from the cash loan, the petitioners' obligation to the respondent also covered the payment of the machineries' value. The RTC also brushed aside the petitioners' claim of partnership. The RTC thus ruled that the payment of P600,000.00 did not completely extinguish the petitioners' obligation. The RTC also found merit in the respondent's contention that the petitioners are one and the same. Based on Nuccio's act of entering a loan with the respondent for purposes of financing NSI's proposed business and his own admission during cross-examination that the word "NS" in NSI's name stands for "Nuccio Saverio," the RTC found that the application of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction was proper. RTC ordered the petitioners, jointly and severally, to pay the balance of P460,505.86, at 12% interest, and attorney's fees equivalent to 25% of the total amount due.

The petitioners appealed the RTC ruling to the CA. There, they argued that in view of the lack of proper accounting and the respondent's failure to substantiate his claims, the exact amount of their indebtedness had not been proven. Nuccio also argued that by virtue of NSI's separate and distinct personality, he cannot be made solidarily liable with NSI. he CA rendered a decision declaring the petitioners jointly and severally liable for the amount that the respondent sought.

The CA also affirmed the RTC ruling that petitioners are one and the same for the following reasons: (1) Nuccio owned forty percent (40%) of NSI; (2) Nuccio personally entered into the loan contract with the respondent because there was no board resolution from NSI; (3) the petitioners were represented by the same counsel; (4) the failure of NSI to object to Nuccio's acts shows the latter's control over the corporation; and (5) Nuccio's control over NSI was used to commit a wrong or fraud. It further adopted the RTC's findings of bad faith and willful breach of obligation on the petitioners' part, and affirmed its award of attorney's fees.

ISSUE:

Whether the petitioners should be held jointly and severally liable. (NO)

RULING:

After a careful study of the records and the findings of both the RTC and the CA, we hold that their conclusions, based on the given findings, are not supported by the evidence on record.

The rule is settled that a corporation is vested by law with a personality separate and distinct from the persons composing it. Following this principle, a stockholder, generally, is not answerable for the acts or liabilities of the corporation, and vice versa. The obligations incurred by the corporate officers, or other persons acting as corporate agents, are the direct accountabilities of the corporation they represent, and not theirs. A director, officer or employee of a corporation is generally not held personally liable for obligations incurred by the corporation and while there may be instances where solidary liabilities may arise, these circumstances are exceptional.

Incidentally, we have ruled that mere ownership by a single stockholder or by another corporation of all or nearly all of the capital stocks of the corporation is not, by itself, a sufficient ground for disregarding the separate corporate personality. Other than mere ownership of capital stocks, circumstances showing that the corporation is being used to commit fraud or proof of existence of absolute control over the corporation have to be proven. In short, before the corporate fiction can be disregarded, alter-ego elements must first be sufficiently established.

In Hi-Cement Corporation v. Insular Bank of Asia and America (later PCI-Bank, now Equitable PCI-Bank), we refused to apply the piercing the veil doctrine on the ground that the corporation was a mere alter ego because mere ownership by a stockholder of all or nearly all of the capital stocks of a corporation does not, by itself, justify the disregard of the separate corporate personality. In this cited case, we ruled that in order for the ground of corporate ownership to stand, the following circumstances should also be established: (1) that the stockholders had control or complete domination of the corporation's finances and that the latter had no separate existence with respect to the act complained of; (2) that they used such control to commit a wrong or fraud; and (3) the control was the proximate cause of the loss or injury.

Applying these principles to the present case, we opine and so hold that the attendant circumstances do not warrant the piercing of the veil of NSI's corporate fiction.

Aside from the undisputed fact of Nuccio's 40% shareholdings with NSI, the RTC applied the piercing the veil doctrine based on the following reasons. First, there was no board resolution authorizing Nuccio to enter into a contract of loan. Second, the petitioners were represented by one and the same counsel. Third, NSI did not object to Nuccio's act of contracting the loan. Fourth, the control over NSI was used to commit a wrong or fraud. Fifth, Nuccio's admission that "NS" in the corporate name "NSI" means "Nuccio Saverio."

We are not convinced of the sufficiency of these cited reasons. In our view, the RTC failed to provide a clear and convincing explanation why the doctrine was applied. It merely declared that its application of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction has a basis, specifying for this purpose the act of Nuccio's entering into a contract of loan with the respondent and the reasons stated above.

The records of the case, however, do not show that Nuccio had control or domination over NSI's finances. The mere fact that it was Nuccio who, in behalf of the corporation, signed the MOA is not sufficient to prove that he exercised control over the corporation's finances. Neither the absence of a board resolution authorizing him to contract the loan nor NSI's failure to object thereto supports this conclusion. These may be indicators that, among others, may point the proof required to justify the piercing the veil of corporate fiction, but by themselves, they do not rise to the level of proof required to support the desired conclusion. It should be noted in this regard that while Nuccio was the signatory of the loan and the money was delivered to him, the proceeds of the loan were unquestionably intended for NSI's proposed business plan. That the business did not materialize is not also sufficient proof to justify a piercing, in the absence of proof that the business plan was a fraudulent scheme geared to secure funds from the respondent for the petitioners' undisclosed goals. Considering that the basis for holding Nuccio liable for the payment of the loan has been proven to be insufficient, we find no justification for the RTC to hold him jointly and solidarily liable for NSI's unpaid loan. Similarly, we find that the CA ruling is wanting in sufficient explanation to justify the doctrine's application and affirmation of the RTC's ruling. With these points firmly in mind, we hold that NSI's liability should not attach to Nuccio.

- Girly G. Ico vs. Systems Technology Institute Inc, et al., G.R. 185100, July 9, 2014

GIRLY G. ICO, Petitioner, vs. SYSTEMS TECHNOLOGY INSTITUTE, INC., MONICO V. JACOB and PETER K. FERNANDEZ, Respondents.

G.R. No. 185100, SECOND DIVISION, July 9, 2014, DEL CASTILLO, J.

A corporation, as a juridical entity, may act only through its directors, officers and employees. Obligations incurred as a result of the directors' and officers' acts as corporate agents, are not their personal liability but the direct responsibility of the corporation they represent. As a rule, they are only solidarily liable with the corporation for the illegal termination of services of employees if they acted with malice or bad faith.

To hold a director or officer personally liable for corporate obligations, two requisites must concur: (1) it must be alleged in the complaint that the director or officer assented to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or that the officer was guilty of gross negligence or bad faith; and (2) there must be proof that the officer acted in bad faith.

Nonetheless, the Court fails to discern any bad faith or negligence on the part of respondent Jacob. The principal character that figures prominently in this case is Fernandez; he alone relentlessly caused petitioner's hardships and suffering. He alone is guilty of persecuting petitioner.

FACTS:

Petitioner Girly G. Ico, was hired as Faculty Member by STI College Makati (Inc.), which operates STI College-Makati (STI-Makati). STI College Makati (Inc.) is a wholly-owned subsidiary of STI. After petitioner's stint as Dean of STI-Guadalupe, she was promoted to the position of Chief Operating Officer (COO) of STI-Makati, under the same position classification and salary level of "Job Grade Manager B". She concurrently served as STI-Makati School Administrator.

During petitioner's stint as COO and School Administrator of STI-Makati, a Plan of Merger was executed between STI and STI College Makati (Inc.), whereby the latter would be absorbed by STI. The merger was approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission STI College Makati (Inc.) thus ceased to exist, and STI-Makati was placed under STI's Education Management Division (EMD).

STI – in line with the recently approved organizational structure updated petitioner's appointment as COO, "Job Grade Manager B" with a gross monthly salary of ₱37,483.58. She was re-appointed as COO of STI-Makati, under the supervision of the Academic Services Group of the EMD and reporting directly to the Head thereof, herein respondent Fernandez. However, petitioner was not given the salary commensurate to her position as COO, which by this time appeared to be pegged at ₱120,000.00. It likewise appears that she was not given benefits and privileges which holders of equivalent positions were entitled to, such as a car plan.

Another Memorandum dated was issued by STI Human Resources Division Head, Yolanda Briones (Briones), cancelling petitioner's COO assignment at STI-Makati, citing management's decision to undertake an "organizational restructuring" in line with the merger of STI and STI Makati; and appointing petitioner, STI's Compliance Manager with the same "Job Grade Manager B" rank and salary level, reporting directly to School Compliance Group Head Armand Paraiso (Paraiso).

On May 18, 2004, Fernandez summoned petitioner to his office, where a heated argument between them took place. Ico recorded the said conversation allegedly with the consent of Fernandez.

When petitioner reported to her new office at STI's School Compliance Group she find out that all members of the department had gone to Baguio City for a planning session. Petitioner, who was not apprised of the official trip, was thus left behind. That same day, an official communication was disseminated throughout STI, announcing Jacob's appointment as the new STI President and CEO, Fernandez as the new COO of STI-Makati, and Luz as the new STI-Makati School Administrator; however, petitioner's appointment as Compliance Manager was left out.

In a letter to Jacob, petitioner claimed that she became the victim of a series of discriminatory acts and objecting to the manner by which she was transferred, asserting that she was illegally demoted and that her name was tarnished as a result of the demotion and transfer. Jacob replied through advising petitioner that her letter was forwarded to Fernandez for comment.

In a report (Audit Report) later submitted to Fernandez, the auditors claim to have discovered irregularities. In a Memorandum to Jacob, Fernandez cited the Audit Report and recommended that an investigation committee be formed to investigate petitioner for grave abuse of authority, falsification, gross dishonesty, maligning and causing intrigues, commission of acts tending to cast negativity upon his person (Fernandez), and other charges. Fernandez recommended that petitioner be placed under preventive suspension pending investigation. Meanwhile, with respect to petitioner's letter, Fernandez did not submit a comment or answer thereto.

A Memorandum was issued placing petitioner under preventive suspension. Petitioner received another Memorandum stating that charges have already been filed against her.

In a mail message sent to petitioner, the latter was invited to a meeting with the committee formed to act on the complaint filed against (petitioner) by (Fernandez). During the supposed scheduled meeting with the committee, petitioner was furnished with several documents; however, no copy of the formal complaint or written charge was given to her. The meeting was adjourned without the committee setting another meeting for the submission of petitioner's answer; nor was a hearing set for the presentation of the parties' evidence.

Thereafter, petitioner went on sanctioned leave of absence. After the lapse of her approved leave, she reported for work several times. After August 9, 2004, however, she no longer reported for work. In a notice of termination signed by Jacob, petitioner was dismissed from STI effective January 11, 2005.

ISSUE:

Whether Jacob can be held personally liable for illegally dismissing petitioner. (NO)

RULING:

Nonetheless, the Court fails to discern any bad faith or negligence on the part of respondent Jacob. The principal character that figures prominently in this case is Fernandez; he alone relentlessly caused petitioner's hardships and suffering. He alone is guilty of persecuting petitioner. Indeed, some of his actions were without sanction of STI itself, and were committed outside of the authority given to him by the school; they bordered on the personal, rather than official. His superior, Jacob, may have been, for the most part, clueless of what Fernandez was doing to petitioner. After all, Fernandez was the Head of the Academic Services Group of the EMD, and petitioner directly reported to him at the time; his position enabled him to pursue a course of action with petitioner that Jacob was largely unaware of.

A corporation, as a juridical entity, may act only through its directors, officers and employees. Obligations incurred as a result of the directors' and officers' acts as corporate agents, are not their personal liability but the direct responsibility of the corporation they represent. As a rule, they are only solidarily liable with the corporation for the illegal termination of services of employees if they acted with malice or bad faith.

To hold a director or officer personally liable for corporate obligations, two requisites must concur: (1) it must be alleged in the complaint that the director or officer assented to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or that the officer was guilty of gross negligence or bad faith; and (2) there must be proof that the officer acted in bad faith.

PALM AVENUE HOLDING CO., INC AND PALM AVENUE REALTY AND DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, Petitioner, -versus - SANDIGANBAYAN 5TH DIVISION, REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES, REPRESENTED BY THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION ON GOOD GOVERNMENT (PCGG)., Respondent

G.R. No. 173082, THIRD DIVISION, AUGUST 6, 2014, PERALTA., J.

Failure to implead these corporations as defendants and merely annexing a list of such corporations to the complaints is a violation of their right to due process for it would be, in effect, disregarding their distinct and separate personality without a hearing. Here, the Palm Companies were merely mentioned as Item Nos. 47 and 48, Annex A of the Complaint, as among the corporations where defendant Romualdez owns shares of stocks. Furthermore, while the writ of sequestration was issued on October 27, 1986, the Palm Companies were impleaded in the case only in 1997, or already a decade from the ratification of the Constitution in 1987, way beyond the prescribed period.

FACTS:

Through a writ of sequestration dated October 27, 1986, the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) sequestered all the assets, properties, records, and documents of the Palm Companies. Said sequestered assets included 16,237,339 Benguet Corporation shares of stock, registered in the name of the Palm Companies. The PCGG had relied on a letter from the Palm Companies' Attorney-in-Fact, Jose S. Sandejas, specifically identifying Benjamin "Kokoy" Romualdez, a known crony of former President Ferdinand E. Marcos, as the beneficial owner of the Benguet Corporation shares in the Palm Companies' name.

The Republic, represented by the PCGG, filed a complaint with the Sandiganbayan docketed as Civil Case No. 0035 but did not initially implead the Palm Companies as defendants. However, the Sandiganbayan issued a Resolution dated June 16, 1989 where it ordered said companies to be impleaded. The Court subsequently affirmed this order to implead in G.R. No. 906675 on November 5, 1991. Pursuant to said order, the Republic filed an amended complaint dated January 17, 1997 and named therein the Palm Companies as defendants. The graft court admitted the amended complaint on October 15, 2001.

In the meantime, the Palm Companies filed an Urgent Motion to Lift the Writ of Sequestration, but was denied. Hence, the Palm Companies filed the petition in G.R. No. 173082.

ISSUE:

> Whether respondent court acted with grave abuse of discretion amounting to lack of jurisdiction in denying petitioners' motion to lift the writ of sequestration notwithstanding the fact that said writ should be deemed automatically lifted pursuant to Section 26, Article XVIII of the 1987 Constitution for failure to implead petitioners within the period of six (6) months prescribed in the said constitution (YES)

RULING:

Section 26, Article XVIII of the 1987 Constitution provides:

x x x x

A sequestration or freeze order shall be issued only upon showing of a prima facie case. The order and the list of the sequestered or frozen properties shall forthwith be registered with the proper court. For orders issued before the ratification of this Constitution, the corresponding judicial action or proceeding shall be filed within six months from its ratification. For those issued after such ratification, the judicial action or proceeding shall be commenced within six months from the issuance thereof.

The sequestration or freeze order is deemed automatically lifted if no judicial action or proceeding is commenced as herein provided.

The aforesaid provision mandates the Republic to file the corresponding judicial action or proceedings within a six-month period (from its ratification on February 2, 1987) in order to maintain sequestration, non-compliance with which would result in the automatic lifting of the sequestration order. The Court's ruling in Presidential Commission on Good Government v. Sandiganbayan, which remains good law, reiterates the necessity of the Republic to actually implead corporations as defendants in the complaint, out of recognition for their distinct and separate personalities, failure to do so would necessarily be denying such entities their right to due process. Here, the writ of sequestration issued against the assets of the Palm Companies is not valid because the suit in Civil Case No. 0035 against Benjamin Romualdez as shareholder in the Palm Companies is not a suit against the latter. The Court has held, contrary to the assailed Sandiganbayan Resolution in G.R. No. 173082, that failure to implead these corporations as defendants and merely annexing a list of such corporations to the complaints is a violation of their right to due process for it would be, in effect, disregarding their distinct and separate personality without a hearing. Here, the Palm Companies were merely mentioned as Item Nos. 47 and 48, Annex A of the Complaint ,as among the corporations where defendant Romualdez owns shares of stocks. Furthermore, while the writ of sequestration was issued on October 27, 1986, the Palm Companies were impleaded in the case only in 1997, or already a decade from the ratification of the Constitution in 1987, way beyond the prescribed period.

The argument that the beneficial owner of these corporations was, anyway, impleaded as party-defendant can only be interpreted as a tacit admission of the failure to file the corresponding judicial action against said corporations pursuant to the constitutional mandate. Whether or not the impleaded defendant in Civil Case No. 0035 is indeed the beneficial owner of the Palm Companies is a matter which the PCGG merely assumes and still has to prove in said case. The sequestration order issued against the Palm Companies is therefore deemed automatically lifted due to the failure of the Republic to commence the proper judicial action or to implead them therein within the period under the Constitution. However, the lifting of the writ of sequestration will not necessarily be fatal to the main case since the same does not ipso facto mean that the sequestered properties are, in fact, not ill-gotten. The effect of the lifting of the sequestration will merely be the termination of the government's role as conservator. In other words, the PCGG may no longer exercise administrative or housekeeping powers, and its nominees may no longer vote the sequestered shares to enable them to sit in the corporate board of the subject company.

The Republic, through the PCGG, may argue that it has substantially complied with the Constitutional requirements to support its sequestration order when it filed an amended complaint which impleaded the Palm Companies, and which was subsequently admitted by the Sandiganbayan. Even so, a careful perusal of the records reveals the existence of legal and factual grounds to warrant the lifting of the writ of sequestration against the assets of the Palm Companies.

Since the Republic did not originally include the Palm Companies in Civil Case No. 0035, the Sandiganbayan issued a Resolution ordering said companies to be impleaded, which was affirmed by the Court in G.R. No. 90667 on November 5, 1991. The Court declared in said case that the Palm Companies are real parties-in-interest in Civil Case No. 0035, because they still appear to be the registered owners of the remaining disputed shares. That Romualdez is considered as their true or real owner is just a claim that still needs to be proved in court. Section 2, Rule 3 of the Rules of Court states:

Sec. 2. Parties in interest. – A real party-in-interest is the party who stands to be benefited or injured by the judgment in the suit, or the party entitled to the avails of the suit. Unless otherwise authorized by law or these Rules, every action must beprosecuted or defended in the name of the real party-in-interest.

Pursuant to said order, the Republic filed an amended complaint which named the Palm Companies as defendants. Thereafter, the companies filed a Motion for Bill of Particulars for the Republic toclarify certain matters in its amended complaint. Upon submission of the bill of particulars, the Palm Companies filed a motion to dismiss the Republic's complaint. Later, the Sandiganbayan, sustained by the Court in G.R. No. 189771, granted said motion to dismiss. The Sandiganbayan thus pronounced:

> Clearly, as in the previously discussed paragraphs, the above answers set forth by the plaintiff in its Bill of Particulars are indefinite and deficient inasmuch as the question of what are the alleged illegally acquired funds or properties of the Palm Avenue Companies which they are liable to return, remains unanswered, a product of uncertainty.
>
> In sum, the allegations contained in plaintiff Republic's Bill of Particulars are incomplete and indefinite as they merely express conclusions of law and presumptions unsupported by factual premises.
>
> Furthermore, the details desired by defendants Palm Avenue Companies in their motion for bill of particulars, such as the acts constituting their involvement in the Marcoses' alleged scheme to pillage the nation's wealth, the alleged properties which they supposedly acquired illegally and therefore should return to the government, and other relevant facts, are not evidentiary in nature. On the contrary, those particulars are material facts that should be clearly and definitely averred in the complaint in order that the defendants may, in fairness, be informed of the claims against them to the end that they may be prepared to meet the issues at trial.

In view, therefore, of plaintiff Republic's failure to file the proper bill of particulars which would completely amplify the charges against defendant Palm Avenue Companies, and applying the abovequoted ruling of the High Court in the Virata case, this Court deems it just and proper to order the dismissal of the Third Amended Complaint in so far as the charges against the Palm Avenue Companies are concerned.

Finally, we sustain defendant-movants' argument that the failure of the plaintiff to sufficiently provide the ultimate and material facts they required in their motion for bill of particulars, makes the third amended complaint dismissible for failure to state a cause of action.

The Republic in the case at bar failed to file a proper bill of particulars which would completely clarify and amplify the charges against the Palm Companies. For said failure to comply with the graft court's order to file the required bill of particulars that would completely and fully inform the Palm Companies of the charges against them, the amended complaint impleading said companies necessarily failed to state a cause of action, warranting the dismissal of the case as to them. By the dismissal of the case as against the Palm Companies, there is ipso facto no more writ of sequestration to speak of.

OLONGAPO CITY, Petitioner, -versus - SUBIC WATER AND SEWERAGE CO., INC., Respondent
G.R. No. 171626, SECOND DIVISION, AUGUST 6, 2O14, BRION., J.

Subic Water clearly demonstrated that it was a separate corporate entity from OCWD. OCWD is just a ten percent (10%) shareholder of Subic Water. As a mere shareholder, OCWD's juridical personality cannot be equated nor confused with that of Subic Water. It is basic incorporation law that a corporation is a juridical entity vested with a legal personality separate and distinct from those acting for and in its behalf and, in general, from the people comprising it.

FACTS:

Petitioner filed a complaint for sum of money and damages against OCWD. Among others, petitioner alleged that OCWD failed to pay its electricity bills to petitioner and remit its payment under the contract to pay, pursuant to OCWD's acquisition of petitioner's water system

In the interim, OCWD entered into a Joint Venture Agreement (JVA) with Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority (SBMA), Biwater International Limited (Biwater), and D.M. Consunji, Inc. (DMCI) on November 24, 1996. Pursuant to this agreement, Subic Water– a new corporate entity – was incorporated.

Subic Water was granted the franchise to operate and to carry on the business of providing water and sewerage services in the Subic Bay Free Port Zone, as well as in Olongapo City. Hence, Subic Water took over OCWD's water operations in Olongapo City.

To finally settle their money claims against each other, petitioner and OCWD entered into a compromise agreement on June 4, 1997.

The compromise agreement also contained a provision regarding the parties' request that Subic Water, Philippines, which took over the operations of the defendant Olongapo City Water District be made the co-maker for OCWD's obligations. Mr. Noli Aldip, then chairman of Subic Water, acted as its representative and signed the agreement on behalf of Subic Water.

Subsequently, the parties submitted the compromise agreement to RTC Olongapo and was approved.

Pursuant to the compromise agreement and in payment of OCWD's obligations to petitioner, petitioner and OCWD executed a Deed of Assignment on November 24, 1997. OCWD assigned all of its rights in the JVA in favor of the petitioner, including but not limited to the assignment of its shares, lease payments, regulatory assistance fees and other receivables arising out of or related to the Joint Venture Agreement and the Lease Agreement. On December 15, 1998, OCWD was judicially dissolved.

The petitioner filed a motion for the issuance of a writ of execution with the trial court. In its July 23, 1999 order, the trial court granted the motion, but did not issue the corresponding writ of execution. Almost four years later, on May 30, 2003, the petitioner, through its new counsel, filed a notice of appearance with urgent motion/manifestation and prayed again for the issuance of a writ of execution against OCWD. A certain Atty. Segundo Mangohig, claiming to be OCWD's former counsel, filed a manifestation alleging that OCWD had already been dissolved and that Subic Water is now the former OCWD.

Because of this assertion, Subic Water also filed a manifestation informing the trial court that as borne out by the articles of incorporation and general information sheet of Subic Water x x x defendant OCWD is not Subic Water. The manifestation also indicated that OCWD was only a ten percent (10%) shareholder of Subic Water; and that its 10% share was already in the process of being transferred to petitioner pursuant to the Deed of Assignment dated November 24, 1997.

The trial court granted the motion for execution and directed its issuance against OCWD and/or Subic Water.

The trial court denied Subic Water's special appearance, motion for reconsideration, and its motion to quash. Subic Water then filed a petition for certiorari with the CA. CA granted Subic Water's petition for certiorari and reversed the trial court's rulings.

ISSUES:

(1) Whether Subic Water could be held solidarily liable under the writ of execution since it was identified as OCWD's co-maker in the compromise agreement (NO)

(2)Whether OCWD and Subic Water are two separate and different entities (YES)

RULING:

(1)
An examination of the compromise agreement reveals that it was not accompanied by any document showing a grant of authority to Mr. Noli Aldip to sign on behalf of Subic Water.

Mr. Noli Aldip signed the compromise agreement purely in his own capacity. Moreover, the compromise agreement did not expressly provide that Subic Water consented to become OCWD's co-maker. As worded, the compromise agreement merely provided that both parties request Subic Water, Philippines, which took over the operations of Olongapo City Water District be made as co-maker [for the obligations above-cited].This request was never forwarded to Subic Water's board of directors. Even if due notification had been made (which does not appear in the records), Subic Water's board does not appear to have given any approval to such request. No document such as the minutes of Subic Water's board of directors' meeting or a secretary's certificate, purporting to be an authorization to Mr. Aldip to conform to the compromise agreement, was ever presented. In effect, Mr. Aldip's act of signing the compromise agreement was outside of his authority to undertake.

Since Mr. Aldip was never authorized and there was no showing that Subic Water's articles of incorporation or by-laws granted him such authority, then the compromise agreement he signed cannot bind Subic Water. Subic Water cannot likewise be made a surety or even a guarantor for OCWD's obligations. OCWD's debts under the compromise agreement are its own corporate obligations to petitioner.

(2)
Subic Water clearly demonstrated that it was a separate corporate entity from OCWD. OCWD is just a ten percent (10%) shareholder of Subic Water. As a mere shareholder, OCWD's juridical personality cannot be equated nor confused with that of Subic Water. It is basic incorporation law that a corporation is a juridical entity vested with a legal personality separate and distinct from those acting for and in its behalf and, in general, from the people comprising it. Under this corporate reality, Subic

Water cannot be held liable for OCWD's corporate obligations in the same manner that OCWD cannot be held liable for the obligations incurred by Subic Water as a separate entity. The corporate veil should not and cannot be pierced unless it is clearly established that the separate and distinct personality of the corporation was used to justify a wrong, protect fraud, or perpetrate a deception.

In Concept Builders, Inc. v. NLRC, the Court enumerated the possible probative factors of identity which could justify the application of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil. These are:

(1) Stock ownership by one or common ownership of both corporations;

(2) Identity of directors and officers;

(3) The manner of keeping corporate books and records; and

(4) Methods of conducting the business.

The burden of proving the presence of any of these probative factors lies with the one alleging it. Unfortunately, petitioner simply claimed that Subic Water took over OCWD's water operations in Olongapo City. Apart from this allegation, petitioner failed to demonstrate any link to justify the construction that Subic Water and OCWD are one and the same.

Under this evidentiary situation, our duty is to respect the separate and distinct personalities of these two juridical entities.

GERARDO LANUZA, JR. AND ANTONIO O. OLBES, Petitioner, -versus - BF CORPORATION, SHANGRI-LA PROPERTIES, INC., ALFREDO C. RAMOS, RUFO B. COLAYCO, MAXIMO G. LICAUCO III, AND BENJAMIN C. RAMOS, Respondent

G.R. No. 174938, SECOND DIVISION, OCTOBER 1, 2014, LEONEN., J.

Corporate representatives may be compelled to submit to arbitration proceedings pursuant to a contract entered into by the corporation they represent if there are allegations of bad faith or malice in their acts representing the corporation.

Thus, in cases alleging solidary liability with the corporation or praying for the piercing of the corporate veil, parties who are normally treated as distinct individuals should be made to participate in the arbitration proceedings in order to determine if such distinction should indeed be disregarded and, if so, to determine the extent of their liabilities.

In this case, the Arbitral Tribunal rendered a decision, finding that BF Corporation failed to prove the existence of circumstances that render petitioners and the other directors solidarily liable. It ruled that petitioners and Shangri-La's other directors were not liable for the contractual obligations of Shangri-La to BF Corporation. The Arbitral Tribunal's decision was made with the participation of petitioners, albeit with their continuing objection. In view of our discussion above, we rule that petitioners are bound by such decision.

FACTS:

In 1993, BF Corporation filed a collection complaint with the Regional Trial Court against Shangri-Laand the members of its board of directors: Alfredo C. Ramos, Rufo B.Colayco, Antonio O. Olbes, Gerardo Lanuza, Jr., Maximo G. Licauco III, and Benjamin C. Ramos.

BF Corporation alleged in its complaint that on December 11, 1989 and May 30, 1991, it entered into agreements with Shangri-La wherein it undertook to construct for Shangri-La a mall and a multilevel parking structure along EDSA.

BF Corporation eventually completed the construction of the buildings. Shangri-La allegedly took possession of the buildings while still owing BF Corporation an outstanding balance.

BF Corporation alleged that despite repeated demands, Shangri-La refused to pay the balance owed to it. It also alleged that the Shangri-La's directors were in bad faith in directing Shangri-La's affairs. Therefore, they should be held jointly and severally liable with Shangri-La for its obligations as well as for the damages that BF Corporation incurred as a result of Shangri-La's default.

On August 3, 1993, Shangri-La, Alfredo C. Ramos, Rufo B. Colayco, Maximo G. Licauco III, and Benjamin C. Ramos filed a motion to suspend the proceedings in view of BF Corporation's failure to submit its dispute to arbitration, in accordance with the arbitration clause provided in its contract.

BF Corporation opposed the motion to suspend proceedings which was denied by RTC.

In the November 18, 1993 order, the Regional Trial Court denied the motion to suspend proceedings.

On October 27, 1998, the trial court issued the order directing the parties to conduct the proceedings in accordance with Republic Act No. 876.

Shangri-La filed an omnibus motion and BF Corporation an urgent motion for clarification, both seeking to clarify the term, "parties," and whether Shangri-La's directors should be included in the arbitration proceedings and served with separate demands for arbitration.

Petitioners filed their comment on Shangri-La's and BF Corporation's motions, praying that they be excluded from the arbitration proceedings for being non-parties to Shangri-La's and BF Corporation's agreement.

On July 28, 2003, the trial court issued the order directing service of demands for arbitration upon all defendants in BF Corporation's complaint. According to the trial court, Shangri-La's directors were interested parties who "must also be served with a demand for arbitration to give them the opportunity to ventilate their side of the controversy, safeguard their interest and fend off their respective positions."Petitioners' motion for reconsideration of this order was denied by the trial court

Petitioners argue that they cannot be held personally liable for corporate acts or obligations. The corporation is a separate being, and nothing justifies BF Corporation's allegation that they are solidarily liable with Shangri-La. Neither did they bind themselves personally nor did they undertake to shoulder Shangri-La's obligations should it fail in its obligations. BF Corporation also failed to establish fraud or bad faith on their part.

Petitioners also argue that they are third parties to the contract between BF Corporation and Shangri-La. Provisions including arbitration stipulations should bind only the parties. Based on our arbitration laws, parties who are strangers to an agreement cannot be compelled to arbitrate.
Petitioners point out that our arbitration laws were enacted to promote the autonomy of parties in resolving their disputes. Compelling them to submit to arbitration is against this purpose and may be tantamount to stipulating for the parties.

ISSUE:

Whether petitioners should be made parties to the arbitration proceedings, pursuant to the arbitration clause provided in the contract between BF Corporation and Shangri-La (YES)

RULING:

We rule that petitioners may be compelled to submit to the arbitration proceedings in accordance with Shangri-La and BF Corporation's agreement, in order to determine if the distinction between Shangri-La's personality and their personalities should be disregarded.

This jurisdiction adopts a policy in favor of arbitration. Arbitration allows the parties to avoid litigation and settle disputes amicably and more expeditiously by themselves and through their choice of arbitrators.

The policy in favor of arbitration has been affirmed in our Civil Code, which was approved as early as 1949. It was later institutionalized by the approval of Republic Act No. 876, which expressly authorized, made valid, enforceable, and irrevocable parties' decision to submit their controversies, including incidental issues, to arbitration.

Petitioners' main argument arises from the separate personality given to juridical persons vis-à-vis their directors, officers, stockholders, and agents. Since they did not sign the arbitration agreement in any capacity, they cannot be forced to submit to the jurisdiction of the Arbitration Tribunal in accordance with the arbitration agreement. Moreover, they had already resigned as directors of Shangri-Laat the time of the alleged default.

Indeed, as petitioners point out, their personalities as directors of Shangri-La are separate and distinct from Shangri-La.

A corporation is an artificial entity created by fiction of law. This means that while it is not a person, naturally, the law gives it a distinct personality and treats it as such. A corporation, in the legal sense, is an individual with a personality that is distinct and separate from other persons including its stockholders, officers, directors, representatives, and other juridical entities. The law vests in corporations rights, powers, and attributes as if they were natural persons with physical existence and capabilities to act on their own.78 For instance, they have the power to sue and enter into transactions or contracts.

As a general rule, therefore, a corporation's representative who did not personally bind himself or herself to an arbitration agreement cannot be forced to participate in arbitration proceedings made pursuant to an agreement entered into by the corporation. He or she is generally not considered a party to that agreement.

However, there are instances when the distinction between personalities of directors, officers, and representatives, and of the corporation, are disregarded. We call this piercing the veil of corporate fiction.

When there are allegations of bad faith or malice against corporate directors or representatives, it becomes the duty of courts or tribunals to determine if these persons and the corporation should be treated as one. Without a trial, courts and tribunals have no basis for determining whether the veil of corporate fiction should be pierced. Courts or tribunals do not have such prior knowledge. Thus, the courts or tribunals must first determine whether circumstances exist to warrant the courts or tribunals to disregard the distinction between the corporation and the persons representing it. The determination of these circumstances must be made by one tribunal or court in a proceeding participated in by all parties involved, including current representatives of the corporation, and those persons whose personalities are impliedly the same as the corporation. This is because when the court or tribunal finds that circumstances exist warranting the piercing of the corporate veil, the corporate representatives are treated as the corporation itself and should be held liable for corporate acts. The corporation's distinct personality is disregarded, and the corporation is seen as a mere aggregation of persons undertaking a business under the collective name of the corporation.

Hence, when the directors, as in this case, are impleaded in a case against a corporation, alleging malice or bad faith on their part in directing the affairs of the corporation, complainants are effectively alleging that the directors and the corporation are not acting as separate entities. They are alleging that the acts or omissions by the corporation that violated their rights are also the directors' acts or omissions. They are alleging that contracts executed by the corporation are contracts executed by the directors. Complainants effectively pray that the corporate veil be pierced because the cause of action between the corporation and the directors is the same.

In that case, complainants have no choice but to institute only one proceeding against the parties. Under the Rules of Court, filing of multiple suits for a single cause of action is prohibited. Institution of more than one suit for the same cause of action constitutes splitting the cause of action, which is a ground for the dismissal of the others.

However, in ruling that petitioners may be compelled to submit to the arbitration proceedings, we are not overturning Heirs of Augusto Salas wherein this court affirmed the basic arbitration principle that only parties to an arbitration agreement may be compelled to submit to arbitration. In that case, this court recognized that persons other than the main party may be compelled to submit to arbitration, e.g., assignees and heirs. Assignees and heirs may be considered parties to an arbitration agreement entered into by their assignor because the assignor's rights and obligations are transferred to them upon assignment. In other words, the assignor's rights and obligations become their own rights and obligations. In the same way, the corporation's obligations are treated as the representative's obligations when the corporate veil is pierced. Moreover, in Heirs of Augusto Salas, this court affirmed its policy against multiplicity of suits and unnecessary delay. This court said that "to split the proceeding into arbitration for some parties and trial for other parties would "result in multiplicity of suits, duplicitous procedure and unnecessary delay." This court also intimated that the interest of justice would be best observed if it adjudicated rights in a single proceeding. While the facts of that case prompted this court to direct the trial court to proceed to determine the issues of that case, it did not prohibit courts from allowing the case to proceed to arbitration, when circumstances warrant.

Hence, the issue of whether the corporation's acts in violation of complainant's rights, and the incidental issue of whether piercing of the corporate veil is warranted, should be determined in a single proceeding. Such finding would determine if the corporation is merely an aggregation of persons whose liabilities must be treated as one with the corporation.

However, when the courts disregard the corporation's distinct and separate personality from its directors or officers, the courts do not say that the corporation, in all instances and for all purposes, is the same as its directors, stockholders, officers, and agents. It does not result in an absolute confusion of personalities of the corporation and the persons composing or representing it. Courts merely discount the distinction and treat them as one, in relation to a specific act, in order to extend the terms of the contract and the liabilities for all damages to erring corporate officials who participated in the corporation's illegal acts. This is done so that the legal fiction cannot be used to perpetrate illegalities and injustices.

Thus, in cases alleging solidary liability with the corporation or praying for the piercing of the corporate veil, parties who are normally treated as distinct individuals should be made to participate in the arbitration proceedings in order to determine if such distinction should indeed be disregarded and, if so, to determine the extent of their liabilities.

In this case, the Arbitral Tribunal rendered a decision, finding that BF Corporation failed to prove the existence of circumstances that render petitioners and the other directors solidarily liable. It ruled that petitioners and Shangri-La's other directors were not liable for the contractual obligations of Shangri-La to BF Corporation. The Arbitral Tribunal's decision was made with the participation of petitioners, albeit with their continuing objection. In view of our discussion above, we rule that petitioners are bound by such decision.

FVR SKILLS AND SERVICES EXPONENTS, INC. (SKILLEX), FULGENCIO V. RANA and MONINA R. BURGOS, Petitioner, -versus- JOVERT SEVA ET AL., Respondent
G.R. No. 200857, SECOND DIVISION, OCTOBER 22, 2O14, BRION, J.

A director or officer shall only be personally liable for the obligations of the corporation, if the following conditions concur: (1) the complainant alleged in the complaint that the director or officer assented to patently unlawful acts of the corporation, or that the officer was guilty of gross negligence or bad faith; and (2) the complainant clearly and convincingly proved such unlawful acts, negligence or bad faith.

In the present case, the respondents failed to show the existence of the first requisite. They did not specifically allege in their complaint that Rana and Burgos willfully and knowingly assented to the petitioner's patently unlawful act of forcing the respondents to sign the dubious employment contracts in exchange for their salaries. The respondents also failed to prove that Rana and Burgos had been guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation.

FACTS:

Petitioner entered into a Contract of Janitorial Service (service contract) with Robinsons Land Corporation (Robinsons). Both agreed that the petitioner shall supply janitorial, manpower and sanitation services to Robinsons Place Ermita Mall for a period of one year - from January 1, 2008 to December 31, 2008.9 Pursuant to this, the respondents were deployed to Robinsons.

Halfway through the service contract, the petitioner asked the respondents to execute individual contracts which stipulated that their respective employments shall end on December 31, 2008, unless earlier terminated.

The petitioner and Robinsons no longer extended their contract of janitorial services. Consequently, the petitioner dismissed the respondents as they were project employees whose duration of employment was dependent on the petitioner's service contract with Robinsons.

The respondents responded to the termination of their employment by filing a complaint for illegal dismissal with the NLRC. They argued that they were not project employees; they were regular employees who may only be dismissed for just or authorized causes.

The LA ruled in the petitioner's favor.

CA affirmed and held held that petitioners Fulgencio V. Rana (Rana) and Monina R. Burgos (Burgos), the president and general manager of FVR Skills and Services Exponents, Inc., respectively, are solidarily liable with the corporation for the payment of the respondents' monetary awards. As corporate officers, they acted in bad faith when they intimidated the respondents in the course of asking them to sign their individual employment contracts

ISSUE:

> Whether petitioners Rana and Burgo, the president and general manager of FVR Skills and Services Exponents, Inc., respectively, are solidarily liable with the corporation for the payment of the respondents' monetary awards (NO)

RULING:

A corporation is a juridical entity with legal personality separate and distinct from those acting for and in its behalf and, in general, from the people comprising it. The general rule is that, obligations incurred by the corporation, acting through its directors, officers and employees, are its sole liabilities.

A director or officer shall only be personally liable for the obligations of the corporation, if the following conditions concur: (1) the complainant alleged in the complaint that the director or officer assented to patently unlawful acts of the corporation, or that the officer was guilty of gross negligence or bad faith; and (2) the complainant clearly and convincingly proved such unlawful acts, negligence or bad faith.

In the present case, the respondents failed to show the existence of the first requisite. They did not specifically allege in their complaint that Rana and Burgos willfully and knowingly assented to the petitioner's patently unlawful act of forcing the respondents to sign the dubious employment contracts in exchange for their salaries. The respondents also failed to prove that Rana and Burgos had been guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation. To hold an officer personally liable for the debts of the corporation, and thus pierce the veil of corporate fiction, it is necessary to clearly and convincingly establish the bad faith or wrongdoing of such officer, since bad faith is never presumed. Because the respondents were not able to clearly show the definite participation of Burgos and Rana in their illegal dismissal, we uphold the general rule that corporate officers are not personally liable for the money claims of the discharged employees, unless they acted with evident malice and bad faith in terminating their employment.

STRADCOM CORPORATION AND JOSE A. CHUA, Petitioners, -versus- JOYCE ANNABELLE L. ORPILLA., Respondent
G.R. No. 206800, FIRST DIVISION, JULY 2, 2O18, TIJAM, J.

It is well-settled that a corporation has its own legal personality separate and distinct from those of its stockholders, directors or officers. Absence of any evidence that a corporate officer and/or director has exceeded their authority, or their acts are tainted with malice or bad faith, they cannot be held personally liable for their official acts. Here, there was neither any proof that Chua acted without or in excess of his authority nor was motivated by personal ill-will towards respondent to be solidarily liable with the company..

FACTS:

Joyce Anabelle L. Orpilla (respondent) was employed by Stradcom as Human Resources Administration Department (HRAD) Head, under a probationary status for six months.

Chua, the President and Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of Stradcom, issued a Memorandum addressed to the Chief Operating Officer (COO), Ramon G. Reyes (Reyes), and Chief Financial Officer (CPO), Raul C. Pagdanganan (Pagdanganan), announcing the reorganization of the HRAD.

After the turn-over of the documents and equipment of HRAD, respondent inquired from Chua as to her status in the light of the said reorganization. Chua, on the other hand, replied that the management has lost its trust and confidence in her and it would be better if she resigned. Respondent protested the resignation and insisted that if there were charges against her, she was open for formal investigation. Chua, however, was not able to come up with any charges.

On January 13, 2003, per advice of Atty. Pilapil, respondent reported for work but the guards refused her entry and advised her to take a leave of absence.

Respondent filed a complaint for constructive dismissal with monetary claims of backwages, attorney's fees and damages.

LA ruled that respondent was illegally dismissed and Chua is solidarily liable with Stradcom for the payment of the monetary awards to respondent which the NLRC reversed. CA reversed NLRC.

ISSUE:

Whether Chua must be held solidarily liable (NO)

RULING:

The solidary liability of Chua as a corporate officer is not proper and must be recalled.

It is well-settled that a corporation has its own legal personality separate and distinct from those of its stockholders, directors or officers. Absence of any evidence that a corporate officer and/or director has exceeded their authority, or their acts are tainted with malice or bad faith, they cannot be held personally liable for their official acts. Here, there was neither any proof that Chua acted without or in excess of his authority nor was motivated by personal ill-will towards respondent to be solidarily liable with the company. We quote with affirmation the NLRC's pronouncement, viz:

> Finally, on the issue of whether or not the Labor Arbiter committed manifest error in ordering appellant Chua solidarily liable with appellant corporation, we have to rule in the affirmative. Appellant Chua cannot be made solidarily liable with appellant corporation for any award in favor of appellee. Appellant corporation is separate and distinct from Appellant Chua.
>
> x x x x
>
> Appellant Chua's acts were official acts, done in his capacity as an officer of appellant corporation on its behalf. There is no showing of any act, or that he acted without or in excess of his authority or was motivated by personal ill-will toward appellee. Stated simply, appellant Chua was merely doing his job. In fact, he even tried to save appellee from undue embarrassment.

A. LIABILITY FOR TORTS AND CRIMES

PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK, Petitioner, -versus- THE COURT OF APPEALS, RITA GUECO TAPNIO, CECILIO GUECO AND THE PHILIPPINE AMERICAN GENERAL INSURANCE COMPANY, INC., Respondents
G.R. No. L-27155, SECOND DIVISION, MAY 18, 1978, ANTONIO, J.

A corporation is civilly liable in the same manner as natural persons for torts, because "generally speaking, the rules governing the liability of a principal or master for a tort committed by an agent or servant are the same whether the principal or master be a natural person or a corporation, and whether the servant or agent be a natural or artificial person. All of the authorities agree that a principal or master is liable for every tort which he expressly directs or authorizes, and this is just as true of a corporation as of a natural person

In this case, while petitioner had the ultimate authority of approving or disapproving the proposed lease since the quota was mortgaged to the Bank, the latter certainly cannot escape its responsibility of observing, for the protection of the interest of private respondents, that degree of care, precaution and vigilance which the circumstances justly demand in approving or disapproving the lease of said sugar quota.

FACTS:

Mrs. Tapnio had an export sugar quota of 1,000 piculs for the agricultural year 1956-1957 which she did not need. She agreed to allow Mr. Jacobo C. Tuazon to use said quota for the consideration of P2,500.00 (Exh. "4"-Gueco). This agreement was called a contract of lease of sugar allotment.

'At the time of the agreement, Mrs. Tapnio was indebted to the Philippine National Bank at San Fernando, Pampanga. Her indebtedness was known as a crop loan and was secured by a mortgage on her standing crop including her sugar quota allocation for the agricultural year corresponding to said standing crop. This arrangement was necessary in order that when Mrs. Tapnio harvests, the P.N.B., having a lien on the crop, may effectively enforce collection against her. Her sugar cannot be exported without sugar quota allotment. Sometimes, however, a planter harvests less sugar than her quota, so her excess quota is utilized by another who pays her for its use. This is the arrangement entered into between Mrs. Tapnio and Mr. Tuazon regarding the former's excess quota for 1956-1957

'Since the quota was mortgaged to the P.N.B., the contract of lease had to be approved by said Bank. The same was submitted to the branch manager at San Fernando, Pampanga. The latter required the parties to raise the consideration of P2.80 per picul or a total of P2,800.00 informing them that "the minimum lease rental acceptable to the Bank, is P2.80 per picul." In a letter addressed to the branch manager on August 10, 1956, Mr. Tuazon informed the manager that he was agreeable to raising the consideration to P2.80 per picul. He further informed the manager that he was ready to pay said amount as the funds were in his folder which was kept in the bank.

'Explaining the meaning of Tuazon's statement as to the funds, it was stated by him that he had an approved loan from the bank but he had not yet utilized it as he was intending to use it to pay for the quota. Hence, when he said the amount needed to pay Mrs. Tapnio was in his folder which was in the bank, he meant and the manager understood and knew he had an approved loan available to be used in payment of the quota. In said Exh. "6-Gueco", Tuazon also informed the manager that he would wait for a notice from the manager as to the time when the bank needed the money so that Tuazon could sign the corresponding promissory note.'

Further consideration of the evidence discloses that when the branch manager of the Philippine National Bank at San Fernando recommended the approval of the contract of lease at the price of P2.80 per picul (Exh. 11-Bank), whose recommendation was concurred in by the Vice-President of said Bank, J. V. Buenaventura, the board of directors required that the amount be raised to P3.00 per picul. This act of the board of directors was communicated to Tuazon, who in turn asked for a reconsideration thereof. On November 19, 1956, the branch manager submitted Tuazon's request for reconsideration to the board of directors with another recommendation for the approval of the lease at P2.80 per picul, but the board returned the recommendation unacted upon, considering that the current price prevailing at the time was P3.00 per picul.

The parties were notified of the refusal on the part of the board of directors of the Bank to grant the motion for reconsideration. The matter stood as it was until February 22, 1957, when Tuazon wrote a letter informing the Bank that he was no longer interested to continue the deal, referring to the lease of sugar quota allotment in favor of defendant Rita Gueco Tapnio. The result is that the latter lost the sum of P2,800.00 which she should have received from Tuazon and which she could have paid the Bank to cancel off her indebtedness.

The court below held, and in this holding we concur, that failure of the negotiation for the lease of the sugar quota allocation of Rita Gueco Tapnio to Tuazon was due to the fault of the directors of the Philippine National Bank.

ISSUE:

Whether petitioner is liable for the damage caused (YES)

RULING:

As observed by the trial court, time is of the essence in the approval of the lease of sugar quota allotments, since the same must be utilized during the milling season, because any allotment which is not filled during such milling season may be reallocated by the Sugar Quota Administration to other holders of allotments. There was no proof that there was any other person at that time willing to lease the sugar quota allotment of private respondents for a price higher than P2.80 per picul. "The fact that there were isolated transactions wherein the consideration for the lease was P3.00 a picul", according to the trial court, "does not necessarily mean that there are always ready takers for said price." The unreasonableness of the position adopted by the petitioner's Board of Directors is shown by the fact that the difference between the amount of P2.80 per picul offered by Tuazon and the P3.00 per picul demanded by the Board amounted only to a total sum of P200.00. Considering that all the accounts of Rita Gueco Tapnio with the Bank were secured by chattel mortgage on standing crops, assignment of leasehold rights and interests on her properties, and surety bonds and that she had apparently "the means to pay her obligation to the Bank, as shown by the fact that she has been granted several sugar crop loans of the total value of almost P80,000.00 for the agricultural years from 1952 to 1956", there was no reasonable basis for the Board of Directors of petitioner to have rejected the lease agreement because of a measly sum of P200.00.

While petitioner had the ultimate authority of approving or disapproving the proposed lease since the quota was mortgaged to the Bank, the latter certainly cannot escape its responsibility of observing, for the protection of the interest of private respondents, that degree of care, precaution and vigilance which the circumstances justly demand in approving or disapproving the lease of said sugar quota. The law makes it imperative that every person "must in the exercise of his rights and in the performance of his duties, act with justice, give everyone his due, and observe honesty and good faith." This petitioner failed to do. Certainly, it knew that the agricultural year was about to expire, that by its disapproval of the lease private respondents would be unable to utilize the sugar quota in question. In failing to observe the reasonable degree of care and vigilance which the surrounding circumstances reasonably impose, petitioner is consequently liable for the damages caused on private respondents. Under Article 21 of the New Civil Code, "any person who wilfully causes loss or injury to another in a manner that is contrary to morals, good customs or public policy shall compensate the latter for the damage." The afore-cited provisions on human relations were intended to expand the concept of torts in this jurisdiction by granting adequate legal remedy for the untold number of moral wrongs which is impossible for human foresight to specifically provide in the statutes.

A corporation is civilly liable in the same manner as natural persons for torts, because "generally speaking, the rules governing the liability of a principal or master for a tort committed by an agent or servant are the same whether the principal or master be a natural person or a corporation, and whether the servant or agent be a natural or artificial person. All of the authorities agree that a principal or master is liable for every tort which he expressly directs or authorizes, and this is just as true of a corporation as of a natural person. A corporation is liable, therefore, whenever a tortious act is committed by an officer or agent under express direction or authority from the stockholders or members acting as a body, or, generally, from the directors as the governing body."

SERGIO F. NAGUIAT, DOING BUSINESS UNDER THE NAME AND STYLE SERGIO F. NAGUIAT ENT., INC., & CLARK FIELD TAXI, INC., Petitioners, -versus- NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS COMMISSION (THIRD DIVISION), NATIONAL ORGANIZATION OF WORKINGMEN AND ITS MEMBERS, LEONARDO T. GALANG, ET AL., Respondents
G.R. No. 116123, THIRD DIVISION, MARCH 13, 1997, PANGANIBAN, J.

In this case, it appears that they were confused on the personalities of Sergio F. Naguiat as an individual who was the president of CFTI, and Sergio F. Naguiat Enterprises, Inc., as a separate corporate entity with a separate business. They presumed that Sergio F. Naguiat, who was at the same time a stockholder and director of Sergio F. Naguiat Enterprises, Inc., was managing and controlling the taxi business on behalf of the latter

FACTS:
Herein private respondents alleged that they were regular employees of Naguiat Enterprises, although their individual applications for employment were approved by CFTI. They claimed to have been assigned to Naguiat Enterprises after having been hired by CFTI, and that the former thence managed, controlled and supervised their employment. They averred further that they were entitled to separation pay based on their latest daily earnings of US$15.00 for working sixteen (16) days a month.

In their position paper submitted to the labor arbiter, herein petitioners claimed that the cessation of business of CFTI on November 26, 1991, was due to "great financial losses and lost business opportunity" resulting from the phase-out of Clark Air Base brought about by the Mt. Pinatubo eruption and the expiration of the RP-US military bases agreement. They admitted that CFTI had agreed with the drivers' union, through its President Eduardo Castillo who claimed to have had blanket authority to negotiate with CFTI in behalf of union members, to grant its taxi driver-employees separation pay equivalent to P500.00 for every year of service.

The labor arbiter, finding the individual complainants to be regular workers of CFTI, ordered the latter to pay them P1,200.00 for every year of service "for humanitarian consideration," setting aside the earlier agreement between CFTI and the drivers' union of P500.00 for every year of service.

NLRD affirmed the decision and held Sergio F. Naguiat Enterprises, which is headed by Sergio F. Naguiat and Antolin Naguiat, father and son at the same time the President and Vice-President and General Manager, respectively, should be joined as indispensable party whose liability is joint and several.

ISSUE:

(1) Naguiat enterprises is solidarily liable (NO)

(2) Whether CFTI president, Sergio Naguiat is solidarily liable (YES)
(3) Whether Antonio Naguiat is personally liable (NO)

RULING:
(1)
Private respondents failed to substantiate their claim that Naguiat Enterprises managed, supervised and controlled their employment. It appears that they were confused on the personalities of Sergio F. Naguiat as an individual who was the president of CFTI, and Sergio F. Naguiat Enterprises, Inc., as a separate corporate entity with a separate business. They presumed that Sergio F. Naguiat, who was at the same time a stockholder and director of Sergio F. Naguiat Enterprises, Inc., was managing and controlling the taxi business on behalf of the latter. A closer scrutiny and analysis of the records, however, evince the truth of the matter: that Sergio F. Naguiat, in supervising the taxi drivers and determining their employment terms, was rather carrying out his responsibilities as president of CFTI. Hence, Naguiat Enterprises as a separate corporation does not appear to be involved at all in the taxi business.

(2)
In the broader interest of justice, we, however, hold that Sergio F. Naguiat, in his capacity as president of CFTI, cannot be exonerated from joint and several liability in the payment of separation pay to individual respondents.

A.C. Ransom Labor Union-CCLU vs. NLRC 33 is the case in point. A.C. Ransom Corporation was a family corporation, the stockholders of which were members of the Hernandez family. In 1973, it filed an application for clearance to close or cease operations, which was duly granted by the Ministry of Labor and Employment, without prejudice to the right of employees to seek redress of grievance, if any. Backwages of 22 employees, who engaged in a strike prior to the closure, were subsequently computed at P164,984.00. Up to September 1976, the union filed about ten (10) motions for execution against the corporation, but none could be implemented, presumably for failure to find leviable assets of said corporation. In its last motion for execution, the union asked that officers and agents of the company be held personally liable for payment of the backwages. This was granted by the labor arbiter. In the corporation's appeal to the NLRC, one of the issues raised was: "Is the judgment against a corporation to reinstate its dismissed employees with backwages, enforceable against its officer and agents, in their individual, private and personal capacities, who were not parties in the case where the judgment was rendered!" The NLRC answered in the negative, on the ground that officers of a corporation are not liable personally for official acts unless they exceeded the scope of their authority.

On certiorari, this Court reversed the NLRC and upheld the labor arbiter. In imposing joint and several liability upon the company president, the Court, speaking through Mme. Justice Ameurfina Melencio-Herrera, ratiocinated this wise:

> (b) How can the foregoing (Articles 265 and 273 of the Labor Code) provisions be implemented when the employer is a corporation? The answer is found in Article 212(c) of the Labor Code which provides:
>
> (c) "Employer" includes any person acting in the interest of an employer, directly or indirectly. The term shall not include any labor organization or any of its officers or agents except when acting as employer.

> The foregoing was culled from Section 2 of RA 602, the Minimum Wage Law. Since RANSOM is an artificial person, it must have an officer who can be presumed to be the employer, being the "person acting in the interest of (the) employer" RANSOM. The corporation, only in the technical sense, is the employer.
>
> The responsible officer of an employer corporation can be held personally, not to say even criminally, liable for nonpayment of back wages. That is the policy of the law. . . .
>
> (c) If the policy of the law were otherwise, the corporation employer can have devious ways for evading payment of back wages. . . .
>
> (d) The record does not clearly identify "the officer or officers" of RANSOM directly responsible for failure to pay the back wages of the 22 strikers. In the absence of definite Proof in that regard, we believe it should be presumed that the responsible officer is the President of the corporation who can be deemed the chief operation officer thereof. Thus, in RA 602, criminal responsibility is with the "Manager or in his default, the person acting as such." In RANSOM. the President appears to be the Manager.

Sergio F. Naguiat, admittedly, was the president of CFTI who actively managed the business. Thus, applying the ruling in A.C. Ransom, he falls within the meaning of an "employer" as contemplated by the Labor Code, who may be held jointly and severally liable for the obligations of the corporation to its dismissed employees.

Moreover, petitioners also conceded that both CFTI and Naguiat Enterprises were "close family corporations" owned by the Naguiat family.

Nothing in the records show whether CFTI obtained "reasonably adequate liability insurance;" thus, what remains is to determine whether there was corporate tort.

Our jurisprudence is wanting as to the definite scope of "corporate tort." Essentially, "tort" consists in the violation of a right given or the omission of a duty imposed by law. 35 Simply stated, tort is a breach of a legal duty. Article 283 of the Labor Code mandates the employer to grant separation pay to employees in case of closure or cessation of operations of establishment or undertaking not due to serious business losses or financial reverses, which is the condition obtaining at bar. CFTI failed to comply with this law-imposed duty or obligation. Consequently, its stockholder who was actively engaged in the management or operation of the business should be held personally liable.

Furthermore, in MAM Realty Development vs. NLRC, Court recognized that a director or officer may still be held solidarily liable with a corporation by specific provision of law. Thus:

. . . A corporation, being a juridical entity, may act only through its directors, officers and employees. Obligations incurred by them, acting as such corporate agents, are not theirs but the direct accountabilities of the corporation they represent. True, solidary liabilities may at times be incurred but only when exceptional circumstances warrant such as, generally, in the following cases:

4. When a director, trustee or officer is made, by specific provision of law, personally liable for his corporate action. (footnotes omitted)

As pointed out earlier, the fifth paragraph of Section 100 of the Corporation Code specifically imposes personal liability upon the stockholder actively managing or operating the business and affairs of the close corporation.

In fact, in posting the surety bond required by this Court for the issuance of a temporary restraining order enjoining the execution of the assailed NLRC Resolutions, only Sergio F. Naguiat, in his individual and personal capacity, principally bound himself to comply with the obligation thereunder, i.e., "to guarantee the payment to private respondents of any damages which they may incur by reason of the issuance of a temporary restraining order sought, if it should be finally adjudged that said principals were not entitled thereto.

The Court here finds no application to the rule that a corporate officer cannot be held solidarily liable with a corporation in the absence of evidence that he had acted in bad faith or with malice. In the present case, Sergio Naguiat is held solidarily liable for corporate tort because he had actively engaged in the management and operation of CFTI, a close corporation.

(3)
Antolin T. Naguiat was the vice president of the CFTI. Although he carried the title of "general manager" as well, it had not been shown that he had acted in such capacity. Furthermore, no evidence on the extent of his participation in the management or operation of the business was proffered. In this light, he cannot be held solidarily liable for the obligations of CFTI and Sergio Naguiat to the private respondents."

GREGORIO SINGIAN, JR, Petitioners, -versus- THE HONORABLE SANDIGANBAYAN (Third Division), THE PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINES, and THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION ON GOOD GOVERNMENT, Respondents

G.R. Nos. 160577-94, SECOND DIVISION, DECEMBER 16, 2005, CHICO-NAZARIO, J.

True, the powers to increase capitalization and to offer or give collateral to secure indebtedness are lodged with the corporation's board of directors. However, this does not mean that the officers of the corporation other than the board of directors cannot be made criminally liable for their criminal acts if it can be proven that they participated therein. In the instant case, there is evidence that petitioner participated in the loan transactions when he signed the undertaking.

FACTS:
ISI applied for a five-year confirmed irrevocable deferred letter of credit amounting to US$2,500,000.00 (₱16,287,500.00) to finance its purchase of a complete line of machinery and equipment. The letter of credit was recommended to the PNB Board of Directors by then Senior Vice President, Mr. Constantino Bautista.

On 27 January 1972, the PNB approved the loan, subject to certain stipulations.

The Committee found that the loans extended to ISI bore characteristics of behest loans specifically for not having been secured with sufficient collaterals and obtained with undue haste.

Atty. Orlando L. Salvador, Presidential Commission On Good Government Consultant on detail with the Presidential Ad Hoc Committee on Behest Loans (Committee), filed with the Office of the Ombudsman a sworn complaint dated 20 March 1996, for violation of Section 3, paragraphs (e) and (g), of Republic Act No. 3019, as amended, against the following: Panfilo Domingo, former PNB President, Constantino Bautista, former PNB Senior Vice President, Domingo Ingco, former member of the PNB Board of Directors, John Does, former members of the PNB Board of Directors, Francisco Teodoro, President of ISI, Leticia Teodoro, Vice President of ISI, Marfina Singian, Incorporator of ISI, Tomas Teodoro, General Manager of ISI, and Gregorio Singian, Jr., Executive Vice President of ISI. The complaint, docketed as OMB-0-96-0967, was assigned to Graft Investigation Officer I Atty. Edgar R. Navales (Investigator Navales) of the Evaluation and Preliminary Investigation Bureau (EPIB) for investigation.

In a Resolution, Investigator Navales recommended the dismissal of the complaint on the grounds of prescription and insufficiency of evidence.

The recommendation of Investigator Navales was disapproved by then Ombudsman Aniano A. Desierto. Thereafter, the case was assigned to Special Prosecution Officer I Florita S. Linco (Prosecutor Linco) for review.

Prosecutor Linco found that probable cause existed to indict petitioner, among other respondents, and recommended that they be charged with violation of Section 3(e) and (g) of Rep. Act No. 3019. petitioner filed before the Sandiganbayan an Urgent Consolidated Motions for Reinvestigation.

On 31 August 2001, the Sandiganbayan issued an order granting petitioner's motion for reinvestigation. Pursuant thereto, the Office of the Special Prosecutor conducted the reinvestigation of Criminal Cases No. 26297 to No. 26314 through Special Prosecution Officer III Joselito R. Ferrer (Prosecutor Ferrer).

The recommendations of Prosecutor Ferrer exonerating petitioner and his co-accused of the charges were, however, disapproved by Ombudsman Simeon V. Marcelo.

From the adverse finding of the Ombudsman, petitioner filed before the Sandiganbayan a Motion for Re-determination of Existence of Probable Cause which was denied by the latter in a resolution dated 18 August 2003. Petitioner filed a motion for reconsideration which was eventually denied by the Sandiganbayan in a resolution dated 24 October 2003.

Hence, this petition for certiorari

Petitioner argues that he cannot be made criminally liable for ISI's failure to put up the additional capitalization and collaterals required by the undertaking because it is not his responsibility, but that of the board of directors of ISI, to comply with the same. As an Executive Vice President of ISI, he has no power to legally compel and cause it to comply with PNB's conditions stipulated in the undertaking. He added that implicit in the Sandiganbayan's finding is that there is no probable cause that has been established against petitioner in Criminal Cases No. 26297 to No. 26314 since the undertaking he signed covers specifically the deferred Letter of Credit for US$2,500,000.00 subject of Criminal Case No. 26297.

ISSUE:

Whether petitioner Singian is criminally responsible for ISI's purported failure to put up additional capitalization and collaterals (YES)

RULING:

True, the powers to increase capitalization and to offer or give collateral to secure indebtedness are lodged with the corporation's board of directors. However, this does not mean that the officers of the corporation other than the board of directors cannot be made criminally liable for their criminal acts if it can be proven that they participated therein. In the instant case, there is evidence that petitioner participated in the loan transactions when he signed the undertaking. As correctly pointed out by the Sandiganbayan:

> . . . The Court finds that although it is true that accused Gregorio Singian, Jr. is not a stockholder or director of Integrated Shoe, Inc. (ISI), the evidence on record, however, shows that aside from the fact that he was the Executive Vice President of Integrated Shoe, Inc. (ISI) during the time material to this case, he also executed a "Deed of Undertaking and Conformity to Bank Conditions" jointly with Francisco J. Teodoro, President of Integrated Shoe, Inc. and other officers of the corporation namely: Marfina T. Singian, Leticia T. Teodoro, Tomas T. Teodoro in connection with the application and granting by the PNB of a five year confirmed irrevocable, deferred loan Letter of Credit for US $2,500,000.00 (P16,287,500.00) in favor of the Integrated Shoe, Inc. (ISI), which loan remained unpaid by ISI.

A careful reading of the resolution of the respondent court reveals that it never mentioned that the undertaking was the only evidence that led it to its pronouncement that there exists probable cause against petitioner. In fact, the circumstances surrounding the granting of the first loan for US$2,500,000.00 which is subject matter of Criminal Case No. 26297 and the subsequent loan transactions which are the subject matters of Criminal Cases No. 26298 to No. 26314 appear at first blush to be connected with each other and form part of the whole design to prejudice the government.

THE EXECUTIVE SECRETARY, THE SECRETARY OF JUSTICE, THE SECRETARY OF LABOR AND EMPLOYMENT, AND THE SECRETARY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS, OWWA PUNO, ADMINISTRATOR, and POEA ADMINISTRATOR, Petitioners, -versus- THE HON. COURT OF APPEALS and ASIAN RECRUITMENT COUNCIL PHILIPPINE CHAPTER (ARCO-PHIL.), INC, Respondents

G.R. No. 131719, SECOND DIVISION, MAY 25, 2004, CALLEJO, SR., J.

True, the powers to increase capitalization and to offer or give collateral to secure indebtedness are lodged with the corporation's board of directors. However, this does not mean that the officers of the corporation other than the board of directors cannot be made criminally liable for their criminal acts if it can be proven that they participated therein. In the instant case, there is evidence that petitioner participated in the loan transactions when he signed the undertaking.

FACTS:

Republic Act No. 8042, otherwise known as the Migrant Workers and Overseas Filipinos Act of 1995, took effect on July 15, 1995. The Omnibus Rules and Regulations Implementing the Migrant Workers and Overseas Filipino Act of 1995 was, thereafter, published in the April 7, 1996 issue of the Manila Bulletin. However, even before the law took effect, the Asian Recruitment Council Philippine Chapter, Inc. (ARCO-Phil.) filed, on July 17, 1995, a petition for declaratory relief under Rule 63 of the Rules of Court with the Regional Trial Court of Quezon City to declare as unconstitutional Section 2, paragraph (g), Section 6, paragraphs (a) to (j), (l) and (m), Section 7, paragraphs (a) and (b), and Sections 9 and 10 of the law, with a plea for the issuance of a temporary restraining order and/or writ of preliminary injunction enjoining the respondents therein from enforcing the assailed provisions of the law.

In a supplement to its petition, the ARCO-Phil. alleged that Rep. Act No. 8042 was self-executory and that no implementing rules were needed. It prayed that the court issue a temporary restraining order to enjoin the enforcement of Section 6, paragraphs (a) to (m) on illegal recruitment, Section 7 on penalties for illegal recruitment, and Section 9 on venue of criminal actions for illegal recruitments.

On August 1, 1995, the trial court issued a temporary restraining order effective for a period of only twenty (20) days therefrom.

After the petitioners filed their comment on the petition, the ARCO-Phil. filed an amended petition, the amendments consisting in the inclusion in the caption thereof eleven (11) other corporations which it alleged were its members and which it represented in the suit, and a plea for a temporary restraining order enjoining the respondents from enforcing Section 6 subsection (i), Section 6 subsection (k) and paragraphs 15 and 16 thereof, Section 8, Section 10, paragraphs 1 and 2, and Sections 11 and 40 of Rep. Act No. 8042.

The respondent ARCO-Phil. assailed Section 2(g) and (i), Section 6 subsection (a) to (m), Section 7(a) to (b), and Section 10 paragraphs (1) and (2)

The respondent averred that the aforequoted provisions of Rep. Act No. 8042 violate Section 1, Article III of the Constitution. According to the respondent, Section 6(g) and (i) discriminated against unskilled workers and their families and, as such, violated the equal protection clause, as well as Article II, Section 126 and Article XV, Sections 17 and 3(3) of the Constitution. As the law encouraged the deployment of skilled Filipino workers, only overseas skilled workers are granted rights. The respondent stressed that unskilled workers also have the right to seek employment abroad. According to the respondent, the right of unskilled workers to due process is violated because they are prevented from finding employment and earning a living abroad. It cannot be argued that skilled workers are immune from abuses by employers, while unskilled workers are merely prone to such abuses. It was pointed out that both skilled and unskilled workers are subjected to abuses by foreign employers. Furthermore, the prohibition of the deployment of unskilled workers abroad would only encourage fly-by-night illegal recruiters.

According to the respondent, the grant of incentives to service contractors and manning agencies to the exclusion of all other licensed and authorized recruiters is an invalid classification. Licensed and authorized recruiters are thus deprived of their right to property and due process and to the "equality of the person." It is understandable for the law to prohibit illegal recruiters, but to discriminate against licensed and registered recruiters is unconstitutional.

The respondent, likewise, alleged that Section 6, subsections (a) to (m) is unconstitutional because licensed and authorized recruitment agencies are placed on equal footing with illegal recruiters. It contended that while the Labor Code distinguished between recruiters who are holders of licenses and non-holders thereof in the imposition of penalties, Rep. Act No. 8042 does not make any distinction.

The petitioners asserted that the respondent is not the real party-in-interest as petitioner in the trial court. It is inconceivable how the respondent, a non-stock and non-profit corporation, could sustain direct injury as a result of the enforcement of the law. They argued that if, at all, any damage would result in the implementation of the law, it is the licensed and registered recruitment agencies and/or the unskilled Filipino migrant workers discriminated against who would sustain the said injury or damage, not the respondent. The respondent, as petitioner in the trial court, was burdened to adduce preponderant evidence of such irreparable injury, but failed to do so.

ISSUES:

(1) Whether respondent has locus standi (YES in so far as to File the Petition in the RTC in representation of the eleven licensed and registered recruitment agencies impleaded in the amended petition but NO locus standi to file the petition for and in behalf of unskilled workers)

(2) Whether trial court committed a grave abuse of its discretion amounting to excess or lack of jurisdiction in issuing the assailed order and writ of preliminary injunction (YES)

RULING:

(1)
The modern view is that an association has standing to complain of injuries to its members. This view fuses the legal identity of an association with that of its members. An association has standing to file suit for its workers despite its lack of direct interest if its members are affected by the action. An organization has standing to assert the concerns of its constituents.

In Telecommunications and Broadcast Attorneys of the Philippines v. Commission on Elections, we held that standing jus tertii would be recognized only if it can be shown that the party suing has some substantial relation to the third party, or that the right of the third party would be diluted unless the party in court is allowed to espouse the third party's constitutional claims.

In this case, the respondent filed the petition for declaratory relief under Rule 64 of the Rules of Court for and in behalf of its eleven (11) licensed and registered recruitment agencies which are its members, and which approved separate resolutions expressly authorizing the respondent to file the said suit for and in their behalf. We note that, under its Articles of Incorporation, the respondent was organized for the purposes inter alia of promoting and supporting the growth and development of the manpower recruitment industry, both in the local and international levels; providing, creating and exploring employment opportunities for the exclusive benefit of its general membership; enhancing and promoting the general welfare and protection of Filipino workers; and, to act as the representative of any individual, company, entity or association on matters related to the manpower recruitment industry, and to perform other acts and activities necessary to accomplish the purposes embodied therein. The respondent is, thus, the appropriate party to assert the rights of its members, because it and its members are in every practical sense identical. The respondent asserts that the assailed provisions violate the constitutional rights of its members and the officers and employees thereof. The respondent is but the medium through which its individual members seek to make more effective the expression of their voices and the redress of their grievances.19

However, the respondent has no locus standi to file the petition for and in behalf of unskilled workers. We note that it even failed to implead any unskilled workers in its petition. Furthermore, in failing to implead, as parties-petitioners, the eleven licensed and registered recruitment agencies it claimed to represent, the respondent failed to comply with Section 2 of Rule 6320 of the Rules of Court. Nevertheless, since the eleven licensed and registered recruitment agencies for which the respondent filed the suit are specifically named in the petition, the amended petition is deemed amended to avoid multiplicity of suits.

(2) It must be borne in mind that subject to constitutional limitations, Congress is empowered to define what acts or omissions shall constitute a crime and to prescribe punishments therefor. The power is inherent in Congress and is part of the sovereign power of the State to maintain peace and order. Whatever views may be entertained regarding the severity of punishment, whether one believes in its efficiency or its futility, these are peculiarly questions of legislative policy. The comparative gravity of crimes and whether their consequences are more or less injurious are matters for the State and Congress itself to determine. Specification of penalties involves questions of legislative policy.

Due process prohibits criminal stability from shifting the burden of proof to the accused, punishing wholly passive conduct, defining crimes in vague or overbroad language and failing to grant fair warning of illegal conduct. Class legislation is such legislation which denies rights to one which are accorded to others, or inflicts upon one individual a more severe penalty than is imposed upon another in like case offending. Bills of attainder are legislative acts which inflict punishment on individuals or members of a particular group without a judicial trial. Essential to a bill of attainder are a specification of certain individuals or a group of individuals, the imposition of a punishment, penal or otherwise, and the lack of judicial trial.

Penalizing unlicensed and licensed recruitment agencies and their officers and employees and their relatives employed in government agencies charged with the enforcement of the law for illegal recruitment and imposing life imprisonment for those who commit large scale illegal recruitment is not offensive to the Constitution. The accused may be convicted of illegal recruitment and large scale illegal recruitment only if, after trial, the prosecution is able to prove all the elements of the crime charged.

The possibility that the officers and employees of the recruitment agencies, which are members of the respondent, and their relatives who are employed in the government agencies charged in the enforcement of the law, would be indicted for illegal recruitment and, if convicted sentenced to life imprisonment for large scale illegal recruitment, absent proof of irreparable injury, is not sufficient on which to base the issuance of a writ of preliminary injunction to suspend the enforcement of the penal provisions of Rep. Act No. 8042 and avert any indictments under the law. The normal course of criminal prosecutions cannot be blocked on the basis of allegations which amount to speculations about the future.

There is no allegation in the amended petition or evidence adduced by the respondent that the officers and/or employees of its members had been threatened with any indictments for violations of the penal provisions of Rep. Act No. 8042. Neither is there any allegation therein that any of its members and/or their officers and employees committed any of the acts enumerated in Section 6(a) to (m) of the law for which they could be indicted. Neither did the respondent adduce any evidence in the RTC that any or all of its members or a great number of other duly licensed and registered recruitment agencies had to stop their business operations because of fear of indictments under Sections 6 and 7 of Rep. Act No. 8042. The respondent merely speculated and surmised that licensed and registered recruitment agencies would close shop and stop business operations because of the assailed penal provisions of the law. A writ of preliminary injunction to enjoin the enforcement of penal laws cannot be based on such conjectures or speculations. The Court cannot take judicial notice that the processing of deployment papers of overseas workers have come to a virtual standstill at the POEA because of the assailed provisions of Rep. Act No. 8042. The respondent must adduce evidence to prove its allegation, and the petitioners accorded a chance to adduce controverting evidence.

The respondent even failed to adduce any evidence to prove irreparable injury because of the enforcement of Section 10(1)(2) of Rep. Act No. 8042. Its fear or apprehension that, because of time constraints, its members would have to defend foreign employees in cases before the Labor Arbiter is based on speculations. Even if true, such inconvenience or difficulty is hardly irreparable injury.

The trial court even ignored the public interest involved in suspending the enforcement of Rep. Act No. 8042 vis-à-vis the eleven licensed and registered recruitment agencies represented by the respondent. In People v. Gamboa, we emphasized the primary aim of Rep. Act No. 8042:

> Preliminarily, the proliferation of illegal job recruiters and syndicates preying on innocent people anxious to obtain employment abroad is one of the primary considerations that led to the enactment of The Migrant Workers and Overseas Filipinos Act of 1995. Aimed at affording greater protection to overseas Filipino workers, it is a significant improvement on existing laws in the recruitment and placement of workers for overseas employment. Otherwise known as the Magna Carta of OFWs, it broadened the concept of illegal recruitment under the Labor Code and provided stiffer penalties thereto, especially those that constitute economic sabotage, i.e., Illegal Recruitment in Large Scale and Illegal Recruitment Committed by a Syndicate.

By issuing the writ of preliminary injunction against the petitioners sans any evidence, the trial court frustrated, albeit temporarily, the prosecution of illegal recruiters and allowed them to continue victimizing hapless and innocent people desiring to obtain employment abroad as overseas workers, and blocked the attainment of the salutary policies embedded in Rep. Act No. 8042. It bears stressing that overseas workers, land-based and sea-based, had been remitting to the Philippines billions of dollars which over the years had propped the economy.

In issuing the writ of preliminary injunction, the trial court considered paramount the interests of the eleven licensed and registered recruitment agencies represented by the respondent, and capriciously overturned the presumption of the constitutionality of the assailed provisions on the barefaced claim of the respondent that the assailed provisions of Rep. Act No. 8042 are unconstitutional. The trial court committed a grave abuse of its discretion amounting to excess or lack of jurisdiction in issuing the assailed order and writ of preliminary injunction. It is for this reason that the Court issued a temporary restraining order enjoining the enforcement of the writ of preliminary injunction issued by the trial court.

EDWARD C. ONG, Petitioner, -versus- THE COURT OF APPEALS AND THE PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINES, Respondents

G.R. No. 119858, FIRST DIVISION, APRIL 29, 2003, CARPIO*, J*.

The Trust Receipts Law expressly makes the corporation's officers or employees or other persons therein responsible for the offense liable to suffer the penalty of imprisonment. In the instant case, petitioner signed the two trust receipts on behalf of ARMAGRI as the latter could only act through its agents. When petitioner signed the trust receipts, he acknowledged receipt of the goods covered by the trust receipts. In addition, petitioner was fully aware of the terms and conditions stated in the trust receipts, including the obligation to turn over the proceeds of the sale or return the goods to the Bank.

When petitioner signed the trust receipts, he claimed he was representing ARMAGRI. The corporation obviously acts only through its human agents and it is the conduct of such agents which the law must deter. The existence of the corporate entity does not shield from prosecution the agent who knowingly and intentionally commits a crime at the instance of a corporation.

FACTS:

Petitioner, representing ARMAGRI International Corporation8 ("ARMAGRI"), applied for a letter of credit for P2,532,500.00 with SOLIDBANK Corporation ("Bank") to finance the purchase of differential assemblies from Metropole Industrial Sales. On 6 July 1990, petitioner, representing ARMAGRI, executed a trust receipt acknowledging receipt from the Bank of the goods valued at P2,532,500.00.

On 12 July 1990, petitioner and Benito Ong, representing ARMAGRI, applied for another letter of credit for P2,050,000.00 to finance the purchase of merchandise from Fertiphil Corporation. The Bank approved the application, opened the letter of credit and paid to Fertiphil Corporation the amount of P2,050,000.00. On 23 July 1990, petitioner, signing for ARMAGRI, executed another trust receipt in favor of the Bank acknowledging receipt of the merchandise.

Both trust receipts contained the same stipulations. Under the trust receipts, ARMAGRI undertook to account for the goods held in trust for the Bank, or if the goods are sold, to turn over the proceeds to the Bank. ARMAGRI also undertook the obligation to keep the proceeds in the form of money, bills or receivables as the separate property of the Bank or to return the goods upon demand by the Bank, if not sold. In addition, petitioner executed the following additional undertaking stamped on the dorsal portion of both trust receipts:

> I/We jointly and severally agreed to any increase or decrease in the interest rate which may occur after July 1, 1981, when the Central Bank floated the interest rates, and to pay additionally the penalty of 1% per month until the amount/s or installment/s due and unpaid under the trust receipt on the reverse side hereof is/are fully paid.

Petitioner signed alone the foregoing additional undertaking in the Trust Receipt for P2,253,500.00, while both petitioner and Benito Ong signed the additional undertaking in the Trust Receipt for P2,050,000.00.

When the trust receipts became due and demandable, ARMAGRI failed to pay or deliver the goods to the Bank despite several demand letters.12 Consequently, as of 31 May 1991, the unpaid account under the first trust receipt amounted to P1,527,180.66,13 while the unpaid account under the second trust receipt amounted to P1,449,395.71

Petitioner and Benito Ong were charged with two counts of estafa under separate Informations.

Petitioner appealed his conviction to the Court of Appeals. On 27 October 1994, the Court of Appeals affirmed the trial court's decision in toto.

ISSUES:

(1) Whether petitioner comes within the purview of Section 13 of the Trust Receipts Law (YES)

(2) Whether Petitioner's conviction under the allegations in the two Informations for Estafa is correct. (YES)

RULING:

(1)
The Trust Receipts Law is violated whenever the entrustee fails to: (1) turn over the proceeds of the sale of the goods, or (2) return the goods covered by the trust receipts if the goods are not sold.18 The mere failure to account or return gives rise to the crime which is malum prohibitum.19 There is no requirement to prove intent to defraud.20

The Trust Receipts Law recognizes the impossibility of imposing the penalty of imprisonment on a corporation. Hence, if the entrustee is a corporation, the law makes the officers or employees or other persons responsible for the offense liable to suffer the penalty of imprisonment. The reason is obvious: corporations, partnerships, associations and other juridical entities cannot be put to jail. Hence, the criminal liability falls on the human agent responsible for the violation of the Trust Receipts Law.

In the instant case, the Bank was the entruster while ARMAGRI was the entrustee. Being the entrustee, ARMAGRI was the one responsible to account for the goods or its proceeds in case of sale. However, the criminal liability for violation of the Trust Receipts Law falls on the human agent responsible for the violation. Petitioner, who admits being the agent of ARMAGRI, is the person responsible for the offense for two reasons. First, petitioner is the signatory to the trust receipts, the loan applications and the letters of credit. Second, despite being the signatory to the trust receipts and the other documents, petitioner did not explain or show why he is not responsible for the failure to turn over the proceeds of the sale or account for the goods covered by the trust receipts.

The Bank released the goods to ARMAGRI upon execution of the trust receipts and as part of the loan transactions of ARMAGRI. The Bank had a right to demand from ARMAGRI payment or at least a return of the goods. ARMAGRI failed to pay or return the goods despite repeated demands by the Bank.

It is a well-settled doctrine long before the enactment of the Trust Receipts Law, that the failure to account, upon demand, for funds or property held in trust is evidence of conversion or misappropriation. Under the law, mere failure by the entrustee to account for the goods received in trust constitutes estafa. The Trust Receipts Law punishes dishonesty and abuse of confidence in the handling of money or goods to the prejudice of public order. The mere failure to deliver the proceeds of the sale or the goods if not sold constitutes a criminal offense that causes prejudice not only to the creditor, but also to the public interest. Evidently, the Bank suffered prejudice for neither money nor the goods were turned over to the Bank.

The Trust Receipts Law expressly makes the corporation's officers or employees or other persons therein responsible for the offense liable to suffer the penalty of imprisonment. In the instant case, petitioner signed the two trust receipts on behalf of ARMAGRI as the latter could only act through its agents. When petitioner signed the trust receipts, he acknowledged receipt of the goods covered by the trust receipts. In addition, petitioner was fully aware of the terms and conditions stated in the trust receipts, including the obligation to turn over the proceeds of the sale or return the goods to the Bank.

True, petitioner acted on behalf of ARMAGRI. However, it is a well-settled rule that the law of agency governing civil cases has no application in criminal cases. When a person participates in the commission of a crime, he cannot escape punishment on the ground that he simply acted as an agent of another party. In the instant case, the Bank accepted the trust receipts signed by petitioner based on petitioner's representations. It is the fact of being the signatory to the two trust receipts, and thus a direct participant to the crime, which makes petitioner a person responsible for the offense.

Petitioner could have raised the defense that he had nothing to do with the failure to account for the proceeds or to return the goods. Petitioner could have shown that he had severed his relationship with ARMAGRI prior to the loss of the proceeds or the disappearance of the goods. Petitioner, however, waived his right to present any evidence, and thus failed to show that he is not responsible for the violation of the Trust Receipts Law.

There is no dispute that on 6 July 1990 and on 23 July 1990, petitioner signed the two trust receipts on behalf of ARMAGRI. Petitioner, acting on behalf of ARMAGRI, expressly acknowledged receipt of the goods in trust for the Bank. ARMAGRI failed to comply with its undertakings under the trust receipts. On the other hand, petitioner failed to explain and communicate to the Bank what happened to the goods despite repeated demands from the Bank. As of 13 May 1991, the unpaid account under the first and second trust receipts amounted to P1,527,180.60 and P1,449,395.71, respectively

(2)
Petitioner argues that he cannot be convicted on a new set of facts not alleged in the Informations. Petitioner claims that the trial court's decision found that it was ARMAGRI that transacted with the Bank, acting through petitioner as its agent. Petitioner asserts that this contradicts the specific allegation in the Informations that it was petitioner who was constituted as the entrustee and was thus obligated to account for the goods or its proceeds if sold. Petitioner maintains that this absolves him from criminal liability.

We find no merit in petitioner's arguments.

Contrary to petitioner's assertions, the Informations explicitly allege that petitioner, representing ARMAGRI, defrauded the Bank by failing to remit the proceeds of the sale or to return the goods despite demands by the Bank, to the latter's prejudice. As an essential element of estafa with abuse of confidence, it is sufficient that the Informations specifically allege that the entrustee received the goods. The Informations expressly state that ARMAGRI, represented by petitioner, received the goods in trust for the Bank under the express obligation to remit the proceeds of the sale or to return the goods upon demand by the Bank. There is no need to allege in the Informations in what capacity petitioner participated to hold him responsible for the offense. Under the Trust Receipts Law, it is sufficient to allege and establish the failure of ARMAGRI, whom petitioner represented, to remit the proceeds or to return the goods to the Bank.

When petitioner signed the trust receipts, he claimed he was representing ARMAGRI. The corporation obviously acts only through its human agents and it is the conduct of such agents which the law must deter. The existence of the corporate entity does not shield from prosecution the agent who knowingly and intentionally commits a crime at the instance of a corporation.

ALFREDO CHING, Petitioner, -versus - THE SECRETARY OF JUSTICE, ASST. CITY PROSECUTOR ECILYN BURGOS-VILLAVERT, JUDGE EDGARDO SUDIAM of the Regional Trial Court, Manila, Branch 52; RIZAL COMMERCIAL BANKING CORP. and THE PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINES, Respondents

G. R. No. 164317, FIRST DIVISION, FEBRUARY 6, 2O06, CALLEJO, SR., J.

The crime defined in P.D. No. 115 is malum prohibitum but is classified as estafa under paragraph 1(b), Article 315 of the Revised Penal Code, or estafa with abuse of confidence. It may be committed by a corporation or other juridical entity or by natural persons. However, the penalty for the crime is imprisonment for the periods provided in said Article 315.

Though the entrustee is a corporation, nevertheless, the law specifically makes the officers, employees or other officers or persons responsible for the offense, without prejudice to the civil liabilities of such corporation and/or board of directors, officers, or other officials or employees responsible for the offense.

In this case, petitioner signed the trust receipts in question. He cannot, thus, hide behind the cloak of the separate corporate personality of PBMI. In the words of Chief Justice Earl Warren, a corporate officer cannot protect himself behind a corporation where he is the actual, present and efficient actor

FACTS:

Philippine Blooming Mills, Inc. (PBMI), through its Senior Vice-President, petitioner Ching, applied with the Rizal Commercial Banking Corporation (respondent bank) for the issuance of commercial letters of credit to finance its importation of assorted goods.

Respondent bank approved the application, and irrevocable letters of credit were issued in favor of petitioner. The goods were purchased and delivered in trust to PBMI. Petitioner signed 13 trust receipts as surety, acknowledging delivery of the goods.

When the trust receipts matured, petitioner failed to return the goods to respondent bank, or to return their value amounting to ₱6,940,280.66 despite demands. Thus, the bank filed a criminal complaint for estafa against petitioner in the Office of the City Prosecutor of Manila.

There was a finding of probable cause at first, but it was later dismissed.

In the meantime, the Court rendered judgment in Allied Banking Corporation v. Ordoñez, holding that the penal provision of P.D. No. 115 encompasses any act violative of an obligation covered by the trust receipt; it is not limited to transactions involving goods which are to be sold (retailed), reshipped, stored or processed as a component of a product ultimately sold. The Court also ruled that "the non-payment of the amount covered by a trust receipt is an act violative of the obligation of the entrustee to pay."

On February 27, 1995, respondent bank re-filed the criminal complaint for estafa against petitioner before the Office of the City Prosecutor of Manila

Preliminary investigation ensued. On December 8, 1995, the City Prosecutor ruled that there was no probable cause to charge petitioner with violating P.D. No. 115, as petitioner's liability was only civil, not criminal, having signed the trust receipts as surety. Respondent bank appealed the resolution to the Department of Justice (DOJ) via petition for review.

Secretary of Justice issued Resolution No. 250 granting the petition and reversing the assailed resolution of the City Prosecutor. CA rendered judgment dismissing the petition for lack of merit, and on procedural grounds

ISSUES:

> Whether Secretary Of Justice correctly ruled that petitioner is the officer responsible for the offense charged and that the acts of petitioner fall within the ambit of violation of P.D. [No.] 115 in relation to Article 315, par. 1(b) of the Revised Penal Code (YES)

RULING:

The Court rules that although petitioner signed the trust receipts merely as Senior Vice-President of PBMI and had no physical possession of the goods, he cannot avoid prosecution for violation of P.D. No. 115.

The penalty clause of the law, Section 13 of P.D. No. 115 reads:

> Section 13. Penalty Clause. The failure of an entrustee to turn over the proceeds of the sale of the goods, documents or instruments covered by a trust receipt to the extent of the amount owing to the entruster or as appears in the trust receipt or to return said goods, documents or instruments if they were not sold or disposed of in accordance with the terms of the trust receipt shall constitute the crime of estafa, punishable under the provisions of Article Three hundred and fifteen, paragraph one (b) of Act Numbered Three thousand eight hundred and fifteen, as amended, otherwise known as the Revised Penal Code.1âwphi1 If the violation or offense is committed by a corporation, partnership, association or other juridical entities, the penalty provided for in this Decree shall be imposed upon the directors, officers, employees or other officials or persons therein responsible for the offense, without prejudice to the civil liabilities arising from the criminal offense.

The crime defined in P.D. No. 115 is malum prohibitum but is classified as estafa under paragraph 1(b), Article 315 of the Revised Penal Code, or estafa with abuse of confidence. It may be committed by a corporation or other juridical entity or by natural persons. However, the penalty for the crime is imprisonment for the periods provided in said Article 315.

Though the entrustee is a corporation, nevertheless, the law specifically makes the officers, employees or other officers or persons responsible for the offense, without prejudice to the civil liabilities of such corporation and/or board of directors, officers, or other officials or employees responsible for the offense. The rationale is that such officers or employees are vested with the authority and responsibility to devise means necessary to ensure compliance with the law and, if they fail to do so, are held criminally accountable; thus, they have a responsible share in the violations of the law.

If the crime is committed by a corporation or other juridical entity, the directors, officers, employees or other officers thereof responsible for the offense shall be charged and penalized for the crime, precisely because of the nature of the crime and the penalty therefor. A corporation cannot be arrested and imprisoned; hence, cannot be penalized for a crime punishable by imprisonment. However, a corporation may be charged and prosecuted for a crime if the imposable penalty is fine. Even if the statute prescribes both fine and imprisonment as penalty, a corporation may be prosecuted and, if found guilty, may be fined.

A crime is the doing of that which the penal code forbids to be done, or omitting to do what it commands. A necessary part of the definition of every crime is the designation of the author of the crime upon whom the penalty is to be inflicted. When a criminal statute designates an act of a corporation or a crime and prescribes punishment therefor, it creates a criminal offense which, otherwise, would not exist and such can be committed only by the corporation. But when a penal statute does not expressly apply to corporations, it does not create an offense for which a corporation may be punished. On the other hand, if the State, by statute, defines a crime that may be committed by a corporation but prescribes the penalty therefor to be suffered by the officers, directors, or employees of such corporation or other persons responsible for the offense, only such individuals will suffer such penalty. Corporate officers or employees, through whose act, default or omission the corporation commits a crime, are themselves individually guilty of the crime.

The principle applies whether or not the crime requires the consciousness of wrongdoing. It applies to those corporate agents who themselves commit the crime and to those, who, by virtue of their managerial positions or other similar relation to the corporation, could be deemed responsible for its commission, if by virtue of their relationship to the corporation, they had the power to prevent the act.53 Moreover, all parties active in promoting a crime, whether agents or not, are principals.54 Whether such officers or employees are benefited by their delictual acts is not a touchstone of their criminal liability. Benefit is not an operative fact.

In this case, petitioner signed the trust receipts in question. He cannot, thus, hide behind the cloak of the separate corporate personality of PBMI. In the words of Chief Justice Earl Warren, a corporate officer cannot protect himself behind a corporation where he is the actual, present and efficient actor

METROHEIGHTS SUBDIVISION HOMEOWNERS ASSOCIATION, INC., Petitioner, -versus - MS CONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, TOMASITO T. CRUZ, TITA F. CRUZ, SIMONETTE F. CRUZ, ANGEL T. CRUZ, ERNESTO T. CRUZ AND METROPOLITAN WATERWORKS AND SEWERAGE SYSTEM (MWSS), Respondents

G.R. No. 209359, THIRD DIVISION, OCTOBER 17, 2018, PERALTA., J.

The crime defined in P.D. No. 115 is malum prohibitum but is classified as estafa under paragraph 1(b), Article 315 of the Revised Penal Code, or estafa with abuse of confidence. It may be committed by a corporation or other juridical entity or by natural persons. However, the penalty for the crime is imprisonment for the periods provided in said Article 315.

Though the entrustee is a corporation, nevertheless, the law specifically makes the officers, employees or other officers or persons responsible for the offense, without prejudice to the civil liabilities of such corporation and/or board of directors, officers, or other officials or employees responsible for the offense.

In this case, petitioner signed the trust receipts in question. He cannot, thus, hide behind the cloak of the separate corporate personality of PBMI. In the words of Chief Justice Earl Warren, a corporate officer cannot protect himself behind a corporation where he is the actual, present and efficient actor

FACTS:

Petitioner alleged, among others, that it sought the assistance of respondent MWSS to address the insufficient supply of water in its subdivision to which the latter advised the improvement and upgrading of its private internal water distribution lines, foremost of which was the transfer or change in the location of its tapping source and the change in size of its water service line from the old line tapped at Sanville Subdivision to a new tapping source on Visayas Avenue, Quezon City; that on November 16, 1990, petitioner entered into a contract with respondent MWSS for the new water service connection, and respondent MWSS awarded the project to a contractor which implemented the same, the cost of which was solely shouldered by contribution from petitioner's members amounting to P190,000.00, inclusive of labor, materials, and respondent MWSS' fees and charges; and that since then, there was already sufficient and strong water pressure twenty-four (24) hours a day in the petitioner's subdivision.

However, sometime in April 1992, respondent CMS Construction made diggings and excavations, and started to lay water pipes along Fisheries Street and Morning Star Drive in Sanville Subdivision, Quezon City, petitioner's neighboring subdivision; that in the process, respondent CMS Construction, with the knowledge and consent of respondent MWSS but without petitioner's knowledge and consent, unilaterally cut-off and disconnected the latter's new and separate water service connection on Visayas Avenue; that on May 28, 1992, petitioner's members were waterless, which lasted for three (3) days, and that petitioner's polyvinyl chloride (PVC) pipes and radius elbow, valued at around P30,000.00, were stolen by respondent CMS Construction's workers; that when petitioner's officers discovered the illegal cutting of the water connection on May 30, 1992, they immediately complained to the respondents and demanded for the restoration of their water line; that respondent CMS Construction only made a temporary reconnection with the use of a 2-inch rubber hose to the new water line it constructed at Sanville Subdivision; and that despite petitioner's verbal and written demands, respondents have failed to restore petitioner's water line connection in its original state and to return the missing PVC pipes and radius elbow.

The RTC found respondents liable for damages on the basis of abuse of right under Article 19 of the New Civil Code, giving credence to petitioner's claim that there was no notice to it prior to the implementation of respondents' project. The CA reversed the RTC and found that there was no abuse of right committed by the respondents, as the project was not undertaken without notice to petitioner

ISSUE:

(1) Whether respondents should be held liable for damages for the cutting off, disconnection and transfer of petitioner's existing separate water service connection on Visayas Avenue without the latter's knowledge and consent which also resulted in petitioner's subdivision being waterless (YES)

(2) Whether the directors are personally liable (NO)

RULING:

(1)
While Article 19 of the New Civil Code may have been intended as a mere declaration of principle, the 'cardinal law on human conduct' expressed in said article has given rise to certain rules, e.g. that where a person exercises his rights but does so arbitrarily or unjustly or performs his duties in a manner that is not in keeping with honesty and good faith, he opens himself to liability. The elements of an abuse of rights under Article 19 are: (1) there is a legal right or duty; (2) which is exercised in bad faith; (3) for the sole intent of prejudicing or injuring another."

Here, it was admitted by Engr. Victor Cariaga, an MWSS consultant, and Mr. Tomasito Cruz, respondent CMS Construction's President, that petitioner has its own pipeline or source of water coming from Visayas Avenue. Respondents also admitted that because of the rehabilitation project they were undertaking, petitioner's water pipeline, measuring 100 mm in diameter along the side of the creek, was replaced with a PVC plastic pipe 150 mm in diameter; and that petitioner's water line had to be transferred, and in the process of transferring, petitioner's existing water line had to be cut off. Considering that respondents would disconnect and change petitioner's existing water line tapped from Visayas Avenue to another tapping source, good faith and prudence dictate that petitioner should be informed or notified of such actions, as respondents admitted that prior notice to affected areas is a standard operating procedure. More so, petitioner's members had spent their own money to pay for their existing water connection on Visayas Avenue to address the perennial problem of the lack of water supply in their area.

The CA found that the rehabilitation project was not undertaken without notice to petitioner, which was contrary to the RTC's finding that there was no notice given to petitioner. The matter of whether there was notice to petitioner is factual. It is elementary that a question of fact is not appropriate for a petition for review on certiorari under Rule 45 of the Rules of Court. The parties may raise only questions of law because the Supreme Court is not a trier of facts. However, we may review the findings of fact by the CA when they are contrary to those of the trial court, as in this case.

In finding that there was notice given by the respondents to petitioner, the CA relied on the testimonies of Tomasito Cruz, President of respondent CMS Construction, that prior to the actual implementation of the project, permissions from the Office of the City Engineer and the affected homeowners' associations were sought; and that of Engr. Victor Cariaga, consultant of respondent MWSS, saying that it is an operating procedure to give letters to the homeowners, as well as to the barangays affected, notifying them of the objective of the project and requesting for meetings.
Notably, however, the CA failed to consider that Tomasito Cruz testified during his cross-examination that there was no notice to petitioner coming from their company.

In fact, it was only after petitioner's officer investigated the reason behind the loss of water supply in their subdivision that it was learned that their existing line was cut-off and transferred by respondents. Also, it was only when petitioner's officer went to the office of respondent CMS

Construction and complained about the loss of water supply in their subdivision that petitioner's homeowners' water line was temporarily reconnected with a 2-inch rubber hose.

Clearly, had petitioner's officer not complained about the water service interruption in their subdivision and the rubber hose connection was not made to temporarily fix petitioner's concern, petitioner's homeowners would have continuously suffered loss of water service.

Notably, respondents admitted in their respective Comments that the inconvenience of the temporary stoppage of water supply in petitioner's area was highly inevitable in the process of changing petitioner's water pipe size crossing the bridge up to Visayas Avenue where the tapping source is connected. Notwithstanding, respondents proceeded with the cutting off and disconnection of petitioner's water connection without the latter's consent and notification thereby causing prejudice or injury to the petitioner's members because of the unexpected water loss for three (3) days. Respondents' actions were done in total disregard of the standards set by Article 19 of the New Civil Code which entitles petitioner to damages.

In MWSS v. Act Theater, Inc., we held that petitioner's act of cutting off respondents' water service connection without prior notice was arbitrary, injurious and prejudicial to the latter, justifying the award of damages under Article 19 of the New Civil Code

(2)
Respondents MWSS and CMS Construction should be held liable for damages to petitioner but not the Cruzes who are the directors and stockholders of respondent CMS Construction. Section 31 of the Corporation Code is the governing law on personal liability of officers for the debts of the corporation, to wit:

> Sec. 31. Liability of directors, trustees or officers. — Directors or trustees who willfully and knowingly vote for or assent to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or who are guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation or acquire any personal or pecuniary interest in conflict with their duty as such directors or trustees shall be liable jointly and severally for all damages resulting therefrom suffered by the corporation, its stockholders or members and other persons.

We find that petitioner failed to show that the Cruzes committed any of those above-quoted acts to make them personally liable

B. RECOVERY OF MORAL DAMAGES

FILIPINAS BROADCASTING NETWORK, INC., Petitioner, -versus - AGO MEDICAL AND EDUCATIONAL CENTER-BICOL CHRISTIAN COLLEGE OF MEDICINE, (AMEC-BCCM) and ANGELITA F. AGO, Respondents

G.R. No. 141994, FIRST DIVISION, JANURY 17, 2OO5, CARPIO., J.

A juridical person is generally not entitled to moral damages because, unlike a natural person, it cannot experience physical suffering or such sentiments as wounded feelings, serious anxiety, mental anguish or moral shock. The Court of Appeals cites Mambulao Lumber Co. v. PNB, et al. to justify the award of moral damages. However, the Court's statement in Mambulao that "a corporation may have a good reputation which, if besmirched, may also be a ground for the award of moral damages" is an obiter dictum.

Nevertheless, AMEC's claim for moral damages falls under item 7 of Article 2219 of the Civil Code. This provision expressly authorizes the recovery of moral damages in cases of libel, slander or any other form of defamation. Article 2219(7) does not qualify whether the plaintiff is a natural or juridical person. Therefore, a juridical person such as a corporation can validly complain for libel or any other form of defamation and claim for moral damages.

FACTS:

Expos is a radio documentary program hosted by Carmelo Mel Rima (Rima) and Hermogenes Jun Alegre (Alegre). Expos is aired every morning over DZRC-AM which is owned by Filipinas Broadcasting Network, Inc. (FBNI). Expos is heard over Legazpi City, the Albay municipalities and other Bicol areas.

In the morning of 14 and 15 December 1989, Rima and Alegre exposed various alleged complaints from students, teachers and parents against Ago Medical and Educational Center-Bicol Christian College of Medicine (AMEC) and its administrators. Claiming that the broadcasts were defamatory, AMEC and Angelita Ago (Ago), as Dean of AMECs College of Medicine, filed a complaint for damages against FBNI, Rima and Alegre.

Trial court rendered a Decision finding FBNI and Alegre liable for libel except Rima. The trial court held that the broadcasts are libelous per se. CA affirmed but made Rima solidarily liable.

FBNI contends that AMEC is not entitled to moral damages because it is a corporation.

ISSUE:

Whether AMEC is entitled to moral damages (YES)

RULING:

A juridical person is generally not entitled to moral damages because, unlike a natural person, it cannot experience physical suffering or such sentiments as wounded feelings, serious anxiety, mental anguish or moral shock. The Court of Appeals cites Mambulao Lumber Co. v. PNB, et al. to justify the award of moral damages. However, the Court's statement in Mambulao that "a corporation may have a good reputation which, if besmirched, may also be a ground for the award of moral damages" is an obiter dictum.

Nevertheless, AMEC's claim for moral damages falls under item 7 of Article 2219 of the Civil Code. This provision expressly authorizes the recovery of moral damages in cases of libel, slander or any other form of defamation. Article 2219(7) does not qualify whether the plaintiff is a natural or juridical person. Therefore, a juridical person such as a corporation can validly complain for libel or any other form of defamation and claim for moral damages.

Moreover, where the broadcast is libelous per se, the law implies damages. In such a case, evidence of an honest mistake or the want of character or reputation of the party libeled goes only in mitigation of damages. Neither in such a case is the plaintiff required to introduce evidence of actual damages as a condition precedent to the recovery of some damages. In this case, the broadcasts are libelous per se. Thus, AMEC is entitled to moral damages.

However, the Court found the award of P300,000 moral damages unreasonable. The record shows that even though the broadcasts were libelous per se, AMEC has not suffered any substantial or material damage to its reputation. Therefore, the Court reduced the award of moral damages from P300,000 to P150,000.

MANILA ELECTRIC COMPANY, Petitioner, -versus - T.E.A.M. ELECTRONICS CORPORATION, TECHNOLOGY ELECTRONICS ASSEMBLY and MANAGEMENT PACIFIC CORPORATION; and ULTRA ELECTRONICS INSTRUMENTS, INC., Respondents
G.R. No. 131723, THIRD DIVISION,DECEMBER 13, 2007 NACHURA, J.

As a rule, a corporation is not entitled to moral damages because, not being a natural person, it cannot experience physical suffering or sentiments like wounded feelings, serious anxiety, mental anguish and moral shock. The only exception to this rule is when the corporation has a reputation that is debased, resulting in its humiliation in the business realm. But in such a case, it is imperative for the claimant to present proof to justify the award. It is essential to prove the existence of the factual basis of the damage and its causal relation to petitioner's acts. In the present case, the records are bereft of any evidence that the name or reputation of TEC/TPC has been debased as a result of petitioner's acts.

FACTS:

In September 1986, TEC, under its former name National Semi-Conductors (Phils.) entered into a Contract of Lease with respondent Ultra Electronics Industries, Inc. (Ultra) for the use of the former's DCIM building for a period of five years or until September 1991. Ultra was, however, ejected from the premises on February 12, 1988 by virtue of a court order, for repeated violation of the terms and conditions of the lease contract.

On September 28, 1987, a team of petitioner's inspectors conducted a surprise inspection of the electric meters installed at the DCIM building, witnessed by Ultra's representative, Mr. Willie Abangan. The two meters covered by account numbers 09341-1322-16 and 09341-1812-13, were found to be allegedly tampered with and did not register the actual power consumption in the building. The results of the inspection were reflected in the Service Inspection Reports prepared by the team.

In a letter dated November 25, 1987, petitioner informed TEC of the results of the inspection and demanded from the latter the payment of P7,040,401.01 representing its unregistered consumption from February 10, 1986 until September 28, 1987, as a result of the alleged tampering of the meters. TEC received the letters on January 7, 1988. Since Ultra was in possession of the subject building during the covered period, TEC's Managing Director, Mr. Bobby Tan, referred the demand letter to Ultra which, in turn, informed TEC that its Executive Vice-President had met with petitioner's representative. Ultra further intimated that assuming that there was tampering of the meters, petitioner's assessment was excessive. For failure of TEC to pay the differential billing, petitioner disconnected the electricity supply to the DCIM building on April 29, 1988.

TEC demanded from petitioner the reconnection of electrical service, claiming that it had nothing to do with the alleged tampering but the latter refused to heed the demand. Hence, TEC filed a complaint on May 27, 1988 before the Energy Regulatory Board (ERB) praying that electric power be restored to the DCIM building. The ERB immediately ordered the reconnection of the service but petitioner complied with it only on October 12, 1988 after TEC paid P1,000,000.00, under protest. The complaint before the ERB was later withdrawn as the parties deemed it best to have the issues threshed out in the regular courts. Prior to the reconnection, or on June 7, 1988, petitioner conducted a scheduled inspection of the questioned meters and found them to have been tampered anew.

Meanwhile, on April 25, 1988, petitioner conducted another inspection, this time, in TEC's NS Building. The inspection allegedly revealed that the electric meters were not registering the correct power consumption. Petitioner, thus, sent a letter dated June 18, 1988 demanding payment of P280,813.72 representing the differential billing. TEC denied petitioner's allegations and claim in a letter dated June 29, 1988. Petitioner, thus, sent TEC another letter demanding payment of the aforesaid amount, with a warning that the electric service would be disconnected in case of continued refusal to pay the differential billing. To avert the impending disconnection of electrical service, TEC paid the above amount, under protest.

TEC and TPC filed a complaint for damages against petitioner and Ultra before RTC.

The trial court rendered a Decision in favor of respondents TEC and TPC which the CA affirmed.

ISSUE:

Whether TEC is entitled to moral damages (NO)

RULING:

We, however, deem it proper to delete the award of moral damages. TEC's claim was premised allegedly on the damage to its goodwill and reputation. As a rule, a corporation is not entitled to moral damages because, not being a natural person, it cannot experience physical suffering or sentiments like wounded feelings, serious anxiety, mental anguish and moral shock. The only exception to this rule is when the corporation has a reputation that is debased, resulting in its humiliation in the business realm. But in such a case, it is imperative for the claimant to present proof to justify the award. It is essential to prove the existence of the factual basis of the damage and its causal relation to petitioner's acts. In the present case, the records are bereft of any evidence that the name or reputation of TEC/TPC has been debased as a result of petitioner's acts. Besides, the trial court simply awarded moral damages in the dispositive portion of its decision without stating the basis thereof.

HERMAN C. CRYSTAL, LAMBERTO C. CRYSTAL, ANN GEORGIA C. SOLANTE, and DORIS C. MAGLASANG, as Heirs of Deceased SPOUSES RAYMUNDO I. CRYSTAL and DESAMPARADOS C. CRYSTAL, Petitioners, -versus - BANK OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, Respondent
G.R. No. 172428, SECOND DIVISION, NOVEMBER 28, 2O08 TINGA, J.

In the more recent cases of ABS-CBN Corp. v. Court of Appeals, et al., and Filipinas Broadcasting Network, Inc. v. Ago Medical and Educational Center-Bicol Christian College of Medicine (AMEC-BCCM), the Court held that the statements in Manero and Mambulao were mere obiter dicta, implying that the award of moral damages to corporations is not a hard and fast rule. Indeed, while the Court may allow the grant of moral damages to corporations, it is not automatically granted; there must still be proof of the existence of the factual basis of the damage and its causal relation to the defendant's acts.

The spouses' complaint against BPI proved to be unfounded, but it does not automatically entitle BPI to moral damages. Although the institution of a clearly unfounded civil suit can at times be a legal justification for an award of attorney's fees, such filing, however, has almost invariably been held not to be a ground for an award of moral damages. The rationale for the rule is that the law could not have meant to impose a penalty on the right to litigate.

FACTS:

On 28 March 1978, spouses Raymundo and Desamparados Crystal obtained a P300,000.00 loan in behalf of the Cebu Contractors Consortium Co. (CCCC) from the Bank of the Philippine Islands-Butuan branch (BPI-Butuan). The loan was secured by a chattel mortgage on heavy equipment and machinery of CCCC. On the same date, the spouses executed in favor of BPI-Butuan a Continuing Suretyship where they bound themselves as surety of CCCC in the aggregate principal sum of not exceeding P300,000.00. Thereafter, or on 29 March 1979, Raymundo Crystal executed a promissory note[6] for the amount of P300,000.00, also in favor of BPI-Butuan.

Sometime in August 1979, CCCC renewed a previous loan, this time from BPI, Cebu City branch (BPI-Cebu City). The renewal was evidenced by a promissory note, signed by the spouses in their personal capacities and as managing partners of CCCC. The promissory note states that the spouses are jointly and severally liable with CCCC. It appears that before the original loan could be granted, BPI-Cebu City required CCCC to put up a security.

However, CCCC had no real property to offer as security for the loan; hence, the spouses executed a real estate mortgage over their own real property. On 3 October 1977, they executed another real estate mortgage over the same lot in favor of BPI-Cebu City, to secure an additional loan of P20,000.00 of CCCC.

CCCC failed to pay its loans to both BPI-Butuan and BPI-Cebu City when they became due. CCCC, as well as the spouses, failed to pay their obligations despite demands. Thus, BPI resorted to the foreclosure of the chattel mortgage and the real estate mortgage. The foreclosure sale on the chattel mortgage was initially stalled with the issuance of a restraining order against BPI. However, following BPI's compliance with the necessary requisites of extrajudicial foreclosure, the foreclosure sale on the chattel mortgage was consummated on 28 February 1988, with the proceeds amounting to P240,000.00 applied to the loan from BPI-Butuan which had then reached P707,393.90.

BPI filed a complaint for sum of money against CCCC and the spouses before the Regional Trial Court of Butuan City (RTC Butuan), seeking to recover the deficiency of the loan of CCCC and the spouses with BPI-Butuan. The trial court ruled in favor of BPI. Pursuant to the decision, BPI instituted extrajudicial foreclosure of the spouses' mortgaged property.

On the other hand, spouses filed an action for Injunction With Damages, With A Prayer For A Restraining Order and/ or Writ of Preliminary Injunction. The spouses claimed that the foreclosure of the real estate mortgages is illegal because BPI should have exhausted CCCC's properties first, stressing that they are mere guarantors of the renewed

The trial court dismissed the spouses' complaint and ordered them to pay moral and exemplary damages and attorney's fees to BPI. Spouses appealed to the CA but was denied.

ISSUE:

Whether BPI is entitled to moral damages (NO)

RULING:

A juridical person is generally not entitled to moral damages because, unlike a natural person, it cannot experience physical suffering or such sentiments as wounded feelings, serious anxiety, mental anguish or moral shock. The Court of Appeals found BPI as "being famous and having gained its familiarity and respect not only in the Philippines but also in the whole world because of its good will and good reputation must protect and defend the same against any unwarranted suit such as the case at bench."

In holding that BPI is entitled to moral damages, the Court of Appeals relied on the case of People v. Manero, wherein the Court ruled that "it is only when a juridical person has a good reputation that is debased, resulting in social humiliation, that moral damages may be awarded."

We do not agree with the Court of Appeals. A statement similar to that made by the Court in Manero can be found in the case of Mambulao Lumber Co. v. PNB, et al., thus:

x x x Obviously, an artificial person like herein appellant corporation cannot experience physical sufferings, mental anguish, fright, serious anxiety, wounded feelings, moral shock or social humiliation which are basis of moral damages. A corporation may have good reputation which, if besmirched may also be a ground for the award of moral damages. x x x

Nevertheless, in the more recent cases of ABS-CBN Corp. v. Court of Appeals, et al., and Filipinas Broadcasting Network, Inc. v. Ago Medical and Educational Center-Bicol Christian College of Medicine (AMEC-BCCM), the Court held that the statements in Manero and Mambulao were mere obiter dicta, implying that the award of moral damages to corporations is not a hard and fast rule. Indeed, while the Court may allow the grant of moral damages to corporations, it is not automatically granted; there must still be proof of the existence of the factual basis of the damage and its causal relation to the defendant's acts. This is so because moral damages, though incapable of pecuniary estimation, are in the category of an award designed to compensate the claimant for actual injury suffered and not to impose a penalty on the wrongdoer.

The spouses' complaint against BPI proved to be unfounded, but it does not automatically entitle BPI to moral damages. Although the institution of a clearly unfounded civil suit can at times be a legal justification for an award of attorney's fees, such filing, however, has almost invariably been held not to be a ground for an award of moral damages. The rationale for the rule is that the law could not have meant to impose a penalty on the right to litigate. Otherwise, moral damages must every time be awarded in favor of the prevailing defendant against an unsuccessful plaintiff. BPI may have been inconvenienced by the suit, but we do not see how it could have possibly suffered besmirched reputation on account of the single suit alone. Hence, the award of moral damages should be deleted.

2. DOCTRINE OF PIERCING THE CORPORATE VEIL

KUKAN INTERNATIONAL CORPORATION, Petitioner, -versus - HON. AMOR REYES, in her capacity as Presiding Judge of the Regional Trial Court of Manila, Branch 21, and ROMEO M. MORALES, doing business under the name and style "RM Morales Trophies and Plaques,", Respondents

G.R. No. 182729, FIRST DIVISION, SEPTEMBER 29, 2O10 VELASCO JR., J.

The principle of piercing the veil of corporate fiction, and the resulting treatment of two related corporations as one and the same juridical person with respect to a given transaction, is basically applied only to determine established liability; it is not available to confer on the court a jurisdiction it has not acquired, in the first place, over a party not impleaded in a case.

In the instant case, KIC was not made a party-defendant in Civil Case No. 99-93173. Even if it is conceded that it raised affirmative defenses through its aforementioned pleadings, KIC never abandoned its challenge, however implicit, to the RTC's jurisdiction over its person..

FACTS:

Sometime in March 1998, Kukan, Inc. conducted a bidding for the supply and installation of signages in a building being constructed in Makati City. Morales tendered the winning bid and was awarded the PhP 5 million contract. Some of the items in the project award were later excluded resulting in the corresponding reduction of the contract price to PhP 3,388,502. Despite his compliance with his contractual undertakings, Morales was only paid the amount of PhP 1,976,371.07, leaving a balance of PhP 1,412,130.93, which Kukan, Inc. refused to pay despite demands. Shortchanged, Morales filed a Complaint6 with the RTC against Kukan, Inc. for a sum of money.

RTC rendered a Decision finding for Morales and against Kukan, Inc.

After the above decision became final and executory, Morales moved for and secured a writ of execution against Kukan, Inc. The sheriff then levied upon various personal properties found at what was supposed to be Kukan, Inc.'s office at Unit 2205, 88 Corporate Center, Salcedo Village, Makati City. Alleging that it owned the properties thus levied and that it was a different corporation from Kukan, Inc., Kukan International Corporation (KIC) filed an Affidavit of Third-Party Claim. Notably, KIC was incorporated in August 2000, or shortly after Kukan, Inc. had stopped participating in Civil Case No. 99-93173.

In reaction to the third party claim, Morales interposed an Omnibus Motion. In it, Morales prayed, applying the principle of piercing the veil of corporate fiction.

ISSUE:

Whether the trial and appellate courts correctly applied the principle of piercing the veil of corporate entity––called also as disregarding the fiction of a separate juridical personality of a corporation––to support a conclusion that Kukan, Inc. and KIC are but one and the same corporation with respect to the contract award referred to at the outset. This principle finds its context on the postulate that a corporation is an artificial being invested with a personality separate and distinct from those of the stockholders and from other corporations to which it may be connected or related. (NO)

RULING:

In the instant case, KIC was not made a party-defendant in Civil Case No. 99-93173. Even if it is conceded that it raised affirmative defenses through its aforementioned pleadings, KIC never abandoned its challenge, however implicit, to the RTC's jurisdiction over its person. The challenge was subsumed in KIC's primary assertion that it was not the same entity as Kukan, Inc. Pertinently, in its Comment and Opposition to Plaintiff's Omnibus Motion dated May 20, 2003, KIC entered its "special but not voluntary appearance" alleging therein that it was a different entity and has a separate legal personality from Kukan, Inc. And KIC would consistently reiterate this assertion in all its pleadings, thus effectively resisting all along the RTC's jurisdiction of its person. It cannot be overemphasized that KIC could not file before the RTC a motion to dismiss and its attachments in Civil Case No. 99-93173, precisely because KIC was neither impleaded nor served with summons. Consequently, KIC could only assert and claim through its affidavits, comments, and motions filed by special appearance before the RTC that it is separate and distinct from Kukan, Inc.

Following La Naval Drug Corporation, KIC cannot be deemed to have waived its objection to the court's lack of jurisdiction over its person. It would defy logic to say that KIC unequivocally submitted itself to the jurisdiction of the RTC when it strongly asserted that it and Kukan, Inc. are different entities. In the scheme of things obtaining, KIC had no other option but to insist on its separate identity and plead for relief consistent with that position.

The principle of piercing the veil of corporate fiction, and the resulting treatment of two related corporations as one and the same juridical person with respect to a given transaction, is basically applied only to determine established liability; it is not available to confer on the court a jurisdiction it has not acquired, in the first place, over a party not impleaded in a case. Elsewise put, a corporation not impleaded in a suit cannot be subject to the court's process of piercing the veil of its corporate fiction. In that situation, the court has not acquired jurisdiction over the corporation and, hence, any proceedings taken against that corporation and its property would infringe on its right to due process. Aguedo Agbayani, a recognized authority on Commercial Law, stated as much:
23. Piercing the veil of corporate entity applies to determination of liability not of jurisdiction. x x x
This is so because the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction comes to play only during the trial of the case after the court has already acquired jurisdiction over the corporation. Hence, before this doctrine can be applied, based on the evidence presented, it is imperative that the court must first have jurisdiction over the corporation. x x x

The implication of the above comment is twofold: (1) the court must first acquire jurisdiction over the corporation or corporations involved before its or their separate personalities are disregarded; and (2) the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate entity can only be raised during a full-blown trial over a cause of action duly commenced involving parties duly brought under the authority of the court by way of service of summons or what passes as such service.

GOLD LINE TOURS, INC, Petitioner, -versus - HON. AMOR REYES, in her capacity as Presiding Judge of the Regional Trial Court of Manila, Branch 21, and ROMEO M. MORALES, doing business under the name and style "RM Morales Trophies and Plaques,", Respondents
G.R. No. 182729, FIRST DIVISION, SEPTEMBER 29, 2O10 VELASCO JR., J.

As we see it, the RTC had sufficient factual basis to find that petitioner and Travel and Tours Advisers, Inc. were one and the same entity, specifically: (a) documents submitted by petitioner in the RTC showing that William Cheng, who claimed to be the operator of Travel and Tours Advisers, Inc., was also the President/Manager and an incorporator of the petitioner; and (b) Travel and Tours Advisers, Inc. had been known in Sorsogon as Goldline.

The RTC thus rightly ruled that petitioner might not be shielded from liability under the final judgment through the use of the doctrine of separate corporate identity. Truly, this fiction of law could not be employed to defeat the ends of justice..

FACTS:
On August 2, 1993, Ma. Concepcion Lacsa (Concepcion) and her sister, Miriam Lacsa (Miriam), boarded a Goldline passenger bus owned and operated by Travel &Tours Advisers, Inc. They were enroute from Sorsogon to Cubao, Quezon City. At the time, Concepcion, having just obtained her degree of Bachelor of Science in Nursing was proceeding to Manila to take the nursing licensure board examination. Upon reaching the highway at Barangay San Agustin the Goldline bus, driven by Rene Abania (Abania), collided with a passenger jeepney coming from the opposite direction and driven by Alejandro Belbis. As a result, a metal part of the jeepney was detached and struck Concepcion in the chest, causing her instant death.

On August 23, 1993, Concepcions heirs, represented by Teodoro Lacsa, instituted in the RTC a suit against Travel & Tours Advisers Inc. and Abania to recover damages arising from breach of contract of carriage.

The defendants blamed the death of Concepcion to the recklessness of Bilbes as the driver of the jeepney, and of its operator, Salvador Romano; and that they had consequently brought a third-party complaint against the latter.

Both the RTC and the CA granted the ward for damages in favor of the heirs of Concepcion. Thereafter, the heirs move for the issuance of a writ of execution.

On April 20, 2001, petitioner submitted a so-called verified third party claim, claiming that the tourist bus be returned to petitioner because it was the owner; that petitioner had not been made a party to Civil Case No. 93-5917 and that petitioner was a corporation entirely different from Travel & Tours Advisers, Inc.

Respondents opposed petitioners verified third-party claim and contended that Travel & Tours Advisers, Inc. and petitioner were identical entities and were both operated and managed by the same person, William Cheng; and that petitioner was attempting to defraud its creditors respondents herein hence, the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate entity was squarely applicable.

The defendants blamed the death of Concepcion to the recklessness of Bilbes as the driver of the jeepney, and of its operator, Salvador Romano; and that they had consequently brought a third-party complaint against the latter.

Both the RTC and the CA granted the ward for damages in favor of the heirs of Concepcion. Thereafter, the heirs move for the issuance of a writ of execution.

On April 20, 2001, petitioner submitted a so-called verified third party claim, claiming that the tourist bus be returned to petitioner because it was the owner; that petitioner had not been made a party to Civil Case No. 93-5917 and that petitioner was a corporation entirely different from Travel & Tours Advisers, Inc.

The RTC dismissed petitioners verified third-party claim, observing that the identity of Travel & Tours Adivsers, Inc. could not be divorced from that of petitioner considering that Cheng had claimed to be the operator as well as the President/Manager/incorporator of both entities; and that Travel & Tours Advisers, Inc. had been known in Sorsogon as Goldline.

The petitioner filed a petition for certiorari before the CA but it was dismissed.

ISSUE:

Whether CA rightly find and conclude that the RTC did not gravely abuse its discretion in denying petitioners verified third-party claim. (YES)

RULING:

As we see it, the RTC had sufficient factual basis to find that petitioner and Travel and Tours Advisers, Inc. were one and the same entity, specifically: (a) documents submitted by petitioner in the RTC showing that William Cheng, who claimed to be the operator of Travel and Tours Advisers, Inc., was also the President/Manager and an incorporator of the petitioner; and (b) Travel and Tours Advisers, Inc. had been known in Sorsogon as Goldline.

The RTC thus rightly ruled that petitioner might not be shielded from liability under the final judgment through the use of the doctrine of separate corporate identity. Truly, this fiction of law could not be employed to defeat the ends of justice.

But petitioner continues to challenge the RTC orders by insisting that the evidence to establish its identity with Travel and Tours Advisers, Inc. was insufficient.

We cannot agree with petitioner. As already stated, there was sufficient evidence that petitioner and Travel and Tours Advisers, Inc. were one and the same entity. Moreover, we remind that a petition for the writ of certiorari neither deals with errors of judgment nor extends to a mistake in the appreciation of the contending parties evidence or in the evaluation of their relative weight.

PACIFIC REHOUSE CORPORATION, Petitioner, -versus - COURT OF APPEALS and EXPORT AND INDUSTRY BANK, INC., Respondents

G.R. No. 199687, FIRST DIVISION, MARCH 24, 2014 REYES, J.

The Court has laid down a three-pronged control test to establish when the alter ego doctrine should be operative: (1) Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own; (2) Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of plaintiff's legal right; and (3) The aforesaid control and breach of duty must [have] proximately caused the injury or unjust loss complained of. The absence of any one of these elements prevents 'piercing the corporate veil' in applying the 'instrumentality' or 'alter ego' doctrine, the courts are concerned with reality and not form, with how the corporation operated and the individual defendant's relationship to that operation. Hence, all three elements should concur for the alter ego doctrine to be applicable.

There was nothing on record demonstrative of Export Bank's wrongful intent in setting up a subsidiary, E-Securities. If used to perform legitimate functions, a subsidiary's separate existence shall be respected, and the liability of the parent corporation as well as the subsidiary will be confined to those arising in their respective business. To justify treating the sole stockholder or holding company as responsible, it is not enough that the subsidiary is so organized and controlled as to make it "merely an instrumentality, conduit or adjunct" of its stockholders. It must further appear that to recognize their separate entities would aid in the consummation of a wrong.

FACTS:

On the scales of justice precariously lie the right of a prevailing party to his victor's cup, no more, no less; and the right of a separate entity from being dragged by the ball and chain of the vanquished party.

This case began when Pacific Rehouse Corporation filed a case before the RTC Makati against EIB Securities Inc., for the unauthorized sale of 32,180,000 DMCI shares of private respondents Pacific Rehouse Corporation, Pacific Concorde Corporation, Mizpah Holdings, Inc., Forum Holdings Corporation, and East Asia Oil Company, Inc. In its decision, RTC ordered E-Securities Inc. to return the plaintiffs' [private respondents herein] 32,180,000 DMCI shares, as of judicial demand. On the other hand, plaintiffs are directed to reimburse the defendant the amount of P 10,942,200.00, representing the buyback price of the 60,790,000 KPP shares of stocks at P 0.18 per share. The Resolution was ultimately affirmed by the Supreme Court and attained finality.

When the Writ of Execution was returned unsatisfied, private respondents moved for the issuance of an alias writ of execution to hold Export and Industry Bank, Inc. liable for the judgment obligation as E-Securities is "a wholly-owned controlled and dominated subsidiary of Export and Industry Bank, Inc., and thus, a mere alter ego and business conduit of the latter. E-Securities opposed the motion, arguing that it has a corporate personality that is separate and distinct from petitioner. Private respondents filed their Reply attaching for the first time a sworn statement executed by Atty. Ramon F. Aviado, Jr., the former corporate secretary of petitioner and E-Securities, to support their alter ego theory; and Ex-Parte Manifestation alleging service of copies of the Writ of Execution and Motion for Alias Writ of Execution on petitioner. RTC concluded that E-Securities is a mere business conduit or alter ego of petitioner, the dominant parent corporation, which justifies piercing of the veil of corporate fiction. The trial court ordered an Alias Writ of Execution to be issued directing defendant EIB Securities, Inc., and/or Export and Industry Bank, Inc., to fully comply therewith. With this development, petitioner filed an Omnibus Motion (Ex Abundanti Cautela) questioning the alias writ because it was not impleaded as a party to the case.

The RTC denied the motion and directed the garnishment of P1, 465,799,000.00, the total amount of the 32,180,000 DMCI shares at P45.55 per share, against petitioner and/or E-Securities. The Regional Trial Court (RTC) ratiocinated that being one and the same entity in the eyes of the law, the service of summons upon EIB Securities, Inc. (E-Securities) has bestowed jurisdiction over both the parent and wholly-owned subsidiary. The RTC cited the cases of Sps. Violago v. BA Finance Corp. et al.4 and Arcilla v. Court of Appeals where the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction was applied notwithstanding that the affected corporation was not brought to the court as a party.

Export and Industry Bank, Inc. (Export Bank) filed before the CA a petition for certiorari with prayer for the issuance of a TRO seeking the nullification of the RTC Order for having been made with grave abuse of discretion amounting to lack or excess of jurisdiction. In its petition, Export Bank made reference to several rulings of the Court upholding the separate and distinct personality of a corporation. In a Resolution dated September 2, 2011, the CA issued a 60-day TRO enjoining the execution of the Orders of the RTC dated July 29, 2011 and August 26, 2011, which granted the issuance of an alias writ of execution and ordered the garnishment of the properties of E-Securities and/or Export Bank. The CA also set a hearing to determine the necessity of issuing a writ of injunction.

Pacific Rehouse Corporation (Pacific Rehouse), Pacific Concorde Corporation, Mizpah Holdings, Inc., Forum Holdings Corporation and East Asia Oil Company, Inc. (petitioners) filed their Comment to Export Bank's petition and proffered that the cases mentioned by Export Bank are inapplicable owing to their clearly different factual antecedents. The petitioners alleged that unlike the other cases, there are circumstances peculiar only to E-Securities and Export Bank such as: 499,995 out of 500,000 outstanding shares of stocks of E-Securities are owned by Export Bank; Export Bank had actual knowledge of the subject matter of litigation as the lawyers who represented E-Securities are also lawyers of Export Bank. As an alter ego, there is no need for a finding of fraud or illegality before the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction can be applied. The CA granted the WPI. One of the petitioners herein, Pacific Rehouse filed before the Court a petition for certiorari under Rule 65, docketed as G.R. No. 199687, demonstrating its objection to the Resolutions.

CA ruled on the merit of the case and granted the petition of Export Bank and nullified the Alias Writ of Execution issued by the RTC of Makati. The CA explained that the alter ego theory cannot be sustained because ownership of a subsidiary by the parent company is not enough justification to pierce the veil of corporate fiction

ISSUES:

(1) Whether Export Bank may be held liable for a final and executory judgment against e-securities in an alias writ of execution by piercing its veil of corporate fiction. (NO)
(2) Whether the alter-ago doctrine is applicable. (NO)

RULING:

(1)
The Court already ruled in Kukan International Corporation v. Reyes that compliance with the recognized modes of acquisition of jurisdiction cannot be dispensed with even in piercing the veil of corporate fiction, to wit: "The principle of piercing the veil of corporate fiction, and the resulting treatment of two related corporations as one and the same juridical person with respect to a given transaction, is basically applied only to determine established liability; it is not available to confer on the court a jurisdiction it has not acquired, in the first place, over a party not impleaded in a case. Elsewise put, a corporation not impleaded in a suit cannot be subject to the court's process of piercing the veil of its corporate fiction. In that situation, the court has not acquired jurisdiction over the corporation and, hence, any proceedings taken against that corporation and its property would infringe on its right to due process."

From the preceding, it is therefore correct to say that the court must first and foremost acquire jurisdiction over the parties; and only then would the parties be allowed to present evidence for and/or against piercing the veil of corporate fiction. If the court has no jurisdiction over the corporation, it follows that the court has no business in piercing its veil of corporate fiction because such action offends the corporation's right to due process. "Jurisdiction over the defendant is acquired either upon a valid service of summons or the defendant's voluntary appearance in court. When the defendant does not voluntarily submit to the court's jurisdiction or when there is no valid service of summons, 'any judgment of the court which has no jurisdiction over the person of the defendant is null and void. "The defendant must be properly apprised of a pending action against him and assured of the opportunity to present his defenses to the suit. Proper service of summons is used to protect one's right to due process." As Export Bank was neither served with summons, nor has it voluntarily appeared before the court, the judgment sought to be enforced against E-Securities cannot be made against its parent company, Export Bank. In dispensing with the requirement of service of summons or voluntary appearance of Export Bank, the RTC applied the cases of Violago and Arcilla. The RTC concluded that in these cases, the Court decided that the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate personality can be applied even when one of the affected parties has not been brought to the Court as a party. A closer perusal on the rulings of this Court in Violago and Arcilla, however, reveals that the RTC misinterpreted the doctrines on these cases. The disparity between the instant case and those of Violago and Arcilla is that in said cases, although the corporations were not impleaded as defendant, the persons made liable in the end were already parties thereto since the inception of the main case. Consequently, it cannot be said that the Court had, in the absence of fraud and/or bad faith, applied the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction to make a non-party liable. In short, liabilities attached only to those who are parties.

(2)
"Where one corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are conducted so that it is, in fact, a mere instrumentality or adjunct of the other, the fiction of the corporate entity of the "instrumentality" may be disregarded. The control necessary to invoke the rule is not majority or even completes stock control but such domination of finances, policies and practices that the controlled corporation has, so to speak, no separate mind, will or existence of its own, and is but a conduit for its principal. It must be kept in mind that the control must be shown to have been exercised at the time the acts complained of took place. Moreover, the control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss for which the complaint is made." The Court has laid down a three-pronged control test to establish when the alter ego doctrine should be operative: (1) Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own; (2) Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of plaintiff's legal right; and (3) The aforesaid control and breach of duty must [have] proximately caused the injury or unjust loss complained of. The absence of any one of these elements prevents 'piercing the corporate veil' in applying the 'instrumentality' or 'alter ego' doctrine, the courts are concerned with reality and not form, with how the corporation operated and the individual defendant's relationship to that operation. Hence, all three elements should concur for the alter ego doctrine to be applicable.

Albeit the RTC bore emphasis on the alleged control exercised by Export Bank upon its subsidiary E-Securities, "control, by itself, does not mean that the controlled corporation is a mere instrumentality or a business conduit of the mother company. Even control over the financial and operational concerns of a subsidiary company does not by itself call for disregarding its corporate fiction. There must be a perpetuation of fraud behind the control or at least a fraudulent or illegal purpose behind the control in order to justify piercing the veil of corporate fiction. Such fraudulent intent is lacking in this case." Moreover, there was nothing on record demonstrative of Export Bank's wrongful intent in setting up a subsidiary, E-Securities. If used to perform legitimate functions, a subsidiary's separate existence shall be respected, and the liability of the parent corporation as well as the subsidiary will be confined to those arising in their respective business. To justify treating the sole stockholder or holding company as responsible, it is not enough that the subsidiary is so organized and controlled as to make it "merely an instrumentality, conduit or adjunct" of its stockholders. It must further appear that to recognize their separate entities would aid in the consummation of a wrong.

As established in the main case and reiterated by the CA, the subject 32,180,000 DMCI shares which E-Securities is obliged to return to the petitioners were originally bought at an average price of P0.38 per share and were sold for an average price of P0.24 per share. The proceeds were then used to buy back 61,100,000 KPP shares earlier sold by E-Securities. Quite unexpectedly however, the total amount of these DMCI shares ballooned to P1,465,799,000.00.74 It must be taken into account that this unexpected turnabout did not inure to the benefit of E-Securities, much less Export Bank. Furthermore, ownership by Export Bank of a great majority or all of stocks of E-Securities and the existence of interlocking directorates may serve as badges of control, but ownership of another corporation, per se, without proof of actuality of the other conditions are insufficient to establish an alter ego relationship or connection between the two corporations, which will justify the setting aside of the cover of corporate fiction. The Court has declared that "mere ownership by a single stockholder or by another corporation of all or nearly all of the capital stock of a corporation is not of itself sufficient ground for disregarding the separate corporate personality." The Court has likewise ruled that the "existence of interlocking directors, corporate officers and shareholders is not enough justification to pierce the veil of corporate fiction in the absence of fraud or other public policy considerations."

ERIC GODFREY STANLEY LIVESEY, Petitioner, -versus - BINSWANGER PHILIPPINES, INC. and KEITH ELLIOT, Respondents

G.R. No. 177493, SECOND DIVISION, MARCH 19, 2014 BRION, J.

Under the doctrine, the corporate existence may be disregarded where the entity is formed or used for non-legitimate purposes, such as to evade a just and due obligation, or to justify a wrong, to shield or perpetrate fraud or to carry out similar or inequitable considerations, other unjustifiable aims or intentions, in which case, the fiction will be disregarded and the individuals composing it and the two corporations will be treated as identical.

In the present case, we see an indubitable link between CBB's closure and Binswanger's incorporation. CBB ceased to exist only in name; it re-emerged in the person of Binswanger for an urgent purpose — to avoid payment by CBB of the last two installments of its monetary obligation to Livesey, as well as its other financial liabilities. Freed of CBB's liabilities, especially that owing to Livesey, Binswanger can continue, as it did continue, CBB's real estate brokerage business.

FACTS:

Petitioner Eric Godfrey Stanley Livesey filed a complaint for illegal dismissal with money claims4 against CBB Philippines Strategic Property Services, Inc. (CBB) and Paul Dwyer.
Labor arbiter Reyno found that Livesey had been illegally dismissed.

Thereafter, the parties entered into a compromise agreement which LA Reyno approved in an order dated November 6, 2002.8 Under the agreement, Livesey was to receive US$31,000.00 in full satisfaction of LA Reyno's decision, broken down into US$13,000.00 to be paid by CBB to Livesey or his authorized representative upon the signing of the agreement; US$9,000.00 on or before June 30, 2003; and US$9,000.00 on or before September 30, 2003. Further, the agreement provided that unless and until the agreement is fully satisfied, CBB shall not: (1) sell, alienate, or otherwise dispose of all or substantially all of its assets or business; (2) suspend, discontinue, or cease its entire, or a substantial portion of its business operations; (3) substantially change the nature of its business; and (4) declare bankruptcy or insolvency.

CBB paid Livesey the initial amount of US$13,000.00, but not the next two installments as the company ceased operations. In reaction, Livesey moved for the issuance of a writ of execution. LA Eduardo G. Magno granted the writ,9 but it was not enforced. Livesey then filed a motion for the issuance of an alias writ of execution,10 alleging that in the process of serving respondents the writ, he learned "that respondents, in a clear and willful attempt to avoid their liabilities to complainant x x x have organized another corporation, [Binswanger] Philippines, Inc."11 He claimed that there was evidence showing that CBB and Binswanger Philippines, Inc. (Binswanger) are one and the same corporation, pointing out that CBB stands for Chesterton Blumenauer Binswanger. Invoking the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction, Livesey prayed that an alias writ of execution be issued against respondents Binswanger and Keith Elliot, CBB's former President, and now Binswanger's President and Chief Executive Officer (CEO).

LA Catalino R. Laderas denied Livesey's motion for an alias writ of execution, holding that the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil was inapplicable in the case. He explained that the stockholders of the two corporations were not the same. NLRC found them solidarily liable. CA disagreed with the NLRC finding that the respondents are jointly and severally liable with CBB in the case. It emphasized that the mere fact that Binswanger and CBB have the same President is not in itself sufficient to pierce the veil of corporate fiction of the two entities

ISSUE:

Whether doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction is applicable (YES)

RULING:

It has long been settled that the law vests a corporation with a personality distinct and separate from its stockholders or members. In the same vein, a corporation, by legal fiction and convenience, is an entity shielded by a protective mantle and imbued by law with a character alien to the persons comprising it. Nonetheless, the shield is not at all times impenetrable and cannot be extended to a point beyond its reason and policy. Circumstances might deny a claim for corporate personality, under the "doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction."

Piercing the veil of corporate fiction is an equitable doctrine developed to address situations where the separate corporate personality of a corporation is abused or used for wrongful purposes. Under the doctrine, the corporate existence may be disregarded where the entity is formed or used for non-legitimate purposes, such as to evade a just and due obligation, or to justify a wrong, to shield or perpetrate fraud or to carry out similar or inequitable considerations, other unjustifiable aims or intentions, in which case, the fiction will be disregarded and the individuals composing it and the two corporations will be treated as identical.

In the present case, we see an indubitable link between CBB's closure and Binswanger's incorporation. CBB ceased to exist only in name; it re-emerged in the person of Binswanger for an urgent purpose — to avoid payment by CBB of the last two installments of its monetary obligation to Livesey, as well as its other financial liabilities. Freed of CBB's liabilities, especially that owing to Livesey, Binswanger can continue, as it did continue, CBB's real estate brokerage business.

Livesey's evidence, whose existence the respondents never denied, converged to show this continuity of business operations from CBB to Binswanger. It was not just coincidence that Binswanger is engaged in the same line of business CBB embarked on: (1) it even holds office in the very same building and on the very same floor where CBB once stood; (2) CBB's key officers, Elliot, no less, and Catral moved over to Binswanger, performing the tasks they were doing at CBB; (3) notwithstanding CBB's closure, Binswanger's Web Editor (Young), in an e-mail correspondence, supplied the information that Binswanger is "now known" as either CBB (Chesterton Blumenauer Binswanger or as Chesterton Petty, Ltd., in the Philippines; (4) the use of Binswanger of CBB's paraphernalia (receiving stamp) in connection with a labor case where Binswanger was summoned by the authorities, although Elliot claimed that he bought the item with his own money; and (5) Binswanger's takeover of CBB's project with the PNB.

While the ostensible reason for Binswanger's establishment is to continue CBB's business operations in the Philippines, which by itself is not illegal, the close proximity between CBB's disestablishment and Binswanger's coming into existence points to an unstated but urgent consideration which, as we earlier noted, was to evade CBB's unfulfilled financial obligation to Livesey under the compromise agreement.

This underhanded objective, it must be stressed, can only be attributed to Elliot as it was apparent that Binswanger's stockholders had nothing to do with Binswanger's operations as noted by the NLRC and which the respondents did not deny. Elliot was well aware of the compromise agreement between Livesey and CBB, as he "agreed and accepted" the terms of the agreement49 for CBB. He was also well aware that the last two installments of CBB's obligation to Livesey were due on June 30, 2003 and September 30, 2003. These installments were not met and the reason is that after the alleged sale of the majority of CBB's shares of stock, it closed down.

With CBB's closure, Livesey asked why people would buy into a corporation and simply close it down immediately thereafter? The answer — to pave the way for CBB's reappearance as Binswanger. Elliot's "guiding hand," as Livesey puts it, is very much evident in CBB's demise and Binswanger's creation. Elliot knew that CBB had not fully complied with its financial obligation under the compromise agreement. He made sure that it would not be fulfilled when he allowed CBB's closure, despite the condition in the agreement that "unless and until the Compromise Amount has been fully settled and paid by the Company in favor of Mr.

Livesey, the Company shall not x x x suspend, discontinue, or cease its entire or a substantial portion of its business operations."

What happened to CBB, we believe, supports Livesey's assertion that De Guzman, CBB's former Associate Director, informed him that at one time Elliot told her of CBB 's plan to close the corporation and organize another for the purpose of evading CBB 's liabilities to Livesey and its other financial liabilities.52 This wrongful intent we cannot and must not condone, for it will give a premium to an iniquitous business strategy where a corporation is formed or used for a non-legitimate purpose, such as to evade a just and due obligation.53 We, therefore, find Elliot as liable as Binswanger for CBB 's unfulfilled obligation to Livesey.

PRINCE TRANSPORT, Inc. and Mr. RENATO CLAROS, Petitioners, -versus - DIOSDADO GARCIA et al., Respondents
G.R. No. 167291, SECOND DIVISION, JANUARY 12, 2011 PERALTA, J.

Under the doctrine, the corporate existence may be disregarded where the entity is formed or used for non-legitimate purposes, such as to evade a just and due obligation, or to justify a wrong, to shield or perpetrate fraud or to carry out similar or inequitable considerations, other unjustifiable aims or intentions, in which case, the fiction will be disregarded and the individuals composing it and the two corporations will be treated as identical.

In the present case, we see an indubitable link between CBB's closure and Binswanger's incorporation. CBB ceased to exist only in name; it re-emerged in the person of Binswanger for an urgent purpose — to avoid payment by CBB of the last two installments of its monetary obligation to Livesey, as well as its other financial liabilities. Freed of CBB's liabilities, especially that owing to Livesey, Binswanger can continue, as it did continue, CBB's real estate brokerage business.

FACTS:

The present petition arose from various complaints filed by herein respondents charging petitioners with illegal dismissal, unfair labor practice and illegal deductions and praying for the award of premium pay for holiday and rest day, holiday pay, service leave pay, 13th month pay, moral and exemplary damages and attorney's fees.

Respondents alleged in their respective position papers and other related pleadings that they were employees of Prince Transport, Inc. (PTI), a company engaged in the business of transporting passengers by land; respondents were hired either as drivers, conductors, mechanics or inspectors, except for respondent Diosdado Garcia (Garcia), who was assigned as Operations Manager; in addition to their regular monthly income, respondents also received commissions equivalent to 8 to 10% of their wages; sometime in October 1997, the said commissions were reduced to 7 to 9%; this led respondents and other employees of PTI to hold a series of meetings to discuss the protection of their interests as employees; these meetings led petitioner Renato Claros, who is the president of PTI, to suspect that respondents are about to form a union; he made known to Garcia his objection to the formation of a union; in December 1997, PTI employees requested for a cash advance, but the same was denied by management which resulted in demoralization on the employees' ranks; later, PTI acceded to the request of some, but not all, of the employees; the foregoing circumstances led respondents to form a union for their mutual aid and protection; in order to block the continued formation of the union, PTI caused the transfer of all union members and sympathizers to one of its sub-companies, Lubas Transport (Lubas); despite such transfer, the schedule of drivers and conductors, as well as their company identification cards, were issued by PTI; the daily time records, tickets and reports of the respondents were also filed at the PTI office; and, all claims for salaries were transacted at the same office; later, the business of Lubas deteriorated because of the refusal of PTI to maintain and repair the units being used therein, which resulted in the virtual stoppage of its operations and respondents' loss of employment.

The Labor Arbiter ruled that petitioners are not guilty of unfair labor practice in the absence of evidence to show that they violated respondents' right to self-organization. The Labor Arbiter also held that Lubas is the respondents' employer and that it (Lubas) is an entity which is separate, distinct and independent from PTI.

CA rendered the herein assailed Decision which granted respondents' petition. The CA ruled that petitioners are guilty of unfair labor practice; that Lubas is a mere instrumentality, agent conduit or adjunct of PTI; and that petitioners' act of transferring respondents' employment to Lubas is indicative of their intent to frustrate the efforts of respondents to organize themselves into a union.

Petitioners contend that the CA erred in applying the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil with respect to Lubas, because the said doctrine is applicable only to corporations and Lubas is not a corporation but a single proprietorship; that Lubas had been found by the Labor Arbiter and the NLRC to have a personality which is separate and distinct from that of PTI; that PTI had no hand in the management and operation as well as control and supervision of the employees of Lubas.

ISSUE:

Whether doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction is applicable (YES)

RULING:

The Court agrees with the CA that Lubas is a mere agent, conduit or adjunct of PTI. A settled formulation of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil is that when two business enterprises are owned, conducted and controlled by the same parties, both law and equity will, when necessary to protect the rights of third parties, disregard the legal fiction that these two entities are distinct and treat them as identical or as one and the same. In the present case, it may be true that Lubas is a single proprietorship and not a corporation. However, petitioners' attempt to isolate themselves from and hide behind the supposed separate and distinct personality of Lubas so as to evade their liabilities is precisely what the classical doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate entity seeks to prevent and remedy.

Thus, the Court agrees with the observations of the CA, to wit:
As correctly pointed out by petitioners, if Lubas were truly a separate entity, how come that it was Prince Transport who made the decision to transfer its employees to the former? Besides, Prince Transport never regarded Lubas Transport as a separate entity. In the aforesaid letter, it referred to said entity as "Lubas operations." Moreover, in said letter, it did not transfer the employees; it "assigned" them. Lastly, the existing funds and 201 file of the employees were turned over not to a new company but a "new management."

The Court also agrees with respondents that if Lubas is indeed an entity separate and independent from PTI why is it that the latter decides which employees shall work in the former?

What is telling is the fact that in a memorandum issued by PTI, dated January 22, 1998, petitioner company admitted that Lubas is one of its sub-companies. In addition, PTI, in its letters to its employees who were transferred to Lubas, referred to the latter as its "New City Operations Bus."

Moreover, petitioners failed to refute the contention of respondents that despite the latter's transfer to Lubas of their daily time records, reports, daily income remittances of conductors, schedule of drivers and conductors were all made, performed, filed and kept at the office of PTI. In fact, respondents' identification cards bear the name of PTI.

It may not be amiss to point out at this juncture that in two separate illegal dismissal cases involving different groups of employees transferred by PTI to other companies, the Labor Arbiter handling the cases found that these companies and PTI are one and the same entity; thus, making them solidarily liable for the payment of backwages and other money claims awarded to the complainants therein.

REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES, Petitioner, -versus - MEGA PACIFIC Esolutions, INC., WILLY U. YU, BONNIE S. YU, ENRIQUE T. TANSIPEK, ROSITA Y. TANSIPEK, PEDRO O. TAN, JOHNSON W. FONG, BERNARD I. FONG, and *LAURIANO A. BARRIOS, Respondents
G.R. No. 184666, FIRST DIVISION, June 27, 2016 SERENO, CJ.

Veil-piercing in fraud cases requires that the legal fiction of separate juridical personality is used for fraudulent or wrongful ends. For reasons discussed below, We see red flags of fraudulent schemes in public procurement, all of which were established in the 2004 Decision, the totality of which strongly indicate that MPEI was a sham corporation formed merely for the purpose of perpetrating a fraudulent scheme.

The red flags are as follows: (1) overly narrow specifications; (2) unjustified recommendations and unjustified winning bidders; (3) failure to meet the terms of the contract; and (4) shell or fictitious company.

FACTS:

On the 2004 elections, the COMELEC again attempted to implement the automated election system. For this purpose, it invited bidders to apply for the procurement of supplies, equipment, and services. Respondent MPEI, as lead company, purportedly formed a joint venture - known as the Mega Pacific Consortium (MPC) - together with We Solv, SK C & C, ePLDT, Election.com and Oracle. Subsequently, MPEI, on behalf of MPC, submitted its bid proposal to COMELEC.

The COMELEC evaluated various bid offers and subsequently found MPC and another company eligible to participate in the next phase of the bidding process. The two companies were referred to the Department of Science and Technology (DOST) for technical evaluation. After due assessment, the Bids and Awards Committee (BAC) recommended that the project be awarded to MPC. The COMELEC favorably acted on the recommendation and issued Resolution No. 6074, which awarded the automation project to MPC.

Despite the award to MPC, the COMELEC and MPEI executed on 2 June 2003 the Automated Counting and Canvassing Project Contract (automation contract) for the aggregate amount of ₱l,248,949,088. MPEI agreed to supply and deliver 1,991 units of ACMs and such other equipment and materials necessary for the computerized electoral system in the 2004 elections. Pursuant to the automation contract, MPEI delivered 1,991 ACMs to the COMELEC. The latter, for its part, made partial payments to MPEI in the aggregate amount of ₱l.05 billion.

The full implementation of the automation contract was rendered impossible by the fact that, after a painstaking legal battle, this Court in its 2004 Decision declared the contract null and void.[6] We held that the COMELEC committed a clear violation of law and jurisprudence, as well as a reckless disregard of its own bidding rules and procedure. In addition, the COMELEC entered into the contract with inexplicable haste, and without adequately checking and observing mandatory financial, technical, and legal requirements

Upon the finality of the declaration of nullity of the automation contract, respondent MPEI filed a Complaint for Damages before the RTC Makati, arguing that, notwithstanding the nullification of the automation contract, the COMELEC was still bound to pay the amount of ₱200,165,681.89. This amount represented the difference between the value of the ACMs and the support services delivered on one hand, and on the other, the payment previously made by the COMELEC.

Petitioner filed its Answer with Counterclaim and argued that respondent MPEI could no longer recover the unpaid balance from the void automation contract, since the payments made were illegal disbursements of public funds. It contended that a null and void contract vests no rights and creates no obligations, and thus produces no legal effect at all. Petitioner further posited that respondent MPEI could not hinge its claim upon the principles of unjust enrichment and quasi-contract, because such presume that the acts by which the authors thereof become obligated to each other are lawful, which was not the case herein.

By way of a counterclaim, petitioner demanded from respondents the return of the payments made pursuant to the automation contract. It argued that individual respondents, being the incorporators of MPEI, likewise ought to be impleaded and held accountable for MPEI's liabilities. The creation of MPC was, after all, merely an ingenious scheme to feign eligibility to bid.

Pursuant to Section l(d) of Rule 57 of the Rules of Court, petitioner prayed for the issuance of a writ of preliminary attachment against the properties of MPEI and individual respondents. The application was grounded upon the fraudulent misrepresentation of respondents as to their eligibility to participate in the bidding for the COMELEC automation project and the failure of the ACMs to comply with mandatory technical requirements.

Subsequently, the trial court denied the prayer for the issuance of a writ of preliminary attachment, ruling that there was an absence of factual allegations as to how the fraud was actually committed.

CA reversed and set aside the trial court's decision.

Individual respondents argue that since they were not parties to the 2004 case, any factual findings or conclusions therein should not be binding upon them. Since they were strangers to that case, they are not bound by the judgment rendered by this Court. They claim that their fundamental right to due process would be violated if their properties were to be attached for a purported corporate debt on the basis of a court ruling in a case in which they were not given the right or opportunity to be heard.

ISSUE:

Whether issuance of a writ of preliminary attachment over the properties of the individual respondents is proper (YES)

RULING:

The Application of the piercing doctrine justifies the issuance of a writ of preliminary attachment over the properties of the individual respondents.

In the first place, it could not be reasonably expected that individual respondents would be impleaded in the 2004 case. As admitted by respondents, the issues resolved in the 2004 Decision were limited to the following: (1) whether to declare Resolution No. 6074 of the COMELEC null and void; (2) whether to enjoin the implementation of any further contract that may have been entered into by COMELEC with MPC or MPEI; and (3) whether to compel COMELEC to conduct a rebidding of the project. To implead individual respondents then was improper, considering that the automation contract was entered into by respondent MPEI. This Court even acknowledged this fact by directing that the liabilities of persons responsible for the nullity of the contract be determined in another appropriate proceeding and by directing the OSG to undertake measures to protect the interests of the government.

At any rate, individual respondents have been fully afforded the right to due process by being impleaded and heard in the subsequent proceedings before the courts a quo. Finally, they cannot argue violation of due process, as respondent MPEI, of which they are incorporators/stockholders, remains vulnerable to the piercing of its corporate veil.

A. There are red flags indicating thatMPEI was used to perpetrate the fraud against petitioner, thus allowing the piercing of its corporate veil.

Petitioner seeks the issuance of a writ of preliminary attachment over the personal assets of the individual respondents, notwithstanding the doctrine of separate juridical personality. It invokes the use of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil, to which the canon of separate juridical personality is vulnerable, as a way to reach the personal properties of the individual respondents. Petitioner paints a picture of a sham corporation set up by all the individual respondents for the purpose of securing the automation contract.

We agree with petitioner.

Veil-piercing in fraud cases requires that the legal fiction of separate juridical personality is used for fraudulent or wrongful ends. For reasons discussed below, We see red flags of fraudulent schemes in public procurement, all of which were established in the 2004 Decision, the totality of which strongly indicate that MPEI was a sham corporation formed merely for the purpose of perpetrating a fraudulent scheme.

The red flags are as follows: (1) overly narrow specifications; (2) unjustified recommendations and unjustified winning bidders; (3) failure to meet the terms of the contract; and (4) shell or fictitious company.

The Handbook regards a shell or fictitious company as a "serious red flag," a concept that it elaborates upon:
Fictitious companies are by definition fraudulent and may also serve as fronts for government officials. The typical scheme involves corrupt government officials creating a fictitious company that will serve as a "vehicle" to secure contract awards. Often, the fictitious-or ghost-company will subcontract work to lower cost and sometimes unqualified firms. The fictitious company may also utilize designated losers as subcontractors to deliver the work, thus indicating collusion.
Shell companies have no significant assets, staff or operational capacity. They pose a serious red flagas a bidder on public contracts, because they often hide the interests of project or government officials, concealing a conflict of interest and opportunities for money laundering. Also, by definition, they have no experience.

MPEI qualifies as a shell or fictitious company. It was nonexistent at the time of the invitation to bid; to be precise, it was incorporated only 11 days before the bidding. It was a newly formed corporation and, as such, had no track record to speak of.

Further, MPEI misrepresented itself in the bidding process as "lead company" of the supposed joint venture. The misrepresentation appears to have been an attempt to justify its lack of experience. As a new company, it was not eligible to participate as a bidder. It could do so only by pretending that it was acting as an agent of the putative consortium.

The timing of the incorporation of MPEI is particularly noteworthy. Its close nexus to the date of the invitation to bid and the date of the bidding (11 days) provides a strong indicium of the intent to use the corporate vehicle for fraudulent purposes. This proximity unmistakably indicates that the automation contract served as motivation for the formation of MPEI: a corporation had to be organized so it could participate in the bidding by claiming to be an agent of a pretended joint venture.

Respondent MPEI was formed to perpetrate the fraud against petitioner.
The totality of the red flags found in this case leads Us to the inevitable conclusion that MPEI was nothing but a sham corporation formed for the purpose of defrauding petitioner. Its ultimate objective was to secure the ₱1,248,949,088 automation contract. The scheme was to put up a corporation that would participate in the bid and enter into a contract with the COMELEC, even if the former was not qualified or authorized to do so.

Without the incorporation of MPEI, the defraudation of the government would not have been possible. The formation of MPEI paved the way for its participation in the bid, through its claim that it was an agent of a supposed joint venture, its misrepresentations to secure the automation contract, its misrepresentation at the time of the execution of the contract, its delivery of the defective ACMs, and ultimately its acceptance of the benefits under the automation contract.
The foregoing considered, veil-piercing is justified in this case.

We shall next consider the question of whose assets shall be reached by the application of the piercing doctrine.

B. Because all the individual respondents actively participated in the perpetration of the fraud against petitioner, their personal assets may be subject to a writ of preliminary attachment by piercing the corporate veil.

Contrary to respondent Willy's claims, his participation in the fraud is clearly established by his unequivocal agreement to the execution of the automation contract with the COMELEC, and his signature that appears on the voided contract. As far back as in the 2004 Decision, his participation as a signatory to the automation contract was already established:

The foregoing argument is unpersuasive. First, the contract being referred to, entitled "The Automated Counting and Canvassing Project Contract,'' is between Comelec and MPEI, not the alleged consortium, MPC. To repeat, it is MPEI -- not MPC -- that is a party to the Contract. Nowhere in that Contract is there any mention of a consortium or joint venture, of members thereof,much less of joint and several liability. Supposedly executed sometime in May 2003, the Contract bears a notarization date of June 30, 2003, and contains the signature of Willy U. Yu signing as president of MPEI (not for and on behalf of MPC), along with that of the Comclec chair. It provides in Section 3.2 that MPEI (not MPC) is to supply the Equipment and perform the Services under the Contract, in accordance with the appendices thereof; nothing whatsoever is said about any consortium or joint venture or partnership. x x x (Emphasis supplied)

That his signature appears on the automation contract means that he agreed and acceded to its terms. His participation in the fraud involves his signing and executing the voided contract.

The execution of the automation contract with a non-eligible entity and the subsequent award of the contract despite the failure to meet the mandatory requirements were "badges of fraud" in the procurement process that should have been recognized by the CA to justify the issuance of the writ of preliminary attachment against the properties of respondent Willy.

With respect to the other individual respondents, petitioner, in its Answer with Counterclaim, alleged:

30. Also, inasmuch as MPEI is in truth a mere shell corporation with no real assets in its name, incorporated merely to feign eligibility for the bidding of the automated contract when it in fact had none, to the great prejudice of the Republic, plaintiff's individual incorporators should likewise be made liable together with MPEI for the automated contract amount paid to and received by the latter. The following circumstances altogether manifest that the individual incorporators merely cloaked themselves with the veil of corporate fiction to perpetrate a fraud and to eschew liability therefor, thus:

x x x x
f. From the time it was incorporated until today, MPEI has not complied with the reportorial requirements of the Securities and Exchange Commission;

g. Individual incorporators, acting fraudulently through MPEI, and in violation of the bidding rules, then subcontracted the automation contract to four (4) other corporations, namely: WeSolve Corporation, SK C&C, ePLDT and election.com, to comply with the capital requirements, requisite five (5)-year corporate standing and the technical qualifications of the Request for Proposal;

x x x x

In response to petitioner's allegations, respondents Willy and Bonnie stated in their Reply and Answer (Re: Answer with Counterclaim dated 28 June 2004):

3.3 As far as plaintiff MPEI and defendants-in-counterclaim are concerned, they dealt with the COMELEC with full transparency and in utmost good faith. All documents support its eligibility to bid for the supply of the ACMs and their peripheral services, were submitted to the COMELEC for its evaluation in full transparency. Pertinently, neither plaintiff MPEI nor any of its directors, stockholders, officers or employees had any participation in the evaluation of the bids and eventual choice of the winning bidder.

Respondents Johnson's and Bernard's denials were made in paragraphs 2.17 and 3.3 of their Answer with Counterclaim to the Republic's Counterclaim, to wit:

2.17 The erroneous conclusion of fact and law in paragraph 30 (f) and (g) of the Republic's answer is denied, having been pleaded in violation of the requirement, that only ultimate facts are to be stated in the pleadings and they are falsehoods. The truth of the matter is that there could not have been fraud, as these agreements were submitted to the COMELEC for its evaluation and assessment, as to the qualification of the Consortium as a bidder, a showing of transparency in plaintiff's dealings with the Republic.

3.3 As far as plaintiff MPEI and defendants-in-counterclaim are concerned, they dealt with the COMELEC with full transparency and in utmost good faith. All documents support its eligibility to bid for the supply of the automated counting machines and its peripheral services, were submitted to the COMELEC for its evaluation in full transparency. Pertinently, the plaintiff or any of its directors, stockholders, officers or employees had no participation in the evaluation of the bids and eventual choice of the winning bidder.

As regards Enrique and Rosita, the relevant paragraphs in the Answer with Counterclaim to the Republic's Counterclaim are quoted below:

2.17. The erroneous conclusion of fact and law in paragraph 30 (F) and (G) of the Republic's answer is denied, having been pleaded in violation of the requirement, that only ultimate facts are to be stated in the pleadings and they are falsehoods. The truth of the matter is that there could not have been fraud, as these agreements were submitted to the COMELEC for its evaluation and assessment, as to the qualification of the Consortium as a bidder, a showing of transparency in plaintiffs dealings with the Republic.

3.3. As far as the plaintiff and herein answering defendants-in-counterclaim are concerned, they dealt with the Commission on Elections with full transparency and in utmost good faith. All documents in support of its eligibility to bid for the supply of the automated counting machines and its peripheral services were submitted to the Commission on Elections for its evaluation in full transparency. Pertinently, the plaintiff or any of its directors, stockholders, officers or employees had no participation in the evaluation of the bids and eventual choice of the winning bidder.

Pedro and Laureano offer a similar defense in paragraph 3.3 of their Reply and Answer with Counterclaim to the Republic's Counterclaim [126] dated 28 June 2004, which reads:

3.3. As far as plaintiff MPEI and defendants-in-counterclaim are concerned, they dealt with the COMELEC with full transparency and in utmost good faith. All documents support its eligibility to bid for the supply of the ACMs and their peripheral services, were submitted to the COMELEC for its evaluation in full transparency. Pertinently, neither plaintiff MPEI nor any of its directors, stockholders, officers or employees had any participation in the evaluation of the bids and eventual choice of the winning bidder.

It can be seen from the above-quoted paragraphs that the individual respondents never denied their participation in the questioned transactions of MPEI, merely raising the defense of good faith and shifting the blame to the COMELEC. The individual respondents have, in effect, admitted that they had knowledge of and participation in the fraudulent subcontracting of the automation contract to the four corporations.

It bears stressing that the remaining individual respondents, together with respondent Willy, incorporated MPEI. As incorporators, they are expected to be involved in the management of the corporation and they are charged with the duty of care. This is one of the reasons for the requirement of ownership of at least one share of stock by an incorporator:

The reason for this, as explained by the lawmakers, is to avoid the confusion and/or ambiguities arising in a situation under the old corporation law where there exists one set of incorporators who are not even shareholders and another set of directors/incorporators who must all be shareholders of the corporation. The people who deal with said corporation at such an early stage are confused as to who are the persons or group really authorized to act in behalf of the corporation. (Proceedings of the Batasan Pambansa on the Proposed Corporation Code). Another reason may be anchored on the presumption that when an incorporator has pecuniary interest in the corporation, no matter how minimal, he will be more involved in the management of corporate affairs and to a greater degree, be concerned with the welfare of the corporation. [128]
As incorporators and businessmen about to embark on a new business venture involving a sizeable capital (₱300 million), the remaining individual respondents should have known of Willy's scheme to perpetrate the fraud against petitioner, especially because the objective was a billion peso automation contract. Still, they proceeded with the illicit business venture.

It is clear to this Court that inequity would result if we do not attach personal liability to all the individual respondents.

ERSON ANG LEE DOING BUSINESS as "SUPER LAMINATION SERVICES," Petitioner, -versus- SAMAHANG MANGGAGAWA NG SUPER LAMINATION (SMSLS-NAFLU-KMU), Respondents
G.R. No. 193816, FIRST DIVISION, November 21, 2016 SERENO, CJ.

Under the doctrine, the corporate existence may be disregarded where the entity is formed or used for non-legitimate purposes, such as to evade a just and due obligation, or to justify a wrong, to shield or perpetrate fraud or to carry out similar or inequitable considerations, other unjustifiable aims or intentions, in which case, the fiction will be disregarded and the individuals composing it and the two corporations will be treated as identical.

In the present case, we see an indubitable link between CBB's closure and Binswanger's incorporation. CBB ceased to exist only in name; it re-emerged in the person of Binswanger for an urgent purpose — to avoid payment by CBB of the last two installments of its monetary obligation to Livesey, as well as its other financial liabilities. Freed of CBB's liabilities, especially that owing to Livesey, Binswanger can continue, as it did continue, CBB's real estate brokerage business.

FACTS:

On 7 March 2008, Union A filed a Petition for Certification Election to represent all the rank-and-file employees of Super Lamination.

Notably, on the same date, Express Lamination Workers' Union (Union B) also filed a Petition for Certification Election to represent all the rank-and-file employees of Express Lamination.

Also on the same date, the Samahan ng mga Manggagawa ng Express Coat Enterprises, Inc. (Union C) filed a Petition for Certification Election to represent the rank-and-file employees of Express Coat.

Super Lamination, Express Lamination, and Express Coat, all represented by one counsel, separately claimed in their Comments and Motions to Dismiss that the petitions must be dismissed on the same ground - lack of employer-employee relationship between these establishments and the bargaining units that Unions A, B, and C seek to represent as well as these unions' respective members. Super Lamination, in its Motion, posited that a majority of the persons who were enumerated in the list of members and officers of Union A were not its employees, but were employed by either Express Lamination or Express Coat. Interestingly, both Express Lamination and Express Coat, in turn, maintained the same argument - that a majority of those who had assented to the Petition for Certification Election were not employees of either company, but of one of the two other companies involved.

All three Petitions for Certification Election of the Unions were denied. On 21 May 2008, an Order was issued by DOLE National Capital Region (NCR) Med-Arbiter Michael Angelo Parado denying the respective petitions of Unions B and C on the ground that there was no existing employer-employee relationship between the members of the unions and the companies concerned. On 23 May 2008, DOLE NCR Med-Arbiter Alma Magdaraog-Alba also denied the petition of respondent Union A on the same ground.

The three unions filed their respective appeals before the Office of the DOLE Secretary, which consolidated the appeal because the involved companies alternately referred to one another as the employer of the members of the bargaining units sought to be represented.15 The unions argued that their petitions should have been allowed considering that the companies involved were unorganized, and that the employers had no concomitant right to oppose the petitions. They also claimed that while the questioned employees might have been assigned to perform work at the other companies, they were all under one management's direct control and supervision.

DOLE found that Super Lamination, Express Lamination, and Express Coat were sister companies that had a common human resource department responsible for hiring and disciplining the employees of the three companies. The same department was found to have also given them daily instructions on how to go about their work and where to report for work. It also found that the three companies involved constantly rotated their workers, and that the latter's identification cards had only one signatory.

To DOLE, these circumstances showed that the companies were engaged in a work-pooling scheme, in light of which they might be considered as one and the same entity for the purpose of determining the appropriate bargaining unit in a certification election.

CA affirmed.

ISSUE:

Whether application of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil is warranted (YES)

RULING:

Petitioner argues that separate corporations cannot be treated as a single bargaining unit even if their businesses are related, as these companies are indubitably distinct entities with separate juridical personalities. Hence, the employees of one corporation cannot be allowed to vote in the certification election of another corporation, lest the abovementioned rule be violated.

Petitioner's argument, while correct, is a general rule. This Court has time and again disregarded separate juridical personalities under the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil. It has done so in cases where a separate legal entity is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud, or defend crime, among other grounds. In any of these situations, the law will regard it as an association of persons or, in case of two corporations, merge them into one.

A settled formulation of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil is that when two business enterprises are owned, conducted, and controlled by the same parties, both law and equity will, when necessary to protect the rights of third parties, disregard the legal fiction that these two entities are distinct and treat them as identical or as one and the same.

This formulation has been applied by this Court to cases in which the laborer has been put in a disadvantageous position as a result of the separate juridical personalities of the employers involved. Pursuant to veil-piercing, we have held two corporations jointly and severally liable for an employee's back wages. We also considered a corporation and its separately-incorporated branches as one and the same for purposes of finding the corporation guilty of illegal dismissal. These rulings were made pursuant to the fundamental doctrine that the corporate fiction should not be used as a subterfuge to commit injustice and circumvent labor laws.

Here, a certification election was ordered to be held for all the rank-and- file employees of Super Lamination, Express Lamination, and Express Coat. The three companies were supposedly distinct entities based on the fact that Super Lamination is a sole proprietorship while Express Lamination and Express Coat were separately registered with the SEC. The directive was therefore, in effect, a piercing of the separate juridical personalities of the corporations involved. We find the piercing to be proper and in accordance with the law as will be discussed below.

The following established facts show that Super Lamination, Express Lamination, and Express Coat are under the control and management of the same party - petitioner Ang Lee. In effect, the employees of these three companies have petitioner as their common employer, as shown by the following facts:
1. Super Lamination, Express Lamination, and Express Coat were engaged in the same business of providing lamination services to the public as admitted by petitioner in his petition.
2. The three establishments operated and hired employees through a common human resource department as found by DOLE in a clarificatory hearing. Though it was not clear which company the human resource department was officially attached to, petitioner admits in his petition that such department was shared by the three companies for purposes of convenience.
3. The workers of all three companies were constantly rotated and periodically assigned to Super Lamination or Express Lamination or Express Coat to perform the same or similar tasks. This finding was further affirmed when petitioner admitted in his petition before us that the Super Lamination had entered into a work-pooling agreement with the two other companies and shared a number of their employees.

4. DOLE found and the CA affirmed that the common human resource department imposed disciplinary sanctions and directed the daily performance of all the members of Unions A, B, and C.

5. Super Lamination included in its payroll and SSS registration not just its own employees, but also the supposed employees of Express Lamination and Express Coat. This much was admitted by petitioner in his Motion to Dismiss which was affirmed by the Med-Arbiter in the latter's Order.

6. Petitioner admitted that Super Lamination had issued and signed the identification cards of employees who were actually working for Express Lamination and Express Coat.

7. Super Lamination, Express Lamination, and Express Coat were represented by the same counsel who interposed the same arguments in their motions before the Med-Arbiters and DOLE.

Further, we discern from the synchronized movements of petitioner and the two other companies an attempt to frustrate or defeat the workers' right to collectively bargain through the shield of the corporations' separate juridical personalities. We make this finding on the basis of the motions to dismiss filed by the three companies. While similarly alleging the absence of an employer-employee relationship, they alternately referred to one another as the employer of the members of the bargaining units sought to be represented respectively by the unions. This fact was affirmed by the Med-Arbiters' Orders finding that indeed, the supposed employees of each establishment were found to be alternately the employees of either of the two other companies as well. This was precisely the reason why DOLE consolidated the appeals filed by Unions A, B, and C.

Due to the finger-pointing by the three companies at one another, the petitions were dismissed. As a result, the three unions were not able to proceed with the conduct of the certification election. This also caused confusion among the employees as to who their real employer is, as Union A claims in its Comment.

We hold that if we allow petitioner and the two other companies to continue obstructing the holding of the election in this manner, their employees and their respective unions will never have a chance to choose their bargaining representative. We take note that all three establishments were unorganized. That is, no union therein was ever duly recognized or certified as a bargaining representative.

Therefore, it is only proper that, in order to safeguard the right of the workers and Unions A, B, and C to engage in collective bargaining, the corporate veil of Express Lamination and Express Coat must be pierced. The separate existence of Super Lamination, Express Lamination, and Express Coat must be disregarded. In effect, we affirm the lower tribunals in ruling that these companies must be treated as one and the same unit for purposes of holding a certification election.

Petitioner has cited Diatagon Labor Federation Local v. Ople and lndophil Textile Mill Worker Union v. Calica in which this Court refused to treat separate corporations as a single bargaining unit. Those cases, however, are not substantially identical with this case and would not warrant their application herein. Unlike in the instant case, the corporations involved were found to be completely independent or were not involved in any act that frustrated the laborers' rights.

In Diatagon, we refused to include the 236 employees of Georgia Pacific International Corporation in the bargaining unit of the employees of Liangga Bay Logging Co., Inc. This Court's refusal was in light of the fact that the two corporations were indubitably distinct entities with separate corporate identities and origins. Moreover, there was no discernible attempt to frustrate any of their labor-related rights, as the only conflict was over which bargaining unit they belonged to.

In Indophil, this Court refused to pierce the corporate veil of Indophil Textile Mill and Indophil Acrylic Manufacturing. We found that the creation of Indophil Acrylic was not a device to evade the application of the collective bargaining agreement (CBA) between petitioner union and Indophil Textile Mill. This Court further found that despite the similarity in their business operations, the separate personalities of the two corporations were maintained and were not used for any of the purposes specified under the law that would warrant piercing. It is also apparent in this case that the workers' rights were not being hampered by the employers concerned, as the only issue between them was the extent of the subject CBA's application.

In this case, not only were Super Lamination, Express Lamination, and Express Coat found to be under the control of petitioner, but there was also a discernible attempt to disregard the workers' and unions' right to collective bargaining.

The foregoing considered, we find no error in the CA' s affirmance of the DOLE directive. We affirm DOLE's application by analogy of the concept of multi-employer bargaining to justify its Decision to treat the three companies as one. While the multi-employer bargaining mechanism is relatively new and purely optional under Department Order No. 40-03, it illustrates the State's policy to promote the primacy of free and responsible exercise of the right to collective bargaining.[51] The existence of this mechanism in our labor laws affirm DOLE's conclusion that its treatment of the employees of the three companies herein as a single bargaining unit is neither impossible nor prohibited. It is justified under the circumstances discussed above.

Besides, it is an established rule that factual findings of labor officials, who are deemed to have acquired expertise in matters within their jurisdiction, are generally accorded by the courts not only respect but even finality when supported by substantial evidence; i.e., that amount of relevant evidence which a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to justify a conclusion.

MANUELA AZUCENA MAYOR, Petitioner, -versus- EDWIN TIU and DAMIANA CHARITO MARTY, Respondents

G.R. No. 203770, SECOND DIVISION, NOVEMBER 23, 2016 MENDOZA, J.

A corporation not impleaded in a suit cannot be subject to the court's process of piercing the veil of its corporate fiction. Resultantly, any proceedings taken against the corporation and its properties would infringe on its right to due process.

In the case at bench, the probate court applied the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil ratiocinating that Rosario had no other properties that comprise her estate other than her shares in Primrose. Although the probate court's intention to protect the decedent's shares of stock in Primrose from dissipation is laudable, it is still an error to order the corporation's tenants to remit their rental payments to the estate of Rosario.

FACTS:

On May 25, 2008, Rosario Guy-Juco Villasin Casilan (Rosario), the widow of the late Primo Villasin (Primo), passed away and left a holographic Last Will and Testament, wherein she named her sister, Remedios Tiu (Remedios), and her niece, Manuela Azucena Mayor (Manuela), as executors. Immediately thereafter, Remedios and Manuela filed a petition for the probate of Rosario's holographic will with prayer for the issuance of letters testamentary (probate proceedings). The petition was raffled to the Regional Trial Court, Branch 9, Tacloban City (RTC-Br. 9) and docketed as Sp. Proc. No. 2008-05-30. They averred that Rosario left properties valued at approximately ₱2.5 million.

On May 29, 2008, respondent Damiana Charito Marty (Marty) claiming to be the adopted daughter of Rosario, filed a petition for letters of administration before the RTC, Branch 34, Tacloban City (RTC- Br. 34), docketed as Sp. Proc. No. 2008-05-32, but it was not given due course because of the probate proceedings. Per records, this dismissal is subject of a separate proceeding filed by Marty with the CA Cebu City, docketed as CA-G.R. SP No. 04003.

On June 12, 2008, in its Order, the RTC-Br. 9 found the petition for probate of will filed by Remedios and Manuela as sufficient in form and substance and set the case for hearing.

Consequently, Marty filed her Verified Urgent Manifestation and Motion, dated June 23, 2008, stating that Remedios kept the decedent Rosario a virtual hostage for the past ten (10) years and her family was financially dependent on her which led to the wastage and disposal of the properties owned by her and her husband, Primo. Marty averred that until the alleged will of the decedent could be probated and admitted, Remedios and her ten (10) children had no standing to either possess or control the properties comprising the estate of the Villasins. She prayed for the probate court to: 1) order an immediate inventory of all the properties subject of the proceedings; 2) direct the tenants of the estate, namely, Mercury Drug and Chowking, located at Primrose Hotel, to deposit their rentals with the court; 3) direct Metro bank, P. Burgos Branch, to freeze the accounts in the name of Rosario, Primrose Development Corporation (Primrose) or Remedios; and 4) lock up the Primrose Hotel in order to preserve the property until final disposition by the court.

On July 8, 2008, Remedios and Manuela filed their Comment/Opposition to the urgent manifestation averring that Marty was not an adopted child of the Villasins based on a certification issued by the Office of the Clerk of Court of Tacloban City, attesting that no record of any adoption proceedings involving Marty existed in their records. They also argued that the probate court had no jurisdiction over the properties mistakenly claimed by Marty as part of Rosario's estate because these properties were actually owned by, and titled in the name of, Primrose. Anent the prayer to direct the tenants to deposit the rentals to the probate court, Remedios and Manuela countered that the probate court had no jurisdiction over properties owned by third persons, particularly by Primrose, the latter having a separate and distinct personality from the decedent's estate.

Marty cited an order of the Court of First Instance of Leyte (CF! Leyte) in SP No. 1239, claiming that as early as March 3, 1981, the veil of corporate entity of Primrose was pierced on the ground that it was a closed family corporation controlled by Rosario after Primo's death. Thus, Marty alleged that "piercing" was proper in the case of Rosario's estate because the incorporation of Primrose was founded on a fraudulent consideration, having been done in contemplation of Primo's death.

In its January 14, 2009 Order, the RTC-Br. 9 granted the motion of Marty and appointed the OIC Clerk of Court as special administrator of the Estate. The Probate Court also ordered Mercury Drug and Chowking to deposit the rental income to the court and Metrobank to freeze the bank accounts mentioned in the motion of Marty. The doctrine of piercing the corporate veil was applied in the case considering that Rosario had no other properties that comprised her estate other than Primrose. According to the probate court, for the best interest of whoever would be adjudged as the legal heirs of the Estate, it was best to preserve the properties from dissipation

ISSUE:

Whether application of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil is warranted (NO)

RULING:

The probate court in this case has not acquired jurisdiction over Primrose and its properties. Piercing the veil of corporate entity applies to determination of liability not of jurisdiction; it is basically applied only to determine established liability. It is not available to confer on the court a jurisdiction it has not acquired, in the first place, over a party not impleaded in a case. This is so because the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction comes to play only during the trial of the case after the court has already acquired jurisdiction over the corporation. Hence, before this doctrine can be even applied, based on the evidence presented, it is imperative that the court must first have jurisdiction over the corporation.

Hence, a corporation not impleaded in a suit cannot be subject to the court's process of piercing the veil of its corporate fiction. Resultantly, any proceedings taken against the corporation and its properties would infringe on its right to due process.

In the case at bench, the probate court applied the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil ratiocinating that Rosario had no other properties that comprise her estate other than her shares in Primrose. Although the probate court's intention to protect the decedent's shares of stock in Primrose from dissipation is laudable, it is still an error to order the corporation's tenants to remit their rental payments to the estate of Rosario.

Considering the above disquisition, the Court holds that a permanent and final injunction is in order in accordance with Section 9, Rule 58 of the Rules of Court which provides that "if after the trial of the action it appears that the applicant is entitled to have the act or acts complained of permanently enjoined, the court shall grant a final injunction perpetually restraining the party or person enjoined from the commission or continuance of the act or acts or confirming the preliminary mandatory injunction." Undoubtedly, Primrose stands to suffer an irreparable injury from the subject order of the probate court.

REYNO C. DIMSON, Petitioner, -versus- GERRY T. CHUA, Respondent

G.R. No. 1923182, THIRD DIVISION, DECEMBER 5, 2016 REYES, J.

To hold a director or officer personally liable for corporate obligations, two requisites must concur: (1) it must be alleged in the complaint that the director or officer assented to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or that the officer was guilty of gross negligence or bad faith; and (2) there must be proof that the officer acted in bad faith.

Based on the records, the petitioner and the private respondents in the NLRC case failed to specifically allege either in their complaint or position paper that the respondent, as an officer of SEASUMCO, willfully and knowingly assented to the corporations' patently unlawful act of closing the corporation, or that the respondent had been guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation. In fact, there was no evidence at all to show the respondent's participation in the petitioner's illegal dismissal. Clearly, the twin requisites of allegation and proof of bad faith, necessary to hold the respondent personally liable for the monetary awards to the petitioner, are lacking.

FACTS:

The instant case filed by the petitioner, representing the other 14 complainants, against the respondent, is an offshoot of the labor case entitled "Reyno Dimson, et al. v. SEASUMCO, MAC, United Coconut Planters Bank (UPCB), and Cotabato Sugar Central Co., Inc. (COSUCECO)."

On September 22, 2003, the said labor case for illegal dismissal with monetary claims was decided in favor of the complainants. Hence, SEASUMCO and MAC, as well as the members of their board of directors, were ordered to pay jointly and severally the sum of Three Million Eight Hundred Twenty-Seven Thousand Four Hundred Seventy Pesos and Fifty-One Centavos (P3,827,470.51).

The respondent filed a Motion for Reconsideration, but the NLRC Resolution denied his motion. Hence, he filed a petition for certiorari with application for temporary restraining order (TRO)/preliminary injunction before the CA. He maintained that the labor tribunals violated his right to due process when the LA authorized the issuance of the amended alias writ of execution against him for the corporation's judgment debt, although he has never been a party to the underlying suit.

Meanwhile, upon the petitioner's motion, a Second Alias Writ of Execution was since the previous writ has already expired. Pursuant to this, on December 2, 2008, a Certificate of Sale/Award was issued to the petitioner upon the levy on execution that was made over the shares of stocks belonging to the respondent at New Frontier Sugar Corporation (NFSC)

On January 30, 2009, the CA denied the respondent's application for a TRO and set the case for hearing on the propriety of the issuance of a writ of preliminary injunction (WPI).

In the Resolution dated April 16, 2009, the CA issued a WPI enjoining the NLRC, its sheriff and any person acting for and its behalf from transferring in the names of the petitioner and other private respondents in the NLRC case, the respondent shares of stocks with NFSC pending resolution of the petition.

the CA rendered the assailed judgment, which nullified and set aside the rulings of the NLRC, and made the WPI permanent. The CA held that the respondent was indeed denied due process

ISSUE:

> Whether respondent can be held solidarily liable with the corporation, of which he was an officer and a stockholder, when he was not served with summons and was never impleaded as a party to the case. (NO)

RULING:

Court sustains the CA's ruling that the respondent, as one of SEASUMCO's corporate officer and stockholder, should not be held solidarily liable with the corporation for its monetary liabilities with the petitioner.

Here, the LA pierced the veil of corporate fiction of SEASUMCO and held the respondent, in his personal capacity, jointly and severally liable with the corporation for the enforcement of the monetary awards to the petitioner. Even assuming that the labor tribunals had jurisdiction over the respondent, it was still improper to hold him liable for SEASUMCO's obligations to its employees.

In the recent case of Jose Emmanuel P. Guillermo v. Crisanto P. Uson, the Court resolved the twin doctrines of piercing the veil of corporate fiction and personal liability of company officers in labor cases. According to the Court:

The common thread running among the aforementioned cases, however, is that the veil of corporate fiction can be pierced, and responsible corporate directors and officers or even a separate but related corporation, may be impleaded and held answerable solidarity in a labor case, even after final judgment and on execution, so long as it is established that such persons have deliberately used the corporate vehicle to unjustly evade the judgment obligation, or have resorted to fraud, bad faith or malice in doing so. When the shield of a separate corporate identity is used to commit wrongdoing and opprobriously elude responsibility, the courts and the legal authorities in a labor case have not hesitated to step in and shatter the said shield and deny the usual protections to the offending party, even after final judgment. The key element is the presence of fraud, malice or bad faith. Bad faith, in this instance, does not connote bad judgment or negligence but imports a dishonest purpose or some moral obliquity and conscious doing of wrong; it means breach of a known duty through motive or interest or ill will; it partakes of the nature of fraud.

As the foregoing implies, there is no hard and fast rule on when corporate fiction may be disregarded; instead, each case must be evaluated according to its peculiar circumstances. For the case at bar, applying the above criteria, a finding of personal and solidary liability against a corporate Officer like Guillermo must be rooted on a satisfactory showing of fraud, bad faith or malice, or the presence of any of the justifications for disregarding the corporate fiction. x x x. (Citations omitted)

"A corporation is a juridical entity with a legal personality separate and distinct from those acting for and in its behalf and, in general, from the people comprising it. Thus, as a general rule, an officer may not be held liable for the corporation's labor obligations unless he acted with evident malice and/or bad faith in dismissing an employee." Section 31 of the Corporation Code is the governing law on personal liability of officers for the debts of the corporation. To hold a director or officer personally liable for corporate obligations, two requisites must concur: (1) it must be alleged in the complaint that the director or officer assented to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or that the officer was guilty of gross negligence or bad faith; and (2) there must be proof that the officer acted in bad faith.

Based on the records, the petitioner and the private respondents in the NLRC case failed to specifically allege either in their complaint or position paper that the respondent, as an officer of SEASUMCO, willfully and knowingly assented to the corporations' patently unlawful act of closing the corporation, or that the respondent had been guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation. In fact, there was no evidence at all to show the respondent's participation in the petitioner's illegal dismissal. Clearly, the twin requisites of allegation and proof of bad faith, necessary to hold the respondent personally liable for the monetary awards to the petitioner, are lacking.

The respondent is merely one of the officers of SEASUMCO and to single him out and require him to personally answer for the liabilities of SEASUMCO are without basis. In the absence of a finding that he acted with malice or bad faith, it was error for the labor tribunals to hold him responsible.

The Court had repeatedly emphasized that the piercing of the veil of corporate fiction is frowned upon and can only be done if it has been clearly established that the separate and distinct personality of the corporation is used to justify a wrong, protect fraud, or perpetrate a deception. To disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrongdoing must be established clearly and convincingly. It cannot be presumed.

A. GROUNDS FOR APPLICATION OF DOCTRINE

VILLA REY TRANSIT, INC, Petitioner, -versus- EUSEBIO E. FERRER, PANGASINAN TRANSPORTATION CO., INC. and PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION, Respondents
G.R. No. L-23893, EN BANC, OCTOBER 29, 1968 ANGELES, J.

The doctrine that a corporation is a legal entity distinct and separate from the members and stockholders who compose it is recognized and respected in all cases which are within reason and the law. When the fiction is urged as a means of perpetrating a fraud or an illegal act or as a vehicle for the evasion of an existing obligation, the circumvention of statutes, the achievement or perfection of a monopoly or generally the perpetration of knavery or crime, the veil with which the law covers and isolates the corporation from the members or stockholders who compose it will be lifted to allow for its consideration merely as an aggregation of individuals.

Villarama's explanation on the matter of his involvement with the corporate affairs of the Corporation only renders more credible Pantranco's claim that his control over the corporation, especially in the management and disposition of its funds, was so extensive and intimate that it is impossible to segregate and identify which money belonged to whom. The interference of Villarama in the complex affairs of the corporation, and particularly its finances, are much too inconsistent with the ends and purposes of the Corporation law, which, precisely, seeks to separate personal responsibilities from corporate undertakings. It is the very essence of incorporation that the acts and conduct of the corporation be carried out in its own corporate name because it has its own personality.

FACTS:

Prior to 1959, Jose M. Villarama was an operator of a bus transportation, under the business name of Villa Rey Transit, pursuant to certificates of public convenience granted him by the Public Service Commission (PSC, for short) in Cases Nos. 44213 and 104651, which authorized him to operate a total of thirty-two (32) units on various routes or lines from Pangasinan to Manila, and vice-versa. On January 8, 1959, he sold the aforementioned two certificates of public convenience to the Pangasinan Transportation Company, Inc. (otherwise known as Pantranco), for P350,000.00 with the condition, among others, that the seller (Villarama) "shall not for a period of 10 years from the date of this sale, apply for any TPU service identical or competing with the buyer."

Barely three months thereafter, or on March 6, 1959: a corporation called Villa Rey Transit, Inc. (which shall be referred to hereafter as the Corporation) was organized with a capital stock of P500,000.00 divided into 5,000 shares of the par value of P100.00 each; P200,000.00 was the subscribed stock; Natividad R. Villarama (wife of Jose M. Villarama) was one of the incorporators, and she subscribed for P1,000.00; the balance of P199,000.00 was subscribed by the brother and sister-in-law of Jose M. Villarama; of the subscribed capital stock, P105,000.00 was paid to the treasurer of the corporation, who was Natividad R. Villarama.

In less than a month after its registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission (March 10, 1959), the Corporation, on April 7, 1959, bought five certificates of public convenience, forty-nine buses, tools and equipment from one Valentin Fernando, for the sum of P249,000.00, of which P100,000.00 was paid upon the signing of the contract; P50,000.00 was payable upon the final approval of the sale by the PSC; P49,500.00 one year after the final approval of the sale; and the balance of P50,000.00 "shall be paid by the BUYER to the different suppliers of the SELLER."

The very same day that the aforementioned contract of sale was executed, the parties thereto immediately applied with the PSC for its approval, with a prayer for the issuance of a provisional authority in favor of the vendee Corporation to operate the service therein involved.[1] On May 19, 1959, the PSC granted the provisional permit prayed for, upon the condition that "it may be modified or revoked by the Commission at any time, shall be subject to whatever action that may be taken on the basic application and shall be valid only during the pendency of said application." Before the PSC could take final action on said application for approval of sale, however, the Sheriff of Manila, on July 7, 1959, levied on two of the five certificates of public convenience involved therein, namely, those issued under PSC cases Nos. 59494 and 63780, pursuant to a writ of execution issued by the Court of First Instance of Pangasinan in Civil Case No. 13798, in favor of Eusebio Ferrer, plaintiff, judgment creditor, against Valentin Fernando, defendant, judgment debtor. The Sheriff made and entered the levy in the records of the PSC. On July 16, 1959, a public sale was conducted by the Sheriff of the said two certificates of public convenience. Ferrer was the highest bidder, and a certificate of sale was issued in his name.

Thereafter, Ferrer sold the two certificates of public convenience to Pantranco, and jointly submitted for approval their corresponding contract of sale to the PSC. Pantranco therein prayed that it be authorized provisionally to operate the service involved in the said two certificates.

The applications for approval of sale, filed before the PSC, by Fernando and the Corporation, Case No. 124057, and that of Ferrer and Pantranco, Case No. 126278, were scheduled for a joint hearing. In the meantime, to wit, on July 22, 1959, the PSC issued an order disposing that during the pendency of the cases and before a final resolution on the aforesaid applications, the Pantranco shall be the one to operate provisionally the service under the *two*certificates embraced in the contract between Ferrer and Pantranco. The Corporation took issue with this particular ruling of the PSC and elevated the matter to the Supreme Court,[3] which decreed, after deliberation, that until the issue on the ownership of the disputed certificates shall have been finally settled by the proper court, the Corporation should be the one to operate the lines provisionally.

On November 4, 1959, the Corporation filed in the Court of First Instance of Manila, a complaint for the annulment of the sheriff's sale of the aforesaid two certificates of public convenience (PSC Cases Nos. 59494 and 63780) in favor of the defendant Ferrer, and the subsequent sale thereof by the latter to Pantranco, against Ferrer, Pantranco and the PSC. The plaintiff Corporation prayed therein that all the orders of the PSC relative to the parties' dispute over the said certificates be annulled.

Pantranco, on its part, filed a third-party complaint against Jose M. Villarama, alleging that Villarama and the Corporation, are one and the same; that Villarama and/or the Corporation was disqualified from operating the two certificates in question by virtue of the aforementioned agreement between said Villarama and Pantranco, which stipulated that Villarama "shall not for a period of 10 years from the date of this sale, apply for any TPU service identical or competing with the buyer."

Upon the joinder of the issues in both the complaint and third-party complaint, the case was tried, and thereafter decision.

This is a tri-party appeal from the decision of the Court of First Instance of Manila, Civil Case No. 41845, declaring null and void the sheriff's sale of two certificates of public convenience in favor of defendant Eusebio E. Ferrer and the subsequent sale thereof by the latter to defendant Pangasinan Transportation Co., Inc.; declaring the plaintiff Villa Rey Transit, Inc., to be the lawful owner of the said certificates of public convenience; and ordering the private defendants, jointly and severally, to pay to the plaintiff, the sum of P5,000.00 as and for attorney's fees. The case against the PSC was dismissed.

ISSUE:

Whether Villa Rey Transit, Inc. is an alter ego of Jose M. Villarama. (YES)

RULING:

The evidence has disclosed that Villarama, albeit was not an incorporator or stockholder of the Corporation, alleging that he did not become such, because he did not have sufficient funds to invest, his wife, however, was an incorporator with the least subscribed number of shares, and was elected treasurer of the Corporation. The finances of the Corporation which, under all concepts in the law, are supposed to be under the control and administration of the treasurer keeping them as trust fund for the Corporation, were, nonetheless, manipulated and disbursed as if they were the private funds of Villarama, in such a way and extent that Villarama appeared to be the actual owner-treasurer of the business without regard to the rights of the stockholders.

The evidence further shows that the initial cash capitalization of the corporation of P105,000.00 was mostly financed by Villarama.

Further, the evidence shows that when the Corporation was in its initial months of operation, Villarama purchased and paid with his personal checks Ford trucks for the Corporation.

Taking account of the foregoing evidence, together with Celso Rivera's testimony, it would appear that: Villarama supplied the organization expenses and the assets of the Corporation, such as trucks and equipment;[17] there was no actual payment by the original subscribers of the amounts of P95,000.00 and P100,000.00 as appearing in the books; Villarama made use of the money of the Corporation and deposited them to his private accounts; and the Corporation paid his personal accounts.

Villarama himself admitted that he mingled the corporate funds with his own money. He also admitted that gasoline purchases of the Corporation were made in his name because "he had existing account with Stanvac which was properly secured and he wanted the Corporation to benefit from the rebates that he received."

The foregoing circumstances are strong persuasive evidence showing that Villarama has been too much involved in the affairs of the Corporation to altogether negative the claim that he was only a part-time general manager. They show beyond doubt that the Corporation is his alter ego.

It is significant that not a single one of the acts enumerated above as proof of Villarama's oneness with the Corporation has been denied by him. On the contrary, he has admitted them with offered excuses.

Villarama has admitted, for instance, having paid P85,000.00 of the initial capital of the Corporation with the lame excuse that "his wife had requested him to reimburse the amount entrusted to her by the incorporators and which she had used to pay the obligations of Dr. Villarama (her husband) incurred while he was still the owner of Villa Rey Transit, a single proprietorship." But with his admission that he had received P350,000.00 from Pantranco for the sale of the two certificates and one unit, it becomes difficult to accept Villarama's explanation that he and his wife, after consultation, spent the money of their relatives (the stockholders) when they were supposed to have their own money. Even if Pantranco paid the P350,000.00 in check to him, as claimed, it could have been easy for Villarama to have deposited said check in his account and issued his own check to pay his obligations. And there is no evidence adduced that the said amount of P350,000.00 was all spent or was insufficient to settle his prior obligations in his business, and in the light of the stipulation in the deed of sale between Villarama and Pantranco that P50,000.00 of the selling price was earmarked for the payments of accounts due to his creditors, the excuse appears unbelievable.

Indeed, while Villarama was not the Treasurer of the Corporation but was, allegedly, only a part-time manager,[27] he admitted not only having held the corporate money but that he advanced and lent funds for the Corporation, and yet there was no Board Resolution allowing it.

Villarama's explanation on the matter of his involvement with the corporate affairs of the Corporation only renders more credible Pantranco's claim that his control over the corporation, especially in the management and disposition of its funds, was so extensive and intimate that it is impossible to segregate and identify which money belonged to whom. The interference of Villarama in the complex affairs of the corporation, and particularly its finances, are much too inconsistent with the ends and purposes of the Corporation law, which, precisely, seeks to separate personal responsibilities from corporate undertakings. It is the very essence of incorporation that the acts and conduct of the corporation be carried out in its own corporate name because it has its own personality.

The doctrine that a corporation is a legal entity distinct and separate from the members and stockholders who compose it is recognized and respected in all cases which are within reason and the law. When the fiction is urged as a means of perpetrating a fraud or an illegal act or as a vehicle for the evasion of an existing obligation, the circumvention of statutes, the achievement or perfection of a monopoly or generally the perpetration of knavery or crime, the veil with which the law covers and isolates the corporation from the members or stockholders who compose it will be lifted to allow for its consideration merely as an aggregation of individuals.

Upon the foregoing considerations, We are of the opinion, and so hold, that the preponderance of evidence have shown that the Villa Rey Transit, Inc. is an alter ego of Jose M. Villarama, and that the restrictive clause in the contract entered into by the latter and Pantranco is also enforceable and binding against the said Corporation. For the rule is that a seller or promisor may not make use of a corporate entity as a means of evading the obligation of his covenant. Where the Corporation is substantially the alter ego of the covenantor to the restrictive agreement, it can be enjoined from competing with the covenantee.

A.C. RANSOM LABOR UNION-CCLU, Petitioner, -versus- NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS COMMISSION, First Division, A.C. RANSOM (PHILS.) CORPORATION, RUBEN HERNANDEZ, MAXIMO C. HERNANDEZ, JR., PORFIRIO R. VALENCIA, LAURA H. CORNEJO, FRANCISCO HERNANDEZ, CELESTINO C. HERNANDEZ & MA. ROSARIO HERNANDEZ, Respondents
G.R. No. L-69494, FIRST DIVISION, JUNE 10, 1986 MELENCIO-HERRERA, J.

Aggravating RANSOM's clear evasion of payment of its financial obligations is the organization of a "run-away corporation," ROSARIO, in 1969 at the time the unfair labor practice case was pending before the CIR by the same persons who were the officers and stockholders of RANSOM, engaged in the same line of business as RANSOM, producing the same line of products, occupying the same compound, using the same machineries, buildings, laboratory, bodega and sales and accounts departments used by RANSOM, and which is still in existence. Both corporations were closed corporations owned and managed by members of the same family. Its organization proved to be a convenient instrument to avoid payment of backwages and the reinstatement of the 22 workers. This is another instance where the fiction of separate and distinct corporate entities should be disregarded.

It is very obvious that the second corporation seeks the protective shield of a corporate fiction whose veil in the present case could, and should, be pierced as it was deliberately and maliciously designed to evade its financial obligation to its employees.

FACTS:

The records show that, upon application filed by RANSOM on April 2, 1973, it was granted clearance by the Secretary of Labor on June 7, 1973 to cease operation and terminate employment effective May 1, 1973, without prejudice to the right of subject employees to seek redress of grievances under existing laws and decrees. The reasons given by RANSOM for the clearance application were financial difficulties on account of obligations incurred prior to 1966.

The UNION filed another Motion for Execution alleging that although RANSOM had assumed a posture of suffering from business reverse, its officers and principal stockholders had organized a new corporation, the Rosario Industrial Corporation (thereinafter called ROSARIO), using the same equipment, personnel, business stocks and the same place of business. For its part, RANSOM declared that ROSARIO is a distinct and separate corporation, which was organized long before these instant cases were decided adversely against RANSOM.

It appears that sometime in 1969, ROSARIO, a closed corporation, was, in fact, established. It was engaged in the same line of business as RANSOM with the same Hernandez family as the owners, the same officers, the same President, the same counsel and the same address at 555 Quirino Avenue, Paranaque, Rizal. The compound, building, plant, equipment, machinery, laboratory and bodega were the same as those occupied and used by RANSOM. The UNION claims that ROSARIO thrives to this day.

Writs of execution were issued successively against RANSOM on June 23, 1976, and February 17, 1977, to no avail. On December 18, 1978, the UNION again filed an ex-parte Motion for Writ of Execution and Garnishment praying that the Writ issue against the Officers/Agents of RANSOM personally and or their estates, as the case may be, considering their success in hiding or shielding the assets of said company. RANSOM countered that the CIR Decision, dated August 19, 1972, could no longer be enforced by mere Motion because more than five (5) years had already lapsed.

LA held the respondent corporation liable. It appears that among the persons named in the aforequoted Order, Ma. Rosario Hernandez died in 1971; Francisco Hernandez died in 1977: and Celestino C. Hernandez passed away in 1979. And Maximo Hernandez who was named in the CIR Decision, died in 1966. NLRC affirmed the decision of LA.

Both parties have moved for reconsideration. Private respondents point out that they were never impleaded as parties in the Trial Court, and that their personal liabilities were never at issue; that judgment holding Ruben Hernandez personally liable is tantamount to deprivation of property without due process of law; and that he was not an officer of the corporation at the time the unfair labor practices were committed. The UNION on the other hand, in its own Motion for Reconsideration, prays that the veil of corporate fiction be pierced that the Decision be modified, in that all the individual private respondents and not only the President, should be held jointly and severally liable with RANSOM. On November 4, 1986, it further filed an Urgent Motion for Preliminary Mandatory Injunction "directing private respondents to deposit the amount of P 199,276.00 or to put up a supersedeas bond of the same sum."

ISSUE:

Whether doctrine of piercing of corporate veil shall apply in this case. (YES)

RULING:

Incontrovertible is the fact that RANSOM was found guilty by the CIR, in its Decision of August 19, 1972, of unfair labor practice; that its officers and agents were ordered to cease and desist from further committing acts constitutive of the same, and to reinstate immediately the 22 union members to their respective positions with backwages from July 25, 1969 until actually reinstated. The officers and agents listed in the Genilo Order except for those who have since passed away, should, as affirmed by this Court, be held jointly and severally liable for the payment of backwages to the 22 strikers.

This finding does not ignore the legal fiction that a corporation has a personality separate and distinct from its stockholders and members, for, as this Court had held "where the incorporators and directors belong to a single family, the corporation and its members can be considered as one in order to avoid its being used as an instrument to commit injustice."

The alleged bankruptcy of RANSOM furnishes no justification for non-payment of backwages to the employees concerned taking into consideration Article 110 of the Labor Code, The alleged bankruptcy of RANSOM furnishes no justification for non-payment of backwages to the employees concerned taking into consideration Article 110 of the Labor Code.

The Decision of the CIR was rendered on August 19, 1972. Clearance to RANSOM to cease operations and terminate employment granted by the Secretary of Labor was made effective on May 1, 1973. The right of the employees concerned to backwages awarded them, therefore, had already vested at the time and even before clearance was granted. Note should also be taken of the fact that the clearance was without prejudice to the right of subject employees to seek redress of grievances under existing laws and decrees.

The worker preference applies even if the employer's properties are encumbered by means of a mortgage contract, as in this case. So that, when machinery and equipment of RANSOM were sold to Revelations Manufacturing Corporation for P 2M in 1975, the right of the 22 laborers to be paid from the proceeds should have been recognized, even though it is claimed that those proceeds were turned over to the Commercial Bank and Trust Company (Comtrust) in payment of RANSOM obligations, since the workers' preference is over and above the claim of other creditors.

The contention, therefore, of the heirs of the late Maximo C. Hernandez, Sr. that since they paid from their own personal funds the balance of the amount owing by RANSOM to Comtrust they are the "preferential creditors" of RANSOM, is clearly without merit. Workers are to be paid in full before other creditors may establish any claim to a share in the assets of the employer.

Aggravating RANSOM's clear evasion of payment of its financial obligations is the organization of a "run-away corporation," ROSARIO, in 1969 at the time the unfair labor practice case was pending before the CIR by the same persons who were the officers and stockholders of RANSOM, engaged in the same line of business as RANSOM, producing the same line of products, occupying the same compound, using the same machineries, buildings, laboratory, bodega and sales and accounts departments used by RANSOM, and which is still in existence. Both corporations were closed corporations owned and managed by members of the same family. Its organization proved to be a convenient instrument to avoid payment of backwages and the reinstatement of the 22 workers. This is another instance where the fiction of separate and distinct corporate entities should be disregarded.

It is very obvious that the second corporation seeks the protective shield of a corporate fiction whose veil in the present case could, and should, be pierced as it was deliberately and maliciously designed to evade its financial obligation to its employees.

The UNION's plea, therefore, for the reinstatement of the 22 strikers in ROSARIO should be favorably heard. However, ROSARIO shall have the option to award them separation pay equivalent to one-half month for every year of service actually rendered by the 22 strikers. The plea of the UNION for the restoration of the original computation of P199,276.00 or to grant the 22 Union members three (3) years backwages is rejected. It is the amount of P164,984.00 as backwages, which was the subject of the Writ of Execution issued by the Labor Arbiter pursuant to the CIR Decision of 1972..

TIMES TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, INC., Petitioner, -versus- SANTOS SOTELO, Respondent
G.R. No. 163786, FIRST DIVISION, FEBRUARY 16, 2005 YNARES-SANTIAGO, J.

We have held that piercing the corporate veil is warranted only in cases when the separate legal entity is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud, or defend crime, such that in the case of two corporations, the law will regard the corporations as merged into one. It may be allowed only if the following elements concur: (1) control—not mere stock control, but complete domination—not only of finances, but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked; (2) such control must have been used to commit a fraud or a wrong to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or a dishonest and an unjust act in contravention of a legal right; and (3) the said control and breach of duty must have proximately caused the injury or unjust loss complained of.

We uphold the findings of the labor arbiter and the Court of Appeals. The sale of Times' franchise as well as most of its bus units to a company owned by Rondaris' daughter and family members, right in the middle of a labor dispute, is highly suspicious. It is evident that the transaction was made in order to remove Times' remaining assets from the reach of any judgment that may be rendered in the unfair labor practice cases filed against it.

FACTS:

Prior to the closure of Petitioner Times Transportation Company, Inc. (Times) in 1997, the Times Employees Union (TEU) was formed and issued a certificate of union registration. Times challenged the legitimacy of TEU by filing a petition for the cancellation of its union registration.

TEU held a strike in response to Times' alleged attempt to form a rival union and its dismissal of the employees identified to be active union members. Upon petition by Times, then Labor Secretary referred the matter to the NLRC for compulsory arbitration. The case was docketed as NLRC NCR CC-000134-97. A return-to-work order was likewise issued on March 10, 1997.

In a certification election held on July 1, 1997, TEU was certified as the sole and exclusive collective bargaining agent in Times. Consequently, TEU's president wrote the management of Times and requested for collective bargaining. Times refused on the ground that the decision of the Med-Arbiter upholding the validity of the certification election was not yet final and executory.

TEU filed a Notice of Strike on August 8, 1997. Another conciliation/mediation proceeding was conducted for the purpose of settling the brewing dispute. In the meantime, Times' management implemented a retrenchment program.

TEU held a strike vote on grounds of unfair labor practice on the part of Times. For alleged participation in what it deemed was an illegal strike, Times terminated all the 123 striking employees.

TEU held a strike vote on grounds of unfair labor practice on the part of Times.

DOLE Secretary Quisumbing issued the second return-to-work order certifying the dispute to the NLRC. While the strike was ended, the employees were no longer admitted back to work.

In the meantime, by December 12, 1997, Mencorp Transport Systems, Inc. (Mencorp) had acquired ownership over Times' Certificates of Public Convenience and a number of its bus units by virtue of several deeds of sale. Mencorp is controlled and operated by Mrs. Virginia Mendoza, daughter of Santiago Rondaris, the majority stockholder of Times.

NLRC held that while the first strike was legal, the second was not.

Times and TEU both appealed the decision of the NLRC, which the Court of Appeals affirmed. It held that respondents Times Company, Inc. and Santiago Rondaris as the officer administratively held liable of the unfair labor practice and respondents Times Company, Inc. and/or Santiago Rondaris to pay jointly and severally said complainants.

On the propriety of the piercing of the corporate veil, Times claims that "to drag Mencorp, [Spouses] Mendoza and Rondaris into the picture on the purported ground that a fictitious sale of Times' assets in their favor was consummated with the end in view of frustrating the ends of justice and for purposes of evading compliance with the judgment is … the height of judicial arrogance." The Court of Appeals believes otherwise and reckons that Times and Mencorp failed to adduce evidence to refute allegations of collusion between them

ISSUE:

Whether doctrine of piercing of corporate veil shall apply in this case. (YES)

RULING:

We have held that piercing the corporate veil is warranted only in cases when the separate legal entity is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud, or defend crime, such that in the case of two corporations, the law will regard the corporations as merged into one. It may be allowed only if the following elements concur: (1) control—not mere stock control, but complete domination—not only of finances, but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked; (2) such control must have been used to commit a fraud or a wrong to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or a dishonest and an unjust act in contravention of a legal right; and (3) the said control and breach of duty must have proximately caused the injury or unjust loss complained of.
The following findings of the Labor Arbiter, which were cited and affirmed by the Court of Appeals, have not been refuted by Times, to wit:

1. The sale was transferred to a corporation controlled by V. Mendoza, the daughter of respondent S. Rondaris of [Times] where she is/was also a director, as proven by the articles of incorporation of [Mencorp];
2. All of the stockholders/incorporators of [Mencorp]: Reynaldo M. Mendoza, Virginia R. Mendoza, Vernon Gerard R. Mendoza, Vivian Charity R. Mendoza, Vevey Rosario R. Mendoza are all relatives of respondent S. Rondaris;
3. The timing of the sale evidently was to negate the employees/complainants/members' right to organization as it was effected when their union (TEU) was just organized/requesting [Times] to bargain;
…
5. [Mencorp] never obtained a franchise since its supposed incorporation in 10 May 1994 but at present, all the buses of [Times] are already being run/operated by respondent [Mencorp], the franchise of [Times] having been transferred to it.

We uphold the findings of the labor arbiter and the Court of Appeals. The sale of Times' franchise as well as most of its bus units to a company owned by Rondaris' daughter and family members, right in the middle of a labor dispute, is highly suspicious. It is evident that the transaction was made in order to remove Times' remaining assets from the reach of any judgment that may be rendered in the unfair labor practice cases filed against it.

PAMPLONA PLANTATION COMPANY, INC. and/or JOSE LUIS BONDOC., Petitioners, -versus- RODEL TINGHIL, MARYGLENN SABIHON, ESTANISLAO BOBON, CARLITO TINGHIL, BONIFACIO TINGHIL, NOLI TINGHIL, EDGAR TINGHIL, ERNESTO ESTOMANTE, SALLY TOROY, BENIGNO TINGHIL JR., ROSE ANN NAPAO, DIOSDADO TINGHIL, ALBERTO TINGHIL, ANALIE TINGHIL, and ANTONIO ESTOMANTE, Respondents

G.R. No. 159121, THIRD DIVISION, FEBRUARY 3, 2005 PANGANIBAN, J.

The principle requiring the piercing of the corporate veil mandates courts to see through the protective shroud that distinguishes one corporation from a seemingly separate one. The corporate mask may be removed and the corporate veil pierced when a corporation is the mere alter ego of another. Where badges of fraud exist, where public convenience is defeated, where a wrong is sought to be justified thereby, or where a separate corporate identity is used to evade financial obligations to employees or to third parties, the notion of separate legal entity should be set aside and the factual truth upheld.

Both the leisure corporation and petitioner-company were identified or described as entities engaged in the development and operation of sugar and coconut plantations, as well as recreational facilities such as a golf course. These allegations reveal that petitioner successfully confused the workers as to who their true and real employer was. All things considered, their faulty belief that the plantation company and the leisure corporation were one and the same can be attributed solely to petitioners. It would certainly be unjust to prejudice the claims of the workers because of the misleading actions of their employer.

FACTS:

Sometime in 1993, Petitioner Pamplona Plantations Company, Inc. (company for brevity) was organized for the purpose of taking over the operations of the coconut and sugar plantation of Hacienda Pamplona located in Pamplona, Negros Oriental. It appears that Hacienda Pamplona was formerly owned by a certain Mr. Bower who had in his employ several agricultural workers.

Sometime in 1995, Pamplona Plantation Leisure Corporation was established for the purpose of engaging in the business of operating tourist resorts, hotels, and inns, with complementary facilities, such as restaurants, bars, boutiques, service shops, entertainment, golf courses, tennis courts, and other land and aquatic sports and leisure facilities.

On 1996, the Pamplona Plantation Labor Independent Union (PAPLIU) conducted an organizational meeting wherein several respondents who are either union members or officers participated in said meeting.

Upon learning that some of the respondents attended the said meeting, Petitioner Jose Luis Bondoc, manager of the company, did not allow respondents to work anymore in the plantation.

Respondents filed their respective complaints with the NLRC for unfair labor practice, illegal dismissal, underpayment, overtime pay, premium pay for rest day and holidays, service incentive leave pay, damages, attorney's fees and 13th month pay.

Carlito Tinghil amended his complaint to implead Pamplona Plantation Leisure Corporation.

On 31 August 1998, Labor Arbiter Jose G. Gutierrez rendered a decision finding respondents except Rufino Bacubac, Antonio CaÃ±olas and Felix Torres who were complainants in another case, to be entitled to separation pay.

NLRC reversed. It ruled that respondents, except Carlito Tinghil, failed to implead Pamplona Plantation Leisure Corporation, an indispensable party and that 'there exist no employer-employee relation between the parties.

Nonetheless, CA ruled on the matter and found that respondents were illegally dismissed.

ISSUE:

> Whether the case should be dismissed for the non-joinder of the Pamplona Plantation Leisure Corporation. (NO)

RULING:

In examination of the facts reveals that, for both the coconut plantation and the golf course, there is only one management which the laborers deal with regarding their work. A portion of the plantation (also called Hacienda Pamplona) had actually been converted into a golf course and other recreational facilities. The weekly payrolls issued by petitioner-company bore the name "Pamplona Plantation Co., Inc." It is also a fact that respondents all received their pay from the same person, Petitioner Bondoc - - the managing director of the company. Since the workers were working for a firm known as Pamplona Plantation Co., Inc., the reason they sued their employer through that name was natural and understandable.

True, the Petitioner Pamplona Plantation Co., Inc., and the Pamplona Plantation Leisure Corporation appear to be separate corporate entities. But it is settled that this fiction of law cannot be invoked to further an end subversive of justice.

The principle requiring the piercing of the corporate veil mandates courts to see through the protective shroud that distinguishes one corporation from a seemingly separate one. The corporate mask may be removed and the corporate veil pierced when a corporation is the mere alter ego of another. Where badges of fraud exist, where public convenience is defeated, where a wrong is sought to be justified thereby, or where a separate corporate identity is used to evade financial obligations to employees or to third parties, the notion of separate legal entity should be set aside and the factual truth upheld. When that happens, the corporate character is not necessarily abrogated. It continues for other legitimate objectives. However, it may be pierced in any of the instances cited in order to promote substantial justice.

In the present case, the corporations have basically the same incorporators and directors and are headed by the same official. Both use only one office and one payroll and are under one management. In their individual Affidavits, respondents allege that they worked under the supervision and control of Petitioner Bondoc - - the common managing director of both the petitioner-company and the leisure corporation. Some of the laborers of the plantation also work in the golf course. Thus, the attempt to make the two corporations appear as two separate entities, insofar as the workers are concerned, should be viewed as a devious but obvious means to defeat the ends of the law. Such a ploy should not be permitted to cloud the truth and perpetrate an injustice.

We note that this defense of separate corporate identity was not raised during the proceedings before the labor arbiter. The main argument therein raised by petitioners was their alleged lack of employer-employee relationship with, and power of control over, the means and methods of work of respondents because of the seasonal nature of the latter's work.

Neither was the issue of non-joinder of indispensable parties raised in petitioners' appeal before the NLRC. Nevertheless, the Commission concluded that the plantation company and the leisure corporation were two separate and distinct corporations, and that the latter was an indispensable party that should have been impleaded.

Indeed, it was only after this NLRC Decision was issued that the petitioners harped on the separate personality of the Pamplona Plantation Co., Inc., vis - Ã -vis the Pamplona Plantation Leisure Corporation.

NLRC dismissed the Complaints because of the alleged admission of respondents in their Affidavits that they had been working at the golf course. However, it failed to appreciate the rest of their averments. Just because they worked at the golf course did not necessarily mean that they were not employed to do other tasks, especially since the golf course was merely a portion of the coconut plantation. Even petitioners admitted that respondents had been hired as coconut filers, coconut scoopers or charcoal makers. Consequently, NLRC's conclusion derived from the Affidavits of respondents stating that they were employees of the Pamplona Plantation Leisure Corporation alone was the result of an improper selective appreciation of the entire evidence.

Furthermore, we note that, contrary to the NLRC's findings, some respondents indicated that their employer was the Pamplona Plantation Leisure Corporation, while others said that it was the Pamplona Plantation Co., Inc. But in all these Affidavits, both the leisure corporation and petitioner-company were identified or described as entities engaged in the development and operation of sugar and coconut plantations, as well as recreational facilities such as a golf course. These allegations reveal that petitioner successfully confused the workers as to who their true and real employer was.

All things considered, their faulty belief that the plantation company and the leisure corporation were one and the same can be attributed solely to petitioners. It would certainly be unjust to prejudice the claims of the workers because of the misleading actions of their employer.

SPS. PEDRO AND FLORENCIA VIOLAGO, Petitioners, -versus- BA FINANCE CORPORATION and AVELINO VIOLAGO, Respondents
G.R. No. 158262, SECOND DIVISION, JULY 21, 2008 VELASCO JR., J.

The test in determining the applicability of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction is as follows:

1. Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;
2. Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust acts in contravention of plaintiffs legal rights; and
3. The aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of.

This case meets the foregoing test. VMSC is a family-owned corporation of which Avelino was president. Avelino committed fraud in selling the vehicle to petitioners, a vehicle that was previously sold to Avelino's other cousin, Esmeraldo. Nowhere in the pleadings did Avelino refute the fact that the vehicle in this case was already previously sold to Esmeraldo; he merely insisted that he cannot be held liable because he was not a party to the transaction. The fact that Avelino and Pedro are cousins, and that Avelino claimed to have a need to increase the sales quota, was likely among the factors which motivated the spouses to buy the car. Avelino, knowing fully well that the vehicle was already sold, and with abuse of his relationship with the spouses, still proceeded with the sale and collected the down payment from petitioners. The trial court found that the vehicle was not delivered to the spouses. Avelino clearly defrauded petitioners. His actions were the proximate cause of petitioners' loss.

FACTS:

Sometime in 1983, Avelino Violago, President of Violago Motor Sales Corporation (VMSC), offered to sell a car to his cousin, Pedro F. Violago, and the latter's wife, Florencia. Avelino explained that he needed to sell a vehicle to increase the sales quota of VMSC, and that the spouses would just have to pay a down payment of PhP 60,500 while the balance would be financed by respondent BA Finance. The spouses would pay the monthly installments to BA Finance while Avelino would take care of the documentation and approval of financing of the car. Under these terms, the spouses then agreed to purchase a Toyota Cressida Model 1983 from VMSC.

On August 4, 1983, the spouses and Avelino signed a promissory note under which they bound themselves to pay jointly and severally to the order of VMSC the amount of PhP 209,601 in 36 monthly installments of PhP 5,822.25 a month, the first installment to be due and payable on September 16, 1983. Avelino prepared a Disclosure Statement of Loan/Credit Transportation which showed the net purchase price of the vehicle, down payment, balance, and finance charges. VMSC then issued a sales invoice in favor of the spouses with a detailed description of the Toyota Cressida car. In turn, the spouses executed a chattel mortgage over the car in favor of VMSC as security for the amount of PhP 209,601. VMSC, through Avelino, endorsed the promissory note to BA Finance without recourse. After receiving the amount of PhP 209,601, VMSC executed a Deed of Assignment of its rights and interests under the promissory note and chattel mortgage in favor of BA Finance. Meanwhile, the spouses remitted the amount of PhP 60,500 to VMSC through Avelino.

The sales invoice was filed with the LTO Baliwag Branch, which issued Certificate of Registration in the name of Pedro on August 8, 1983. The spouses were unaware that the same car had already been sold in 1982 to Esmeraldo Violago, another cousin of Avelino, and registered in Esmeraldo's name by the LTO-San Rafael Branch. Despite the spouses' demand for the car and Avelino's repeated assurances, there was no delivery of the vehicle. Since VMSC failed to deliver the car, Pedro did not pay any monthly amortization to BA Finance.

On March 1, 1984, BA Finance filed with RTC a complaint for Replevin with Damages against the spouses.

The RTC issued an Order of Replevi. The Violago spouses, as defendants a quo, were declared in default for failing to file an answer. Eventually, the RTC rendered on December 3, 1984 a decision in favor of BA Finance. A writ of execution was thereafter issued followed by an alias writ of execution.

In the meantime, Esmeraldo conveyed the vehicle to Jose V. Olvido. On May 8, 1987, Jose executed a Chattel Mortgage over the vehicle in favor of Generoso Lopez as security for a loan covered by a promissory note in the amount of PhP 260,664. This promissory note was later endorsed to BA Finance.

On August 21, 1989, the spouses Violago filed a Motion for Reconsideration and Motion to Quash Writ of Execution on the basis of lack of a valid service of summons on them, among other reasons. The RTC denied the motions; hence, the spouses filed a petition for certiorari under Rule 65 before the CA, docketed as CA G.R. No. 2002-SP. On May 31, 1991, the CA nullified the RTC's order. This CA decision became final and executory.

On January 28, 1992, the spouses filed their Answer before the RTC, allegingthe recourse of BA Finance should be against VMSC.

On February 25, 1995, the Violago spouses, with prior leave of court, filed a Third Party Complaint against Avelino praying that he be held liable to them in the event that they be held liable to BA Finance, as well as for damages. VMSC was not impleaded as third party defendant.

In his Motion to Dismiss and Answer, Avelino contended that he was not a party to the transaction personally, but VMSC. Avelino's motion was denied and the third party complaint against him was entertained by the trial court. Subsequently, the spouses belabored to prove that they affixed their signatures on the promissory note and chattel mortgage in favor of VMSC in blank.

The RTC rendered a Decision on March 5, 1994, finding for BA Finance but against the Violago spouses. The RTC, however, declared that they are entitled to be indemnified by Avelino.

CA set aside the trial court's order holding Avelino liable for damages to the spouses without prejudice to the action of the spouses against VMSC and Avelino in a separate action

From the third party complaint to the present petition, however, petitioners pray that the veil of corporate fiction be set aside and Avelino be adjudged directly liable to BA Finance. Petitioners likewise pray for damages for the fraud committed upon them.

ISSUE:

Whether the application of piercing the corporate veil is warranted. (YES)

RULING:

In Concept Builders, Inc. v. NLRC, we held:
It is a fundamental principle of corporation law that a corporation is an entity separate and distinct from its stockholders and from other corporations to which it may be connected. But, this separate and distinct personality of a corporation is merely a fiction created by law for convenience and to promote justice. So, when the notion of separate juridical personality is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud or defend crime, or is used as a device to defeat the labor laws, this separate personality of the corporation may be disregarded or the veil of corporate fiction pierced. This is true likewise when the corporation is merely an adjunct, a business conduit or an alter ego of another corporation.
x x x
The test in determining the applicability of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction is as follows:
1. Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;
2. Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust acts in contravention of plaintiffs legal rights; and
3. The aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of.

This case meets the foregoing test. VMSC is a family-owned corporation of which Avelino was president. Avelino committed fraud in selling the vehicle to petitioners, a vehicle that was previously sold to Avelino's other cousin, Esmeraldo. Nowhere in the pleadings did Avelino refute the fact that the vehicle in this case was already previously sold to Esmeraldo; he merely insisted that he cannot be held liable because he was not a party to the transaction. The fact that Avelino and Pedro are cousins, and that Avelino claimed to have a need to increase the sales quota, was likely among the factors which motivated the spouses to buy the car. Avelino, knowing fully well that the vehicle was already sold, and with abuse of his relationship with the spouses, still proceeded with the sale and collected the down payment from petitioners. The trial court found that the vehicle was not delivered to the spouses. Avelino clearly defrauded petitioners. His actions were the proximate cause of petitioners' loss. He cannot now hide behind the separate corporate personality of VMSC to escape from liability for the amount adjudged by the trial court in favor of petitioners.

The fact that VMSC was not included as defendant in petitioners' third party complaint does not preclude recovery by petitioners from Avelino; neither would such non-inclusion constitute a bar to the application of the piercing-of-the-corporate-veil doctrine. We suggested as much in Arcilla v. Court of Appeals, an appellate proceeding involving petitioner Arcilla's bid to avoid the adverse CA decision on the argument that he is not personally liable for the amount adjudged since the same constitutes a corporate liability which nevertheless cannot even be enforced against the corporation which has not been impleaded as a party below. In that case, the Court found as well-taken the CA's act of disregarding the separate juridical personality of the corporation and holding its president, Arcilla, liable for the obligations incurred in the name of the corporation although it was not a party to the collection suit before the trial court. An excerpt from Arcilla:

x x x In short, even if We are to assume arguendo that the obligation was incurred in the name of the corporation, the petitioner [Arcilla] would still be personally liable therefor because for all legal intents and purposes, he and the corporation are one and the same. Csar Marine Resources, Inc. is nothing more than his business conduit and alter ego. The fiction of separate juridical personality conferred upon such corporation by law should be disregarded. Significantly, petitioner does not seriously challenge the [CA's] application of the doctrine which permits the piercing of the corporate veil and the disregarding of the fiction of a separate juridical personality; this is because he knows only too well that from the beginning, he merely used the corporation for his personal purposes

CLAUDE P. BAUTISTA, Petitioner, -versus- BA FINANCE CORPORATION and AVELINO VIOLAG AUTO PLUS TRADERS, INCORPORATED and COURT OF APPEALS (Twenty-First Division), Respondents

G.R. No. 166405, SECOND DIVISION, AUGUST 6, 2008 QUISUMBING, J.

Juridical entities have personalities separate and distinct from its officers and the persons composing it. Generally, the stockholders and officers are not personally liable for the obligations of the corporation except only when the veil of corporate fiction is being used as a cloak or cover for fraud or illegality, or to work injustice. These situations, however, do not exist in this case. The evidence shows that it is Cruiser Bus Lines and Transport Corporation that has obligations to Auto Plus Traders, Inc. for tires. There is no agreement that petitioner shall be held liable for the corporation's obligations in his personal capacity.

FACTS:

Petitioner Claude P. Bautista, in his capacity as President and Presiding Officer of Cruiser Bus Lines and Transport Corporation, purchased various spare parts from private respondent Auto Plus Traders, Inc. and issued two postdated checks to cover his purchases. The checks were subsequently dishonored. Private respondent then executed an affidavit-complaint for violation of Batas Pambansa Blg. 223 against petitioner. Consequently, two Informations for violation of BP Blg. 22 were filed with the Municipal Trial Court in Cities (MTCC) of Davao City against the petitioner.

Petitioner pleaded not guilty. Trial on the merits ensued. After the presentation of the prosecution's evidence, petitioner filed a demurrer to evidence which was granted.

Petitioner moved for partial reconsideration but his motion was denied. Thereafter, both parties appealed to the RTC. RTC modified the decision and ordered accused to pay and/or reimburse the complainant. CA affirmed.

Petitioner asserts that BP Blg. 22 merely pertains to the criminal liability of the accused and that the corporation, which has a separate personality from its officers, is solely liable for the value of the two checks.

ISSUE:

> Whether the Court of Appeals erred in upholding the RTC's ruling that petitioner, as an officer of the corporation, is personally and civilly liable to the private respondent for the value of the two checks. (YES)

RULING:

We find the appellate court in error for affirming the decision of the RTC holding petitioner liable for the value of the checks considering that petitioner was acquitted of the crime charged and that the debts are clearly corporate debts for which only Cruiser Bus Lines and Transport Corporation should be held liable.

Juridical entities have personalities separate and distinct from its officers and the persons composing it. Generally, the stockholders and officers are not personally liable for the obligations of the corporation except only when the veil of corporate fiction is being used as a cloak or cover for fraud or illegality, or to work injustice. These situations, however, do not exist in this case. The evidence shows that it is Cruiser Bus Lines and Transport Corporation that has obligations to Auto Plus Traders, Inc. for tires. There is no agreement that petitioner shall be held liable for the corporation's obligations in his personal capacity. Hence, he cannot be held liable for the value of the two checks issued in payment for the corporation's obligation in the total amount of P248,700.

SIAIN ENTERPRISES, INC., Petitioner, -versus- CUPERTINO REALTY CORP. and EDWIN R. CATACUTAN, Respondents

G.R. No. 170782, THIRD DIVISION, JUNE 22, 2009 NACHRA, J.

As a general rule, a corporation will be deemed a separate legal entity until sufficient reason to the contrary appears. But the rule is not absolute. A corporation's separate and distinct legal personality may be disregarded and the veil of corporate fiction pierced when the notion of legal entity is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud, or defend crime

It is crystal clear that petitioner corporation, Yuyek and Siain Transport are characterized by oneness of operations vested in the person of their common president, Cua Le Leng, and unity in the keeping and maintenance of their corporate books and records through their common accountant and bookkeeper, Rosemarie Ragodon. Consequently, these corporations are proven to be the mere alter-ego of their president Cua Leleng, and considering that Cua Leleng and Alberto Lim have been living together as common law spouses with three children, this Court believes that while Alberto Lim does not appear to be an officer of Siain and Yuyek, nonetheless, his receipt of certain checks and debit memos from Willie Lua and Victoria Lua was actually for the account of his common-law wife, Cua Leleng and her alter ego corporations.

FACTS:

On April 10, 1995, petitioner Siain Enterprises, Inc. obtained a loan of P37,000,000.00 from respondent Cupertino Realty Corporation (Cupertino) covered by a promissory note signed by both petitioner's and Cupertino's respective presidents, Cua Le Leng and Wilfredo Lua. The promissory note authorizes Cupertino, as the creditor, to place in escrow the loan proceeds of P37,000,000.00 with Metropolitan Bank & Trust Company to pay off petitioner's loan obligation with Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP). To secure the loan, petitioner, on the same date, executed a real estate mortgage over two (2) parcels of land and other immovables, such as equipment and machineries.

Two (2) days thereafter, or on April 12, 1995, the parties executed an amendment to promissory note which provided for a seventeen percent (17%) interest per annum on the P37,000,000.00 loan.3 The amendment to promissory note was likewise signed by Cua Le Leng and Wilfredo Lua on behalf of petitioner and Cupertino, respectively.

On August 16, 1995, Cua Le Leng signed a second promissory note in favor of Cupertino for P160,000,000.00. Cua Le Leng signed the second promissory note as maker, on behalf of petitioner, and as co-maker, liable to Cupertino in her personal capacity.

Parenthetically, on even date, the parties executed an amendment of real estate mortgage.

Curiously however, and contrary to the tenor of the foregoing loan documents, petitioner, on March 11, 1996, through counsel, wrote Cupertino and demanded the release of the P160,000,000.00 loan increase covered by the amendment of real estate mortgage.[6] In the demand letter, petitioner's counsel stated that despite repeated verbal demands, Cupertino had yet to release the P160,000,000.00 loan. On May 17, 1996, petitioner demanded anew from Cupertino the release of the P160,000,000.00 loan.

In complete refutation, Cupertino, likewise through counsel, responded and denied that it had yet to release the P160,000,000.00 loan. Cupertino maintained that petitioner had long obtained the proceeds of the aforesaid loan. Cupertino declared petitioner's demand as made to "abscond from a just and valid obligation," a mere afterthought, following Cupertino's letter demanding payment of the P37,000,000.00 loan covered by the first promissory note which became overdue on March 5, 1996.

Not surprisingly, Cupertino instituted extrajudicial foreclosure proceedings over the properties subject of the amended real estate mortgage. The auction sale was scheduled on October 11, 1996 with respondent Notary Public Edwin R. Catacutan commissioned to conduct the same. This prompted petitioner to file a complaint with a prayer for a restraining order to enjoin Notary Public Catacutan from proceeding with the public auction.'

RTC rendered a decision dismissing petitioner's complaint and ordering it to pay Cupertino P100,000.00 each for actual and exemplary damages, and P500,000.00 as attorney's fees. The RTC recalled and set aside its previous order declaring the notarial foreclosure of the mortgaged properties as null and void. On appeal, the CA, as previously adverted to, affirmed the RTC's ruling.
In dismissing petitioner's complaint and finding for Cupertino, both the lower courts upheld the validity of the amended real estate mortgage. The RTC found, as did the CA, that although the amended real estate mortgage fell within the exceptions to the parol evidence rule under Section 9, Rule 130 of the Rules of Court, petitioner still failed to overcome and debunk Cupertino's evidence that the amended real estate mortgage had a consideration, and petitioner did receive the amount of P160,000,000.00 representing its incurred obligation to Cupertino. Both courts ruled that as between petitioner's bare denial and negative evidence of non-receipt of the P160,000,000.00, and Cupertino's affirmative evidence on the existence of the consideration, the latter must be given more weight and value. In all, the lower courts gave credence to Cupertino's evidence that the P160,000,000.00 proceeds were the total amount received by petitioner and its affiliate companies over the years from Wilfredo Lua, Cupertino's president. In this regard, the lower courts applied the doctrine of "piercing the veil of corporate fiction" to preclude petitioner from disavowing receipt of the P160,000,000.00 and paying its obligation under the amended real estate mortgage.

ISSUE:

Whether the corporate veil shall be pierced. (YES)

RULING:

As a general rule, a corporation will be deemed a separate legal entity until sufficient reason to the contrary appears. But the rule is not absolute. A corporation's separate and distinct legal personality may be disregarded and the veil of corporate fiction pierced when the notion of legal entity is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud, or defend crime.

In this case, Cupertino presented overwhelming evidence that petitioner and its affiliate corporations had received the proceeds of the P160,000,000.00 loan increase which was then made the consideration for the Amended Real Estate Mortgage. We quote with favor the RTC's and the CA's disquisitions on this matter:

That the checks, debit memos and the pledges of the jewelries, condominium units and trucks were constituted not exclusively in the name of petitioner but also either in the name of Yuyek Manufacturing Corporation, Siain Transport, Inc., Cua Leleng and Alberto Lim is of no moment. For the facts established in the case at bar has convinced the Court of the propriety to apply the principle known as "piercing the veil of the corporate entity" by virtue of which, the juridical personalities of the various corporations involved are disregarded and the ensuing liability of the corporation to attach directly to its responsible officers and stockholders. x x x

x x x
The conjunction of the identity of the petitioner corporation in relation to Siain Transport, Inc. (Siain Transport), Yuyek Manufacturing Corp. (Yuyek), as well as the individual personalities of Cua Leleng and Alberto Lim has been indubitably shown in the instant case by the following established considerations, to wit:

1. Siain and Yuyek have a common set of incorporators, stockholders and board of directors;
2. They have the same internal bookkeeper and accountant in the person of Rosemarie Ragodon;
3. They have the same office address at 306 Jose Rizal St., Mandaluyong City;
4. They have the same majority stockholder and president in the person of Cua Le Leng; and

5. In relation to Siain Transport, Cua Le Leng had the unlimited authority by and on herself, without authority from the Board of Directors, to use the funds of Siain Trucking to pay the obligation incurred by the petitioner corporation.

Thus, it is crystal clear that petitioner corporation, Yuyek and Siain Transport are characterized by oneness of operations vested in the person of their common president, Cua Le Leng, and unity in the keeping and maintenance of their corporate books and records through their common accountant and bookkeeper, Rosemarie Ragodon. Consequently, these corporations are proven to be the mere alter-ego of their president Cua Leleng, and considering that Cua Leleng and Alberto Lim have been living together as common law spouses with three children, this Court believes that while Alberto Lim does not appear to be an officer of Siain and Yuyek, nonetheless, his receipt of certain checks and debit memos from Willie Lua and Victoria Lua was actually for the account of his common-law wife, Cua Leleng and her alter ego corporations. While this Court agrees with Siain that a corporation has a personality separate and distinct from its individual stockholders or members, this legal fiction cannot, however, be applied to its benefit in this case where to do so would result to injustice and evasion of a valid obligation, for well settled is the rule in this jurisdiction that the veil of corporate fiction may be pierced when it is used as a shield to further an end subversive of justice, or for purposes that could not have been intended by the law that created it; or to justify wrong, or for evasion of an existing obligation. Resultantly, the obligation incurred and/or the transactions entered into either by Yuyek, or by Siain Trucking, or by Cua Leleng, or by Alberto Lim with Cupertino are deemed to be that of the petitioner itself.

The same principle equally applies to Cupertino. Thus, while it appears that the issuance of the checks and the debit memos as well as the pledges of the condominium units, the jewelries, and the trucks had occurred prior to March 2, 1995, the date when Cupertino was incorporated, the same does not affect the validity of the subject transactions because applying again the principle of piercing the corporate veil, the transactions entered into by Cupertino Realty Corporation, it being merely the alter ego of Wilfredo Lua, are deemed to be the latter's personal transactions and vice-versa.
x x x
x x x Firstly. As can be viewed from the extant record of the instant case, Cua Leleng is the majority stockholder of the three (3) corporations namely, Yuyek Manufacturing Corporation, Siain Transport, Inc., and Siain Enterprises Inc., at the same time the President thereof. Second. Being the majority stockholder and the president, Cua Le leng has the unlimited power, control and authority without the approval from the board of directors to obtain for and in behalf of the [petitioner] corporation from [Cupertino] thereby mortgaging her jewelries, the condominiums of her common law husband, Alberto Lim, the trucks registered in the name of petitioner orporation's sister company, Siain Transport Inc., the subject lots registered in the name of corporation and her oil mill property at Iloilo City. And, to apply the proceeds thereof in whatever way she wants, to the prejudice of the public.

As such, petitioner corporation is now estopped from denying the above apparent authorities of Cua Le Leng who holds herself to the public as possessing the power to do those acts, against any person who dealt in good faith as in the case of Cupertino.

ARCO PULP AND PAPER CO., INC. and CANDIDA A. SANTOS, Petitioners, -versus- CUPERTINO REALTY CORP. and DAN T. LIM, doing business under the name and style of QUALITY PAPERS & PLASTIC PRODUCTS ENTERPRISES, Respondent

G.R. No. 206806, THIRD DIVISION, JUNE 25, 2014 LEONEN, J.

This veil of corporate fiction may be pierced if complainant is able to prove, as in this case, that (1) the officer is guilty of negligence or bad faith, and (2) such negligence or bad faith was clearly and convincingly proven.

When petitioner Arco Pulp and Paper's obligation to respondent became due and demandable, she not only issued an unfunded check but also contracted with a third party in an effort to shift petitioner Arco Pulp and Paper's liability. She unjustifiably refused to honor petitioner corporation's obligations to respondent. These acts clearly amount to bad faith. In this instance, the corporate veil may be pierced, and petitioner Santos may be held solidarily liable with petitioner Arco Pulp and Paper.

FACTS:

Dan T. Lim works in the business of supplying scrap papers, cartons, and other raw materials, under the name Quality Paper and Plastic Products, Enterprises, to factories engaged in the paper mill business. From February 2007 to March 2007, he delivered scrap papers worth P7, 220, 968.31 to Arco Pulp and Paper Company, Inc. (Arco Pulp and Paper) through its Chief Executive Officer and President, Candida A. Santos. The parties allegedly agreed that Arco Pulp and Paper would either pay Dan T. Lim the value of the raw materials or deliver to him their finished products of equivalent value. Dan T. Lim alleged that when he delivered the raw materials, Arco Pulp and Paper issued a post-dated check dated April 18, 20077 in the amount of P1, 487, 766.68 as partial payment, with the assurance that the check would not bounce. When he deposited the check, it was dishonored for being drawn against a closed account. On the same day, Arco Pulp and Paper and a certain Eric Sy executed a memorandum of agreement where Arco Pulp and Paper bound themselves to deliver their finished products to Megapack Container Corporation, owned by Eric Sy, for his account. According to the memorandum, the raw materials would be supplied by Dan T. Lim, through his company, Quality Paper and Plastic Products.

Dan T. Lim sent a letter to Arco Pulp and Paper demanding payment but no payment was made to him.

Lim filed a complaint for collection of sum of money with prayer for attachment before the RTC. He was allowed to submit evidence ex-parte due to the failure of the defendant's representative to attend the pre-trial hearing. The trial court rendered a judgment in favor of Arco Pulp and Paper and dismissed the complaint, holding that when Arco Pulp and Paper and Eric Sy entered into the memorandum of agreement, novation took place, which extinguished Arco Pulp and Paper's obligation to Dan T. Lim.

Dan T. Lim filed an appeal before the Court of Appeals. The appellate court ruled that the facts and circumstances in this case clearly showed the existence of an alternative obligation. Arco Pulp and Paper filed a MR but it was denied. Thus, this present petition for certiorari before the SC.

Before the SC, the petitioners argue that the execution of the memorandum of agreement constituted a novation of the original obligation since Eric Sy became the new debtor of respondent. They also argue that there is no legal basis to hold petitioner Candida A. Santos personally liable for the transaction that petitioner corporation entered into with respondent. Respondent, on the other hand, argues that the Court of Appeals was correct in ruling that there was no proper novation in this case. He argues that the Court of Appeals was correct in ordering the payment of 7,220,968.31 with damages since the debt of petitioners remains unpaid. He also argues that the Court of Appeals was correct in holding petitioners' solidarily liable since petitioner Candida A. Santos was "the prime mover for such outstanding corporate liability.

ISSUE:

Whether Candida Santos should be held solidary liable with Arco Pulp and Paper. (YES)

RULING:

Basic is the rule in corporation law that a corporation is a juridical entity which is vested with a legal personality separate and distinct from those acting for and in its behalf and, in general, from the people comprising it. Following this principle, obligations incurred by the corporation, acting through its directors, officers and employees, are its sole liabilities. A director, officer or employee of a corporation is generally not held personally liable for obligations incurred by the corporation. Nevertheless, this legal fiction may be disregarded if it is used as a means to perpetrate fraud or an illegal act, or as a vehicle for the evasion of an existing obligation, the circumvention of statutes, or to confuse legitimate issues. Before a director or officer of a corporation can be held personally liable for corporate obligations, however, the following requisites must concur: (1) the complainant must allege in the complaint that the director or officer assented to patently unlawful acts of the corporation, or that the officer was guilty of gross negligence or bad faith; and (2) the complainant must clearly and convincingly prove such unlawful acts, negligence or bad faith.

As a general rule, directors, officers, or employees of a corporation cannot be held personally liable for obligations incurred by the corporation. However, this veil of corporate fiction may be pierced if complainant is able to prove, as in this case, that (1) the officer is guilty of negligence or bad faith, and (2) such negligence or bad faith was clearly and convincingly proven.

Here, petitioner Santos entered into a contract with respondent in her capacity as the President and Chief Executive Officer of Arco Pulp and Paper. She also issued the check in partial payment of petitioner corporation's obligations to respondent on behalf of petitioner Arco Pulp and Paper. This is clear on the face of the check bearing the account name, "Arco Pulp & Paper, Co., Inc." Any obligation arising from these acts would not, ordinarily, be petitioner Santos' personal undertaking for which she would be solidarily liable with petitioner Arco Pulp and Paper.

We find, however, that the corporate veil must be pierced. In Livesey v. Binswanger Philippines: "Piercing the veil of corporate fiction is an equitable doctrine developed to address situations where the separate corporate personality of a corporation is abused or used for wrongful purposes. Under the doctrine, the corporate existence may be disregarded where the entity is formed or used for non-legitimate purposes, such as to evade a just and due obligation, or to justify a wrong, to shield or perpetrate fraud or to carry out similar or inequitable considerations, other unjustifiable aims or intentions, in which case, the fiction will be disregarded and the individuals composing it and the two corporations will be treated as identical."

According to the Court of Appeals, petitioner Santos was solidarily liable with petitioner Arco Pulp and Paper, stating that:

"In the present case, we find bad faith on the part of the [petitioners] when they unjustifiably refused to honor their undertaking in favor of the [respondent]. After the check in the amount of P1, 487,766.68 issued by [petitioner] Santos was dishonored for being drawn against a closed account; [petitioner] corporation denied any privity with [respondent]. These acts prompted the [respondent] to avail of the remedies provided by law in order to protect his rights."

We agree with the Court of Appeals. Petitioner Santos cannot be allowed to hide behind the corporate veil. When petitioner Arco Pulp and Paper's obligation to respondent became due and demandable, she not only issued an unfunded check but also contracted with a third party in an effort to shift petitioner Arco Pulp and Paper's liability. She unjustifiably refused to honor petitioner corporation's obligations to respondent. These acts clearly amount to bad faith. In this instance, the corporate veil may be pierced, and petitioner Santos may be held solidarily liable with petitioner Arco Pulp and Paper.

WPM INTERNATIONAL TRADING, INC. and WARLITO P. MANLAPAZ, Petitioners, -versus- FE CORAZON LABAYEN, Respondent
G.R. No. 182770, SECOND DIVISION, SEPTEMBER 17, 2014 BRION, J.

Piercing the corporate veil based on the alter ego theory requires the concurrence of three elements, namely:

(1) Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own.xxx.

Here, the respondent failed to prove that Manlapaz, acting as president, had absolute control over WPM. Even granting that he exercised a certain degree of control over the finances, policies and practices of WPM, in view of his position as president, chairman and treasurer of the corporation, such control does not necessarily warrant piercing the veil of corporate fiction since there was not a single proof that WPM was formed to defraud CLN or the respondent, or that Manlapaz was guilty of bad faith or fraud.

FACTS:
The respondent, Fe Corazon Labayen, is the owner of H.B.O. Systems Consultants, a management and consultant firm. The petitioner, WPM International Trading, Inc. (WPM), is a domestic corporation engaged in the restaurant business, while Warlito P. Manlapaz (Manlapaz) is its president.

Sometime in 1990, WPM entered into a management agreement with the respondent, by virtue of which the respondent was authorized to operate, manage and rehabilitate Quickbite, a restaurant owned and operated by WPM. As part of her tasks, the respondent looked for a contractor who would renovate the two existing Quickbite outlets in Divisoria, Manila and Lepanto St., University Belt, Manila. Pursuant to the agreement, the respondent engaged the services of CLN Engineering Services (CLN) to renovate Quickbite-Divisoria at the cost of ₱432,876.02.

On June 13, 1990, Quickbite-Divisoria's renovation was finally completed, and its possession was delivered to the respondent. However, out of the ₱432,876.02 renovation cost, only the amount of ₱320,000.00 was paid to CLN, leaving a balance of ₱112,876.02,

On October 19, 1990, CLN filed a complaint for sum of money and damages before the RTC against the respondent and Manlapaz.

Thereafter, the respondent instituted a complaint for damages against the petitioners, WPM and Manlapaz. The respondent alleged that in Civil Case No. Q-90-7013, she was adjudged liable for a contract that she entered into for and in behalf of the petitioners, to which she should be entitled to reimbursement; that her participation in the management agreement was limited only to introducing Manlapaz to Engineer Carmelo Neri (Neri), CLN's general manager; that it was actually Manlapaz and Neri who agreed on the terms and conditions of the agreement; that when the complaint for damages was filed against her, she was abroad; and that she did not know of the case until she returned to the Philippines and received a copy of the decision of the RTC.

In his defense, Manlapaz claims that it was his fellow incorporator/director Edgar Alcansaje who was in-charge with the daily operations of the Quickbite outlets; that when Alcansaje left WPM, the remaining directors were compelled to hire the respondent as manager; that the respondent had entered into the renovation agreement with CLN in her own personal capacity; that when he found the amount quoted by CLN too high, he instructed the respondent to either renegotiate for a lower price or to look for another contractor; that since the respondent had exceeded her authority as agent of WPM, the renovation agreement should only bind her; and that since WPM has a separate and distinct personality, Manlapaz cannot be made liable for the respondent's claim.

RTC held that the respondent is entitled to indemnity from Manlapaz. The RTC found that based on the records, there is a clear indication that WPM is a mere instrumentality or business conduit of Manlapaz and as such, WPM and Manlapaz are considered one and the same. The RTC also found that Manlapaz had complete control over WPM considering that he is its chairman, president and treasurer at the same time. CA affirmed.

ISSUE:

Whether piercing the veil of corporate fiction is warranted (NO)

RULING:

The rule is settled that a corporation has a personality separate and distinct from the persons acting for and in its behalf and, in general, from the people comprising it. Following this principle, the obligations incurred by the corporate officers, orother persons acting as corporate agents, are the direct accountabilities of the corporation they represent, and not theirs. Thus, a director, officer or employee of a corporation is generally not held personally liable for obligations incurred by the corporation; it is only in exceptional circumstances that solidary liability will attach to them.

Incidentally, the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil applies only in three (3) basic instances, namely: a) when the separate and distinct corporate personality defeats public convenience, as when the corporate fiction is used as a vehicle for the evasion of an existing obligation; b) in fraud cases, or when the corporate entity is used to justify a wrong, protect a fraud, or defend a crime; or c) is used in alter ego cases, i.e., where a corporation is essentially a farce, since it is a mere alter ego or business conduit of a person, or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation.

Piercing the corporate veil based on the alter ego theory requires the concurrence of three elements, namely:

(1) Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;

(2) Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of plaintiff's legal right; and

(3) The aforesaid control and breach of duty must have proximately caused the injury or unjust loss complained of.

The absence of any of these elements prevents piercing the corporate veil.

In the present case, the attendant circumstances do not establish that WPM is a mere alter ego of Manlapaz.

Aside from the fact that Manlapaz was the principal stockholder of WPM, records do not show that WPM was organized and controlled, and its affairs conducted in a manner that made it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of Manlapaz. As held in Martinez v. Court of Appeals,the mere ownership by a single stockholder of even all or nearly all of the capital stocks of a corporation is not by itself a sufficient ground to disregard the separate corporate personality. To disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrongdoing must be clearly and convincingly established.

Likewise, the records of the case do not support the lower courts' finding that Manlapaz had control or domination over WPM or its finances. That Manlapaz concurrently held the positions of president, chairman and treasurer, or that the Manlapaz's residence is the registered principal office of WPM, are insufficient considerations to prove that he had exercised absolute control over WPM.

In this connection, we stress that the control necessary to invoke the instrumentality or alter ego rule is not majority or even complete stock control but such domination of finances, policies and practices that the controlled corporation has, so to speak, no separate mind, will or existence of its own, and is but a conduit for its principal. The control must be shown to have been exercised at the time the acts complained of took place. Moreover, the control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss for which the complaint is made.

Here, the respondent failed to prove that Manlapaz, acting as president, had absolute control over WPM. Even granting that he exercised a certain degree of control over the finances, policies and practices of WPM, in view of his position as president, chairman and treasurer of the corporation, such control does not necessarily warrant piercing the veil of corporate fiction since there was not a single proof that WPM was formed to defraud CLN or the respondent, or that Manlapaz was guilty of bad faith or fraud.

On the contrary, the evidence establishes that CLN and the respondent knew and acted on the knowledge that they were dealing with WPM for the renovation of the latter's restaurant, and not with Manlapaz. That WPM later reneged on its monetary obligation to CLN, resulting to the filing of a civil case for sum of money against the respondent, does not automatically indicate fraud, in the absence of any proof to support it.

This Court also observed that the CA failed to demonstrate how the separate and distinct personalityof WPM was used by Manlapaz to defeat the respondent's right for reimbursement. Neither was there any showing that WPM attempted to avoid liability or had no property against which to proceed.

Since no harm could be said to have been proximately caused by Manlapaz for which the latter could be held solidarily liable with WPM, and considering that there was no proof that WPM had insufficient funds, there was no sufficient justification for the RTC and the CA to have ruled that Manlapaz should be held jointly and severally liable to the respondent for the amount she paid to CLN. Hence, only WPM is liable to indemnify the respondent.

Finally, we emphasize that the piercing of the veil of corporate fiction is frowned upon and thus, must be done with caution. It can only be done if it has been clearly established that the separate and distinct personality of the corporation is used to justify a wrong, protect fraud, or perpetrate a deception. The court must be certain that the corporate fiction was misused to such an extent that injustice, fraud, or crime was committed against another, in disregard of its rights; it cannot be presumed.

HACIENDA CATAYWA/MANUEL VILLANUEVA, owner, JOEMARIE VILLANUEVA, manager, MANCY AND SONS ENTERPRISES, INC, Petitioners, -versus- ROSARIO LOREZO, Respondent
G.R. No. 179640, THIRD DIVISION, MARCH 18, 2015 PERALTA, J.

The Court has expressed the language of piercing doctrine when applied to alter ego cases, as follows: Where the stock of a corporation is owned by one person whereby the corporation functions only for the benefit of such individual owner, the corporation and the individual should be deemed the same.

This Court agrees with the petitioners that there is no need to pierce the corporate veil. Respondent failed to substantiate her claim that Mancy and Sons Enterprises, Inc. and Manuel and Jose Marie Villanueva are one and the same. She based her claim on the SSS form wherein Manuel Villanueva appeared as employer. However, this does not prove, in any way, that the corporation is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud, or defend crime, or when it is made as a shield to confuse the legitimate issues, warranting that its separate and distinct personality be set aside.

FACTS:

Respondent Rosario Lorezo received, upon inquiry, a letter from the Social Security System (SSS) Western Visayas Group informing her that she cannot avail of their retirement benefits since per their record she has only paid 16 months. Such is 104 months short of the minimum requirement of 120 months payment to be entitled to the benefit. She was also informed that their investigation of her alleged employment under employer Hda. Cataywa could not be confirmed because Manuel Villanueva was permanently residing in Manila and Joemarie Villanueva denied having managed the farm. She was also advised of her options: continue paying contributions as voluntary member; request for refund; leave her contributions in-trust with the System, or file a petition before the Social Security Commission (SSC) so that liabilities, if any, of her employer may be determined.3

Aggrieved, respondent then filed her Amended Petition dated September 30, 2003, before the SSC. She alleged that she was employed as laborer in Hda. Cataywa managed by Jose Marie Villanueva in 1970 but was reported to the SSS only in 1978. She alleged that SSS contributions were deducted from her wages from 1970 to 1995, but not all were remitted to the SSS which, subsequently, caused the rejection of her claim. She also impleaded Talisay Farms, Inc. by virtue of its Investment Agreement with Mancy and Sons Enterprises. She also prayed that the veil of corporate fiction be pierced since she alleged that Mancy and Sons Enterprises and Manuel and Jose Marie Villanueva are one and the same.

SSC ruled in favor of respondent. The SSC denied petitioners' Motion for Reconsideration. The petitioner, then, elevated the case before the CA where the case was dismissed outrightly due to technicalities.

ISSUE:

Whether piercing the veil of corporate fiction is warranted (NO)

RULING:

It was held in Rivera v. United Laboratories, Inc. that:

> While a corporation may exist for any lawful purpose, the law will regard it as an association of persons or, in case of two corporations, merge them into one, when its corporate legal entity is used as a cloak for fraud or illegality. This is the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction. The doctrine applies only when such corporate fiction is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud, or defend crime, or when it is made as a shield to confuse the legitimate issues, or where a corporation is the mere alter ego or business conduit of a person, or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation. To disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrongdoing must be established clearly and convincingly. It cannot be presumed.

This Court has cautioned against the inordinate application of this doctrine, reiterating the basic rule that "the corporate veil may be pierced only if it becomes a shield for fraud, illegality or inequity committed against a third person.

The Court has expressed the language of piercing doctrine when applied to alter ego cases, as follows: Where the stock of a corporation is owned by one person whereby the corporation functions only for the benefit of such individual owner, the corporation and the individual should be deemed the same.

This Court agrees with the petitioners that there is no need to pierce the corporate veil. Respondent failed to substantiate her claim that Mancy and Sons Enterprises, Inc. and Manuel and Jose Marie Villanueva are one and the same. She based her claim on the SSS form wherein Manuel Villanueva appeared as employer. However, this does not prove, in any way, that the corporation is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud, or defend crime, or when it is made as a shield to confuse the legitimate issues, warranting that its separate and distinct personality be set aside. Also, it was not alleged nor proven that Mancy and Sons Enterprises, Inc. functions only for the benefit of Manuel Villanueva, thus, one cannot be an alter ego of the other.

DUTCH MOVERS, INC. CESAR LEE AND YOLANDA LEE, Petitioners, -versus- EDILBERTO LEQUIN, CHRISTOPHER R. SALVADOR, REYNALDO L. SINGSING, AND RAFFY B. MASCARDO, Respondents

G.R. No. 210032, FIRST DIVISION, April 25, 2017, DEL CASTILLO, J.

Piercing the veil of corporate fiction is allowed, and responsible persons may be impleaded, and be held solidarily liable even after final judgment and on execution, provided that such persons deliberately used the corporate vehicle to unjustly evade the judgment obligation, or resorted to fraud, bad faith, or malice in evading their obligation.

In this case, petitioners were impleaded from the inception of this case. They had ample opportunity to debunk the claim that they illegally dismissed respondents, and that they should be held personally liable for having controlled DMI and actively participated in its management, and for having used it to evade legal obligations to respondents.

While it is true that one's control does not by itself result in the disregard of corporate fiction; however, considering the irregularity in the incorporation of DMI, then there is sufficient basis to hold that such corporation was used for an illegal purpose, including evasion of legal duties to its employees, and as such, the piercing of the corporate veil is warranted.

FACTS:

This case is an offshoot of the illegal dismissal Complaint8 filed by Edilberto Lequin (Lequin), Christopher Salvador, Reynaldo Singsing, and Raffy Mascardo (respondents) against Dutch Movers, Inc. (DMI), and/or spouses Cesar Lee and Yolanda Lee (petitioners), its alleged President/Owner, and Manager respectively.

In their Amended Complaint and Position Paper, respondents stated that DMI, a domestic corporation engaged in hauling liquefied petroleum gas, employed Lequin as truck driver and the rest of respondents as helpers; on December 28, 2004, Cesar Lee, through the Supervisor Nazario Furio, informed them that DMI would cease its hauling operation for no reason; as such, they requested DMI to issue a formal notice regarding the matter but to no avail. Later, upon respondents' request, the DOLE NCR10 issued a certification revealing that DMI did not file any notice of business closure. Thus, respondents argued that they were illegally dismissed as their termination was without cause and only on the pretext of closure.

LA dismissed the case. NLRC reversed.

The NLRC Decision became final and executory.

Consequently, respondents filed a Motion for Writ of Execution. Pending resolution of these motions, respondents filed a Manifestation and Motion to Implead stating that upon investigation, they discovered that DMI no longer operates. They, nonetheless, insisted that petitioners - who managed and operated DMI, and consistently represented to respondents that they were the owners of DMI - continue to work at Toyota Alabang, which they also own and operate. They further averred that the Articles of Incorporation (AOI) of DMI ironically did not include petitioners as its directors or officers; and those named directors and officers were persons unknown to them. They likewise claimed that per inquiry with the SEC 20 and the DOLE, they learned that DMI did not tile any notice of business closure; and the creation and operation of DMI was attended with fraud making it convenient for petitioners to evade their legal obligations to them.

Given these developments, respondents prayed that petitioners, and the officers named in DMI's AOI, which included Edgar N. Smith and Millicent C. Smith (spouses Smith), be impleaded, and be held solidarity liable with DMI in paying the judgment awards.

ISSUE:

Whether piercing the veil of corporate fiction is warranted (YES)

RULING:

The Court is not unmindful of the basic tenet that a corporation has a separate and distinct personality from its stockholders, and from other corporations it may be connected with. However, such personality may be disregarded, or the veil of corporate fiction may be pierced attaching personal liability against responsible person if the corporation's personality "is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud or defend crime, or is used as a device to defeat the labor laws x x x." By responsible person, we refer to an individual or entity responsible for, and who acted in bad faith in committing illegal dismissal or in violation of the Labor Code; or one who actively participated in the management of the corporation. Also, piercing the veil of corporate fiction is allowed where a corporation is a mere alter ego or a conduit of a person, or another corporation.36

Here, the veil of corporate fiction must be pierced and accordingly, petitioners should be held personally liable for judgment awards because the peculiarity of the situation shows that they controlled DMI; they actively participated in its operation such that DMI existed not as a separate entity but only as business conduit of petitioners. As will be shown be shown below, petitioners controlled DMI by making it appear to have no mind of its own, and used DMI as shield in evading legal liabilities, including payment of the judgment awards in favor of respondents.

First, petitioners and DMI jointly filed their Position Paper, Reply, and Rejoinder in contesting respondents' illegal dismissal. Perplexingly, petitioners argued that they were not part of DMI and were not privy to its dealings; yet, petitioners, along with DMI, collectively raised arguments on the illegal dismissal case against them.

Stated differently, petitioners denied having any participation in the management and operation of DMI; however, they were aware of and disclosed the circumstances surrounding respondents' employment, and propounded arguments refuting that respondents were illegally dismissed.

To note, petitioners revealed the annual compensation of respondents and their length of service; they also set up the defense that respondents were merely project employees, and were not terminated but that DMI's contract with its client was discontinued resulting in the absence of hauling projects for respondents.

If only to prove that they were not part of DMI, petitioners could have revealed who operated it, and from whom they derived the information embodied in their pleadings. Such failure to reveal thus gives the Court reasons to give credence to respondents' firm stand that petitioners are no strangers to DMI, and that they were the ones who managed and operated it.

Second, the declarations made by spouses Smith further bolster that petitioners and no other controlled DMI, to wit:

> Complainants [herein respondents] in their own motion admit that they never saw [spouses Smith] at the office of [DMI], and do not know them at all. This is because [spouses Smith's] services as lawyers had long been dispensed by the Spouses Lee and had no hand whatsoever in the management of the company. The Smiths, as counsel of the spouses at [that] time, [lent] their names as incorporators to facilitate the [incorporation of DMI.] Respondent Edgard Smith was then counsel of Toyota Alabang and acts as its corporate secretary and as favor to his former client and employer, Respondent Cesar Lee, agreed to help incorporate [DMI] and even asked his wife Respondent, Millicent Smith, to act as incorporator also [to] complete the required 5 man incorporators. After the incorporation they assigned and transferred all their purported participation in the company to the Respondents Spouses Cesar and Yolanda Lee, who acted as managers and are the real owners of the corporation. Even at the time complainant[s were] fired from [their] employment respondents Spouses Smith had already given up their shares. The failure to an1end the Articles of Incorporation of [DMI], and to apply for closure is the fault of the new board, if any was constituted subsequently, and not of Respondents Smiths. Whatever fraud committed was not committed by the Respondents Smiths, hence they could not be made solidarily liable with Respondent Corporation or with the spouses Lee. If bad faith or fraud did attend the termination of complainant[s], respondents Smiths would know nothing of it because they had ceased any connection with [DMI] even prior to such time. And they had at the inception of the corporation never exercised management prerogatives in the selection, hiring, and firing of employees of [DMI].

Spouses Smith categorically identified petitioners as the owners and managers of DMI. In their Motion to Quash, however, petitioners neither denied the allegation of spouses Smith nor adduced evidence to establish that they were not the owners and managers of DMI. They simply insisted that they could not be held personally liable because of the immutability of the final and executory NLRC Decision, and of the separate and distinct personality of DMI.

Furthermore, the assailed CA Decision heavily relied on the declarations of spouses Smith but still petitioners did not address the matters raised by spouses Smith in the instant Petition with the Court.

Indeed, despite sufficient opportunity to clarify matters and/or to refute them, petitioners simply brushed aside the allegations of spouses Smith that petitioners owned and managed DMI. Petitioners just maintain that they did not act in bad faith; that the NLRC Decision is final and executory; and that DMI has a distinct and separate personality. Hence, for failure to address, clarify, or deny the declarations of spouses Smith, the Court finds respondents' position that petitioners owned, and operated DMI with merit.

Third, piercing the veil of corporate fiction is allowed, and responsible persons may be impleaded, and be held solidarily liable even after final judgment and on execution, provided that such persons deliberately used the corporate vehicle to unjustly evade the judgment obligation, or resorted to fraud, bad faith, or malice in evading their obligation.

In this case, petitioners were impleaded from the inception of this case. They had ample opportunity to debunk the claim that they illegally dismissed respondents, and that they should be held personally liable for having controlled DMI and actively participated in its management, and for having used it to evade legal obligations to respondents.

While it is true that one's control does not by itself result in the disregard of corporate fiction; however, considering the irregularity in the incorporation of DMI, then there is sufficient basis to hold that such corporation was used for an illegal purpose, including evasion of legal duties to its employees, and as such, the piercing of the corporate veil is warranted. The act of hiding behind the cloak of corporate fiction will not be allowed in such situation where it is used to evade one's obligations, which "equitable piercing doctrine was formulated to address and prevent."45

Clearly, petitioners should be held liable for the judgment awards as they resorted to such scheme to countermand labor laws by causing the incorporation of DMI but without any indication that they were part thereof. While such device to defeat labor laws may be deemed ingenious and imaginative, the Court will not hesitate to draw the line, and protect the right of workers to security of tenure, including ensuring that they will receive the benefits they deserve when they fall victims of illegal dismissal.

ROMMEL M. ZAMBRANO et al. Petitioners, -versus- PHILIPPINE CARPET MANUFACTURING CORPORATION/ PACIFIC CARPET MANUFACTURING CORPORATION, DAVIDE. T. LIM, and EVELYN LIM FORBES, Respondents

G.R. No. 224099, SECOND DIVISION, JUNE 21, 2017, MENDOZA, J.

Although ownership by one corporation of all or a great majority of stocks of another corporation and their interlocking directorates may serve as indicia of control, by themselves and without more, these circumstances are insufficient to establish an alter ego relationship or connection between Phil Carpet on the one hand and Pacific Carpet on the other hand, that will justify the puncturing of the latter's corporate cover.

This Court has declared that "mere ownership by a single stockholder or by another corporation of all or nearly all of the capital stock of a corporation is not of itself sufficient ground for disregarding the separate corporate personality." It has likewise ruled that the "existence of interlocking directors, corporate officers and shareholders is not enough justification to pierce the veil of corporate fiction in the absence of fraud or other public policy considerations."

FACTS:

The petitioners averred that they were employees of private respondent Philippine Carpet Manufacturing Corporation (Phil Carpet). On January 3, 2011, they were notified of the termination of their employment effective February 3, 2011 on the ground of cessation of operation due to serious business losses. They were of the belief that their dismissal was without just cause and in violation of due process because the closure of Phil Carpet was a mere pretense to transfer its operations to its wholly owned and controlled corporation, Pacific Carpet Manufacturing Corporation (PacificCarpet). They claimed that the job orders of some regular clients of PhilCarpet were transferred to Pacific Carpet; and that from October to November 2011, several machines were moved from the premises of Phil Carpet to Pacific Carpet. They asserted that their dismissal constituted unfair labor practice as it involved the mass dismissal of all union officers and members of the Philippine Carpet Manufacturing Employees Association (PHILCEA).

In its defense, Phil Carpet countered that it permanently closed and totally ceased its operations because there had been a steady decline in the demand for its products due to global recession, stiffer competition, and the effects of a changing market.

Labor Arbiter (LA) dismissed the complaints for illegal dismissal and unfair labor practice. It ruled that the termination of the petitioners' employment was due to total cessation of manufacturing operations of Phil Carpet because it suffered continuous serious business losses. NLRC and CA affirmed.

Petitioners claim that their termination was a mere pretense because Phil Carpet continued operation through Pacific Carpet

ISSUE:

Whether Pacific Carpet may be held liable for Phil Carpet's obligations (NO)

RULING:

A corporation is an artificial being created by operation of law. It possesses the right of succession and such powers, attributes, and properties expressly authorized by law or incident to its existence. It has a personality separate and distinct from the persons composing it, as well as from any other legal entity to which may be related.

Equally well-settled is the principle that the corporate mask may be removed or the corporate veil pierced when the corporation is just an alter ego of a person or of another corporation. For reasons of public policy and in the interest of justice, the corporate veil will justifiably be impaled only when it becomes a shield for fraud, illegality or inequity committed against third persons.

Hence, any application of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil should be done with caution. A court should be mindful of the milieu where it is to be applied. It must be certain that the corporate fiction was misused to such an extent that injustice, fraud, or crime was committed against another, in disregard of rights. The wrongdoing must be clearly and convincingly established; it cannot be presumed. Otherwise, an injustice that was never unintended may result from an erroneous application.

Further, the Court's ruling in Philippine National Bank v. HydroResources Contractors Corporation is enlightening, viz.:

> The doctrine of piercing the corporate veil applies only in three (3) basic areas, namely: 1) defeat of public convenience as when the corporate fiction is used as a vehicle for the evasion of an existing obligation; 2) fraud cases or when the corporate entity is used to justify a wrong, protect fraud, or defend a crime; or 3) alter ego cases, where a corporation is merely a farce since it is a mere alter ego or business conduit of a person, or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation.

x x x x

In this connection, case law lays down a three-pronged test to determine the application of the alter ego theory, which is also known as the instrumentality theory, namely:

(1) Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;

(2) Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of plaintiffs legal right; and

(3) The aforesaid control and breach of duty must have proximately caused the injury or unjust loss complained of.

The first prong is the "instrumentality" or "control" test. This test requires that the subsidiary be completely under the control and domination of the parent. It examines the parent corporation's relationship with the subsidiary. It inquires whether a subsidiary corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it a mere instrumentality or agent of the parent corporation such that its separate existence as a distinct corporate entity will be ignored. It seeks to establish whether the subsidiary corporation has no autonomy and the parent corporation, though acting through the subsidiary in form and appearance, "is operating the business directly for itself."

The second prong is the "fraud" test. This test requires that the parent corporation's conduct in using the subsidiary corporation be unjust, fraudulent or wrongful.1âwphi1 It examines the relationship of the plaintiff to the corporation. It recognizes that piercing is appropriate only if the parent corporation uses the subsidiary in a way that harms the plaintiff creditor. As such, it requires a showing of "an element of injustice or fundamental unfairness."

The third prong is the "harm" test. This test requires the plaintiff to show that the defendant's control, exerted in a fraudulent, illegal or otherwise unfair manner toward it, caused the harm suffered. A causal connection between the fraudulent conduct committed through the instrumentality of the subsidiary and the injury suffered or the damage incurred by the plaintiff should be established. The plaintiff must prove that, unless the corporate veil is pierced, it will have been treated unjustly by the defendant's exercise of control and improper use of the corporate form and, thereby, suffer damages.

To summarize, piercing the corporate veil based on the alter ego theory requires the concurrence of three elements: control of the corporation by the stockholder or parent corporation, fraud or fundamental unfairness imposed on the plaintiff, and harm or damage caused to the plaintiff by the fraudulent or unfair act of the corporation. The absence of any of these elements prevents piercing the corporate veil.

The Court finds that none of the tests has been satisfactorily met in this case.

Although ownership by one corporation of all or a great majority of stocks of another corporation and their interlocking directorates may serve as indicia of control, by themselves and without more, these circumstances are insufficient to establish an alter ego relationship or connection between Phil Carpet on the one hand and Pacific Carpet on the other hand, that will justify the puncturing of the latter's corporate cover.

This Court has declared that "mere ownership by a single stockholder or by another corporation of all or nearly all of the capital stock of a corporation is not of itself sufficient ground for disregarding the separate corporate personality." It has likewise ruled that the "existence of interlocking directors, corporate officers and shareholders is not enough justification to pierce the veil of corporate fiction in the absence of fraud or other public policy considerations."

It must be noted that Pacific Carpet was registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission on January 29, 1999,41 such that it could not be said that Pacific Carpet was set up to evade Phil Carpet's liabilities. As to the transfer of Phil Carpet's machines to Pacific Carpet, settled is the rule that "where one corporation sells or otherwise transfers all its assets to another corporation for value, the latter is not, by that fact alone, liable for the debts and liabilities of the transferor. "

All told, the petitioners failed to present substantial evidence to prove their allegation that Pacific Carpet is a mere alter ego of Phil Carpet.

MARICALUM MINING CORPORATION Petitioner, -versus- ELY G. FLORENTINO et al, Respondents
G.R. No. 221813, THIRD DIVISION, JULY 23, 2018, GESMUNDO, J.

A subsidiary company's separate corporate personality may be disregarded only when the evidence shows that such separate personality was being used by its parent or holding corporation to perpetrate a fraud or evade an existing obligation. Concomitantly, employees of a corporation have no cause of action for labor-related claims against another unaffiliated corporation, which does not exercise control over them.

FACTS:

On October 2, 1992, the National Government thru the Asset Privatization Trust (APT) executed a Purchase and Sale Agreement (PSA) with G Holdings, a domestic corporation primarily engaged in the business of owning and holding shares of stock of different companies. G Holding bought 90% of Maricalum Mining's shares and financial claims in the form of company notes. In exchange, the PSA obliged G Holdings to pay APT the amount of P673,161,280.00, with a down payment of P98,704,000.00 and with the balance divided into four tranches payable in installment over a period of ten years.7 Concomitantly, G Holdings also assumed Maricalum Mining's liabilities in the form of company notes. The said financial liabilities were converted into three (3) Promissory Notes (PNs) totaling P550,000,000.00 (P114,715,360.00, P186,550,560.00 and P248,734,080.00), which were secured by mortgages over some of Maricalum Mining's properties. These PNs obliged Maricalum Mining to pay G Holdings the stipulated amount of P550,000,000.00.

Upon the signing of the PSA and paying the stipulated down payment, G Holdings immediately took physical possession of Maricalum Mining's Sipalay Mining Complex, as well as its facilities, and took full control of the latter's management and operations.

On January 26, 1999, the Sipalay General Hospital, Inc. (Sipalay Hospital) was duly incorporated to provide medical services and facilities to the general public.

Afterwards, some of Maricalum Mining's employees retired and formed several manpower cooperatives

In 2000, each of the said cooperatives executed identical sets of Memorandum of Agreement with Maricalum Mining wherein they undertook, among others, to provide the latter with a steady supply of workers, machinery and equipment for a monthly fee.

On June 1, 2001, Maricalum Mining's Vice President and Resident Manager Jesus H. Bermejo wrote a Memorandum to the cooperatives informing them that Maricalum Mining has decided to stop its mining and milling operations effective July 1, 2001 in order to avert continuing losses brought about by the low metal prices and high cost of production.

In July 2001, the properties of Maricalum Mining, which had been mortgaged to secure the PNs, were extrajudicially foreclosed and eventually sold to G Holdings as the highest bidder on December 3, 2001.

On September 23, 2010, some of Maricalum Mining's workers, including complainants, and some of Sipalay General Hospital's employees jointly filed a Complaint15 with the LA against G Holdings, its president, and officer-in-charge, and the cooperatives and its officers for illegal dismissal, underpayment and nonpayment of salaries, underpayment of overtime pay, underpayment of premium pay for holiday, nonpayment of separation pay, underpayment of holiday pay, nonpayment of service incentive leave pay, nonpayment of vacation and sick leave, nonpayment of 13th month pay, moral and exemplary damages, and attorneys fees.

On December 2, 2010, complainants and CeMPC Chairman Alejandro H. Sitchon surprisingly filed his complaint for illegal dismissal and corresponding monetary claims with the LA against G Holdings, its officer--in-charge and CeMPC.

Thereafter, the complaints were consolidated by the LA.

After the hearings were concluded, complainants presented their Position Paper claiming that: they have not received any increase in wages since they were allegedly rehired; except for Sipalay Hospital's employees, they worked as an augmentation force to the security guards charged with securing Maricalum Mining's assets which were acquired by G Holdings; Maricalum Mining's assets have been exposed to pilferage by some of its rank-and-file employees whose claims for collective bargaining benefits were undergoing litigation; the Sipalay Hospital is purportedly "among the assets" of Maricalum Mining acquired by G Holdings; the payrolls for their wages were supposedly prepared by G Holdings' accounting department; since the second half of April 2007, they have not been paid their salary; and some of their services were dismissed without any due process.

Based on these factual claims, complainants posited that: the manpower cooperatives were mere alter egos of G Holdings organized to subvert the "tenurial rights" of the complainants; G Holdings implemented a retrenchment scheme to dismiss the caretakers it hired before the foreclosure of Maricalum Mining's assets; and G Holdings was their employer because it allegedly had the power to hire, pay wages, control working methods and dismiss them.

LA ruled in favor of complainants. It held that G Holdings is guilty of labor-only contracting with the manpower cooperatives thereby making all of them solidarily and directly liable to complainants.

NLRC modified and ruled that it was Maricalum Mining-not G Holdings-who entered into service contracts by way of a Memorandum of Agreement with each of the manpower cooperatives. CA affirmed.

ISSUE:

Whether G Holdings is liable (NO)

RULING:

The doctrine of piercing the corporate veil applies only in three (3) basic areas, namely: (a) defeat of public convenience as when the corporate fiction is used as a vehicle for the evasion of an existing obligation; (b) fraud cases or when the corporate entity is used to justify a wrong, protect fraud, or defend a crime; or (c) alter ego cases, where a corporation is merely a farce since it is a mere alter ego or business conduit of a person, or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation. This principle is basically applied only to determine established liability. However, piercing of the veil of corporate fiction is frowned upon and must be done with caution. This is because a corporation is invested by law with a personality separate and distinct from those of the persons composing it as well as from that of any other legal entity to which it may be related.

A parent or holding company is a corporation which owns or is organized to own a substantial portion of another company's voting shares of stock enough to control or influence the latter's management, policies or affairs thru election of the latter's board of directors or otherwise. However, the term "holding company" is customarily used interchangeably with the term "investment company" which, in turn, is defined by Section 4 (a) of Republic Act (R.A.) No. 262961 as "any issuer (corporation) which is or holds itself out as being engaged primarily, or proposes to engage primarily, in the business of investing, reinvesting, or trading in securities."

In other words, a "holding company" is organized and is basically conducting its business by investing substantially in the equity securities of another company for the purposes of controlling their policies (as opposed to directly engaging in operating activities) and "holding" them in a conglomerate or umbrella structure along with other subsidiaries. Significantly, the holding company itself-being a separate entity-does not own the assets of and does not answer for the liabilities of the subsidiary or affiliate. The management of the subsidiary or affiliate still rests in the hands of its own board of directors and corporate officers. It is in keeping with the basic rule a corporation is a juridical entity which is vested with a legal personality separate and distinct from those acting for and in its behalf and, in general, from the people comprising it. The corporate form was created to allow shareholders to invest without incurring personal liability for the acts of the corporation.

While the veil of corporate fiction may be pierced under certain instances, mere ownership of a subsidiary does not justify the imposition of liability on the parent company. It must further appear that to recognize a parent and a subsidiary as separate entities would aid in the consummation of a wrong. Thus, a holding corporation has a separate corporate existence and is to be treated as a separate entity; unless the facts show that such separate corporate existence is a mere sham, or has been used as an instrument for concealing the truth.69

In the case at bench, complainants mainly harp their cause on the alter ego theory. Under this theory, piercing the veil of corporate fiction may be allowed only if the following elements concur:
1) Control-not mere stock control, but complete domination-not only of finances, but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked, must have been such that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;

2) Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit a fraud or a wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or a dishonest and an unjust act in contravention of plaintiffs legal right; and

3) The said control and breach of duty must have proximately caused the injury or unjust loss complained of.

The elements of the alter ego theory were discussed in Philippine National Bank v. Hydro Resources Contractors Corporation,to wit:

The first prong is the "instrumentality" or "control" test. This test requires that the subsidiary be completely under the control and domination of the parent. It examines the parent corporation's relationship with the subsidiary. It inquires whether a subsidiary corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it a mere instrumentality or agent of the parent corporation such that its separate existence as a distinct corporate entity will be ignored. It seeks to establish whether the subsidiary corporation has no autonomy and the parent corporation, though acting through the subsidiary in form and appearance, "is operating the business directly for itself."

The second prong is the "fraud" test. This test requires that the parent corporation's conduct in using the subsidiary corporation be unjust, fraudulent or wrongful. It examines the relationship of the plaintiff to the corporation. It recognizes that piercing is appropriate only if the parent corporation uses the subsidiary in a way that harms the plaintiff creditor. As such, it requires a showing of "an element of injustice or fundamental unfairness."

The third prong is the "harm" test. This test requires the plaintiff to show that the defendant's control, exerted in a fraudulent, illegal or otherwise unfair manner toward it, caused the harm suffered. A causal connection between the fraudulent conduct committed through the instrumentality of the subsidiary and the injury suffered or the damage incurred by the plaintiff should be established. The plaintiff must prove that, unless the corporate veil is pierced, it will have been treated unjustly by the defendant's exercise of control and improper use of the corporate form and, thereby, suffer damages.

To summarize, piercing the corporate veil based on the alter ego theory requires the concurrence of three elements: control of the corporation by the stockholder or parent corporation, fraud or fundamental unfairness imposed on the plaintiff, and harm or damage caused to the plaintiff by the fraudulent or unfair act of the corporation. The absence of any of these elements prevents piercing the corporate veil. (emphases and underscoring supplied)

Again, all these three elements must concur before the corporate veil may be pierced under the alter ego theory. Keeping in mind the parameters, guidelines and indicators for proper piercing of the corporate veil, the Court now proceeds to determine whether Maricalum Mining's corporate veil may be pierced in order to allow complainants to enforce their monetary awards against G Holdings.

I. Control or Instrumentality Test

In Concept Builders, Inc. v. National Labor Relations Commission, et al., the Court first laid down the first set of probative factors of identity that will justify the application of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil, viz:
1) Stock ownership by one or common ownership of both corporations.
2) Identity of directors and officers.
3) The manner of keeping corporate books and records.
4) Methods of conducting the business.

Later, in Philippine National Bank v. Ritratto Group Inc., et al., the Court expanded the aforementioned probative factors and enumerated a combination of any of the following common circumstances that may also render a subsidiary an instrumentality, to wit:

1) The parent corporation owns all or most of the capital stock of the subsidiary;
2) The parent and subsidiary corporations have common directors or officers;
3) The parent corporation finances the subsidiary;
4) The parent corporation subscribes to all the capital stock of the subsidiary or otherwise causes its incorporation;
5) The subsidiary has grossly inadequate capital;
6) The parent corporation pays the salaries and other expenses or losses of the subsidiary;
7) The subsidiary has substantially no business except with the parent corporation or no assets except those conveyed to or by the parent corporation;
8) In the papers of the parent corporation or in the statements of its officers, the subsidiary is described as a department or division of the parent corporation, or its business or financial responsibility is referred to as the parent corporation's own;
9) The parent corporation uses the property of the subsidiary as its own;
10) The directors or executives of the subsidiary do not act independently in the interest of the subsidiary but take their orders from the parent corporation; and
11) The formal legal requirements of the subsidiary are not observed.

In the instant case, there is no doubt that G Holdings-being the majority and controlling stockholder-had been exercising significant control over Maricalum Mining. This is because this Court had already upheld the validity and enforceability of the PSA between the APT and G Holdings. It was stipulated in the PSA that APT shall transfer 90% of Maricalum Mining's equity securities to G Holdings and it establishes the presence of absolute control of a subsidiary's corporate affairs. Moreover, the Court evinces its observation that Maricalum Mining's corporate name appearing on the heading of the cash vouchers issued in payment of the services rendered by the manpower cooperatives is being superimposed with G Holding's corporate name. Due to this observation, it can be reasonably inferred that G Holdings is paying for Maricalum Mining's salary expenses. Hence, the presence of both circumstances of dominant equity ownership and provision for salary expenses may adequately establish that Maricalum Mining is an instrumentality of G Holdings.

However, mere presence of control and full ownership of a parent over a subsidiary is not enough to pierce the veil of corporate fiction. It has been reiterated by this Court time and again that mere ownership by a single stockholder or by another corporation of all or nearly all of the capital stock of a corporation is not of itself sufficient ground for disregarding the separate corporate personality.74

II. Fraud Test

The corporate veil may be lifted only if it has been used to shield fraud, defend crime, justify a wrong, defeat public convenience, insulate bad faith or perpetuate injustice.75 To aid in the determination of the presence or absence of fraud, the following factors in the "Totality of Circumstances Test"76 may be considered, viz:

1) Commingling of funds and other assets of the corporation with those of the individual shareholders;
2) Diversion of the corporation's funds or assets to non-corporate uses (to the personal uses of the corporation's shareholders);
3) Failure to maintain the corporate formalities necessary for the issuance of or subscription to the corporation's stock, such as formal approval of the stock issue by the board of directors;
4) An individual shareholder representing to persons outside the corporation that he or she is personally liable for the debts or other obligations of the corporation;
5) Failure to maintain corporate minutes or adequate corporate records;
6) Identical equitable ownership in two entities;
7) Identity of the directors and officers of two entities who are responsible for supervision and management (a partnership or sole proprietorship and a corporation owned and managed by the same parties);
8) Failure to adequately capitalize a corporation for the reasonable risks of the corporate undertaking;
9) Absence of separately held corporate assets;
10) Use of a corporation as a mere shell or conduit to operate a single venture or some particular aspect of the business of an individual or another corporation;
11) Sole ownership of all the stock by one individual or members of a single family;
12) Use of the same office or business location by the corporation and its individual shareholder(s);
13) Employment of the same employees or attorney by the corporation and its shareholder(s);
14) Concealment or misrepresentation of the identity of the ownership, management or financial interests in the corporation, and concealment of personal business activities of the shareholders (sole shareholders do not reveal the association with a corporation, which makes loans to them without adequate security);
15) Disregard of legal formalities and failure to maintain proper arm's length relationships among related entities;
16) Use of a corporate entity as a conduit to procure labor, services or merchandise for another person or entity;

17) Diversion of corporate assets from the corporation by or to a stockholder or other person or entity to the detriment of creditors, or the manipulation of assets and liabilities between entities to concentrate the assets in one and the liabilities in another;
18) Contracting by the corporation with another person with the intent to avoid the risk of nonperformance by use of the corporate entity; or the use of a corporation as a subterfuge for illegal transactions; and
19) The formation and use of the corporation to assume the existing liabilities of another person or entity.

Aside from the aforementioned circumstances, it must be determined whether the transfer of assets from Maricalum Mining to G Holdings is enough to invoke the equitable remedy of piercing the corporate veil. The same issue was resolved in Y-I Leisure Phils., Inc., et al. v. Yu where this Court applied the "Nell Doctrine" regarding the transfer of all the assets of one corporation to another. It was discussed in that case that as a general rule that where one corporation sells or otherwise transfers all of its assets to another corporation, the latter is not liable for the debts and liabilities of the transferor, except:

1) Where the purchaser expressly or impliedly agrees to assume such debts;
2) Where the transaction amounts to a consolidation or merger of the corporations;
3) Where the purchasing corporation is merely a continuation of the selling corporation; and
4) Where the transaction is entered into fraudulently in order to escape liability for such debts.

If any of the above-cited exceptions are present, then the transferee corporation shall assume the liabilities of the transferor.

In this case, G Holdings cannot be held liable for the satisfaction of labor-related claims against Maricalum Mining under the fraud test for the following reasons:

First, the transfer of some Maricalum Mining's assets in favor G Holdings was by virtue of the PSA as part of an official measure to dispose of the government's non-performing assets-not to evade its monetary obligations to the complainants. Even before complainants' monetary claims supposedly existed in 2007, some of Maricalum Mining's assets had already been validly extrajudicially foreclosed and eventually sold to G Holdings in 2001. Thus, G Holdings could not have devised a scheme to avoid a non-existent obligation. No fraud could be attributed to G Holdings because the transfer of assets was pursuant to a previously perfected valid contract.

Settled is the rule that where one corporation sells or otherwise transfers all its assets to another corporation for value, the latter is not, by that fact alone, liable for the debts and liabilities of the transferor. In other words, control or ownership of substantially all of a subsidiary's assets is not by itself an indication of a holding company's fraudulent intent to alienate these assets in evading labor-related claims or liabilities. As discussed earlier, the PSA was not designed to evade the monetary claims of the complainants. Although there was proof that G Holdings has an office in Maricalum Mining's premises and that that some of their assets have been commingled due to the PSA's unavoidable consequences, there was no fraudulent diversion of corporate assets to another corporation for the sole purpose of evading complainants' claim.

Besides, it is evident that the alleged continuing depletion of Maricalum Mining's assets is due to its disgruntled employees' own acts of pilferage, which was beyond the control of G Holdings. More so, complainants also failed to present any clear and convincing evidence that G Holdings was grossly negligent and failed to exercise the required degree of diligence in ensuring that Maricalum Mining's assets would be protected from pilferage. Hence, no fraud can be imputed against G Holdings considering that there is no evidence in the records that establishes it systematically tried to alienate Maricalum Mining's assets to escape the liabilities to complainants.

Second, it was not proven that all of Maricalum Mining's assets were transferred to G Holdings or were totally depleted. Complainants never offered any evidence to establish that Maricalum Mining had absolutely no substantial assets to cover for their monetary claims. Their allegation that their claims will be reduced to a mere "paper victory" has not confirmed with concrete proof. At the very least, substantial evidence should be adduced that the subsidiary company's "net realizable value"82 of "current assets" and "fair value" of "non-current assets" are collectively insufficient to cover the whole amount of its liability subject in the instant litigation.

Third, G Holdings purchased Maricalum Mining's shares from the APT not for the purpose of continuing the latter's existence and operations but for the purpose of investing in the mining industry without having to directly engage in the management and operation of mining. As discussed earlier, a holding company's primary business is merely to invest in the equity of another corporation for the purpose of earning from the latter's endeavors. It generally does not undertake to engage in the daily operating activities of its subsidiaries that, in turn, have their own separate sets of directors and officers. Thus, there should be proof that a holding company had indeed fraudulently used the separate corporate personality of its subsidiary to evade an obligation before it can be held liable. Since G Holdings is a holding company, the corporate veil of its subsidiaries may only be pierced based on fraud or gross negligence amounting to bad faith.

Lastly, no clear and convincing evidence was presented by the complainants to conclusively prove the presence of fraud on the part of G Holdings. Although the quantum of evidence needed to establish a claim for illegal dismissal in labor cases is substantial evidence, the quantum need to establish the presence of fraud is clear and convincing evidence. Thus, to disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrongdoing must be established clearly and convincingly-it cannot be presumed.

Here, the complainants did not satisfy the requisite quantum of evidence to prove fraud on the part of G Holdings. They merely offered allegations and suppositions that, since Maricalum Mining's assets appear to be continuously depleting and that the same corporation is a subsidiary, G Holdings could have been guilty of fraud. As emphasized earlier, bare allegations do not prove anything. There must be proof that fraud-not the inevitable effects of a previously executed and valid contract such as the PSA-was the cause of the latter's total asset depletion. To be clear, the presence of control per se is not enough to justify the piercing of the corporate veil.

III. Harm or Casual Connection Test

In WPM International Trading, Inc., et al. v. Labayen, the Court laid down the criteria for the harm or casual connection test, to wit:

In this connection, we stress that the control necessary to invoke the instrumentality or alter ego rule is not majority or even complete stock control but such domination of finances, policies and practices that the controlled corporation has, so to speak, no separate mind, will or existence of its own, and is but a conduit for its principal. The control must be shown to have been exercised at the time the acts complained of took place. Moreover, the control and breach of duty must proximatelv cause the injury or unjust loss for which the complaint is made.

Proximate cause is defined as that cause, which, in natural and continuous sequence, unbroken by any efficient intervening cause, produces the injury, and without which the result would not have occurred.90 More comprehensively, the proximate legal cause is that "acting first and producing the injury, either immediately or by setting other events in motion, all constituting a natural and continuous chain of events, each having a close causal connection with its immediate predecessor, the final event in the chain immediately effecting the injury as a natural and probable result of the cause which first acted, under such circumstances that the person responsible for the first event should, as an ordinary prudent and intelligent person, have reasonable ground to expect at the moment of his act or default that an injury to some person might probably result therefrom."91 Hence, for an act or event to be considered as proximate legal cause, it should be shown that such act or event had indeed caused injury to another.

In the case at bench, complainants have not yet even suffered any monetary injury. They have yet to enforce their claims against Maricalum Mining. It is apparent that complainants are merely anxious that their monetary awards will not be satisfied because the assets of Maricalum Mining were allegedly transferred surreptitiously to G Holdings. However, as discussed earlier, since complainants failed to show that G Holdings's mere exercise of control had a clear hand in the depletion of Maricalum Mining's assets, no proximate cause was successfully established. The transfer of assets was pursuant to a valid and legal PSA between G Holdings and APT.

Accordingly, complainants failed to satisfy the second and third tests to justify the application of the alter ego theory. This inevitably shows that the CA committed no reversible error in upholding the NLRC's Decision declaring Maricalum Mining as the proper party liable to pay the monetary awards in favor of complainants.

A. TEST IN DETERMINING APPLICABILITY

HEIRS OF FE TAN UY (Represented by her heir, Mauling Uy Lim), Petitioners, -versus- INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGE BANK, Respondent
G.R. No. 166282, THIRD DIVISION, FEBRUARY 13, 2013, MENDOZA, J.

Any application of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil should be done with caution. A court should be mindful of the milieu where it is to be applied. It must be certain that the corporate fiction was misused to such an extent that injustice, fraud, or crime was committed against another, in disregard of its rights. The wrongdoing must be clearly and convincingly established; it cannot be presumed. Otherwise, an injustice that was never unintended may result from an erroneous application.

Indeed, there is no showing that Uy committed gross negligence. And in the absence of any of the aforementioned requisites for making a corporate officer, director or stockholder personally liable for the obligations of a corporation, Uy, as a treasurer and stockholder of Hammer, cannot be made to answer for the unpaid debts of the corporation.

FACTS:
On several occasions, from June 23, 1997 to September 3, 1997, respondent International Exchange Bank (iBank), granted loans to Hammer Garments Corporation (Hammer), covered by promissory notes and deeds of assignment.

These were made pursuant to the Letter-Agreementd between iBank and Hammer, represented by its President and General Manager, Manuel Chua (Chua) a.k.a. Manuel Chua Uy Po Tiong, granting Hammer a P 25 Million-Peso Omnibus Line. The loans were secured by a P 9 Million-Peso Real Estate Mortgage by Goldkey Development Corporation (Goldkey) over several of its properties and a P 25 Million-Peso Surety Agreement signed by Chua and his wife, Fe Tan Uy (Uy).

Hammer defaulted in the payment of its loans, prompting iBank to foreclose on Goldkey's third-party Real Estate Mortgage.

For failure of Hammer to pay the deficiency, iBank filed a Complaint for sum of money against Hammer, Chua, Uy, and Goldkey

Despite service of summons, Chua and Hammer did not file their respective answers and were declared in default. In her separate answer, Uy claimed that she was not liable to iBank because she never executed a surety agreement in favor of iBank. Goldkey, on the other hand, also denies liability, averring that it acted only as a third-party mortgagor and that it was a corporation separate and distinct from Hammer.

Meanwhile, iBank applied for the issuance of a writ of preliminary attachment which was granted by the RTC.The Notice of Levy on Attachment of Real Properties, dated July 15, 1998, covering the properties under the name of Goldkey, was sent by the sheriff to the Registry of Deeds of Quezon City. The RTC ruled in favor of iBank. While it made the pronouncement that the signature of Uy on the Surety Agreement was a forgery, it nevertheless held her liable for the outstanding obligation of Hammer because she was an officer and stockholder of the said corporation. The RTC agreed with Goldkey that as a third-party mortgagor, its liability was limited to the properties mortgaged. It came to the conclusion, however, that Goldkey and Hammer were one and the same entity for the following reasons: (1) both were family corporations of Chua and Uy, with Chua as the President and Chief Operating Officer; (2) both corporations shared the same office and transacted business from the same place, (3) the assets of Hammer and Goldkey were co-mingled; and (4) when Chua absconded, both Hammer and Goldkey ceased to operate. As such, the piercing of the veil of corporate fiction was warranted. Uy, as an officer and stockholder of Hammer and Goldkey, was found liable to iBank together with Chua, Hammer and Goldkey for the deficiency of ₱13,420,177.

Aggrieved, the heirs of Uy and Goldkey (petitioners) elevated the case to the CA. On August 16, 2004, it promulgated its decision affirming the findings of the RTC.

Hence, these petitions filed separately by the heirs of Uy and Goldkey.

ISSUES:

(1) Whether Uy is liable (NO)
(2) Whether GoldKey is a mere alter ego (YES)

RULING:

(1)
Basic is the rule in corporation law that a corporation is a juridical entity which is vested with a legal personality separate and distinct from those acting for and in its behalf and, in general, from the people comprising it. Following this principle, obligations incurred by the corporation, acting through its directors, officers and employees, are its sole liabilities. A director, officer or employee of a corporation is generally not held personally liable for obligations incurred by the corporation. Nevertheless, this legal fiction may be disregarded if it is used as a means to perpetrate fraud or an illegal act, or as a vehicle for the evasion of an existing obligation, the circumvention of statutes, or to confuse legitimate issues.

Before a director or officer of a corporation can be held personally liable for corporate obligations, however, the following requisites must concur: (1) the complainant must allege in the complaint that the director or officer assented to patently unlawful acts of the corporation, or that the officer was guilty of gross negligence or bad faith; and (2) the complainant must clearly and convincingly prove such unlawful acts, negligence or bad faith.

While it is true that the determination of the existence of any of the circumstances that would warrant the piercing of the veil of corporate fiction is a question of fact which cannot be the subject of a petition for review on certiorari under Rule 45, this Court can take cognizance of factual issues if the findings of the lower court are not supported by the evidence on record or are based on a misapprehension of facts.

In this case, petitioners are correct to argue that it was not alleged, much less proven, that Uy committed an act as an officer of Hammer that would permit the piercing of the corporate veil. A reading of the complaint reveals that with regard to Uy, iBank did not demand that she be held liable for the obligations of Hammer because she was a corporate officer who committed bad faith or gross negligence in the performance of her duties such that the lifting of the corporate mask would be merited. What the complaint simply stated is that she, together with her errant husband Chua, acted as surety of Hammer, as evidenced by her signature on the Surety Agreement which was later found by the RTC to have been forged.

Considering that the only basis for holding Uy liable for the payment of the loan was proven to be a falsified document, there was no sufficient justification for the RTC to have ruled that Uy should be held jointly and severally liable to iBank for the unpaid loan of Hammer. Neither did the CA explain its affirmation of the RTC's ruling against Uy. The Court cannot give credence to the simplistic declaration of the RTC that liability would attach directly to Uy for the sole reason that she was an officer and stockholder of Hammer.

At most, Uy could have been charged with negligence in the performance of her duties as treasurer of Hammer by allowing the company to contract a loan despite its precarious financial position. Furthermore, if it was true, as petitioners claim, that she no longer performed the functions of a treasurer, then she should have formally resigned as treasurer to isolate herself from any liability that could result from her being an officer of the corporation. Nonetheless, these shortcomings of Uy are not sufficient to justify the piercing of the corporate veil which requires that the negligence of the officer must be so gross that it could amount to bad faith and must be established by clear and convincing evidence. Gross negligence is one that is characterized by the lack of the slightest care, acting or failing to act in a situation where there is a duty to act, wilfully and intentionally with a conscious indifference to the consequences insofar as other persons may be affected.

It behooves this Court to emphasize that the piercing of the veil of corporate fiction is frowned upon and can only be done if it has been clearly established that the separate and distinct personality of the corporation is used to justify a wrong, protect fraud, or perpetrate a deception. As aptly explained in Philippine National Bank v. Andrada Electric & Engineering Company:

Hence, any application of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil should be done with caution. A court should be mindful of the milieu where it is to be applied. It must be certain that the corporate fiction was misused to such an extent that injustice, fraud, or crime was committed against another, in disregard of its rights. The wrongdoing must be clearly and convincingly established; it cannot be presumed. Otherwise, an injustice that was never unintended may result from an erroneous application.

Indeed, there is no showing that Uy committed gross negligence. And in the absence of any of the aforementioned requisites for making a corporate officer, director or stockholder personally liable for the obligations of a corporation, Uy, as a treasurer and stockholder of Hammer, cannot be made to answer for the unpaid debts of the corporation.

(2)
There is no reason to discount the findings of the CA that iBank duly inspected the viability of Hammer and satisfied itself that the latter was a good credit risk based on the Financial Statement submitted. In addition, iBank required that the loan be secured by Goldkey's Real Estate Mortgage and the Surety Agreement with Chua and Uy. The records support the factual conclusions made by the RTC and the CA.

To the Court's mind, Goldkey's argument, that iBank is barred from pursuing Goldkey for the satisfaction of the unpaid obligation of Hammer because it had already limited its liability to the real estate mortgage, is completely absurd. Goldkey needs to be reminded that it is being sued not as a consequence of the real estate mortgage, but rather, because it acted as an alter ego of Hammer. Accordingly, they must be treated as one and the same entity, making Goldkey accountable for the debts of Hammer.

In fact, it is Goldkey who is now precluded from denying the validity of the Real Estate Mortgage. In its Answer with Affirmative Defenses and Compulsory Counterclaim, dated January 5, 1998, it already admitted that it acted as a third-party mortgagor to secure the obligation of Hammer to iBank. Thus, it cannot, at this late stage, question the due execution of the third-party mortgage.

Similarly, Goldkey is undoubtedly mistaken in claiming that iBank is seeking to enforce an obligation of Chua. The records clearly show that it was Hammer, of which Chua was the president and a stockholder, which contracted a loan from iBank. What iBank sought was redress from Goldkey by demanding that the veil of corporate fiction be lifted so that it could not raise the defense of having a separate juridical personality to evade liability for the obligations of Hammer.

Under a variation of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction, when two business enterprises are owned, conducted and controlled by the same parties, both law and equity will, when necessary to protect the rights of third parties, disregard the legal fiction that two corporations are distinct entities and treat them as identical or one and the same.

While the conditions for the disregard of the juridical entity may vary, the following are some probative factors of identity that will justify the application of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil, as laid down in Concept Builders, Inc. v NLRC:

(1) Stock ownership by one or common ownership of both corporations;
(2) Identity of directors and officers;
(3) The manner of keeping corporate books and records, and
(4) Methods of conducting the business.

These factors are unquestionably present in the case of Goldkey and Hammer, as observed by the RTC, as follows:

1. Both corporations are family corporations of defendants Manuel Chua and his wife Fe Tan Uy. The other incorporators and shareholders of the two corporations are the brother and sister of Manuel Chua (Benito Ng Po Hing and Nenita Chua Tan) and the sister of Fe Tan Uy, Milagros Revilla. The other incorporator/share holder is Manling Uy, the daughter of Manuel Chua Uy Po Tiong and Fe Tan Uy.

The stockholders of Hammer Garments as of March 23, 1987, aside from spouses Manuel and Fe Tan Uy are: Benito Chua, brother Manuel Chua, Nenita Chua Tan, sister of Manuel Chua and Tessie See Chua Tan. On March 8, 1988, the shares of Tessie See Chua Uy were assigned to Milagros T. Revilla, thereby consolidating the shares in the family of Manuel Chua and Fe Tan Uy.

2. Hammer Garments and Goldkey share the same office and practically transact their business from the same place.

3. Defendant Manuel Chua is the President and Chief Operating Officer of both corporations. All business transactions of Goldkey and Hammer are done at the instance of defendant Manuel Chua who is authorized to do so by the corporations.

The promissory notes subject of this complaint are signed by him as Hammer's President and General Manager. The third-party real estate mortgage of defendant Goldkey is signed by him for Goldkey to secure the loan obligation of Hammer Garments with plaintiff "iBank". The other third-party real estate mortgages which Goldkey executed in favor of the other creditor banks of Hammer are also assigned by Manuel Chua.

4. The assets of Goldkey and Hammer are co-mingled. The real properties of Goldkey are mortgaged to secure Hammer's obligation with creditor banks.

The proceed of at least two loans which Hammer obtained from plaintiff "iBank", purportedly to finance its export to Wal-Mart are instead used to finance the purchase of a manager's check payable to Goldkey. The defendants' claim that Goldkey is a creditor of Hammer to justify its receipt of the Manager's check is not substantiated by evidence. Despite subpoenas issued by this Court, Goldkey thru its treasurer, defendant Fe Tan Uy and or its corporate secretary Manling Uy failed to produce the Financial Statement of Goldkey.

5. When defendant Manuel Chua "disappeared", the defendant Goldkey ceased to operate despite the claim that the other "officers" and stockholders like Benito Chua, Nenita Chua Tan, Fe Tan Uy, Manling Uy and Milagros T. Revilla are still around and may be able to continue the business of Goldkey, if it were different or distinct from Hammer which suffered financial set back.

Based on the foregoing findings of the RTC, it was apparent that Goldkey was merely an adjunct of Hammer and, as such, the legal fiction that it has a separate personality from that of Hammer should be brushed aside as they are, undeniably, one and the same.

PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK, Petitioner, -versus- HYDRO RESOURCES CONTRACTORS CORPORATION, Respondent

GR No. 167530, FIRST DIVISION, MARCH 13, 2013, DE CASTRO, J.

In applying the alter ego doctrine, the courts are concerned with reality and not form, with how the corporation operated and the individual defendant's relationship to that operation. With respect to the control element, it refers not to paper or formal control by majority or even complete stock control but actual control which amounts to "such domination of finances, policies and practices that the controlled corporation has, so to speak, no separate mind, will or existence of its own, and is but a conduit for its principal." In addition, the control must be shown to have been exercised at the time the acts complained of took place.

Both the RTC and the Court of Appeals applied the alter ego theory and penetrated the corporate cover of NMIC based on two factors: (1) the ownership by DBP and PNB of effectively all the stocks of NMIC, and (2) the alleged interlocking directorates of DBP, PNB and NMIC. Unfortunately, the conclusion of the trial and appellate courts that the DBP and PNB fit the alter ego theory with respect to NMIC's transaction with HRCC on the premise of complete stock ownership and interlocking directorates involved a quantum leap in logic and law exposing a gap in reason and fact.

While ownership by one corporation of all or a great majority of stocks of another corporation and their interlocking directorates may serve as indicia of control, by themselves and without more, however, these circumstances are insufficient to establish an alter ego relationship or connection between DBP and PNB on the one hand and NMIC on the other hand, that will justify the puncturing of the latter's corporate cover.

FACTS:

Sometime in 1984, petitioners DBP and PNB foreclosed on certain mortgages made on the properties of Marinduque Mining and Industrial Corporation (MMIC). As a result of the foreclosure, DBP and PNB acquired substantially all the assets of MMIC and resumed the business operations of the defunct MMIC by organizing NMIC. DBP and PNB owned 57% and 43% of the shares of NMIC, respectively, except for five qualifying shares. As of September 1984, the members of the Board of Directors of NMIC, namely, Jose Tengco, Jr., Rolando Zosa, Ruben Ancheta, Geraldo Agulto, and Faustino Agbada, were either from DBP or PNB.

Subsequently, NMIC engaged the services of Hercon, Inc., for NMIC's Mine Stripping and Road Construction Program in 1985 for a total contract price of P35,770,120. After computing the payments already made by NMIC under the program and crediting the NMIC's receivables from Hercon, Inc., the latter found that NMIC still has an unpaid balance of P8,370,934.74.[10] Hercon, Inc. made several demands on NMIC, including a letter of final demand dated August 12, 1986, and when these were not heeded, a complaint for sum of money was filed in the RTC of Makati, Branch 136 seeking to hold petitioners NMIC, DBP, and PNB solidarily liable for the amount owing Hercon, Inc. The case was docketed as Civil Case No. 15375.

Here, HRCC has alleged from the inception of this case that DBP and PNB (and the APT as assignee of DBP and PNB) should be held solidarily liable for using NMIC as alter ego. The RTC sustained the allegation of HRCC and pierced the corporate veil of NMIC pursuant to the alter ego theory when it concluded that NMIC "is a mere adjunct, business conduit or alter ego of both DBP and PNB." The Court of Appeals upheld such conclusion of the trial court. In other words, both the trial and appellate courts relied on the alter ego theory when they disregarded the separate corporate personality of NMIC.

ISSUE:

Whether the alter ego theory is applicable (NO).

RULING:

In this connection, case law lays down a three-pronged test to determine the application of the alter ego theory, which is also known as the instrumentality theory, namely:
(1) Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;

(2) Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of plaintiff's legal right; and

(3) The aforesaid control and breach of duty must have proximately caused the injury or unjust loss complained of.

To summarize, piercing the corporate veil based on the alter ego theory requires the concurrence of three elements: control of the corporation by the stockholder or parent corporation, fraud or fundamental unfairness imposed on the plaintiff, and harm or damage caused to the plaintiff by the fraudulent or unfair act of the corporation. The absence of any of these elements prevents piercing the corporate veil.

This Court finds that none of the tests has been satisfactorily met in this case.

In applying the alter ego doctrine, the courts are concerned with reality and not form, with how the corporation operated and the individual defendant's relationship to that operation. With respect to the control element, it refers not to paper or formal control by majority or even complete stock control but actual control which amounts to "such domination of finances, policies and practices that the controlled corporation has, so to speak, no separate mind, will or existence of its own, and is but a conduit for its principal." In addition, the control must be shown to have been exercised at the time the acts complained of took place.

Both the RTC and the Court of Appeals applied the alter ego theory and penetrated the corporate cover of NMIC based on two factors: (1) the ownership by DBP and PNB of effectively all the stocks of NMIC, and (2) the alleged interlocking directorates of DBP, PNB and NMIC. Unfortunately, the conclusion of the trial and appellate courts that the DBP and PNB fit the alter ego theory with respect to NMIC's transaction with HRCC on the premise of complete stock ownership and interlocking directorates involved a quantum leap in logic and law exposing a gap in reason and fact.

While ownership by one corporation of all or a great majority of stocks of another corporation and their interlocking directorates may serve as indicia of control, by themselves and without more, however, these circumstances are insufficient to establish an alter ego relationship or connection between DBP and PNB on the one hand and NMIC on the other hand, that will justify the puncturing of the latter's corporate cover. This Court has declared that "mere ownership by a single stockholder or by another corporation of all or nearly all of the capital stock of a corporation is not of itself sufficient ground for disregarding the separate corporate personality." This Court has likewise ruled that the "existence of interlocking directors, corporate officers and shareholders is not enough justification to pierce the veil of corporate fiction in the absence of fraud or other public policy considerations."

True, the findings of fact of the Court of Appeals are conclusive and cannot be reviewed on appeal to this Court, provided they are borne out of the record or are based on substantial evidence.[68] It is equally true that the question of whether one corporation is merely an alter ego of another is purely one of fact. So is the question of whether a corporation is a paper company, a sham or subterfuge or whether the requisite quantum of evidence has been adduced warranting the piercing of the veil of corporate personality. Nevertheless, it has been held in Sarona v. National Labor Relations Commission that this Court has the power to resolve a question of fact, such as whether a corporation is a mere alter ego of another entity or whether the corporate fiction was invoked for fraudulent or malevolent ends, if the findings in the assailed decision are either not supported by the evidence on record or based on a misapprehension of facts.

In this case, nothing in the records shows that the corporate finances, policies and practices of NMIC were dominated by DBP and PNB in such a way that NMIC could be considered to have no separate mind, will or existence of its own but a mere conduit for DBP and PNB. On the contrary, the evidence establishes that HRCC knew and acted on the knowledge that it was dealing with NMIC, not with NMIC's stockholders. The letter proposal of Hercon, Inc., HRCC's predecessor-in-interest, regarding the contract for NMIC's mine stripping and road construction program was addressed to and accepted by NMIC. The various billing reports, progress reports, statements of accounts and communications of Hercon, Inc./HRCC regarding NMIC's mine stripping and road construction program in 1985 concerned NMIC and NMIC's officers, without any indication of or reference to the control exercised by DBP and/or PNB over NMIC's affairs, policies and practices.

HRCC has presented nothing to show that DBP and PNB had a hand in the act complained of, the alleged undue disregard by NMIC of the demands of HRCC to satisfy the unpaid claims for services rendered by HRCC in connection with NMIC's mine stripping and road construction program in 1985.

On the contrary, the overall picture painted by the evidence offered by HRCC is one where HRCC was dealing with NMIC as a distinct juridical person acting through its own corporate officers.

Moreover, the finding that the respective boards of directors of NMIC, DBP, and PNB were interlocking has no basis. HRCC's Exhibit "I-5,"the initial General Information Sheet submitted by NMIC to the Securities and Exchange Commission, relied upon by the trial court and the Court of Appeals may have proven that DBP and PNB owned the stocks of NMIC to the extent of 57% and 43%, respectively. However, nothing in it supports a finding that NMIC, DBP, and PNB had interlocking directors as it only indicates that, of the five members of NMIC's board of directors, four were nominees of either DBP or PNB and only one was a nominee of both DBP and PNB. Only two members of the board of directors of NMIC, Jose Tengco, Jr. and Rolando Zosa, were established to be members of the board of governors of DBP and none was proved to be a member of the board of directors of PNB. No director of NMIC was shown to be also sitting simultaneously in the board of governors/directors of both DBP and PNB.

In reaching its conclusion of an alter ego relationship between DBP and PNB on the one hand and NMIC on the other hand, the Court of Appeals invoked Sibagat Timber Corporation v. Garcia,which it described as "a case under a similar factual milieu." However, in Sibagat Timber Corporation, this Court took care to enumerate the circumstances which led to the piercing of the corporate veil of Sibagat Timber Corporation for being the alter ego of Del Rosario & Sons Logging Enterprises, Inc. Those circumstances were as follows: holding office in the same building, practical identity of the officers and directors of the two corporations and assumption of management and control of Sibagat Timber Corporation by the directors/officers of Del Rosario & Sons Logging Enterprises, Inc.

Here, DBP and PNB maintain an address different from that of NMIC. As already discussed, there was insufficient proof of interlocking directorates. There was not even an allegation of similarity of corporate officers. Instead of evidence that DBP and PNB assumed and controlled the management of NMIC, HRCC's evidence shows that NMIC operated as a distinct entity endowed with its own legal personality. Thus, what obtains in this case is a factual backdrop different from, not similar to, Sibagat Timber Corporation.

In relation to the second element, to disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrongdoing or unjust act in contravention of a plaintiff's legal rights must be clearly and convincingly established; it cannot be presumed. Without a demonstration that any of the evils sought to be prevented by the doctrine is present, it does not apply.

In this case, the Court of Appeals declared:

We are not saying that PNB and DBP are guilty of fraud in forming [NMIC], nor are we implying that [NMIC] was used to conceal fraud. x x x.

Such a declaration clearly negates the possibility that DBP and PNB exercised control over NMIC which DBP and PNB used "to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of plaintiff's legal rights." It is a recognition that, even assuming that DBP and PNB exercised control over NMIC, there is no evidence that the juridical personality of NMIC was used by DBP and PNB to commit a fraud or to do a wrong against HRCC.

There being a total absence of evidence pointing to a fraudulent, illegal or unfair act committed against HRCC by DBP and PNB under the guise of NMIC, there is no basis to hold that NMIC was a mere alter ego of DBP and PNB. As this Court ruled in Ramoso v. Court of Appeals:

As a general rule, a corporation will be looked upon as a legal entity, unless and until sufficient reason to the contrary appears. When the notion of legal entity is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud, or defend crime, the law will regard the corporation as an association of persons. Also, the corporate entity may be disregarded in the interest of justice in such cases as fraud that may work inequities among members of the corporation internally, involving no rights of the public or third persons. In both instances, there must have been fraud, and proof of it. For the separate juridical personality of a corporation to be disregarded, the wrongdoing must be clearly and convincingly established. It cannot be presumed.

As regards the third element, in the absence of both control by DBP and PNB of NMIC and fraud or fundamental unfairness perpetuated by DBP and PNB through the corporate cover of NMIC, no harm could be said to have been proximately caused by DBP and PNB on HRCC for which HRCC could hold DBP and PNB solidarily liable with NMIC.

Considering that, under the deeds of transfer executed by DBP and PNB, the liability of the APT as transferee of the rights, titles and interests of DBP and PNB in NMIC will attach only if DBP and PNB are held liable, the APT incurs no liability for the judgment indebtedness of NMIC. Even HRCC recognizes that "as assignee of DBP and PNB's loan receivables," the APT simply "stepped into the shoes of DBP and PNB with respect to the latter's rights and obligations" in NMIC. As such assignee, therefore, the APT incurs no liability with respect to NMIC other than whatever liabilities may be imputable to its assignors, DBP and PNB.

Even under Section 2.02 of the respective deeds of transfer executed by DBP and PNB which HRCC invokes, the APT cannot be held liable. The contingent liability for which the National Government, through the APT, may be held liable under the said provision refers to contingent liabilities of DBP and PNB. Since DBP and PNB may not be held solidarily liable with NMIC, no contingent liability may be imputed to the APT as well. Only NMIC as a distinct and separate legal entity is liable to pay its corporate obligation to HRCC in the amount of P8,370,934.74, with legal interest thereon from date of demand.

CALIFORNIA MANUFACTURING COMPANY, INC., Petitioner, -versus - ADVANCED TECHNOLOGY SYSTEM, INC., Respondent
G.R. No. 202454, FIRST DIVISION, APRIL 25, 2017, SERENO, C.J.,

CMCI 's alter ego theory rests on the alleged interlocking boards of directors and stock ownership of the two corporations. The CA, however, rejected this theory based on the settled rule that mere ownership by a single stockholder of even all or nearly all of the capital stocks of a corporation, by itself, is not sufficient ground to disregard the corporate veil. We can only sustain the CA's ruling. The instrumentality or control test of the alter ego doctrine requires not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination of finances, policy and business practice with respect to the transaction in question. The corporate entity must be shown to have no separate mind, will, or existence of its own at the time of the transaction.

Without question, the Spouses Celones are incorporators, directors, and majority stockholders of the ATSI and PPPC. But that is all that CMCI has proven. There is no proof that PPPC controlled the financial policies and business practices of ATSI either in July 2001 when Felicisima proposed to set off the unpaid ₱3.2 million mobilization fund with CMCI's rental of Prodopak machines; or in August 2001 when the lease agreement between CMCI and ATSI commenced. Assuming arguendo that Felicisima was sufficiently clothed with authority to propose the offsetting of obligations, her proposal cannot bind ATSI because at that time the latter had no transaction yet with CMCI. Besides, CMCI had leased only one Prodopak machine. Felicisima's reference to the Prodopak machines in its letter in July 2001 could only mean that those were different from the Prodopak machine that CMCI had leased from A TSI.

FACTS:

CMCI leased from ATSI a Prodopak machine which was used to pack products in 20-ml. pouches. Upon receipt of an open purchase order on 6 August 2001, ATSI delivered the machine to CMCI's plant at Gateway Industrial Park, General Trias, Cavite on 8 August 2001.

In November 2003, ATSI filed a Complaint for Sum of Money against CMCI to collect unpaid rentals for the months of June, July, August, and September 2003. ATSI alleged that CMCI was consistently paying the rents until June 2003 when the latter defaulted on its obligation without just cause.

CMCI moved for the dismissal of the complaint on the ground of extinguishment of obligation through legal compensation. The RTC, however, ruled that the conflicting claims of the parties required trial on the merits. It therefore dismissed the motion to dismiss and directed CMCI to file an Answer.

In its Answer, CMCI averred that ATSI was one and the same with Processing Partners and Packaging Corporation (PPPC), which was a toll packer of CMCI products. To support its allegation, CMCI submitted copies of the Articles of Incorporation and General Information Sheets (GIS) of the two corporations. CMCI pointed out that ATSI was even a stockholder of PPPC as shown in the latter's GIS.

CMCI alleged that in 2000, PPPC agreed to transfer the processing of CMCI's product line from its factory in Meycauayan to Malolos, Bulacan. Upon the request of PPPC, through its Executive Vice President Felicisima Celones, CMCI advanced ₱4 million as mobilization fund. PPPC President and Chief Executive Officer Francis Celones allegedly committed to pay the amount in 12 equal instalments deductible from PPPC's monthly invoice to CMCI beginning in October 2000. 11 CMCI likewise claims that in a letter dated 30 July 2001, Felicisima proposed to set off PPPC's obligation to pay the mobilization fund with the rentals for the Prodopak machine.

CMCI argued that the proposal was binding on both PPPC and ATSI because Felicisima was an officer and a majority stockholder of the two corporations. Moreover, in a letter dated 16 September 2003, she allegedly represented to the new management of CMCI that she was authorized to request the offsetting of PPPC's obligation with ATSI's receivable from CMCI. When ATSI filed suit in November 2003, PPPC's debt arising from the mobilization fund allegedly amounted to ₱10,766.272.

After trial, the RTC rendered a Decision in favor of ATSI. CA affirmed the trial court's ruling that legal compensation had not set in because the element of mutuality of parties was lacking.

ISSUE:

Whether PPPC had a separate legal personality from its individual stockholders, the Spouses Celones, and ATSI. (YES)

RULING:

Any piercing of the corporate veil must be done with caution. As the CA had correctly observed, it must be certain that the corporate fiction was misused to such an extent that injustice, fraud, or crime was committed against another, in disregard of rights. Moreover, the wrongdoing must be clearly and convincingly established. Sarona v. NLRC instructs, thus:

Whether the separate personality of the corporation should be pierced hinges on obtaining facts appropriately pleaded or proved. However, any piercing of the corporate veil has to be done with caution, albeit the Court will not hesitate to disregard the corporate veil when it is misused or when necessary in the interest of justice. After all, the concept of corporate entity was not meant to promote unfair objectives.

The doctrine of piercing the corporate veil applies only in three (3) basic areas, namely: 1) defeat of public convenience as when the corporate fiction is used as a vehicle for the evasion of an existing obligation; 2) fraud cases or when the corporate entity is used to justify a wrong, protect fraud, or defend a crime; or 3) alter ego cases, where a corporation is merely a farce since it is a mere alter ego or business conduit of a person, or where the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs are so conducted as to make it merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of another corporation.

CMCI 's alter ego theory rests on the alleged interlocking boards of directors and stock ownership of the two corporations. The CA, however, rejected this theory based on the settled rule that mere ownership by a single stockholder of even all or nearly all of the capital stocks of a corporation, by itself, is not sufficient ground to disregard the corporate veil. We can only sustain the CA's ruling. The instrumentality or control test of the alter ego doctrine requires not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination of finances, policy and business practice with respect to the transaction in question. The corporate entity must be shown to have no separate mind, will, or existence of its own at the time of the transaction.

Without question, the Spouses Celones are incorporators, directors, and majority stockholders of the ATSI and PPPC. But that is all that CMCI has proven. There is no proof that PPPC controlled the financial policies and business practices of ATSI either in July 2001 when Felicisima proposed to set off the unpaid ₱3.2 million mobilization fund with CMCI's rental of Prodopak machines; or in August 2001 when the lease agreement between CMCI and ATSI commenced. Assuming arguendo that Felicisima was sufficiently clothed with authority to propose the offsetting of obligations, her proposal cannot bind ATSI because at that time the latter had no transaction yet with CMCI. Besides, CMCI had leased only one Prodopak machine. Felicisima's reference to the Prodopak machines in its letter in July 2001 could only mean that those were different from the Prodopak machine that CMCI had leased from A TSI.

Contrary to the claim of CMCI, none of the letters from the Spouses Celones tend to show that ATSI was even remotely involved in the proposed offsetting of the outstanding debts of CMCI and PPPC.

Even Felicisima's letter to the new management of CMCI in 2003 contains nothing to support CMCI's argument that Felicisima represented herself to be clothed with authority to propose the offsetting.

n all its pleadings, CMCI averred that the P4 million mobilization fund was in furtherance of its agreement with PPPC in 2000. Prior thereto, PPPC had been a toll packer of its products as early as 1996. Clearly, CMCI had been dealing with PPPC as a distinct juridical person acting through its own corporate officers from 1996 to 2003.

CMCI's dealing with ATSI began only in August 2001. It appears, however, that CMCI now wants the Court to gloss over the separate corporate existence ATSI and PPPC notwithstanding the dearth of evidence showing that either PPPC or ATSI had used their corporate cover to commit fraud or evade their respective obligations to CMCI. It even appears that CMCI faithfully discharged its obligation to ATSI for a good two years without raising any concern about its relationship to PPPC.

The fraud test, which is the second of the three-prong test to determine the application of the alter ego doctrine, requires that the parent corporation's conduct in using the subsidiary corporation be unjust, fraudulent or wrongful. Under the third prong, or the harm test, a causal connection between the fraudulent conduct committed through the instrumentality of the subsidiary and the injury suffered or the damage incurred by the plaintiff has to be established. None of these elements have been demonstrated in this case. Hence, we can only agree with the CA and RTC in ruling out mutuality of parties to justify the application of legal compensation in this case.

LUIS JUAN L. VIRATA and UEMMARA PHILIPPINES CORPORATION (now known as CAVITEXINFRASTRUCTURE CORPORATION), Petitioners, -versus - ALEJANDRO NG WEE, WESTMONT INVESTMENT CORP., ANTHONY T. REYES, SIMEON CUA, VICENTE CUALOPING, HENRY CUALOPING, MARIZA SANTOSTAN, and MANUEL ESTRELLA., Respondents
G.R. Nos. 220926, 221058, 221109, 221135 & 221218, THIRD DIVISION, JULY 5, 2017, VELASCO, JR. J,

Concept Builders, Inc. v. NLRC instructs that as a fundamental principle of corporation law, a corporation is an entity separate and distinct from its stockholders and from other corporations to which it may be connected. But, this separate and distinct personality of a corporation is merely a fiction created by law for convenience and to promote justice. Thus, authorities discuss that when the notion of separate juridical personality is used (1) to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud or defend crime; (2) as a device to defeat the labor laws; or (3) when the corporation is merely an adjunct, a business conduit or an alter ego of another corporation, this separate personality of the corporation may be disregarded or the veil of corporate fiction pierced.

Virata used his control over the Power Merge corporation in order to fulfill his obligation under the Waiver and Quitclaim. Impelled by the desire to settle the outstanding obligations of Hottick under the terms of the settlement agreement, Virata effectively allowed Power Merge to be used as Wincorp's pawn in avoiding its legal duty to pay the investors under the failed investment scheme. Pursuant to the alter ego doctrine, petitioner Virata should then be made liable for his and Power Merge's obligations.

FACTS:

Ng Wee was a valued client of Westmont Bank. Sometime in 1998, he was enticed by the bank manager to make money placements with Westmont Investment Corporation (Wincorp), a domestic corporation organized and licensed to operate as an investment house, and one of the bank's affiliates. Offered to him were "sans recourse" transactions with the following mechanics as summarized by the CA:

x x x A corporate borrower who needs financial assistance or funding to run its business or to serve as working capital is screened by Wincorp. Once it qualifies as an accredited borrower, Wincorp enters into a Credit Line Agreement for a specific amount with the corporation which the latter can draw upon in a series of availments over a period of time. The agreement stipulates that Wincorp shall extend a credit facility on "best effort" basis and that every drawdown by the accredited borrower shall be evidenced by a promissory note executed in favor of Wincorp and/or the investor/s who has/have agreed to extend the credit facility. Wincorp then scouts for investors willing to provide the funds needed by the accredited borrower. The investor is matched with the accredited borrower. An investor who provides the fund is issued a Confirmation Advice which indicates the amount of his investment, the due date, the term, the yield, the maturity and the name of the borrower.

Wincorp issued Ng Wee and his trustees Confirmation Advices informing them of the identity of the borrower with whom they were matched, and the terms under which the said borrower would repay them.

Ng Wee's initial investments were matched with Hottick Holdings Corporation (Hottick), one of Wincorp's accredited borrowers, the majority shares of which was owned by a Malaysian national by the name of Tan Sri Halim Saad (Halim Saad). Halim Saad was then the controlling shareowner of UEM-MARA, which has substantial interests in the Manila Cavite Express Tollway Project (Cavitex).

Hottick was extended a credit facility with a maximum drawdown of ₱l,500,908,026.87 in consideration of the following securities it issued in favor of Wincorp: (1) a Suretyship Agreement executed by herein petitioner Luis Juan Virata (Virata); (2) a Suretyship Agreement executed by YBHG Tan Sri Halim Saad; and (3) a Third Party Real Estate Mortgage executed by National Steel Corporation (NSC). Hottick fully availed of the loan facility extended by Wincorp, but it defaulted in paying its outstanding obligations when the Asian financial crisis struck. As a result, Wincorp filed a collection suit against Hottick, Halim Saad, and NSC for the repayment of the loan and related costs. A Writ of Preliminary Attachment was then issued against Halim Saad's properties, which included the assets of UEM-MARA Philippines Corporation (UEM-MARA). Virata was not impleaded as a party defendant in the case.

To induce the parties to settle, petitioner Virata offered to guarantee the full payment of the loan. Virata was then able to broker a compromise between Wincorp and Halim Saad that paved the way for the execution of a Settlement Agreement dated July 28, 1999. In the Settlement Agreement, Halim Saad agreed to pay USD l,000,000.00 to Wincorp in satisfaction of any and all claims the latter may have against the former under the Surety Agreement that secured Hottick's loan. Thereafter, Wincorp executed a Waiver and Quitclaim in favor of Virata, releasing the latter from any obligation arising from the Memorandum of Agreement.

Alarmed by the news of Hottick's default and financial distress, Ng Wee confronted Wincorp and inquired about the status of his investments. Wincorp assured him that the losses from the Hottick account will be absorbed by the company and that his investments would be transferred instead to a new borrower account. In view of these representations, Ng Wee continued making money placements, rolling over his previous investments in Hottick and even increased his stakes in the new borrower account - Power Merge Corporation (Power Merge).

Incorporated on August 4, 1997, Power Merge is a domestic corporation, the primary purpose of which is to "invest in, purchase, or otherwise acquire and own, hold, use, sell, assign, transfer, mortgage, pledge, exchange or otherwise dispose of real or personal property of every kind and description." Petitioner Virata is the majority stockholder of the corporation, owning 374 ,996 out of its 375, 000 subscribed capital stock.

In a special meeting of Wincorp's board of directors held on February 9, 1999, the investment house resolved to file the collection case against Halim Saad and Hottick, and, on even date, approved Power Merge' s application for a credit line, extending a credit facility to the latter in the maximum amount of ₱l,300,000,000.00. Based on the minutes of the special meeting, board chairman John Anthony B. Espiritu, Wincorp President Antonio T. Ong (Ong), Mariza Santos-Tan (Santos-Tan), Manuel N. Tankiansee (Tankiansee), and petitioners Manuel A. Estrella (Estrella), Simeon Cua, Henry T. Cualoping, and Vicente Cualoping (Cua and the Cualopings) were allegedly in attendance. Thus, on February 15, 1999, Wincorp President Ong and Vice-President for Operations petitioner Anthony Reyes (Reyes) executed a Credit Line Agreement in favor of Power Merge with petitioner Virata's conformity.

Unknown to Ng Wee, however, was that on the very same dates the Credit Line Agreement and its subsequent Amendment were entered into by Wincorp and Power Merge, additional contracts (Side Agreements) were likewise executed by the two corporations absolving Power Merge of liability as regards the Promissory Notes it issued.

In his Complaint, Ng Wee claimed that he fell prey to the intricate scheme of fraud and deceit that was hatched by Wincorp and Power Merge. As he later discovered, Power Merge's default was inevitable from the very start since it only had subscribed capital in the amount of ₱37,500,000.00, of which only ₱9,375,000.00 is actually paid up. He then attributed gross negligence, if not fraud and bad faith, on the part of Wincorp and its directors for approving Power Merge's credit line application and its subsequent increase to the amount of ₱2,500,000,000.00 despite its glaring inability to pay.

As an annex to the Complaint, Ng Wee cited the May 5, 2000 Cease and Desist Order issued by the Prosecution and Enforcement Department of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Data gathered by the SEC showed that, as of December 31, 1999, Wincorp has sourced funds from 2,200 individuals with an average of ₱7,000,000,000.00 worth of commercial papers per month. In its subsequent October 27, 2000 Resolution, the SEC found that the Confirmation Advices that Wincorp had been issuing to its investors takes the form of a security that ought to have been registered before being offered to the public, and that the investment house had also been advancing the payment of interest to the investors to cover up its borrowers' insolvency.

The defendants moved for the dismissal of the case for failure to state a cause of action, among other reasons, moored on the fact that the investments were not recorded in the name of Ng Wee. These motions, however, were denied by the RTC up until the Supreme Court.

In their respective Answers, the Wincorp and Power Merge camps presented opposing defenses. Wincorp admitted that it brokered Power Merge Promissory Notes to investors through "sans recourse" transactions. It contended, however, that its only role was to match an investor with corporate borrowers and, hence, assumed no liability for the monies that Ng Wee loaned to Power Merge.

For their part, the Wincorp directors argued that they can only be held liable under Section 31 of Batas Pambansa Big. (BP) 68, the Corporation Code, if they assented to a patently unlawful act, or are guilty of either gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation. They explained that the provision is inapplicable since the approval of Power Merge's credit line application was done in good faith and that they merely relied on the vetting done by the various departments of the company.

Reyes meanwhile asseverated that the first paragraph of Sec. 31 cannot find application to his case since he is not a director of Wincorp, but its officer. It is his argument that he can only be held liable under the second paragraph of the provision if he is guilty of conflict of interest, which he is not.

On the other hand, petitioners Virata and UEM-MARA harped on the underlying arrangement between Hottick, Power Merge, and Wincorp. Under the framework, Hottick will issue Promissory Notes to Wincorp, which will then transfer the same to Power Merge. In exchange for the transfer, Power Merge will issue its own Promissory Notes to Wincorp. That way, Wincorp will be holding Power Merge papers, instead of Hottick.

ISSUE:

Whether piercing the veil of corporate fiction may be allowed in this case. (YES)

RULING:

Indubitably, Wincorp and Power Merge are liable to Ng Wee for fraud and under contract, respectively. The thrust of majority of the petitioners, however, is that they cannot be held liable for the business judgments of the corporations they are part of given the latter's separate juridical personalities.

G.R. No. 220926: The liabilities of Luis Juan L. Virata and UEM-MARA

a. Virata is liable for the obligations of Power Merge
Petitioner Virata reiterates his claim that piercing the corporate veil of Power Merge for the sole reason that he owns majority of its shares is improper. He adds that the Credit Line Agreements and Side Agreements were valid arm's length transactions, and that their executions were in the performance of his official capacity, which he cannot be made personally liable for in the absence of fraud, bad faith, or gross negligence on his part.

The Court rejects these arguments. Concept Builders, Inc. v. NLRC instructs that as a fundamental principle of corporation law, a corporation is an entity separate and distinct from its stockholders and from other corporations to which it may be connected. But, this separate and distinct personality of a corporation is merely a fiction created by law for convenience and to promote justice. Thus, authorities discuss that when the notion of separate juridical personality is used (1) to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud or defend crime; (2) as a device to defeat the labor laws; or (3) when the corporation is merely an adjunct, a business conduit or an alter ego of another corporation, this separate personality of the corporation may be disregarded or the veil of corporate fiction pierced.

The circumstances of Power Merge clearly present an alter ego case that warrants the piercing of the corporate veil. To elucidate, case law lays down a three-pronged test to determine the application of the alter-ego theory, namely:

(1) Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy and business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;
(2) Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of plaintiffs legal right; and
(3) The aforesaid control and breach of duty must have proximately caused the injury or unjust loss complained of.

In the present case, Virata not only owned majority of the Power Merge shares; he exercised complete control thereof. He is not only the company president, he also owns 374,996 out of 375,000 of its subscribed capital stock. Meanwhile, the remainder was left for the nominal incorporators of the business. The reported address of petitioner Virata and the principal office of Power Merge are even one and the same. The clearest indication of all: Power Merge never operated to perform its business functions, but for the benefit of Virata. Specifically, it was merely created to fulfill his obligations under the Waiver and Quitclaim, the same obligations for his release from liability arising from Hottick's default and non-payment.

Virata would later on use his control over the Power Merge corporation in order to fulfill his obligation under the Waiver and Quitclaim. Impelled by the desire to settle the outstanding obligations of Hottick under the terms of the settlement agreement, Virata effectively allowed Power Merge to be used as Wincorp's pawn in avoiding its legal duty to pay the investors under the failed investment scheme. Pursuant to the alter ego doctrine, petitioner Virata should then be made liable for his and Power Merge's obligations.

b. UEM-MARA cannot be held liable
There is, however, merit in the argument that UEM-MARA cannot be held liable to respondent Ng Wee. The RIC and the CA held that the corporation ought to be held solidarily liable with the other petitioners "in order that justice can reach the illegal proceeds from the defrauded investments of [Ng Wee] under the Power Merge account." According to the trial court, Virata laundered the proceeds of the Power Merge borrowings and stashed them in UEM-MARA to prevent detection and discovery and hence, UEM-MARA should likewise be held solidarily liable.

We disagree.

UEM-MARA is an entity distinct and separate from Power Merge, and it was not established that it was guilty in perpetrating fraud against the investors. It was a non-party to the "sans recourse" transactions, the Credit Line Agreement, the Side Agreements, the Promissory Notes, the Confirmation Advices, and to the other transactions that involved Wincorp, Power Merge, and Ng Wee. There is then no reason to involve UEM-MARA in the fray. Otherwise stated, respondent Ng Wee has no cause of action against UEM-MARA. UEM-MARA should not have been impleaded in this case.

A cause of action is the act or omission by which a party violates a right of another. The essential elements of a cause of action are (1) a right in favor of the plaintiff by whatever means and under whatever law it arises or is created; (2) an obligation on the part of the named defendant to respect or not to violate such right; and (3) an act or omission on the part of such defendant in violation of the right of the plaintiff or constituting a breach of the obligation of the defendant to the plaintiff for which the latter may maintain an action for recovery of damages or other appropriate relief.

The third requisite is severely lacking in this case. Respondent Ng Wee cannot point to a specific wrong committed by UEM-MARA against him in relation to his investments in Wincorp, other than being the object of Wincorp's desires. He merely alleged that the proceeds of the Power Merge loan was used by Virata in order to acquire interests in DEM-MARA, but this does not, however, constitute a valid cause of action against the company even if we were to assume the allegation to be true. It would indeed be a giant leap in logic to say that being Wincorp' s objective automatically makes UEM-MARA a party to the fraud. DEM-Mara's involvement in this case is merely incidental, not direct.

VETERANS FEDERATION OF THE PHILIPPINES, Petitioner, -versus - EDUARDO L. MONTENEJO, MYLENE M. BONIFACIO, EVANGELINE E. VALVERDE, DEANA N. PAGAL, and VFP MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, Respondents
G.R. No. 184819, THIRD DIVISION, NOVEMBER 29, 2017, VELASCO, JR., J.

Relative to the Concept Builders test are the ff. critical ruminations from Rufina Luy Lim v. CA:
Mere ownership by a single stockholder or by another corporation of all or nearly all of the capital stock of a corporation is not of itself a sufficient reason for disregarding the fiction of separate corporate personalities..

Completely absent, however, both from the decisions of the NLRC and the CA as well as from the records of the instant case itself, is any circumstance which establishes that VFP had complete control or domination over the ''finances,. .. policy and business practice" of VMDC. Worse, even assuming that VFP had such kind of control over VMDC, there is likewise no evidence that the former had used the same to "commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of another's legal rights.".

FACTS:

In 1967, through the government's Proclamation No. 192, VFP was able to obtain control and possession of a vast parcel of land located in Taguig. VFP eventually developed said land into an industrial complex, which is now known as the VFP Industrial Area (VFPIA). Respondent VFP Management and Development Corporation (VMDC), on the other hand, is a private management company organized in 1990 pursuant to the general incorporation law.

On January 4, 1991, VFP entered into a management agreement with VMDC. Under the said agreement, VMDC was to assume exclusive management and operation of the VFPIA in exchange for forty percent (40%) of the lease rentals generated from the area. In managing and operating the VFPIA, VMDC hired its own personnel and employees. Among those hired by VMDC were respondents Eduardo L. Montenejo, Mylene M. Bonifacio, Evangeline E. Valverde and Deana N. Pagal (hereafter collectively referred to as "Montenejo, et al.").

The management agreement between VFP and VMDC had a term of five (5) years, or up to 4 January 1996, and is renewable for another five (5) years. Subsequently, both parties acceded to extend the agreement up to 1998. After 1998, the agreement was again extended by VFP and VMDC albeit only on a month-to-month basis.

Then, the VFP board passed a resolution terminating the management agreement effective December 31, 1999. VMDC conceded to the termination and eventually agreed to turn over to VFP the possession of all buildings, equipment and other properties necessary to the operation of the VFPIA.

On January 3, 2000, the President of VMDC issued a memorandum informing the company's employees of the termination of their services effective at the close of office hours on January 31, 2000 "in view of the termination of the management agreement." True to the memorandum's words, VMDC dismissed all of its employees and paid each his or her separation pay.

Contending in the main that their dismissals had been effected without cause and observance of due process, Montenejo, et al. filed before the Labor Arbiter (LA) a complaint for illegal dismissal, money claims and damages. They impleaded both VMDC and VFP as defendants in the complaint. VMDC, for its part, denied the contention. It argued that the dismissals of Montenejo, et al. were valid as they were due to an authorized cause-the cessation or closure of its business. VMDC claimed that the cessation of its operations was but the necessary consequence of the termination of such agreement. VFP, on the other hand, seconded the arguments of VMDC. In addition, however, VFP asserted that it could not, at any rate, be held liable under the complaint because it is not the employer of Montenejo, et al.

ISSUE:

Whether piercing the veil of corporation fiction is warranted. (NO)

RULING:

The NLRC and the CA's stance is based on their submission that the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction is applicable to this case, i.e., that VFP and VMDC could, for purposes of satisfying any monetary award that may be due to Montenejo, et al., be treated as one and the same entity. According to the two tribunals, the doctrine may be applied to this case because VFP apparently owns almost all of the shares of stock of VMDC.

In this regard, both the NLRC and the CA cite the Closing Agreement of VFP and VMDC which states that: NOW THEREFORE, for and in consideration of the foregoing premises the VFP and the VMDC hereby agree to terminate the management agreement for the development and management of the VFPIA in Taguig effective on 3 January 2000, subject to the following conditions:

1. The [VMDC] agrees that the [VFP] is the majority stockholder of the [VMDC] and that all its original incorporators have endorsed all their shares of stock to the [VFP] except one (1) qualifying share each to be able to sit as Director in the Board of Directors of the [VMDC]. We disagree with the submission.

The doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction is a legal precept that allows a corporation's separate personality to be disregarded under certain cirumstances, so that a corporation and its stockholders or members, or a corporation and another related corporation could be treated as a single entity. The doctrine is an equitable principle, it being meant to apply only in situations where the separate corporate personality of a corporation is being abused or being used for wrongful purposes. As Manila Hotel Corporation v. NLRC explains: Piercing the veil of corporate entity is an equitable remedy. It is resorted to when the corporate fiction is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud or defend a crime. It is done only when a corporation is a mere alter ego or business conduit of a person or another corporation.

In Concept Builders, Inc. v. NLRC, we laid down the following test to determine when it would be proper to apply the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction:

1. Control, not mere majority or complete stock control, but complete domination, not only of finances but of policy & business practice in respect to the transaction attacked so that the corporate entity as to this transaction had at the time no separate mind, will or existence of its own;
2. Such control must have been used by the defendant to commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of plaintiff's legal rights; and
3. The aforesaid control and breach of duty must proximately cause the injury or unjust loss complained of.

The absence of any one of these elements prevents piercing the Ocorporate veil. In applying the instrumentality or alter ego doctrine, the courts are concerned with reality and not form, with how the corporation operated and the individual defendant's relationship to that operation.

Relative to the Concept Builders test are the ff. critical ruminations from Rufina Luy Lim v. CA:
Mere ownership by a single stockholder or by another corporation of all or nearly all of the capital stock of a corporation is not of itself a sufficient reason for disregarding the fiction of separate corporate personalities.

Moreover, to disregard the separate juridical personality of a corporation, the wrong-doing must be clearly and convincingly established. It cannot be presumed.

Utilizing the foregoing standards, it becomes clear that the NLRC and the CA were mistaken in their application of the doctrine to the case at bench. The sole circumstance used by both to justify their disregard of the separate personalities of VFP and VMDC is the former's alleged status as the majority stockholder of the latter. Completely absent, however, both from the decisions of the NLRC and the CA as well as from the records of the instant case itself, is any circumstance which establishes that VFP had complete control or domination over the ''finances[,]. .. policy and business practice" of VMDC. Worse, even assuming that VFP had such kind of control over VMDC, there is likewise no evidence that the former had used the same to "commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of [another's] legal rights."

Given the absence of any convincing proof of misuse or abuse of the corporate shield, we, thus, find the application of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction to the present case to be unwarranted, if not utterly improper. Consequently, we must also reject, for being erroneous, the pronouncement that VFP may be held solidarily liable with VMDC for any monetary award that may be adjudged in favor of Montenejo, et al. in this case.

INTERNATIONAL ACADEMY OF MANAGEMENT AND ECONOMICS (I/AME) Petitioner, -versus - LITTON AND COMPANY, INC., Respondent
G.R. No. 191525, FIRST DIVISION, DECEMBER 13, 2017, SERENO*, C.J.*

Relative to the Concept Builders test are the ff. critical ruminations from Rufina Luy Lim v. CA:
Mere ownership by a single stockholder or by another corporation of all or nearly all of the capital stock of a corporation is not of itself a sufficient reason for disregarding the fiction of separate corporate personalities..

Completely absent, however, both from the decisions of the NLRC and the CA as well as from the records of the instant case itself, is any circumstance which establishes that VFP had complete control or domination over the ''finances,. .. policy and business practice" of VMDC. Worse, even assuming that VFP had such kind of control over VMDC, there is likewise no evidence that the former had used the same to "commit fraud or wrong, to perpetuate the violation of a statutory or other positive legal duty, or dishonest and unjust act in contravention of another's legal rights.".

FACTS:

Atty. Emmanuel T. Santos (Santos), a lessee to two (2) buildings owned by Litton, owed the latter rental arrears as well as his share of the payment of realty taxes. Consequently, Litton filed a complaint for unlawful detainer against Santos before the MeTC of Manila. The MeTC ruled in Litton's favor and ordered Santos to vacate A.I.D. Building and Litton Apartments and to pay various sums of money representing unpaid arrears, realty taxes, penalty, and attorney's fees.

It appears however that the judgment was not executed. Litton subsequently filed an action for revival of judgment, which was granted by the RTC. Santos then appealed the RTC decision to the CA, which nevertheless affirmed the RTC. The said CA decision became final and executory on 22 March 1994.

On 11 November 1996, the sheriff of the MeTC of Manila levied on a piece of real property covered by Transfer Certificate of Title (TCT) No. 187565 and registered in the name of International Academy of Management and Economics Incorporated (I/AME), in order to execute the judgment against Santos. The annotations on TCT No. 187565 indicated that such was "only up to the extent of the share of Emmanuel T. Santos."

I/AME filed with Me TC a "Motion to Lift or Remove Annotations Inscribed in TCT No. 187565 of the Register of Deeds of Makati City." I/AME claimed that it has a separate and distinct personality from Santos; hence, its properties should not be made to answer for the latter's liabilities. The motion was denied in an Order dated 29 October 2004.

Upon motion for reconsideration of I/AME, the Me TC reversed its earlier ruling and ordered the cancellation of the annotations of levy as well as the writ of execution. Litton then elevated the case to the RTC, which in turn reversed the Order granting I/AME's motion for reconsideration and reinstated the original Order dated 29 October 2004.

I/AME then filed a petition with the CA to contest the judgment of the RTC, which was eventually denied by the appellate court.

The issues boil down to the alleged denial of due process when the court pierced the corporate veil of I/ AME and its property was made to answer for the liability of Santos.

ISSUE:

Whether there is denial of due process (NO)

RULING:

Indeed, compliance with the recognized modes of acquisition ofjurisdiction cannot be dispensed with even in piercing the veil of corporation

When the corporate veil is pierced, the corporation and persons who are normally treated as distinct from the corporation are treated as one person, such that when the corporation is adjudged liable, these persons, too, become liable as if they were the corporation.
The piercing of the corporate veil is premised on the fact that the corporation concerned must have been properly served with summons or properly subjected to the jurisdiction of the court a quo. Corollary thereto, it cannot be subjected to a writ of execution meant for another in violation of its right to due process.

There exists, however, an exception to this rule: if it is shown "by clear and convincing proof that the separate and distinct personality of the corporation was purposefully employed to evade a legitimate and binding commitment and perpetuate a fraud or like wrongdoings. "

The resistance of the Court to offend the right to due process of a corporation that is a nonparty in a main case, may disintegrate not only when its director, officer, shareholder, trustee or member is a party to the main case, but when it finds facts which show that piercing of the corporate veil is merited.

Thus, as the Court has already ruled, a party whose corporation is vulnerable to piercing of its corporate veil cannot argue violation of due process.

In this case, the Court confirms the lower courts' findings that Santos had an existing obligation based on a court judgment that he owed monthly rentals and unpaid realty taxes under a lease contract he entered into as lessee with the Littons as lessor. He was not able to comply with this particular obligation, and in fact, refused to comply therewith.

This Court agrees with the CA that Santos used I/AME as a means to defeat judicial processes and to evade his obligation to Litton. Thus, even while I/AME was not imp leaded in the main case and yet was so named in a writ of execution to satisfy a court judgment against Santos, it is vulnerable to the piercing of its corporate veil. We will further expound on this matter.

Piercing the Corporate Veil may Apply to Non-stock Corporations

Petitioner I/AME argues that the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil applies only to stock corporations, and not to non-stock, nonprofit corporations such as I/AME since there are no stockholders to hold liable in such a situation but instead only members. Hence, they do not have investments or shares of stock or assets to answer for possible liabilities.

Thus, no one in a non-stock corporation can be held liable in case the corporate veil is disregarded or pierced.

The CA disagreed. It ruled that since the law does not make a distinction between a stock and non-stock corporation, neither should there be a distinction in case the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction has to be applied. While I/AME is an educational institution, the CA further ruled, it still is a registered corporation conducting its affairs as such.

This Court agrees with the CA.

In determining the propriety of applicability of piercing the veil of corporate fiction, this Court, in a number of cases, did not put in issue whether a corporation is a stock or non-stock corporation. In Sula ng Bayan, Inc. v. Gregorio Araneta, Inc. , we considered but ultimately refused to pierce the corporate veil of a non-stock non-profit corporation which sought to institute an action for reconveyance of real property on behalf of its members. This Court held that the non-stock corporation had no personality to institute a class suit on behalf of its members, considering that the non-stock corporation was not an assignee or transferee of the real property in question, and did not have an identity that was one and the same as its members.

In the United States, from which we have adopted our law on corporations, non-profit corporations are not immune from the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil. Their courts view piercing of the corporation asan equitable remedy, which justifies said courts to scrutnize any organization however organized and in whatever manner it operates. Moreover, control of ownership does not hinge on stock ownership.

As held in Barineau v. Barineau:
the mere fact that the corporation involved is a nonprofit corporation does not by itself preclude a court from applying the equitable remedy of piercing the corporate veil. The equitable character of the remedy permits a court to look to the substance of the organization, and its decision is not controlled by the statutory framework under which the corporation was formed and operated. While it may appear to be impossible for a person to exercise ownership control over a non-stock, not-for-profit corporation, a person can be held personally liable under the alter ego theory if the evidence shows that the person controlling the corporation did in fact exercise control, even though there was no stock ownership
.
The concept of equitable ownership, for stock or non-stock corporations, in piercing of the corporate veil scenarios, may also be considered. An equitable owner is an individual who is a non-shareholder defendant, who exercises sufficient control or considerable authority over the corporation to the point of completely disregarding the corporate form and acting as though its assets are his or her alone to manage and distribute.

Given the foregoing, this Court sees no reason why a non-stock corporation such as I/AME, may not be scrutinized for purposes of piercing the corporate veil or fiction.

Piercing the Corporate Veil may Apply to Natural Persons
The petitioner also insists that the piercing of the corporate veil cannot be applied to a natural person - in this case, Santos - simply because as a human being, he has no corporate veil shrouding or covering his person.

a) When the Corporation is the Alter Ego of a Natural Person
As cited in Sula ng Bayan, Inc. v. Araneta, Inc. "[t]he doctrine of alter ego is based upon the misuse of a corporation by an individual for wrongful or inequitable purposes, and in such case the court merely disregards the corporate entity and holds the individual responsible for acts knowingly and intentionally done in the name of the corporation." This, Santos has done in this case. Santos formed I/AME, using the non-stock corporation, to evade paying his judgment creditor, Litton.

The piercing of the corporate veil may apply to corporations as well as natural persons involved with corporations. This Court has held that the "corporate mask may be lifted and the corporate veil may be pierced when a corporation is just but the alter ego of a person or of another corporation."

We have considered a deceased natural person as one and the same with his corporaticc to protect the succession rights of his legal heirs to his estate. In Cease v. Court of Appeals, the predecessor-in-interest organized a close corporation which acquired properties during its existence. When he died intestate, trouble ensued amongst his children on whether or not to consider his company one and the same with his person. The Court agreed with the trial court when it pierced the corporate veil of the decedent's corporation. It found that said corporation was his business conduit and alter ego. Thus, the acquired properties were actually properties of the decedent and as such, should be divided among the decedent's legitimate children in the partition of his estate.

In another instance, this Court allowed the piercing of the corporate veil against another natural person, in Arcilla v. Court of Appeals. The case stemmed from a complaint for sum of money against Arcilla for his failure to pay his loan from the private respondent. Arcilla, in his defense, alleged that the loan was in the name of his family corporation, CSAR Marine Resources, Inc. He further argued that the CA erred in holding CSAR Marine Resources liable to the private respondent since the latter was not impleaded as a party in the case. This Court allowed the piercing of the corporate veil and held that Arcilla used "his capacity as President, x x x [as] a sanctuary for a defense x x x to avoid complying with the liability adjudged against him x x x. " We held that his liability remained attached even if he was impleaded as a party, and not the corporation, to thecollection case and even if he ceased to be corporate president. Indeed, even if Arcilla had ceased to be corporate president, he remained personally liable for the judgment debt to pay his personal loan, for we treated him and the corporation as one and the same. CSAR Marine was deemed his alter ego.

We find similarities with Arcilla and the instant case. Like Arcilla, Santos: (1) was adjudged liable to pay on a judgment against him; (2) he became President of a corporation; (3) he formed a corporation to conceal assets which were supposed to pay for the judgment against his favor; (4) the corporation which has Santos as its President, is being asked by the court to pay on the judgment; and (5) he may not use as a defense that he is no longer President of I/AME (although a visit to the website of the school shows he is the current President).

This Court agrees with the CA that I/AME is the alter ego of Santos and Santos - the natural person - is the alter ego of I/AME. Santos falsely represented himself as President of I/AME in the Deed of Absolute Sale when he bought the Makati real property, at a time when I/ AME had not yet existed. Uncontroverted facts in this case also reveal the findings of Me TC showing Santos and I/ AME as being one and the same person:

(1) Santos is the conceptualizer and implementor of I/AME;
(2) Santos' contribution is ₱1,200,000.00 (One Million Two Hundred Thousand Pesos) out of the ₱1,500,000.00 (One Million Five Hundred Thousand Pesos), making him the majority contributor of I/AME; and,
(3) The building being occupied by I/AME is named after Santos using his known nickname (to date it is called, the "Noli Santos Inte1national Tower").[48]
This Court deems I/AME and Santos as alter egos of each other based on the former's own admission in its pleadings before the trial court. In its Answer (to Amended Petition) with the RTC entitled Litton and Company, Inc. v. Hon. Hernandez-Calledo, Civil Case No. 06-115547, I/AME admitted the allegations found in paragraphs 2, 4 and 5 of the amended petition of Litton, particularly paragraph number 4 which states:
4. Respondent, International Academy of Management and Economics Inc. (hereinafter referred to as Respondent I/ AME), is a corporation organized and existing under Philippine laws with address at 1061 Metropolitan Avenue, San Antonie Village, Makati City, where it may be served with summons and other judicial processes. It is the corporate entity used by Respondent Santos as his alter ego for the purpose of shielding his assets from the reach of his creditors, one of which is herein Petitioner. (Emphases ours)

Hence, I/AME is the alter ego of the natural person, Santos, which the latter used to evade the execution on the Makati property, thus frustrating the satisfaction of the judgment won by Litton.

b) Reverse Piercing of the Corporate Veil

This Court in Arcilla pierced the corporate veil of CSAR Marine Resources to satisfy a money judgment against its erstwhile President, Arcilla.
We borrow from American parlance what is called reverse piercing or reverse corporate piercing or piercing the corporate veil "in reverse."

As held in the U.S. Case, C.F. Trust, Inc., v. First Flight Limited Partnership, "in a traditional veil-piercing action, a court disregards the existence of the corporate entity so a claimant can reach the assets of a corporate insider. In a reverse piercing action, however, the plaintiff seeks to reach the assets of a corporation to satisfy claims against a corporate insider."

"Reverse-piercing flows in the opposite direction (of traditional corporate veil-piercing) and makes the corporation liable for the debt of the shareholders."

It has two (2) types: outsider reverse piercing and insider reverse piercing. Outsider reverse piercing occurs when a party with a claim against an individual or corporation attempts to be repaid with assets of a corporation owned or substantially controlled by the defendant. In contrast, in insider reverse piercing, the controlling members will attempt to ignore the corporate fiction in order to take advantage of a benefit available to the corporation, such as an interest in a lawsuit or protection of personal assets.

Outsider reverse veil-piercing is applicable in the instant case. Litton, as judgment creditor, seeks the Court's intervention to pierce the corporate veil of I/AME in order to make its Makati real property answer for a judgment against Santos, who formerly owned and still substantially controls I/AME. In the U.S. case Acree v. McMahan, the American court held that "outsider reverse veil-piercing extends the traditional veil-piercing doctrine to permit a third-party creditor to pierce the veil to satisfy the debts of an individual out of the corporation's assets."

The Court has pierced the corporate veil in a reverse manner in the instances when the scheme was to avoid corporate assets to be included in the estate of a decedent as in the Cease case and when the corporation was used to escape a judgment to pay a debt as in the Arcilla case.

In a 1962 Philippine case, this Court also employed what we now call reverse-piercing of the corporate veil. In Palacio v. Fely Transportation Co., we found that the president and general manager of the private respondent company formed the corporation to evade his subsidiary civil liability resulting from the conviction of his driver who ran over the child of the petitioner, causing injuries and medical expenses. The Court agreed with the plaintiffs that the president and general manager, and Fely Transportation, may be regarded as one and the same person. Thus, even if the president and general manager was not a party to the case, we reversed the lower court and declared both him and the private respondent company, jointly and severally liable to the plaintiffs. Thus, this Court allowed the outsider-plaintiffs to pierce the corporate veil of Fely Transportation to run after its corporate assets and pay the subsidiary civil liability of the company's president and general manager.

This notwithstanding, the equitable remedy of reverse corporate piercing or reverse piercing was not meant to encourage a creditor's failure to undertake such remedies that could have otherwise been available, to the detriment of other creditors.

Reverse corporate piercing is an equitable remedy which if utilized cavalierly, may lead to disastrous consequences for both stock and non-stock corporations. We are aware that ordinary judgment collection procedures or other legal remedies are preferred over that which would risk damage to third parties (for instance, innocent stockholders or voluntary creditors) with unprotected interests in the assets of the beleaguered corporation.

Thus, this Court would recommend the application of the current 1997 Rules on Civil Procedure on Enforcement of Judgments. Under the current Rules of Court on Civil Procedure, when it comes to satisfaction by levy, a judgment obligor is given the option to immediately choose which property or part thereof may be levied upon to satisfy the judgment. If the judgmentobligor does not exercise the option, personal properties, if any, shall be first levied and then on real properties if the personal properties are deemed insufficient to answer for the judgment.

In the instant case, it may be possible for this Court to recommend that Litton run after the other properties of Santos that could satisfy the money judgment - first personal, then other real properties other than that of the school. However, if we allow this, we frustrate the decades-old yet valid MeTC judgment which levied on the real property now titled under the name of the school. Moreover, this Court will unwittingly condone the action of Santos in hiding all these years behind the corporate form to evade paying his obligation under the judgment in the court a quo. This we cannot countenance without being a party to the injustice.

Thus, the reverse piercing of the corporate veil of I/AME to enforce the levy on execution of the Makati real property where the school now stands is applied.

E. INCORPORATION AND ORGANIZATION

MARIANO A. ALBERT, Petitioner, -versus - UNIVERSITY PUBLISHING CO., INC., Respondent
G.R. No. L-19118, EN BANC, JANUARY 30, 1965, BENGZON J.P., J.

Aruego represented a non-existent entity and induced not only the plaintiff but even the court to believe in such representation. He signed the contract as "President" of "University Publishing Co., Inc.," stating that this was "a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the Philippines," and obviously misled plaintiff (Mariano A. Albert) into believing the same. One who has induced another to act upon his wilful misrepresentation that a corporation was duly organized and existing under the law, cannot thereafter set up against his victim the principle of corporation by estoppel.

FACTS:

Fifteen years ago, Mariano A. Albert sued University Publishing Co., Inc. Plaintiff alleged inter alia that defendant, through Jose M. Aruego, its President, entered into a contract with plaintifif; that defendant had thereby agreed to pay plaintiff P30,000.00 for the exclusive right to publish his revised Commentaries on the Revised Penal Code and for his share in previous sales of the book's first edition; that defendant had undertaken to pay in eight quarterly installments of P3,750.00. That per contract failure to pay one installment would render the rest due; and that defendant had failed to pay the second installment.

Plaintiff, however, petitioned for a writ of execution against Jose M. Aruego, as the real defendant, stating, "plaintiff's counsel and the Sheriff of Manila discovered that there is no such entity as University Publishing Co., Inc." Plaintiff annexed to his petition a certification from the securities and Exchange Commission dated July 31, 1961, attesting: "The records of this Commission do not show the registration of UNIVERSITY PUBLISHING CO., INC., either as a corporation or partnership."

ISSUE:

Whether Jose M. Aruego is the real defendant, due to the non registration or existence of University Publishing co (YES)

RULING:

Aruego represented a non-existent entity and induced not only the plaintiff but even the court to believe in such representation. He signed the contract as "President" of "University Publishing Co., Inc.," stating that this was "a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the Philippines," and obviously misled plaintiff (Mariano A. Albert) into believing the same. One who has induced another to act upon his wilful misrepresentation that a corporation was duly organized and existing under the law, cannot thereafter set up against his victim the principle of corporation by estoppel (Salvatiera vs. Garlitos, 56 O.G. 3069).

"University Publishing Co., Inc." purported to come to court, answering the complaint and litigating upon the merits. But as stated, "University Publishing Co., Inc." has no independent personality; it is just a name. Jose M. Aruego was, in reality, the one who answered and litigated, through his own law firm as counsel. He was in fact, if not, in name, the defendant.

Even with regard to corporations duly organized and existing under the law, we have in many a case pierced the veil of corporate fiction to administer the ends of justice.* And in Salvatiera vs. Garlitos, supra, p. 3073, we ruled: "A person acting or purporting to act on behalf of a corporation which has no valid existence assumes such privileges and obligations and becomes personally liable for contracts entered into or for other acts performed as such agent." Had Jose M. Aruego been named as party defendant instead of, or together with, "University Publishing Co., Inc.," there would be no room for debate as to his personal liability. Since he was not so named, the matters of "day in court" and "due process" have arisen.

In this connection, it must be realized that parties to a suit are "persons who have a right to control the proceedings, to make defense, to adduce and cross-examine witnesses, and to appeal from a decision" (67 C.J.S. 887) — and Aruego was, in reality, the person who had and exercised these rights. Clearly, then, Aruego had his day in court as the real defendant; and due process of law has been substantially observed.

By "due process of law" we mean " "a law which hears before it condemns; which proceeds upon inquiry, and renders judgment only after trial. ... ." (4 Wheaton, U.S. 518, 581.)"; or, as this Court has said, " "Due process of law" contemplates notice and opportunity to be heard before judgment is rendered, affecting one's person or property" (Lopez vs. Director of Lands, 47 Phil. 23, 32)." (Sicat vs. Reyes, L-11023, Dec. 14, 1956.) And it may not be amiss to mention here also that the "due process" clause of the Constitution is designed to secure justice as a living reality; not to sacrifice it by paying undue homage to formality. For substance must prevail over form.

The evidence is patently clear that Jose M. Aruego, acting as representative of a non-existent principal, was the real party to the contract sued upon; that he was the one who reaped the benefits resulting from it, so much so that partial payments of the consideration were made by him; that he violated its terms, thereby precipitating the suit in question; and that in the litigation he was the real defendant. Perforce, in line with the ends of justice, responsibility under the judgment falls on him.

MSCI-NACUSIP LOCAL CHAPTER, Petitioner, -versus NATIONAL WAGES AND PRODUCTIVITY COMMISSION and MONOMER SUGAR CENTRAL, INC., Respondents

G.R. No. 125198, FIRST DIVISION, March 3, 1997, HERMOSISIMA, JR., J.

By express provision of Section 13, paid-up capital is that portion of the authorized capital stock which has been both subscribed and paid. To illustrate, where the authorized capital stock of a corporation is worth P 1 million and the total subscription amounts to P250,000.00, at least 25% of this amount, namely, P62,500.00 must be paid up per Section 13. The latter, P62,500.00, is the paid-up capital or what should more accurately be termed as "paid-up capital stock."

In the case under consideration, there is no dispute, and the Board even mentioned in its Decision, that MSCI was organized and incorporated on February 15, 1990 with an authorized capital stock of P60 million, P20 million of which was subscribed. Of the P20 million subscribed capital stock, P5 million was paid-up. This fact is only too glaring for the Board to have been misled into believing that MSCI'S paid-up capital stock was P64 million plus and not P5 million.

.

FACTS:

On January 11, 1990, Asturias Sugar Central, Inc. (ASCI) executed a Memorandum of Agreement with Monomer Trading Industries, Inc. (MTII), whereby MTII shall acquire the assets of ASCI by way of a Deed of Assignment provided that an entirely new organization in place of MTII shall be organized, which new corporation shall be the assignee of the assets of ASCI.

By virtue of this Agreement, a new corporation was organized and incorporated under the corporate name Monomer Sugar Central, Inc. or MSCI, the private respondent herein.
MSCI applied for exemption from the coverage of Wage Order No. RO VI-01 issued by the Board on the ground that it is a distressed employer.

The petitioner herein MSCI-NACUSIP Local Chapter (Union), in opposition, maintained that MSCI is not distressed; that respondent applicant has not complied with the requirements for exemption; and that the financial statements submitted by MSCI do not reflect the true and valid financial status of the company, and that the paid-up capital would have been higher than P5 million and thus impairment would have been lower than 25% had the pre-organization agreement between ASCI and MTII been complied with.

Regional Tripartite Wages and Productivity Board (Board) denied MSCI's application for exemption based on the finding that the applicant's losses of P3,400,738.00 constitute an impairment of only 5.25% of its paid-up capital of P64,688,528.00, can not be said to be sufficient to meet the required 25% in order to qualify for the exemption, as provided in NWPC Guidelines.

The Board held that the paid-up capital of MSCI on the aforesaid dates was actually P64,688,528.00 and not P5 million as claimed by MSCI in its application for exemption and, thus, the established losses amounting to P3,400,738.00 constitute an impairment of only 5.25% of the true paid-up capital of P64 million plus,2 which losses are not enough to meet the required 25% impairment requirement.

This conclusion is anchored on the belief of the Board that the value of the assets of ASCI, party to the Memorandum of Agreement, transferred to MSCI on March 28, 1990 should be taken into consideration in computing the paid-up capital of MSCI to reflect its true financial structure. Moreover, the loans or advances extended by MTII, the other party to the Agreement, to MSCI should allegedly be treated as additional investments to MSCI, 3 and must therefore be included in computing respondent's paid-up capital.

The motion for reconsideration, filed by MSCI was denied by the Board.

A timely appeal was brought before the public respondent Commission.

The Commission reversed and set aside the foregoing orders of the Board, and granted MSCI's application for exemption

In reversing the Board and granting the exemption, the Commission held that the Board exceeded its authority in computing and giving new valuation to what should be the paid-up capital of MSCI. It stressed that RA No. 6727, or the Wage Rationalization Act, and its implementing guidelines have not conferred upon the Board the authority to change the paid-up capital of a corporation

ISSUE:

Whether the correct paid-up capital of MSCI is P 5 million (YES)

RULING:

By express provision of Section 13, paid-up capital is that portion of the authorized capital stock which has been both subscribed and paid. To illustrate, where the authorized capital stock of a corporation is worth P 1 million and the total subscription amounts to P250,000.00, at least 25% of this amount, namely, P62,500.00 must be paid up per Section 13. The latter, P62,500.00, is the paid-up capital or what should more accurately be termed as "paid-up capital stock."

In the case under consideration, there is no dispute, and the Board even mentioned in its Decision, that MSCI was organized and incorporated on February 15, 1990 with an authorized capital stock of P60 million, P20 million of which was subscribed. Of the P20 million subscribed capital stock, P5 million was paid-up. This fact is only too glaring for the Board to have been misled into believing that MSCI'S paid-up capital stock was P64 million plus and not P5 million.

The submission of the Board that the value of the assets of Asturias Sugar Central, Inc. transferred to MSCI on March 28, 1990, as well as the loans or advances made by MTII to MSCI should have been taken into consideration in computing the paid-up capital of MSCI is unmeritorious, at best, and betrays the Board's sheer lack of grasp of a basic concept in Corporation Law, at worst. Not all funds or assets received by the corporation can be considered paid-up capital, for this term has a technical signification in Corporation Law. Such must form part of the authorized capital stock of the corporation, subscribed and then actually paid up.

Furthermore, the Commission aptly observed that the loans and advances of MTII to respondent MSCI cannot be treated as investments, unless the corresponding shares of stocks are issued. But as it turned out, such loans and advances were in fact treated as liabilities of MSCI to MTII as shown in its 1990 audited financial statements.

Henceforth, the paid-up capital stock of MSCI for the period covered by the application for exemption still stood at P5 million. The losses, therefore, amounting to P3,400,738.00 for the period February 15, 1990 to August 31, 1990 impaired MSCI's paid-up capital of P5 million by as much as 68%. Likewise, the losses incurred by MSCI for the interim period from September 1, 1990 to November 30, 1990, as found by the Commission, per MSCI's quarterly income statements, amounting to P13,554,337.33 impaired the company's paid-up capital of P5 million by a whopping 271.08%,8 more than enough to qualify MSCI as a distressed employer. Respondent Commission thus acted well within its jurisdiction in granting MSCI full exemption from Wage Order No. RO VI-01 as a distressed employer.

ISLAMIC DIRECTORATE OF THE PHILIPPINES, MANUEL F. PEREA and SECURITIES & EXCHANGE COMMISSION, Petitioners, -versus- COURT OF APPEALS and IGLESIA NI CRISTO, Respondents

G.R. No. 11789, FIRST DIVISION, May 14, 1997, HERMOSISIMA, JR., J.

There can be no question as to the authority of the SEC to pass upon the issue as to who among the different contending groups is the legitimate Board of Trustees of the IDP since this is a matter properly falling within the original and exclusive jurisdiction of the SEC by virtue of Sections 3 and 5(c) of Presidential Decree No. 902-A.

If the SEC can declare who is the legitimate IDP Board, then by parity of reasoning, it can also declare who is not the legitimate IDP Board.

FACTS:

Petitioner IDP-Tamano Group alleges that sometime in 1971, Islamic leaders of all Muslim major tribal groups in the Philippines headed by Dean Cesar Adib Majul organized and incorporated the ISLAMIC DIRECTORATE OF THE PHILIPPINES (IDP), the primary purpose of which is to establish an Islamic Center in Quezon City for the construction of a "Mosque (prayer place), Madrasah (Arabic School), and other religious infrastructures" so as to facilitate the effective practice of Islamic faith in the area. 2

Towards this end, that is, in the same year, the Libyan government donated money to the IDP to purchase land at Culiat, Tandang Sora, Quezon City, to be used as a Center for the Islamic populace. The land, with an area of 49,652 square meters, was covered by two titles: Transfer Certificate of Title Nos. RT-26520 (176616) 3 and RT-26521 (170567), 4 both registered in the name of IDP.

According to the petitioner, in 1972, after the purchase of the land by the Libyan government in the name of IDP, Martial Law was declared by the late President Ferdinand Marcos. Most of the members of the 1971 Board of Trustees like Senators Mamintal Tamano, Salipada Pendatun, Ahmad Alonto, and Congressman Al-Rashid Lucman flew to the Middle East to escape political persecution.

Thereafter, two Muslim groups sprung, the Carpizo Group, headed by Engineer Farouk Carpizo, and the Abbas Group, led by Mrs. Zorayda Tamano and Atty. Firdaussi Abbas. Both groups claimed to be the legitimate IDP. Significantly, on October 3, 1986, the SEC, in a suit between these two contending groups, came out with a Decision in SEC Case No. 2687 declaring the election of both the Carpizo Group and the Abbas Group as IDP board members to be null and void.

Neither group, however, took the necessary steps prescribed by the SEC in its October 3, 1986 Decision, and, thus, no valid election of the members of the Board of Trustees of IDP was ever called. Although the Carpizo Group attempted to submit a set of by-laws, the SEC found that, aside from Engineer Farouk Carpizo and Atty. Musib Buat, those who prepared and adopted the by-laws were not bona fide members of the IDP, thus rendering the adoption of the by-laws likewise null and void. On April 20, 1989, without having been properly elected as new members of the Board of Trustee of IDP, the Carpizo Group caused to be signed an alleged Board Resolution of the IDP, authorizing the sale of the subject two parcels of land to the private respondent INC for a consideration of P22,343,400.00, which sale was evidenced by a Deed of Absolute Sale dated April 20, 1989.

On May 30, 1991, the petitioner 1971 IDP Board of Trustees headed by former Senator Mamintal Tamano, or the Tamano Group, filed a petition before the SEC, docketed as SEC Case No. 4012, seeking to declare null and void the Deed of Absolute Sale signed by the Carpizo Group and the INC since the group of Engineer Carpizo was not the legitimate Board of Trustees of the IDP.

SEC, on July 5, 1993, finally came out with a Decision in SEC Case No. 4012 in this wise:
1. Declaring the by-laws submitted by the respondents as unauthorized, and hence, null and void.
2. Declaring the sale of the two (2) parcels of land in Quezon City covered by the Deed of Absolute Sale entered into by Iglesia ni Kristo and the Islamic Directorate of the Philippines, Inc. null and void;

INC elevated SEC Case No. 4012 to the public respondent Court of Appeals. The portion of the SEC Decision in SEC Case No. 4012 which declared the sale of the two (2) lots in question to INC as void was ordered set aside by the Court of Appeals.

ISSUE:

> Whether Court of Appeals commit reversible error in setting aside that portion of the SEC's Decision in SEC which declared the sale of two (2) parcels of land in Quezon City between the IDP-Carpizo Group and private respondent INC null and void (YES)

RULING:

There can be no question as to the authority of the SEC to pass upon the issue as to who among the different contending groups is the legitimate Board of Trustees of the IDP since this is a matter properly falling within the original and exclusive jurisdiction of the SEC by virtue of Sections 3 and 5(c) of Presidential Decree No. 902-A.

If the SEC can declare who is the legitimate IDP Board, then by parity of reasoning, it can also declare who is not the legitimate IDP Board. This is precisely what the SEC did in SEC Case No. 4012 when it adjudged the election of the Carpizo Group to the IDP Board of Trustees to be null and void. By this ruling, the SEC in effect made the unequivocal finding that the IDP-Carpizo Group is a bogus Board of Trustees. Consequently, the Carpizo Group is bereft of any authority whatsoever to bind IDP in any kind of transaction including the sale or disposition of ID property.

It must be noted that SEC Case No. 4012 is not the first case wherein the SEC had the opportunity to pass upon the status of the Carpizo Group. As far back as October 3, 1986, the SEC, in Case No. 2687, in a suit between the Carpizo Group and the Abbas Group, already declared the election of the Carpizo Group (as well as the Abbas Group) to the IDP Board as null and void for being violative of the Articles of Incorporation. Nothing thus becomes more settled than that the IDP-Carpizo Group with whom private respondent INC contracted is a fake Board.

Premises considered, all acts carried out by the Carpizo Board, particularly the sale of the Tandang Sora property, allegedly in the name of the IDP, have to be struck down for having been done without the consent of the IDP thru a legitimate Board of Trustees.

The Carpizo Group-INC sale is further deemed null and void ab initio because of the Carpizo Group's failure to comply with Section 40 of the Corporation Code pertaining to the disposition of all or substantially all assets of the corporation.

The Tandang Sora property, it appears from the records, constitutes the only property of the IDP. Hence, its sale to a third-party is a sale or disposition of all the corporate property and assets of IDP falling squarely within the contemplation of the foregoing section. For the sale to be valid, the majority vote of the legitimate Board of Trustees, concurred in by the vote of at least 2/3 of the bona fide members of the corporation should have been obtained. These twin requirements were not met as the Carpizo Group which voted to sell the Tandang Sora property was a fake Board of Trustees, and those whose names and signatures were affixed by the Carpizo Group together with the sham Board Resolution authorizing the negotiation for the sale were, from all indications, not bona fide members of the IDP as they were made to appear to be. Apparently, there are only fifteen (15) official members of the petitioner corporation including the eight (8) members of the Board of Trustees.

All told, the disputed Deed of Absolute Sale executed by the fake Carpizo Board and private respondent INC was intrinsically void ab initio.

Furthermore, the Court observes that the INC bought the questioned property from the Carpizo Group without even seeing the owner's duplicate copy of the titles covering the property. This is very strange considering that the subject lot is a large piece of real property in Quezon City worth millions, and that under the Torrens System of Registration, the minimum requirement for one to be a good faith buyer for value is that the vendee at least sees the owner's duplicate copy of the title and relies upon the same. The private respondent, presumably knowledgeable on the aforesaid workings of the Torrens System, did not take heed of this and nevertheless went through with the sale with undue haste. The unexplained eagerness of INC to buy this valuable piece of land in Quezon City without even being presented with the owner's copy of the titles casts very serious doubt on the rightfulness of its position as vendee in the transaction.

INTERNATIONAL EXPRESS TRAVEL & TOUR SERVICES, INC., Petitioners, -versus- HON. COURT OF APPEALS, HENRI KAHN, PHILIPPINES FOOTBALL FEDERATION, Respondents
G.R. No. 119002, FIRST DIVISION, October 19, 2000, KAPUNAN., J.

While national sports associations may be accorded corporate status, such does not automatically take place by the mere passage of these laws. It is a basic postulate that before a corporation may acquire juridical personality, the State must give its consent either in the form of a special law or a general enabling act. The Philippine Football Federation did not come into existence upon the passage of these laws. Nowhere can it be found in RA 3135 or PD 604 any provision creating the Philippine Football Federation.

Accordingly, the Philippine Football Federation is not a national sports association within the purview of the aforementioned laws and does not have corporate existence of its own.

FACTS:

On June 30 1989, petitioner International Express Travel and Tour Services, Inc., (IETTSI) through its managing director wrote a letter to the Philippine Football Federation (Federation), through its president Henri Kahn, wherein the former offered its services as a travel agency to the latter. The offer was accepted.

IETTSI secured the airline tickets for the trips of the athletes and officials of the Federation to the South East Asian Games in Kuala Lumpur as well as various other trips to the People's Republic of China and Brisbane. The total cost of the tickets amounted to P449,654.83. For the tickets received, the Federation made two partial payments, both in September of 1989, in the total amount of P176,467.50.

Then, petitioner wrote the Federation, through the private respondent a demand letter requesting for the amount of P265,894.33. The Federation, through the Project Gintong Alay, paid the amount of P31,603.00. Also, Henri Kahn issued a personal check in the amount of P50,000 as partial payment for the outstanding balance of the Federation. Thereafter, no further payments were made despite repeated demands.

IETTSI filed a civil case before the Regional Trial Court of Manila against Henri Kahn in his personal capacity and as President of the Federation and impleaded the Federation as an alternative defendant. IETTSI sought to hold Henri Kahn liable for the unpaid balance for the tickets purchased by the Federation on the ground that Henri Kahn allegedly guaranteed the said obligation.

Kahn filed his answer with counterclaim, while the Federation failed to file its answer and was declared in default by the trial court. In due course, the trial court rendered judgment and ruled in favor of IETTSI and declared Henri Kahn personally liable for the unpaid obligation of the Federation. The complaint of IETTSI against the Philippine Football Federation and the counterclaims of Henri Kahn were dismissed, with costs against Kahn. Only Henri Kahn elevated the decision to the Court of Appeals. On 21 December 1994, the appellate court rendered a decision reversing the trial court. IETTSI filed a motion for reconsideration and as an alternative prayer pleaded that the Federation be held liable for the unpaid obligation. The same was denied by the appellate court in its resolution of 8 February 1995. Hence the petition.

ISSUES:

(1) Whether the Philippine Football Federation has a corporate existence of its own. (NO)
(2) Whether Kahn should be made personally liable for the unpaid obligations of the Philippine Football Federation. (YES)
(3) Whether the appellate court properly applied the doctrine of corporation by estoppel. (YES)

RULING:

(1)
Both RA 3135 (the Revised Charter of the Philippine Amateur Athletic Federation) and PD 604 recognized the juridical existence of national sports associations stated in Section 14 of RA 3135 and Section 8 of PD 604. The powers and functions granted to national sports associations indicate that these entities may acquire a juridical personality. The power to purchase, sell, lease and encumber property are acts which may only be done by persons, whether natural or artificial, with juridical capacity.

However, while national sports associations may be accorded corporate status, such does not automatically take place by the mere passage of these laws. It is a basic postulate that before a corporation may acquire juridical personality, the State must give its consent either in the form of a special law or a general enabling act. The Philippine Football Federation did not come into existence upon the passage of these laws. Nowhere can it be found in RA 3135 or PD 604 any provision creating the Philippine Football Federation. These laws merely recognized the existence of national sports associations and provided the manner by which these entities may acquire juridical personality. Section 11 of RA 3135 and Section 8 of PD 604 require that before an entity may be considered as a national sports association, such entity must be recognized by the accrediting organization, the Philippine Amateur Athletic Federation under RA 3135, and the Department of Youth and Sports Development under PD 604. This fact of recognition, however, Henri Kahn failed to substantiate. A copy of the constitution and by-laws of the Philippine Football Federation does not prove that said Federation has indeed been recognized and accredited by either the Philippine Amateur Athletic Federation or the Department of Youth and Sports Development. Accordingly, the Philippine Football Federation is not a national sports association within the purview of the aforementioned laws and does not have corporate existence of its own.

(2)
Henry Kahn should be held liable for the unpaid obligations of the unincorporated Philippine Football Federation. It is a settled principal in corporation law that any person acting or purporting to act on behalf of a corporation which has no valid existence assumes such privileges and becomes personally liable for contract entered into or for other acts performed as such agent. As president of the Federation, Henri Kahn is presumed to have known about the corporate existence or non-existence of the Federation.

(3)
The Supreme Court did not subscribe to the position taken by the appellate court that even assuming that the Federation was defectively incorporated, IETTSI cannot deny the corporate existence of the Federation because it had contracted and dealt with the Federation in such a manner as to recognize and in effect admit its existence. The doctrine of corporation by estoppel is mistakenly applied by CA to the petitioner. The application of the doctrine applies to a third party only when he tries to escape liability on a contract from which he has benefited on the irrelevant ground of defective incorporation. In this case, IETTSI was not trying to escape liability from the contract but rather was the one claiming from the contract

SAMAHAN NG OPTOMETRISTS SA PILIPINAS, ILOCOS SUR-ABRA CHAPTER, EDUARDO MA. GUIRNALDA, DANTE G. PACQUING and OCTAVIO A. DE PERALTA, Petitioners, -versus- ACEBEDO INTERNATIONAL CORPORATION and the HON. COURT OF APPEALS, Respondents
G.R. No. 117097, FIRST DIVISION, MARCH 21, 1997, HERMOSISIMA, JR., J.

The fact that private respondent hires optometrists who practice their profession in the course of their employment in private respondent's optical shops, does not translate into a practice of optometry by private respondent itself. Private respondent is a corporation created and organized for the purpose of conducting the business of selling optical lenses or eyeglasses, among others. The clientele of private respondent understably, would largely be composed of persons with defective vision and thus need the proper lenses to correct the same and enable them to gain normal vision. The determination of the proper lenses to sell to private respondent's clientele entails the employment of optometrists who have been precisely trained for that purpose. Private respondent's business is not the determination itself of the proper lenses needed by persons with defective vision. Private respondent's business, rather, is the buying and importing of eyeglasses and lenses and other similar or allied instruments from suppliers thereof and selling the same to consumers.

It is significant to note that even under R.A. No. 8050, known as the Revised Optometry Law, we find no prohibition against the hiring by corporations of optometrists.

FACTS:

Private respondent, Acebedo filed an application with the Office of the Mayor of Candon, Ilocos Sur, for the issuance of a permit for the opening and operation of a branch of the Acebedo Optical in that municipality.

The application was opposed by the petitioner, Samahan ng Optometrists sa Pilipinas (SOP) which contended that Acebedo is a juridical entity not qualified to practice optometry.

Mayor of Candon created a committee which denied Acebedo's application for a mayor's permit to operate a branch in Candon and ordered private respondent to close its establishment within fifteen (15) days from receipt of the decision.

The trial court affirmed the denial of the the application.

The findings of the Commission reveal that the operation of Acebedo's local shop involves the practice of optometry. If indeed Acebedo is engaged in the sale of optical products, the absence of sales clerks more than demonstrate its real business. In the contested Decision, the floor plan of the shop was even commented on as that of an optical shop. As noted by the members of the Commission, there was also a banner in front of the shop prominently display advertising free consultations (libreng consulta sa mata). These facts, taken together, denote that Acebedo was operating in Candon an optical shop contrary to law.

While it is also true that a corporation has a personality separate and distinct from that of its personnel, the veil of corporate fiction cannot be used for the purpose of some illegal activity. The veil of corporate fiction can be pierced, as in this case, and the acts of the personnel of the corporation will be considered as those of the corporation. Acebedo then is engaged in the practice of optometry.

Disagreeing with the foregoing decision of the trial court, private respondent appealed therefrom and asked the respondent Court of Appeals to reverse the same on the ground that the court a quo erred in concluding that private respondent was engaged in the practice of optometry by operating an optical shop.

The herein petitioner most respectfully submits that the private respondent Acebedo International Corporation flagrantly violates R.A. No. 1998 and the Corporation Code of the Philippines when it employs optometrists to engage in the practice of optometry under its name

ISSUE:

> Whether corporations, engaged in the business of selling optical wares, supplies, substances and instruments which, as an incident to and in the ordinary course of the business hire optometrists, be said to be practicing the profession of optometry which is prohibited by law (NO)

RULING:
Private respondent does not deny that it employs optometrists whose role in the operations of its optical shops is to administer the proper eye examination in order to determine the correct type and grade of lenses to prescribe to persons purchasing the same from private respondent's optical shops. Petitioners vehemently insist that in so employing said optometrists, private respondent is in effect itself practicing optometry. Such practice, petitioners conclude, is in violation of RA. No. 1998, which, it must be noted at this juncture, has been repealed and superseded by R.A. 8050.

Petitioners' contentions are, however, untenable. The fact that private respondent hires optometrists who practice their profession in the course of their employment in private respondent's optical shops, does not translate into a practice of optometry by private respondent itself. Private respondent is a corporation created and organized for the purpose of conducting the business of selling optical lenses or eyeglasses, among others. The clientele of private respondent understably, would largely be composed of persons with defective vision and thus need the proper lenses to correct the same and enable them to gain normal vision. The determination of the proper lenses to sell to private respondent's clientele entails the employment of optometrists who have been precisely trained for that purpose. Private respondent's business is not the determination itself of the proper lenses needed by persons with defective vision. Private respondent's business, rather, is the buying and importing of eyeglasses and lenses and other similar or allied instruments from suppliers thereof and selling the same to consumers.

For petitioners' argument to hold water, there need be clear showing that R.A. No. 1998 prohibits a corporation from hiring optometrists, for only then would it be undeniably evident that the intention of the legislature is to preclude the formation of the so-called optometry corporations because such is tantamount to the practice of the profession of optometry which is legally exercisable only by natural persons and professional partnerships. We have carefully reviewed R.A. No. 1998 however, and we find nothing therein that supports petitioner's insistent claims.

It is significant to note that even under R.A. No. 8050, known as the Revised Optometry Law, we find no prohibition against the hiring by corporations of optometrists.

All told, there is no law that prohibits the hiring by corporations of optometrists or considers the hiring by corporations of optometrists as a practice by the corporation itself of the profession of optometry.

1. PROMOTER

A. LIABILITY OF CORPORATION FOR PROMORER'S CONTRACTS

RIZAL LIGHT & ICE CO., INC., Petitioner, -versus- THE MUNICIPALITY OF MORONG, RIZAL and the PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION, Respondents
G.R. No. L-20993, EN BANC, SEPTEMBER 28, 1968, ZALDIVAR, J.

The fact that a company is not completely incorporated at the time the grant is made to it by a municipality to use the streets does not, in most jurisdictions, affect the validity of the grant. But such grant cannot take effect until the corporation is organized.

The incorporation of Morong Electric on October 17, 1962 and its acceptance of the franchise as shown by its action in prosecuting the application filed with the Commission for the approval of said franchise, not only perfected a contract between the respondent municipality and Morong Electric but also cured the deficiency pointed out by the petitioner in the application of Morong Electric. Thus, the Commission did not err in denying petitioner's motion to dismiss said application and in proceeding to hear the same.

FACTS:

On August 15, 1949, petitioner Rizal Light & Ice Co., Inc. was granted by the Commission a certificate of public convenience and necessity for the installation, operation and maintenance of an electric light, heat and power service in the municipality of Morong, Rizal.

In an order dated December 19, 1956, the Commission required the petitioner to appear before it on to show cause why it should not be penalized for violation of the conditions of its certificate of public convenience and the regulations of the Commission, and for failure to comply with the directives to raise its service voltage and maintain them within the limits prescribed in the Revised Order No. 1 of the Commission, and to acquire and install a kilowatt meter to indicate the load in kilowatts at any particular time of the generating unit.

For failure of the petitioner to appear at the hearing, the Commission ordered the cancellation and revocation of petitioner's certificate of public convenience and necessity and the forfeiture of its franchise. Petitioner moved for reconsideration of said order on the ground that its manager, Juan D. Francisco, was not aware of said hearing. Respondent municipality opposed the motion, alleging that petitioner has not rendered efficient and satisfactory service and has not complied with the requirements of the Commission for the improvement of its service. The motion was set for hearing.

Finding that the failure of the petitioner to appear at the hearing , the Commission set aside its order of revocation. Respondent municipality moved for reconsideration of this order of reinstatement of the certificate, but the motion was denied.

In a petition dated June 25, 1958, filed in the same case, respondent municipality formally asked the Commission to revoke petitioner's certificate of public convenience and to forfeit its franchise on the ground, among other things, that it failed to comply with the conditions of said certificate and franchise. Said petition was set for hearing jointly with the order to show cause. The hearings had been postponed several times.

Meanwhile, inspections had been made of petitioner's electric plant and installations by the engineers of the Commission, as follows: April 15, 1958 by Engineer Antonio M. Alli; September 18, 1959, July 12-13, 1960, and June 21-24, 1961, by Engineer Meliton S. Martinez. The inspection on June 21-24, 1961 was made upon the request of the petitioner who manifested during the hearing on December 15, 1960 that improvements have been made on its service since the inspection on July 12-13, 1960, and that, on the basis of the inspection report to be submitted, it would agree to the submission of the case for decision without further hearing.

When the case was called for hearing on July 5, 1961, petitioner failed to appear. Respondent municipality was then allowed to present its documentary evidence, and thereafter the case was submitted for decision.

On July 7, 1961, petitioner filed a motion to reopen the case upon the ground that it had not been furnished with a copy of the report of the June 21-24, 1961 inspection for it to reply as previously agreed. In an order dated August 25, 1961, petitioner was granted a period of ten (10) days within which to submit its written reply to said inspection report, on condition that should it fail to do so within the said period the case would be considered submitted for decision. Petitioner failed to file the reply. In consonance with the order of August 25, 1961, therefore, the Commission proceeded to decide the case. On July 29, 1962 petitioner's electric plant was burned.

In its decision, dated August 20, 1962, the Commission, on the basis of the inspection reports of its aforenamed engineers, found that the petitioner had failed to comply with the directives contained in its letters dated May 21, 1954 and September 4, 1954, and had violated the conditions of its certificate of public convenience as well as the rules and regulations of the Commission. The Commission concluded that the petitioner "cannot render the efficient, adequate and satisfactory electric service required by its certificate and that it is against public interest to allow it to continue its operation." Accordingly, it ordered the cancellation and revocation of petitioner's certificate of public convenience and the forfeiture of its franchise.

On September 18, 1962, petitioner moved for reconsideration of the decision

But eight days before said motion for reconsideration was filed, Morong Electric, having been granted a municipal franchise on May 6, 1962 by respondent municipality to install, operate and maintain an electric heat, light and power service in said municipality — approved by the Provincial Board of Rizal on August 31, 1962 — filed with the Commission an application for a certificate of public convenience and necessity for said service. Said application was entitled "Morong Electric Co., Inc., Applicant", and docketed as Case No. 62-5143.

Petitioner opposed in writing the application of Morong Electric, alleging among other things, that it is a holder of a certificate of public convenience to operate an electric light, heat and power service in the same municipality of Morong, Rizal, and that the approval of said application would not promote public convenience, but would only cause ruinous and wasteful competition.

But before said motion could be resolved, petitioner filed another motion dated, January 4, 1963, this time asking for the dismissal of the application upon the ground that applicant Morong Electric had no legal personality when it filed its application on September 10, 1962, because its certificate of incorporation was issued by the Securities and Exchange Commission only on October 17, 1962.

This motion to dismiss was denied by the Commission on the premise that applicant Morong Electric was a de facto corporation.

Consequently, the case was heard on the merits and both parties presented their respective evidence. On the basis of the evidence adduced, the Commission, in its decision dated March 13, 1963, found that there was an absence of electric service in the municipality of Morong and that applicant Morong Electric, a Filipino-owned corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the Philippines, has the financial capacity to maintain said service. These circumstances, considered together with the denial of the motion for reconsideration filed by petitioner in Case No. 39715 on February 15, 1963, such that as far as the Commission was concerned the certificate of the petitioner was already declared revoked and cancelled, the Commission approved the application of Morong Electric and ordered the issuance in its favor of the corresponding certificate of public convenience and necessity.

Thus, Petitioner filed with this Court a petition to review the decision.

ISSUES:

(1) Whether Morong Electric did not yet have a legal personality on May 6, 1962 when a municipal franchise was granted (YES)

(2) Whether the granting of the franchise was valid (YES)

(3) Whether Morong Electric has the financial qualification to operate an electric light, heat and power service (YES)

RULING:

(1)
The juridical personality and legal existence of Morong Electric began only on October 17, 1962 when its certificate of incorporation, was issued by the SEC. Before that date, or pending the issuance of said certificate of incorporation, the incorporators cannot be considered as de facto corporation.

(2)
But the fact that Morong Electric had no corporate existence on the day the franchise was granted in its name does not render the franchise invalid, because later Morong Electric obtained its certificate of incorporation and then accepted the franchise in accordance with the terms and conditions thereof. This view is sustained by eminent American authorities. Thus. McQuillin says:

"The fact that a company is not completely incorporated at the time the grant is made to it by a municipality to use the streets does not, in most jurisdictions, affect the validity of the grant. But such grant cannot take effect until the corporation is organized. And in Illinois it has been decided that the ordinance granting the franchise may be presented before the corporation grantee is fully organized, where the organization is completed before the passage and acceptance."

Fletcher says:

"While a franchise cannot take effect until the grantee corporation is organized, the franchise may, nevertheless, be applied for before the company is fully organized.

"A grant of a street franchise is valid although the corporation is not created until afterwards."

And Thompson gives the reason for the rule:

"(I)n the matter of the secondary franchise the authorities are numerous in support of the proposition that an ordinance granting a privilege to a corporation is not void because the beneficiary of the ordinance is not fully organized at the time of the introduction of the ordinance. It is enough that organization is complete prior to the passage and acceptance of the ordinance. The reason is that a privilege of this character is a mere license to the corporation until it accepts the grant and complies with its terms and conditions." (Thompson on Corporations, Vol. 4, 3rd Ed., Sec. 2929) 26

The incorporation of Morong Electric on October 17, 1962 and its acceptance of the franchise as shown by its action in prosecuting the application filed with the Commission for the approval of said franchise, not only perfected a contract between the respondent municipality and Morong Electric but also cured the deficiency pointed out by the petitioner in the application of Morong Electric. Thus, the Commission did not err in denying petitioner's motion to dismiss said application and in proceeding to hear the same. The efficacy of the franchise, however, arose only upon its approval by the Commission on March 13, 1963. The reason is that —

"Under Act No. 667, as amended by Act No. 1022, a municipal council has the power to grant electric franchises, subject to the approval of the provincial board and the President. However, under Section 16 (b) of Commonwealth Act No. 146, as amended, the Public Service Commission is empowered' to approve, subject to constitutional limitations any franchise or privilege granted under the provisions of Act No. 667, as amended by Act 1022, by any political subdivision of the Philippines when, in the judgment of the Commission, such franchise or privilege will properly conserve the public interests, and the Commission shall in so approving impose such conditions as to construction, equipment, maintenance, service, or operation as the public interests and convenience may reasonably require, and to issue certificates of public convenience and necessity when such is required or provided by any law or franchise.' Thus, the efficacy of a municipal electric franchise arises, therefore, only after the approval of the Public Service Commission." (Almendras v. Ramos, 90 Phil. 231)

The conclusion herein reached regarding the validity of the franchise granted to Morong Electric is not incompatible with the holding of this Court in Cagayan Fishing Development Co., Inc. v. Teodoro Sandiko upon which the petitioner leans heavily in support of its position. In said case this Court held that a corporation should have a full and complete organization and existence as an entity before it can enter into any kind of a contract or transact any business. It should be pointed out, however, that this Court did not say in that case that the rule is absolute or that under no circumstances may the acts of promoters of a corporation be ratified or accepted by the corporation if and when subsequently organized. Of course, there are exceptions. It will be noted that American courts generally hold that a contract made by the promoters of a corporation on its behalf may be adopted, accepted or ratified by the corporation when organized.

(3) An examination of the record of this case readily shows that the testimony of Mr. Ingal and the documents he presented to establish the financial capability of Morong Electric provide reasonable grounds for the above finding of the Commission.

"It is now a very well-settled rule in this jurisdiction that the findings and conclusions of fact made by the Public Service Commission, after weighing the evidence adduced by the parties in a public service case, will not be disturbed by the Supreme Court unless those findings and conclusions appear not to be reasonably supported by evidence." (La Mallorca and Pampanga Bus Co. v. Mercado, L-19120, November 29, 1965)

"For purposes of appeal, what is decisive is that said testimonial evidence provides reasonable support for the Public Service Commission's findings of financial capacity on the part of applicants, rendering such findings beyond our power to disturb." (Del Pilar Transit v. Silva, L-21547, July 15, 1966)

It may be worthwhile to mention in this connection that per inspection report dated January 20, 1964 29 of Mr. Meliton Martinez of the Commission, who inspected the electric service of Morong Electric on January 15-16, 1964, Morong Electric "is serving electric service to the entire area covered by its approved plan and has constructed its line in accordance with the plans and specifications approved by the Commission." By reason thereof, it was recommended that the requests of Morong Electric (1) for the withdrawal of its deposit in the amount of P1,000.00 with the Treasurer of the Philippines, and (2) for the approval of Resolution No. 160 of the Municipal Council of Morong, Rizal, exempting the operator from making the additional P9,000.00 deposit mentioned in its petition, dated September 16, 1963, be granted. This report removes any doubt as to the financial capability of Morong Electric to operate and maintain an electric light, heat and power service.

2. NUMBER AND QUALIFICATION OF INCORPORATORS

NAUTICA CANNING CORPORATION, FIRST DOMINION PRIME HOLDINGS, INC. and FERNANDO R. ARGUELLES, JR. Petitioners, -versus- ROBERTO C. YUMUL, Respondent
G.R. No. 164588, FIRST DIVISION, OCTOBER 19, 2005, YNARES-SANTIAGO, J.

A transfer of shares of stock not recorded in the stock and transfer book of the corporation is non-existent as far as the corporation is concerned. As between the corporation on one hand, and its shareholders and third persons on the other, the corporation looks only to its books for the purpose of determining who its shareholders are.

In the case at bar, the SEC and the Court of Appeals correctly found Yumul to be a stockholder of Nautica, of one share of stock recorded in Yumul's name, although allegedly held in trust for Dee. Nautica's Articles of Incorporation and By-laws, as well as the General Information Sheet filed with the SEC indicated that Yumul was an incorporator and subscriber of one share. Even granting that there was an agreement between Yumul and Dee whereby the former is holding the share in trust for Dee, the same is binding only as between them. From the corporation's vantage point, Yumul is its stockholder with one share, considering that there is no showing that Yumul transferred his subscription to Dee, the alleged real owner of the share, after Nautica's incorporation.

FACTS:

On December 19, 1994, respondent Roberto C. Yumul was appointed Chief Operating Officer/General Manager of Nautica. On the same date, First Dominion Prime Holdings, Inc., Nautica's parent company, through its Chairman Alvin Y. Dee, granted Yumul an Option to Purchase up to 15% of the total stocks it subscribed from Nautica.

On June 22, 1995, a Deed of Trust and Assignment was executed between First Dominion Prime Holdings, Inc. and Yumul whereby the former assigned 14,999 of its subscribed shares in Nautica to the latter. The deed stated that the 14,999 "shares were acquired and paid for in the name of the ASSIGNOR only for convenience, but actually executed in behalf of and in trust for the ASSIGNEE."

In March 1996, Nautica declared a P35,000,000 cash dividend, P8,250,000 of which was paid to Yumul representing his 15% share
.

After Yumul's resignation from Nautica, he wrote a letter to Dee requesting the latter to formalize his offer to buy Yumul's 15% share in Nautica on or before August 20, 1996; and demanding the issuance of the corresponding certificate of shares in his name should Dee refuse to buy the same. Dee, through Atty. Fernando R. Arguelles, Jr., Nautica's corporate secretary, denied the request claiming that Yumul was not a stockholder of Nautica.

On September 6, 1996[8] and September 9, 1996, Yumul requested that the Deed of Trust and Assignment be recorded in the Stock and Transfer Book of Nautica, and that he, as a stockholder, be allowed to inspect its books and records.

Yumul's requests were denied allegedly because he neither exercised the option to purchase the shares nor paid for the acquisition price of the 14,999 shares. Atty. Arguelles maintained that the cash dividend received by Yumul is held by him only in trust for First Dominion Prime Holdings, Inc. Thus, Yumul filed on October 3, 1996, before the SEC a petition for mandamus with damages, with prayer that the Deed of Trust and Assignment be recorded in the Stock and Transfer Book of Nautica and that the certificate of stocks corresponding thereto be issued in his name.

SEC En Banc ruled in favor of Yumul which CA affirmed.

Petitioners contend that Yumul was not a stockholder of Nautica; that he was just a nominal owner of one share as the beneficial ownership belonged to Dee who paid for said share when Nautica was incorporated. They presented China Banking Corporation Check No. A2620636 and Citibank Check No. B82642 as proof of payment by Dee; a letter by Dee dated July 15, 1994 requesting the corporate secretary of Nautica to issue a certificate of stock in Yumul's name but in trust for Dee; and Stock Certificate No. 6 with annotation "ITF Alvin Y. Dee" which means that respondent held said stock "In Trust For Alvin Y. Dee"

As to whether or not Yumul is the beneficial owner of the 14,999 shares of stocks of Nautica, petitioners allege that Yumul was given the option to purchase shares of stocks in Nautica under the Option to Purchase dated December 19, 1994. However, he failed to exercise the option, thus there was no cause or consideration for the Deed of Trust and Assignment, which makes it void for being simulated or fictitious

ISSUES:

(1) Whether Yumul is a stockholder of Nautica (YES)
(2) Whether Yumul is the beneficial owner of the 14,999 shares of stock (UNRESOLVED)

RULING:

(1)
Indeed, it is possible for a business to be wholly owned by one individual. The validity of its incorporation is not affected when such individual gives nominal ownership of only one share of stock to each of the other four incorporators. This is not necessarily illegal. But, this is valid only between or among the incorporators privy to the agreement. It does bind the corporation which, at the time the agreement is made, was non-existent. Thus, incorporators continue to be stockholders of a corporation unless, subsequent to the incorporation, they have validly transferred their subscriptions to the real parties in interest. As between the corporation on the one hand, and its shareholders and third persons on the other, the corporation looks only to its books for the purpose of determining who its shareholders are.

In the case at bar, the SEC and the Court of Appeals correctly found Yumul to be a stockholder of Nautica, of one share of stock recorded in Yumul's name, although allegedly held in trust for Dee. Nautica's Articles of Incorporation and By-laws, as well as the General Information Sheet filed with the SEC indicated that Yumul was an incorporator and subscriber of one share. Even granting that there was an agreement between Yumul and Dee whereby the former is holding the share in trust for Dee, the same is binding only as between them. From the corporation's vantage point, Yumul is its stockholder with one share, considering that there is no showing that Yumul transferred his subscription to Dee, the alleged real owner of the share, after Nautica's incorporation.

We held in Ponce v. Alsons Cement Corp. that
... A transfer of shares of stock not recorded in the stock and transfer book of the corporation is non-existent as far as the corporation is concerned. As between the corporation on one hand, and its shareholders and third persons on the other, the corporation looks only to its books for the purpose of determining who its shareholders are. It is only when the transfer has been recorded in the stock and transfer book that a corporation may rightfully regard the transferee as one of its stockholders. From this time, the consequent obligation on the part of the corporation to recognize such rights as it is mandated by law to recognize arises.

Hence, without such recording, the transferee may not be regarded by the corporation as one among its stockholders and the corporation may legally refuse the issuance of stock certificates.

Moreover, the contents of the articles of incorporation bind the corporation and its stockholders. Its contents cannot be disregarded considering that it was the basic document which legally triggered the creation of the corporation.

The Court of Appeals, in affirming the factual findings of SEC, held that:
The evidence submitted by petitioners to establish trust is palpably incompetent, consisting mainly of the self-serving allegations by the petitioners and the China Banking Corporation checks issued as payment for the shares of stock of Nautica. Dee did not testify on the supposed trust relationship between him and Yumul. While Atty. Arguelles testified, his testimony is barren of probative value since he had no first-hand knowledge of the relationship in question. The isolated fact that Dee might have paid for the share in the name of Yumul did not by itself make the latter a man of straw. Such act of payment is so nebulous and equivocal that it can not yield the meaning which the petitioners would want to squeeze from it without the clarificatory testimony of Dee.

We see no cogent reason to set aside the factual findings of the SEC, as upheld by the Court of Appeals. Findings of fact of quasi-judicial agencies, like the SEC, are generally accorded respect and even finality by the Supreme Court, if supported by substantial evidence, in recognition of their expertise on the specific matters under their consideration, moreso if the same has been upheld by the appellate court, as in this case.

Besides, other than petitioners' self-serving assertion that the beneficial ownership belongs to Dee, they failed to show that the subscription was transferred to Dee after Nautica's incorporation. The conduct of the parties also constitute sufficient proof of Yumul's status as a stockholder. On April 4, 1995, Yumul was elected during the regular annual stockholders' meeting as a Director of Nautica's

Board of Directors. Thereafter, he was elected as president of Nautica. Thus, Nautica and its stockholders knowingly held respondent out to the public as an officer and a stockholder of the corporation.

Section 23 of Batas Pambansa (BP) Blg. 68 or The Corporation Code of the Philippines requires that every director must own at least one share of the capital stock of the corporation of which he is a director. Before one may be elected president of the corporation, he must be a director. Since Yumul was elected as Nautica's Director and as President thereof, it follows that he must have owned at least one share of the corporation's capital stock.

Thus, from the point of view of the corporation, Yumul was the owner of one share of stock. As such, the SEC correctly ruled that he has the right to inspect the books and records of Nautica, pursuant to Section 74 of BP Blg. 68 which states that the records of all business transactions of the corporation and the minutes of any meetings shall be open to inspection by any director, trustee, stockholder or member of the corporation at reasonable hours on business days and he may demand, in writing, for a copy of excerpts from said records or minutes, at his expense.

(2)
Anent this issue, the SEC did not make a categorical finding on whether Yumul exercised his option and also on the validity of the Deed of Trust and Assignment. Instead, it held that:
... Although unsubstantiated, the apparent objective of the respondents' allegation was to refute petitioners claim over the shares covered by the Deed of Trust and Assignment. This must therefore be deemed as nothing but a ploy to deprive petitioner of his right over the shares in question, which to us should not be countenanced.

Neither did the Court of Appeals rule on the issue.

Thus, other than defining and enumerating the requisites of a simulated contract or deed, the Court of Appeals did not make a determination whether the SEC has the jurisdiction to resolve the issue and whether the questioned deed was fictitious or simulated.

In Intestate Estate of Alexander T. Ty v. Court of Appeals, we held that:
… The question raised in the complaints is whether or not there was indeed a sale in the absence of cause or consideration. The proper forum for such a dispute is a regular trial court. The Court agrees with the ruling of the Court of Appeals that no special corporate skill is necessary in resolving the issue of the validity of the transfer of shares from one stockholder to another of the same corporation. Both actions, although involving different property, sought to declare the nullity of the transfers of said property to the decedent on the ground that they were not supported by any cause or consideration, and thus, are considered void ab initio for being absolutely simulated or fictitious. The determination whether a contract is simulated or not is an issue that could be resolved by applying pertinent provisions of the Civil Code, particularly those relative to obligations and contracts. Disputes concerning the application of the Civil Code are properly cognizable by courts of general jurisdiction. No special skill is necessary that would require the technical expertise of the SEC. (Emphasis supplied)

Thus, when the controversy involves matters purely civil in character, it is beyond the ambit of the limited jurisdiction of the SEC. As held in Viray v. Court of Appeals, the better policy in determining which body has jurisdiction over a case would be to consider not only the status or relationship of the parties, but also the nature of the question that is the subject of their controversy. This, however, is now moot and academic due to the passage of Republic Act No. 8799 or The Securities Regulation Code which took effect on August 8, 2000. The Act transferred from the SEC to the regional trial court jurisdiction over cases involving intra-corporate disputes. Thus, whether or not the issue is intra-corporate, it is now the regional trial court and no longer the SEC that takes cognizance of the controversy.

Considering that the issue of the validity of the Deed of Trust and Assignment is civil in nature, thus, under the competence of the regular courts, and the failure of the SEC and the Court of Appeals to make a determinative finding as to its validity, we are constrained to refrain from ruling on whether or not Yumul can compel the corporate secretary to register said deed. It is only after an appropriate case is filed and decision rendered thereon by the proper forum can the issue be resolved.

3. CORPORATE NAME – LIMITATIONS ON USE OF CORPORATE NAME

REPUBLIC PLANTERS BANK, Petitioner, -versus- COURT OF APPEALS and FERMIN CANLAS, Respondents

G.R. No. 93073, SECOND DIVISION, DECEMBER 21, 1992, CAMPOS, JR., J.

A change in the corporate name does not make a new corporation, and whether effected by special act or under a general law, has no effect on the identity of the corporation, or on its property, rights, or liabilities.

The corporation continues, as before, responsible in its new name for all debts or other liabilities which it had previously contracted or incurred.

FACTS:

Defendant Shozo Yamaguchi and private respondent Fermin Canlas were President/Chief Operating Officer and Treasurer respectively, of Worldwide Garment Manufacturing, Inc.

By virtue of Board Resolution No.1 dated August 1, 1979, defendant Shozo Yamaguchi and private respondent Fermin Canlas were authorized to apply for credit facilities with the petitioner Republic Planters Bank in the forms of export advances and letters of credit/trust receipts accommodations. Petitioner bank issued nine promissory notes.

On December 20, 1982, Worldwide Garment Manufacturing, Inc. noted to change its corporate name to Pinch Manufacturing Corporation.

On February 5, 1982, petitioner bank filed a complaint for the recovery of sums of money covered among others, by the nine promissory notes with interest thereon, plus attorney's fees and penalty charges. The complainant was originally brought against Worldwide Garment Manufacturing, Inc. inter alia, but it was later amended to drop Worldwide Manufacturing, Inc. as defendant and substitute Pinch Manufacturing Corporation it its place. Defendants Pinch Manufacturing Corporation and Shozo Yamaguchi did not file an Amended Answer and failed to appear at the scheduled pre-trial conference despite due notice. Only private respondent Fermin Canlas filed an Amended Answer wherein he, denied having issued the promissory notes in question since according to him, he was not an officer of Pinch Manufacturing Corporation, but instead of Worldwide Garment Manufacturing, Inc., and that when he issued said promissory notes in behalf of Worldwide Garment Manufacturing, Inc., the same were in blank, the typewritten entries not appearing therein prior to the time he affixed his signature.

RTC ruled in favor of the plaintiff Republic Planters Bank, ordering defendant Pinch Manufacturing Corporation (formerly Worldwide Garment Manufacturing, Inc.) and defendants Shozo Yamaguchi and Fermin Canlas to pay, jointly and severally, the plaintiff bank. CA affirmed.

From the above decision only defendant Fermin Canlas appealed to the then Intermediate Court (now the Court Appeals). His contention was that inasmuch as he signed the promissory notes in his capacity as officer of the defunct Worldwide Garment Manufacturing, Inc, he should not be held personally liable for such authorized corporate acts that he performed. It is now the contention of the petitioner Republic Planters Bank that having unconditionally signed the nine (9) promissory notes with Shozo Yamaguchi, jointly and severally, defendant Fermin Canlas is solidarity liable with Shozo Yamaguchi on each of the nine notes.

ISSUE:

Whether private respondent Fermin Canlas is solidarily liable with the other defendants, namely Pinch Manufacturing Corporation and Shozo Yamaguchi, on the nine promissory notes (YES)

RULING:

Respondent Court made a grave error in holding that an amendment in a corporation's Articles of Incorporation effecting a change of corporate name, in this case from Worldwide Garment manufacturing Inc to Pinch Manufacturing Corporation extinguished the personality of the original corporation.

The corporation, upon such change in its name, is in no sense a new corporation, nor the successor of the original corporation. It is the same corporation with a different name, and its character is in no respect changed.

A change in the corporate name does not make a new corporation, and whether effected by special act or under a general law, has no affect on the identity of the corporation, or on its property, rights, or liabilities.

The corporation continues, as before, responsible in its new name for all debts or other liabilities which it had previously contracted or incurred.

As a general rule, officers or directors under the old corporate name bear no personal liability for acts done or contracts entered into by officers of the corporation, if duly authorized. Inasmuch as such officers acted in their capacity as agent of the old corporation and the change of name meant only the continuation of the old juridical entity, the corporation bearing the same name is still bound by the acts of its agents if authorized by the Board. Under the Negotiable Instruments Law, the liability of a person signing as an agent is specifically provided for as follows:

Sec. 20. Liability of a person signing as agent and so forth. Where the instrument contains or a person adds to his signature words indicating that he signs for or on behalf of a principal , or in a representative capacity, he is not liable on the instrument if he was duly authorized; but the mere addition of words describing him as an agent, or as filling a representative character, without disclosing his principal, does not exempt him from personal liability.

Where the agent signs his name but nowhere in the instrument has he disclosed the fact that he is acting in a representative capacity or the name of the third party for whom he might have acted as agent, the agent is personally liable to take holder of the instrument and cannot be permitted to prove that he was merely acting as agent of another and parol or extrinsic evidence is not admissible to avoid the agent's personal liability.

GSIS FAMILY BANK - THRIFT BANK [Formerly Inc.], Petitioner, -versus- BPI FAMILY BANK, Respondent

G.R. NO. 175278, THIRD DIVISION, SEPTEMBER 23, 2015, JARDELZA, J.

If the proposed name is similar to the name of a registered firm, the proposed name must contain at least one distinctive word different from the name of the company already registered.

Section 3 states that if there be identical, misleading or confusingly similar name to one already registered by another corporation or partnership with the SEC, the proposed name must contain at least one distinctive word different from the name of the company already registered. To show contrast with respondent's corporate name, petitioner used the words "GSIS" and "thrift." But these are not sufficiently distinct words that differentiate petitioner's corporate name from respondent's. While "GSIS" is merely an acronym of the proper name by which petitioner is identified, the word "thrift" is simply a classification of the type of bank that petitioner is. Even if the classification of the bank as "thrift" is appended to petitioner's proposed corporate name, it will not make the said corporate name distinct from respondent's because the latter is likewise engaged in the banking business.

FACTS:

Petitioner was originally organized as Royal Savings Bank and started operations in 1971 but encountered liquidity problems. It was placed under receivership and later temporarily closed by the Central Bank of the Philippines. Two (2) months after its closure, petitioner reopened and was renamed Comsavings Bank, Inc. under the management of the Commercial Bank of Manila

In 1987, GSIS acquired petitioner from the Commercial Bank of Manila. Petitioner's management and control was thus transferred to GSIS. To improve its marketability to the public, especially to the members of the GSIS, petitioner sought Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) approval to change its corporate name to "GSIS Family Bank, a Thrift Bank."[8]Petitioner likewise applied with the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) and Bangko Sentral ng Pilpinas (BSP) for authority to use "GSIS Family Bank, a Thrift Bank" as its business name. The DTI and the BSP approved the applications. Thus, petitioner operates under the corporate name "GSIS Family Bank – a Thrift Bank," pursuant to the DTI Certificate of Registration No. 741375 and the Monetary Board Circular approval.

Respondent BPI Family Bank was a product of the merger between the Family Bank and Trust Company (FBTC) and the Bank of the Philippine Islands (BPI). On June 27, 1969, the Gotianum family registered with the SEC the corporate name "Family First Savings Bank," which was amended to "Family Savings Bank," and then later to "Family Bank and Trust Company." Since its incorporation, the bank has been commonly known as "Family Bank." In 1985, Family Bank merged with BPI, and the latter acquired all the rights, privileges, properties, and interests of Family Bank, including the right to use names, such as "Family First Savings Bank,"

"Family Bank," and "Family Bank and Trust Company." BPI Family Savings Bank was registered with the SEC as a wholly-owned subsidiary of BPI. BPI Family Savings Bank then registered with the Bureau of Domestic Trade the trade or business name "BPI Family Bank," and acquired a reputation and goodwill under the name.

Eventually, it reached respondent's attention that petitioner is using or attempting to use the name "Family Bank." Thus, on March 8, 2002, respondent petitioned the SEC Company Registration and Monitoring Department (SEC CRMD) to disallow or prevent the registration of the name "GSIS Family Bank" or any other corporate name with the words "Family Bank" in it. Respondent claimed exclusive ownership to the name "Family Bank," having acquired the name since its purchase and merger with Family Bank and Trust Company way back 1985. Respondent also alleged that through the years, it has been known as "BPI Family Bank" or simply "Family Bank" both locally and internationally. As such, it has acquired a reputation and goodwill under the name, not only with clients here and abroad, but also with correspondent and competitor banks, and the public in general.

The SEC CRMD declared that upon the merger of FBTC with the BPI in 1985, the latter acquired the right to the use of the name of the absorbed corporation. Thus, BPI Family Bank has a prior right to the use of the name. SEC EN Banc upheld the ruling.

The Court of Appeals ruled that the approvals by the BSP and by the DTI of petitioner's application to use the name "GSIS Family Bank" do not constitute authority for its lawful and valid use. It said that the SEC has absolute jurisdiction, supervision and control over all corporations. CA held that respondent was entitled to the exclusive use of the corporate name because of its prior adoption of the name "Family Bank" since 1969

ISSUE:

Whether respondent was entitled to the exclusive use of the corporate name (YES)

RULING:

Section 18. Corporate name. – No corporate name may be allowed by the Securities and Exchange Commission if the proposed name is identical or deceptively or confusingly similar to that of any existing corporation or to any other name already protected by law or is patently deceptive, confusing or contrary to existing laws. When a change in the corporate name is approved, the Commission shall issue an amended certificate of incorporation under the amended name.

In Philips Export B.V. v. Court of Appeals, this Court ruled that to fall within the prohibition of the law on the right to the exclusive use of a corporate name, two requisites must be proven, namely:
(1) that the complainant corporation acquired a prior right over the use of such corporate name; and
(2) the proposed name is either

(a) identical or

(b) deceptive or confusingly similar to that of any existing corporation or to any other name already protected by law; or
(c) patently deceptive, confusing or contrary to existing law.

These two requisites are present in this case.

On the first requisite of a prior right, Industrial Refractories Corporation of the Philippines v. Court of Appeals (IRCP case) is instructive. In that case, Refractories Corporation of the Philippines (RCP) filed before the SEC a petition to compel Industrial Refractories Corporation of the Philippines (IRCP) to change its corporate name on the ground that its corporate name is confusingly similar with that of RCP's such that the public may be confused into believing that they are one and the same corporation. The SEC and the Court of Appeals found for petitioner, and ordered IRCP to delete or drop from its corporate name the word "Refractories." Upon appeal of IRCP, this Court upheld the decision of the CA.

Applying the priority of adoption rule to determine prior right, this Court said that RCP has acquired the right to use the word "Refractories" as part of its corporate name, being its prior registrant. In arriving at this conclusion, the Court considered that RCP was incorporated on October 13, 1976 and since then continuously used the corporate name "Refractories Corp. of the Philippines." Meanwhile, IRCP only started using its corporate name "Industrial Refractories Corp. of the Philippines" when it amended its Articles of Incorporation on August 23, 1985.

In this case, respondent was incorporated in 1969 as Family Savings Bank and in 1985 as BPI Family Bank. Petitioner, on the other hand, was incorporated as GSIS Family – Thrift Bank only in 2002, or at least seventeen (17) years after respondent started using its name. Following the precedent in the IRCP case, we rule that respondent has the prior right over the use of the corporate name.

The second requisite in the Philips Export case likewise obtains on two points: the proposed name is (a) identical or (b) deceptive or confusingly similar to that of any existing corporation or to any other name already protected by law.
On the first point (a), the words "Family Bank" present in both petitioner and respondent's corporate name satisfy the requirement that there be identical names in the existing corporate name and the proposed one.

Respondent cannot justify its claim under Section 3 of the Revised Guidelines in the Approval of Corporate and Partnership Names, to wit:

3. The name shall not be identical, misleading or confusingly similar to one already registered by another corporation or partnership with the Commission or a sole proprietorship registered with the Department of Trade and Industry.

If the proposed name is similar to the name of a registered firm, the proposed name must contain at least one distinctive word different from the name of the company already registered.

Section 3 states that if there be identical, misleading or confusingly similar name to one already registered by another corporation or partnership with the SEC, the proposed name must contain at least one distinctive word different from the name of the company already registered. To show contrast with respondent's corporate name, petitioner used the words "GSIS" and "thrift." But these are not sufficiently distinct words that differentiate petitioner's corporate name from respondent's. While "GSIS" is merely an acronym of the proper name by which petitioner is identified, the word "thrift" is simply a classification of the type of bank that petitioner is. Even if the classification of the bank as "thrift" is appended to petitioner's proposed corporate name, it will not make the said corporate name distinct from respondent's because the latter is likewise engaged in the banking business.

This Court used the same analysis in Ang mga Kaanib sa Iglesia ng Dios Kay Kristo Hesus, H.S.K. sa Bansang Pilipinas, Inc. v. Iglesia ng Dios Kay Cristo Jesus, Haligi at Suhay ng Katotohanan. In that case, Iglesia ng Dios Kay Cristo Jesus filed a case before the SEC to compel Ang mga Kaanib sa Iglesia ng Dios Kay Kristo Hesus to change its corporate name, and to prevent it from using the same or similar name on the ground that the same causes confusion among their members as well as the public. Ang mga Kaanib sa Iglesia ng Dios Kay Kristo Hesus claimed that it complied with SEC Memorandum Circular No. 14-2000 by adding not only two, but eight words to their registered name, to wit: "Ang Mga Kaanib" and "Sa Bansang Pilipinas, Inc.," which effectively distinguished it from Iglesia ng Dios Kay Cristo Jesus. This Court rejected the argument, thus:

The additional words "Ang Mga Kaanib" and "Sa Bansang Pilipinas, Inc." in petitioner's name are, as correctly observed by the SEC, merely descriptive of and also referring to the members, or kaanib, of respondent who are likewise residing in the Philippines. These words can hardly serve as an effective differentiating medium necessary to avoid confusion or difficulty in distinguishing petitioner from respondent. This is especially so, since both petitioner and respondent corporations are using the same acronym – H.S.K.; not to mention the fact that both are espousing religious beliefs and operating in the same place. Xxx[41]

On the second point (b), there is a deceptive and confusing similarity between petitioner's proposed name and respondent's corporate name, as found by the SEC. In determining the existence of confusing similarity in corporate names, the test is whether the similarity is such as to mislead a person using ordinary care and discrimination. And even without such proof of actual confusion between the two corporate names, it suffices that confusion is probable or likely to occur.

Petitioner's corporate name is "GSIS Family Bank—A Thrift Bank" and respondent's corporate name is "BPI Family Bank." The only words that distinguish the two are "BPI," "GSIS," and "Thrift." The first two words are merely the acronyms of the proper names by which the two corporations identify themselves; and the third word simply describes the classification of the bank. The overriding consideration in determining whether a person, using ordinary care and discrimination, might be misled is the circumstance that both petitioner and respondent are engaged in the same business of banking. "The likelihood of confusion is accentuated in cases where the goods or business of one corporation are the same or substantially the same to that of another corporation."

Respondent alleged that upon seeing a Comsavings Bank branch with the signage "GSIS Family Bank" displayed at its premises, some of the respondent's officers and their clients began asking questions. These include whether GSIS has acquired Family Bank; whether there is a joint arrangement between GSIS and Family Bank; whether there is a joint arrangement between BPI and GSIS regarding Family Bank; whether Comsavings Bank has acquired Family Bank; and whether there is there an arrangement among Comsavings Bank, GSIS, BPI, and Family Bank regarding BPI Family Bank and GSIS Family Bank.[46] The SEC made a finding that "[i]t is not a remote possibility that the public may entertain the idea that a relationship or arrangement indeed exists between BPI and GSIS due to the use of the term 'Family Bank' in their corporate names."

Findings of fact of quasi-judicial agencies, like the SEC, are generally accorded respect and even finality by this Court, if supported by substantial evidence, in recognition of their expertise on the specific matters under their consideration, more so if the same has been upheld by the appellate court, as in this case.

Petitioner cannot argue that the word "family" is a generic or descriptive name, which cannot be appropriated exclusively by respondent. "Family," as used in respondent's corporate name, is not generic. Generic marks are commonly used as the name or description of a kind of goods, such as "Lite" for beer or "Chocolate Fudge" for chocolate soda drink. Descriptive marks, on the other hand, convey the characteristics, function, qualities or ingredients of a product to one who has never seen it or does not know it exists, such as "Arthriticare" for arthritis medication.

Under the facts of this case, the word "family" cannot be separated from the word "bank." In asserting their claims before the SEC up to the Court of Appeals, both petitioner and respondent refer to the phrase "Family Bank" in their submissions. This coined phrase, neither being generic nor descriptive, is merely suggestive and may properly be regarded as arbitrary. Arbitrary marks are "words or phrases used as a mark that appear to be random in the context of its use. They are generally considered to be easily remembered because of their arbitrariness. They are original and unexpected in relation to the products they endorse, thus, becoming themselves distinctive." Suggestive marks, on the other hand, "are marks which merely suggest some quality or ingredient of goods. xxx The strength of the suggestive marks lies on how the public perceives the word in relation to the product or service."

In Ang v. Teodoro, this Court ruled that the words "Ang Tibay" is not a descriptive term within the meaning of the Trademark Law but rather a fanciful or coined phrase. In so ruling, this Court considered the etymology and meaning of the Tagalog words, "Ang Tibay" to determine whether they relate to the quality or description of the merchandise to which respondent therein applied them as trademark.

The word "family" is defined as "a group consisting of parents and children living together in a household" or "a group of people related to one another by blood or marriage." Bank, on the other hand, is defined as "a financial establishment that invests money deposited by customers, pays it out when requested, makes loans at interest, and exchanges currency." By definition, there can be no expected relation between the word "family" and the banking business of respondent. Rather, the words suggest that respondent's bank is where family savings should be deposited. More, as in the Ang case, the phrase "family bank" cannot be used to define an object.

Petitioner's argument that the opinion of the BSP and the certificate of registration granted to it by the DTI constitute authority for it to use "GSIS Family Bank" as corporate name is also untenable.

The enforcement of the protection accorded by Section 18 of the Corporation Code to corporate names is lodged exclusively in the SEC. The jurisdiction of the SEC is not merely confined to the adjudicative functions provided in Section 5 of the SEC Reorganization Act, as amended. By express mandate, the SEC has absolute jurisdiction, supervision and control over all corporations. It is the SEC's duty to prevent confusion in the use of corporate names not only for the protection of the corporations involved, but more so for the protection of the public. It has authority to de-register at all times, and under all circumstances corporate names which in its estimation are likely to generate confusion.

The SEC correctly applied Section 18 of the Corporation Code, and Section 15 of SEC Memorandum Circular No. 14-2000, pertinent portions of which provide:
In implementing Section 18 of the Corporation Code of the Philippines (BP 69), the following revised guidelines in the approval of corporate and partnership names are hereby adopted for the information and guidance of all concerned:
xxx
15. Registrant corporations or partnership shall submit a letter undertaking to change their corporate or partnership name in case another person or firm has acquired a prior right to the use of the said firm name or the same is deceptively or confusingly similar to one already registered unless this undertaking is already included as one of the provisions of the articles of incorporation or partnership of the registrant.

The SEC, after finding merit in respondent's claims, can compel petitioner to abide by its commitment "to change its corporate name in the event that another person, firm or entity has acquired a prior right to use of said name or one similar to it."

Clearly, the only determination relevant to this case is that one made by the SEC in the exercise of its express mandate under the law. The BSP opinion invoked by petitioner even acknowledges that "the issue on whether a proposed name is identical or deceptively similar to that of any of existing corporation is matter within the official jurisdiction and competence of the SEC."

Judicial notice may also be taken of the action of the IPO in approving respondent's registration of the trademark "BPI Family Bank" and its logo on October 17, 2008. The certificate of registration of a mark shall be prima facie evidence of the validity of the registration, the registrant's ownership of the mark, and of the registrant's exclusive right to use the same in connection with the goods or services and those that are related thereto specified in the certificate.

P.C. JAVIER & SONS, INC., SPS. PABLO C. JAVIER, SR. and ROSALINA F. JAVIER, Petitioners, -versus- HON. COURT OF APPEALS, PAIC SAVINGS & MORTGAGE BANK, INC., SHERIFFS GRACE BELVIS, SOFRONIO VILLARIN, PIO MARTINEZ and NICANOR BLANCO, Respondents
G.R. No. 129552, SECOND DIVISION, JUNE 29, 2005, CHICO-NAZARIO, J.

It cannot be denied that petitioner corporation was aware of First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank's change of corporate name to PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc.

Knowing fully well of such change, petitioner corporation has no valid reason not to pay because the IGLF loans were applied with and obtained from First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank. First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank and PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc., are one and the same bank to which petitioner corporation is indebted.

A change in the corporate name does not make a new corporation, whether effected by a special act or under a general law. It has no effect on the identity of the corporation, or on its property, rights, or liabilities.

FACTS:

Plaintiff Corporation, P.C. Javier and Sons Services, Inc., applied with First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank, later on renamed as PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Defendant Bank, for short, for a loan accommodation under the Industrial Guarantee Loan Fund (IGLF) for ₱1.5 Million.

On March 21, 1981, Plaintiff Corporation through Plaintiff Pablo C. Javier, Plaintiff Javier for short, was advised that its loan application was approved and that the same shall be forwarded to the Central Bank (CB) for processing and release.

Plaintiff Corporation defaulted in the payment of its IGLF loan with Defendant Bank hence Defendant Bank sent a demand letter dated reminding Plaintiff Javier to make payments because their accounts have been long overdue; Defendant Bank sent another demand letter to Plaintiff spouses informing them that since they have defaulted in paying their obligation, their mortgage will now be foreclosed; that when Plaintiffs still failed to pay, Defendant Bank initiated extrajudicial foreclosure of the real estate mortgage executed by Plaintiff spouses and accordingly the auction sale of the property covered by TCT No. 473216 was scheduled by the Ex–Officio Sheriff.

The instant complaint was filed to forestall the extrajudicial foreclosure sale of a piece of land covered by Transfer Certificate of Title (TCT) No. 473216 mortgaged by petitioner corporation in favor of First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank which bank was later renamed as PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc. It likewise asked for the nullification of the Real Estate Mortgages it entered into with First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank.

Among the issues raised by petitioners at the RTC are whether or not First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank and PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc. are one and the same entity.

The RTC declared that First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank and PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc. are one and the same entity and that petitioner corporation is liable to respondent bank for the unpaid balance of its Industrial Guarantee Loan Fund (IGLF) loans. The RTC further ruled that respondent bank was justified in extrajudicially foreclosing the real estate mortgages executed by petitioner corporation in its favor because the loans were already due and demandable when it commenced foreclosure proceedings.

The Court of Appeals affirmed in toto the decision of the lower court.

Hence, this appeal by certiorari.

Petitioners argue that they are legally justified to withhold their amortized payments to the respondent bank until such time they would have been properly notified of the change in the corporate name of First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank. They claim that they have never received any formal notice of the alleged change of corporate name of First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank to PAIC Savings & Mortgage Bank, Inc. They further claim that the only and first time they received formal evidence of a change in the corporate name of First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank surfaced when respondent bank presented its witness, Michael Caguioa, where he presented the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) Certificate of Filing of the Amended Articles of Incorporation of First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank, the Central Bank (CB) Certificate of Authority to change the name of First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank to PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc., and the CB Circular Letter.

ISSUE:

Whether First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank and PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc. are one and the same entity (YES)

RULING:

Their defense that they should first be formally notified of the change of corporate name of First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank to PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc., before they will continue paying their loan obligations to respondent bank presupposes that there exists a requirement under a law or regulation ordering a bank that changes its corporate name to formally notify all its debtors. After going over the Corporation Code and Banking Laws, as well as the regulations and circulars of both the SEC and the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP), we find that there is no such requirement. This being the case, this Court cannot impose on a bank that changes its corporate name to notify a debtor of such change absent any law, circular or regulation requiring it. Such act would be judicial legislation. The formal notification is, therefore, discretionary on the bank. Unless there is a law, regulation or circular from the SEC or BSP requiring the formal notification of all debtors of banks of any change in corporate name, such notification remains to be a mere internal policy that banks may or may not adopt.

In the case at bar, though there was no evidence showing that petitioners were furnished copies of official documents showing the First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank's change of corporate name to PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc., evidence abound that they had notice or knowledge thereof.

Several documents establish this fact. First, letter dated 16 July 1983 signed by Raymundo V. Blanco, Accountant of petitioner corporation, addressed to PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc. Part of said letter reads: "In connection with your inquiry as to the utilization of funds we obtained from the former First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank, . . ." Second, Board Resolution of petitioner corporation signed by Pablo C. Javier, Sr. on 24 August 1983 authorizing him to execute a Chattel Mortgage over certain machinery in favor of PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc. Third, Secretary's Certificate signed by Fortunato E. Gabriel, Corporate Secretary of petitioner corporation, on 01 September 1983, certifying that a board resolution was passed authorizing Mr. Pablo C. Javier, Sr. to execute a chattel mortgage on the corporation's equipment that will serve as collateral to cover the IGLF loan with PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc. Fourth, undated letter signed by Pablo C. Javier, Sr. and addressed to PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc., authorizing Mr. Victor F. Javier, General Manager of petitioner corporation, to secure from PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc. certain documents for his signature.

From the foregoing documents, it cannot be denied that petitioner corporation was aware of First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank's change of corporate name to PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc.

Knowing fully well of such change, petitioner corporation has no valid reason not to pay because the IGLF loans were applied with and obtained from First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank. First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank and PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc., are one and the same bank to which petitioner corporation is indebted.

A change in the corporate name does not make a new corporation, whether effected by a special act or under a general law. It has no effect on the identity of the corporation, or on its property, rights, or liabilities. The corporation, upon such change in its name, is in no sense a new corporation, nor the successor of the original corporation. It is the same corporation with a different name, and its character is in no respect changed

ZUELLIG FREIGHT AND CARGO SYSTEMS, Petitioner, -versus- NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS COMMISSION AND RONALDO V. SAN MIGUEL, Respondents
G.R. No. 157900, FIRST DIVISION, JULY 22, 2013, BERSAMIN, J.

Zeta and petitioner remained one and the same corporation. The change of name did not give petitioner the license to terminate employees of Zeta like San Miguel without just or authorized cause. The situation was not similar to that of an enterprise buying the business of another company where the purchasing company had no obligation to rehire terminated employees of the latter. Petitioner, despite its new name, was the mere continuation of Zeta's corporate being, and still held the obligation to honor all of Zeta's obligations, one of which was to respect San Miguel's security of tenure. The dismissal of San Miguel from employment on the pretext that petitioner, being a different corporation, had no obligation to accept him as its employee, was illegal and ineffectual.

FACTS:

San Miguel brought a complaint for unfair labor practice, illegal dismissal, non-payment of salaries and moral damages against petitioner, formerly known as Zeta Brokerage Corporation (Zeta). He alleged that he had been a checker/customs representative of Zeta since December 16, 1985; that in January 1994, he and other employees of Zeta were informed that Zeta would cease operations, and that all affected employees, including him, would be separated; that by letter dated February 28, 1994, Zeta informed him of his termination effective March 31, 1994; that he reluctantly accepted his separation pay subject to the standing offer to be hired to his former position by petitioner; and that on April 15, 1994, he was summarily terminated, without any valid cause and due process.

Labor arbiter held that San Miguel was illegally dimissed. Contrary to respondents' claim that Zeta ceased operations and closed its business, the LA stated that there was merely a change of business name and primary purpose and upgrading of stocks of the corporation.

NLRC and CA affirmed.

ISSUE:

Whether CA erred in holding that the NLRC did not act with grave abuse of discretion in ruling that the closure of the business operation of Zeta had not been bona fide, thereby resulting in the illegal dismissal of San Miguel (NO)

RULING:

It is worthy to point out that the Labor Arbiter, the NLRC, and the CA were united in concluding that the cessation of business by Zeta was not a bona fide closure to be regarded as a valid ground for the termination of employment of San Miguel within the ambit of Article 283 of the Labor Code. The provision pertinently reads:

Article 283. Closure of establishment and reduction of personnel. — The employer may also terminate the employment of any employee due to the installation of labor-saving devices, redundancy, retrenchment to prevent losses or the closing or cessation of operation of the establishment or undertaking unless the closing is for the purpose of circumventing the provisions of this Title, by serving a written notice on the workers and the Department of Labor and Employment at least one (1) month before the intended date thereof. x x x.

The unanimous conclusions of the CA, the NLRC and the Labor Arbiter, being in accord with law, were not tainted with any abuse of discretion, least of all grave, on the part of the NLRC. Verily, the amendments of the articles of incorporation of Zeta to change the corporate name to Zuellig Freight and Cargo Systems, Inc. did not produce the dissolution of the former as a corporation. For sure, the Corporation Code defined and delineated the different modes of dissolving a corporation, and amendment of the articles of incorporation was not one of such modes. The effect of the change of name was not a change of the corporate being, for, as well stated in Philippine First Insurance Co., Inc. v. Hartigan: "The changing of the name of a corporation is no more the creation of a corporation than the changing of the name of a natural person is begetting of a natural person. The act, in both cases, would seem to be what the language which we use to designate it imports – a change of name, and not a change of being."

The consequences, legal and otherwise, of the change of name were similarly dealt with in P.C. Javier & Sons, Inc. v. Court of Appeals, with the Court holding thusly:

From the foregoing documents, it cannot be denied that petitioner corporation was aware of First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank's change of corporate name to PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc. Knowing fully well of such change, petitioner corporation has no valid reason not to pay because the IGLF loans were applied with and obtained from First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank. First Summa Savings and Mortgage Bank and PAIC Savings and Mortgage Bank, Inc., are one and the same bank to which petitioner corporation is indebted. A change in the corporate name does not make a new corporation, whether effected by a special act or under a general law. It has no effect on the identity of the corporation, or on its property, rights, or liabilities. The corporation, upon to change in its name, is in no sense a new corporation, nor the successor of the original corporation. It is the same corporation with a different name, and its character is in no respect changed. (Bold underscoring supplied for emphasis)

In short, Zeta and petitioner remained one and the same corporation. The change of name did not give petitioner the license to terminate employees of Zeta like San Miguel without just or authorized cause. The situation was not similar to that of an enterprise buying the business of another company where the purchasing company had no obligation to rehire terminated employees of the latter. Petitioner, despite its new name, was the mere continuation of Zeta's corporate being, and still held the obligation to honor all of Zeta's obligations, one of which was to respect San Miguel's security of tenure. The dismissal of San Miguel from employment on the pretext that petitioner, being a different corporation, had no obligation to accept him as its employee, was illegal and ineffectual.

INDIAN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PHILS., INC. Petitioner, -versus- FILIPINO INDIAN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IN THE PHILIPPINES, INC., Respondent

G.R. No. 184008, THIRD DIVISION, AUGUST 3, 2016, JARDELEZA, J.

On the second point, ICCPI's corporate name is deceptively or confusingly similar to that of FICCPI. It is settled that to determine the existence of confusing similarity in corporate names, the test is whether the similarity is such as to mislead a person, using ordinary care and discrimination. In so doing, the court must examine the record as well as the names themselves. Proof of actual confusion need not be shown. It suffices that confusion is probably or likely to occur.

In this case, the overriding consideration in determining wheiher a person, using ordinary care and discrimination, might be misled is the circumstance that both ICCPI and FICCPI have a common primary purpose, that is, the promotion of Filipino-Indian business in the Philippines..

FACTS:

Filipino-Indian Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines, Inc. (defunct FICCPI) was originally registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) as Indian Chamber of Commerce of Manila, Inc. On November 24, 2001, FICCPI's corporate existence expired for it didn't apply for the extension of its term.

On January 20, 2005, Mr. Naresh Mansukhani (Mansukhani) reserved the corporate name "Filipino Indian Chamber of Commerce in the Philippines, Inc" (FICCPI) for the period from January 20, 2005 to April 20, 2005, with the Company Registration and Monitoring Department (CRMD) of the SEC. Ram Sitaldas (Sitaldas), who claimed to be the representative of the defunct FICCPI, opposed to this and argued that such unauthorized reservation was illegal.

According to the CRMD, the expiration of the defunct FICCPI's corporate existence signified the end of its right over the said name and thus, the same may be appropriated by another. Both the SEC and CA ruled in favor of Mansukhani.

A year after the reservation of the name, FICCPI was issued a Certificate of Incorporation. In 2005, Mr. Pracash Dayacanl, who represented the defunct FICCPI, applied for the reservation of the corporate name "Indian Chamber of Commerce Phils., Inc." (ICCPI) with the CRMD. Mansukhani filed an opposition to this, which the CRMD denied. It stated that the name "Indian Chamber of Commerce Phils., Inc." was not deceptively or confusingly similar to "Filipino Indian Chamber of Commerce in the Philippines, Inc." On the same date, the CRMD approved and issued a Certificate of Incorporation to ICCPI.

Upon appeal, the SEC En Banc ruled otherwise. The committee found the existence of a similarity between the names that could lead to confusion. It also ruled that FICCPI enjoys prior right to use its corporate name to the exclusion of the others. The CA affirmed such ruling, stating that by simply looking at the corporate names of ICCPI and FICCPI, one may readily notice the striking similarity between the two. An ordinary person using ordinary care and discrimination may be led to believe that the corporate names of ICCPI and FICCPI refer to one and the same corporation

ISSUE:

Whether there is similarity between the petitioner's and the respondent's corporate names that would inevitably lead to confusion (YES)

RULING:

YES. Section 18 of the Corporation Code expressly prohibits the use of a corporate name which is identical or deceptively or confusingly similar to that of any existing corporation. In Philips Export B. V. v. Court of Appeals, this Court ruled that to fall within the prohibition, two requisites must be proven, namely: a) that the complainant corporation acquired a prior right over the use of such corporate name, and b) that the proposed name is either identical, deceptively or confusingly similar to that of any existing corporation or to any other name already protected by law, or patently deceptive, confusing or contrary to existing law.

In the case at bar, both requisites were proven. ICCPI was incorporated a month after FICCPI registered its corporate name.

Thus, applying the Priority of Adoption Rule, FICCPI, which was incorporated earlier, acquired a prior right over the use of the corporate name. ICCPI cannot argue that it first incorporated and held the "Filipino Indian Chamber of Commerce," until it failed to renew its name due to oversight. A corporation is deemed dissolved when its term expires.

According to SEC Memorandum Circular No. 14-2000, the name of a dissolved firm shall not be allowed to be used by other firms within three years after the approval of the dissolution of the corporation by the Commission, unless allowed by the last stockholders representing at least majority of the outstanding capital stock of the dissolved firm. Following this rule, FICCPI was able to reserve the name "Filipino Indian Chamber of Commerce in the Philippines, Inc." after the three-year prohibition.

Petitioner cannot argue that the combination of words in respondent's corporate name is merely descriptive and generic, and consequently cannot be appropriated as a corporate name to the exclusion of the others. Save for the words "Filipino," "in the," and "Inc.," the corporate names of petitioner and respondent are identical in all other respects. This issue was also discussed in the Iglesia case where this Court held,

Furthermore, the wholesale appropriation by petitioner of respondent's corporate name cannot find justification under the generic word rule. We agree with the Court of Appeals' conclusion that a contrary ruling would encourage other corporations to adopt verbatim and register an existing and protected corporate name, to the detriment of the public.

On the second point, ICCPI's corporate name is deceptively or confusingly similar to that of FICCPI. It is settled that to determine the existence of confusing similarity in corporate names, the test is whether the similarity is such as to mislead a person, using ordinary care and discrimination. In so doing, the court must examine the record as well as the names themselves. Proof of actual confusion need not be shown. It suffices that confusion is probably or likely to occur.

In this case, the overriding consideration in determining whether a person, using ordinary care and discrimination, might be misled is the circumstance that both ICCPI and FICCPI have a common primary purpose, that is, the promotion of Filipino-Indian business in the Philippines.

The primary purposes of ICCPI as provided in its Articles of Incorporation are:

Develop a stronger sense of brotherhood;

Enhance the prestige of the Filipino-Indian business community in the Philippines;

Promote cordial business relations with Filipinos and other business communities in the Philippines, and other overseas Indian business organizations;

Respond fully to the needs of a progressive economy and the Filipino-Indian Business community;

Promote and foster relations between the people and Governments of the Republics of the Philippines and India in areas of Industry, Trade, and Culture.61chanroblesvirtuallawlibrary
Likewise, the primary purpose of FICCPI is "[t]o actively promote and enhance the Filipino-Indian business relationship especially in view of [current] local and global business trends."

Considering these corporate purposes, the SEC En Banc made a finding that "[i]t is apparent that both from the standpoint of their corporate names and the purposes for which they were established, there exist a I similarity that could inevitably lead to confusion." This finding of the SEC En Banc was fully concurred with and adopted by the CA.

Findings of fact of quasi-judicial agencies, like the SEC, are generally accorded respect and even finality by this Court, if supported by substantial evidence, in recognition of their expertise on the specific matters under their consideration, and more so if the same has been upheld by the appellate court, as in this case.

Petitioner cannot argue that the CA erred when it upheld the SEC En Banc's decision to cancel ICCPFs corporate name. By express mandate of law, the SEC has absolute jurisdiction, supervision and control over all corporations. It is the SEC's duty to prevent confusion in the use of corporate names not only for the protection of the corporation involved, but more so for the protection of the public. It has the authority to de-register at all times, and under all circumstances corporate names which in its estimation are likely to generate confusion.68chanrobleslaw

Pursuant to its mandate, the SEC En Banc correctly applied Section 18 of the Corporation Code, and Section 15 of SEC Memorandum Circular No. 14-2000

DE LA SALLE MONTESSORI INTERNATIONAL OF MALOLOS, INC., Petitioner, -versus- DE LA SALLE BROTHERS, INC., DE LA SALLE UNIVERSITY, INC., LA SALLE ACADEMY, INC., DE LA SALLE-SANTIAGO ZOBEL SCHOOL, INC. (FORMERLY NAMED DE LA SALLE-SOUTH INC.), DE LA SALLE CANLUBANG, INC. (FORMERLY NAMED DE LA SALLE UNIVERSITY-CANLUBANG, INC.), Respondents

G.R. No. 205548, FIRST DIVISION, FEBRUARY 7, 2018, JARDELEZA, J.

In determining the existence of confusing similarity in corporate names, the test is whether the similarity is such as to mislead a person using ordinary care and discrimination. In so doing, the Court must look to the record as well as the names themselves.

Petitioner's assertion that the words "Montessori International of Malolos, Inc." are four distinctive words that are not found in respondents' corporate names so that their corporate name is not identical, confusingly similar, patently deceptive or contrary to existing laws, does not avail. As correctly held by the SEC OGC, all these words, when used with the name "De La Salle," can reasonably mislead a person using ordinary care and discretion into thinking that petitioner is an affiliate or a branch of, or is likewise founded by, any or all of the respondents, thereby causing confusion.

FACTS:

Petitioner reserved with the SEC its corporate name De La Salle Montessori International Malolos, Inc. from June 4 to August 3, 2007, after which the SEC indorsed petitioner's articles of incorporation and by-laws to the Department of Education (DepEd) for comments and recommendation. The DepEd returned the indorsement without objections.8 Consequently, the SEC issued a certificate of incorporation to petitioner.

Afterwards, DepEd Region III, City of San Fernando, Pampanga granted petitioner government recognition for its pre-elementary and elementary courses on June 30, 2008, and for its secondary courses on February 15, 2010.

On January 29, 2010, respondents De La Salle Brothers, Inc., De La Salle University, Inc., La Salle Academy, Inc., De La Salle-Santiago Zobel School, Inc. (formerly De La Salle-South, Inc.), and De La Salle Canlubang, Inc. (formerly De La Salle University-Canlubang, Inc.) filed a petition with the SEC seeking to compel petitioner to change its corporate name. Respondents claim that petitioner's corporate name is misleading or confusingly similar to that which respondents have acquired a prior right to use, and that respondents' consent to use such name was not obtained. According to respondents, petitioner's use of the dominant phrases "La Salle" and "De La Salle" gives an erroneous impression that De La Salle Montessori International of Malolos, Inc. is part of the "La Salle" group, which violates Section 18 of the Corporation Code of the Philippines. Moreover, being the prior registrant, respondents have acquired the use of said phrases as part of their corporate names and have freedom from infringement of the same.

SEC OGC issued an Order directing petitioner to change or modify its corporate name.

The SEC OGC disagreed with petitioner's argument that the case of Lyceum of the Philippines, Inc. v. Court of Appeals (Lyceum of the Philippines) applies since the word "lyceum" is clearly descriptive of the very being and defining purpose of an educational corporation, unlike the term "De La Salle" or "La Salle." Hence, the Court held in that case that the Lyceum of the Philippines, Inc. cannot claim exclusive use of the name "lyceum." This was upheld by SEC En Banc and CA.

ISSUE:

> Whether CA erred in not applying the ruling in the Lyceum of the Philippines case which petitioner argues have "the same facts and events" as in this case. (NO)

RULING:

As early as Western Equipment and Supply Co. v. Reyes, the Court declared that a corporation's right to use its corporate and trade name is a property right, a right in rem, which it may assert and protect against the world in the same manner as it may protect its tangible property, real or personal, against trespass or conversion. It is regarded, to a certain extent, as a property right and one which cannot be impaired or defeated by subsequent appropriation by another corporation in the same field. Furthermore, in Philips Export B.V. v. Court of Appeals, we held:

A name is peculiarly important as necessary to the very existence of a corporation x x x. Its name is one of its attributes, an element of its existence, and essential to its identity x x x. The general rule as to corporations is that each corporation must have a name by which it is to sue and be sued and do all legal acts. The name of a corporation in this respect designates the corporation in the same manner as the name of an individual designates the person x x x; and the right to use its corporate name is as much a part of the corporate franchise as any other privilege granted x x x.

A corporation acquires its name by choice and need not select a name identical with or similar to one already appropriated by a senior corporation while an individual's name is thrust upon him x x x. A corporation can no more use a corporate name in violation of the rights of others than an individual can use his nan1e legally acquired so as to mislead the public and injure another x x x.

Recognizing the intrinsic importance of corporate names, our Corporation Code established a restrictive rule insofar as corporate names are concerned under Section 18.

The policy underlying the prohibition in Section 18 against the registration of a corporate name which is "identical or deceptively or confusingly similar" to that of any existing corporation or which is "patently deceptive" or "patently confusing" or "contrary to existing laws," is the avoidance of fraud upon the public which would have occasion to deal with the entity concerned, the evasion of legal obligations and duties, and the reduction of difficulties of administration and supervision over corporations.

Indeed, parties organizing a corporation must choose a name at their peril; and the use of a name similar to one adopted by another corporation, whether a business or a non-profit organization, if misleading or likely to injure in the exercise of its corporate functions, regardless of intent, may be prevented by the corporation having a prior right, by a suit for injunction against the new corporation to prevent the use of the name.

In Philips Export B.V. v. Court of Appeals,the Court held that to fall within the prohibition of Section , two requisites must be proven, to wit: (1) that the complainant corporation acquired a prior right over the use of such corporate name; and (2) the proposed name is either: (a) identical, or (b) deceptively or confusingly similar to that of any existing corporation or to any other name already protected by law; or (c) patently deceptive, confusing or contrary to existing law.32

With respect to the first requisite, the Court has held that the right to the exclusive use of a corporate name with freedom from infringement by similarity is determined by priority of adoption.

In this case, respondents' corporate names were registered on the following dates: (1) De La Salle Brothers, Inc. on October 9, 1961 under SEC Registration No. 19569; (2) De La Salle University, Inc. on December 19, 1975 under SEC Registration No. 65138; (3) La Salle Academy, Inc. on January 26, 1960 under SEC Registration No. 16293; (4) De La Salle-Santiago Zobel School, Inc. on October 7, 1976 under SEC Registration No. 69997; and (5) De La Salle Canlubang, Inc. on August 5, 1998 under SEC Registration No. Al998-01021.34

On the other hand, petitioner was issued a Certificate of Registration only on July 5, 2007 under Company Registration No. CN200710647.35 It being clear that respondents are the prior registrants, they certainly have acquired the right to use the words "De La Salle" or "La Salle" as part of their corporate names.

The second requisite is also satisfied since there is a confusing similarity between petitioner's and respondents' corporate names. While these corporate names are not identical, it is evident that the phrase "De La Salle" is the dominant phrase used.

Petitioner asserts that it has the right to use the phrase "De La Salle" in its corporate name as respondents did not obtain the right to its exclusive use, nor did the words acquire secondary meaning. It endeavoured to demonstrate that no confusion will arise from its use of the said phrase by stating that its complete name, "De La Salle Montessori International of Malolos, Inc.," contains four other distinctive words that are not found in respondents' corporate names. Moreover, it obtained the words "De La Salle" from the French word meaning "classroom," while respondents obtained it from the French priest named Saint Jean Baptiste de La Salle. Petitioner also compared its logo to that of respondent De La Salle University and argued that they are different. Further, petitioner argued that it does not charge as much fees as respondents, that its clients knew that it is not part of respondents' schools, and that it never misrepresented nor claimed to be an affiliate of respondents. Additionally, it has gained goodwill and a name worthy of trust in its own right.

We are not persuaded.

In determining the existence of confusing similarity in corporate names, the test is whether the similarity is such as to mislead a person using ordinary care and discrimination. In so doing, the Court must look to the record as well as the names themselves.

Petitioner's assertion that the words "Montessori International of Malolos, Inc." are four distinctive words that are not found in respondents' corporate names so that their corporate name is not identical, confusingly similar, patently deceptive or contrary to existing laws, does not avail. As correctly held by the SEC OGC, all these words, when used with the name "De La Salle," can reasonably mislead a person using ordinary care and discretion into thinking that petitioner is an affiliate or a branch of, or is likewise founded by, any or all of the respondents, thereby causing confusion.

Petitioner's argument that it obtained the words "De La Salle" from the French word meaning "classroom," while respondents obtained it from the French priest named Saint Jean Baptiste de La Salle, similarly does not hold water. We quote with approval the ruling of the SEC En Banc on this matter. Thus:

> Generic terms are those which constitute "the common descriptive name of an article or substance," or comprise the "genus of which the particular product is a species," or are "commonly used as the name or description of a kind of goods," or "characters," or "refer to the basic nature of the wares or services provided rather than to the more idiosyncratic characteristics of a particular product," and are not legally protectable. It has been held that if a mark is so commonplace that it cannot be readily distinguished from others, then it is apparent that it cannot identify a particular business; and he who first adopted it cannot be injured by any subsequent appropriation or imitation by others, and the public will not be deceived.

> Contrary to [petitioner's] claim, the word salle only means "room" in French. The word la, on the other hand, is a definite article ("the") used to modify salle. Thus, since salle is nothing more than a room, [respondents'] use of the term is actually suggestive.
>
> A suggestive mark is therefore a word, picture, or other symbol that suggests, but does not directly describe something about the goods or services in connection with which it is used as a mark and gives a hint as to the quality or nature of the product. Suggestive trademarks therefore can be distinctive and are registrable.
>
> The appropriation of the term "la salle" to associate the words with the lofty ideals of education and learning is in fact suggestive because roughly translated, the words only mean "the room." Thus, the room could be anything - a room in a house, a room in a building, or a room in an office.
>
> x x x
>
> In fact, the appropriation by [respondents] is fanciful, whimsical and arbitrary because there is no inherent connection between the words la salle and education, and it is through [respondents'] painstaking efforts that the term has become associated with one of the top educational institutions in the country. Even assuming arguendo that la salle means "classroom" in French, imagination is required in order to associate the term with an educational institution and its particular brand of service.

We affirm that the phrase "De La Salle" is not merely a generic term. Respondents' use of the phrase being suggestive and may properly be regarded as fanciful, arbitrary and whimsical, it is entitled to legal protection. Petitioner's use of the phrase "De La Salle" in its corporate name is patently similar to that of respondents that even with reasonable care and observation, confusion might arise. The Court notes not only the similarity in the parties' names, but also the business they are engaged in. They are all private educational institutions offering pre-elementary, elementary and secondary courses. As aptly observed by the SEC En Banc, petitioner's name gives the impression that it is a branch or affiliate of respondents. It is settled that proof of actual confusion need not be shown. It suffices that confusion is probable or likely to occur.

Finally, the Court's ruling in Lyceum of the Philippines does not apply.

In that case, the Lyceum of the Philippines, Inc., an educational institution registered with the SEC, commenced proceedings before the SEC to compel therein private respondents who were all educational institutions, to delete the word "Lyceum" from their corporate names and permanently enjoin them from using the word as part of their respective names.

The Court there held that the word "Lyceum" today generally refers to a school or institution of learning. It is as generic in character as the word "university." Since "Lyceum" denotes a school or institution of learning, it is not unnatural to use this word to designate an entity which is organized and operating as an educational institution. Moreover, the Lyceum of the Philippines, Inc.'s use of the word "Lyceum" for a long period of time did not amount to mean that the word had acquired secondary meaning in its favor because it failed to prove that it had been using the word all by itself to the exclusion of others. More so, there was no evidence presented to prove that the word has been so identified with the Lyceum of the Philippines, Inc. as an educational institution that confusion will surely arise if the same word were to be used by other educational institutions.

Here, the phrase "De La Salle" is not generic in relation to respondents. It is not descriptive of respondent's business as institutes of learning, unlike the meaning ascribed to "Lyceum." Moreover, respondent De La Salle Brothers, Inc. was registered in 1961 and the De La Salle group had been using the name decades before petitioner's corporate registration. In contrast, there was no evidence of the Lyceum of the Philippines, Inc.'s exclusive use of the word "Lyceum," as in fact another educational institution had used the word 17 years before the former registered its corporate name with the SEC. Also, at least nine other educational institutions included the word in their corporate names. There is thus no similarity between the Lyceum of the Philippines case and this case that would call for a similar ruling.

The enforcement of the protection accorded by Section 18 of the Corporation Code to corporate names is lodged exclusively in the SEC. By express mandate, the SEC has absolute jurisdiction, supervision and control over all corporations. It is the SEC's duty to prevent confusion in the use of corporate names not only for the protection of the corporations involved, but more so for the protection of the public. It has authority to de-register at all times, and under all circumstances, corporate names which in its estimation are likely to generate confusion.48

Clearly, the only determination relevant to this case is that one made by the SEC in the exercise of its express mandate under the law.

4. CORPORATE TERM

PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK, Petitioner, -versus- THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE OF RIZAL, PASIG — BRANCH XXI, PRESIDED BY JUDGE GREGORIO G. PINEDA, CHUNG SIONG PEK @ BONIFACIO CHUNG SIONG PEK AND VICTORIA CHING GENG TY @ VICTORIA CHENG GENG TY, and THE REGISTER OF DEEDS OF RIZAL, PASIG, METRO MANILA AND/OR HIS DEPUTIES AND AGENTS, Respondents

G.R. No. 63201, FIRST DIVISION, MAY 27, 1992, MEDIALDEA, J.

When the period of corporate life expires, the corporation ceases to be a body corporate for the purpose of continuing the business for which it was organized. But it shall nevertheless be continued as a body corporate for three years after the time when it would have been so dissolved, for the purpose of prosecuting and defending suits by or against it and enabling it gradually to settle and close its affairs, to dispose of and convey its property and to divide its assets (Sec. 122, Corporation Code). There is no need for the institution of a proceeding for quo warranto to determine the time or date of the dissolution of a corporation because the period of corporate existence is provided in the articles of incorporation. When such period expires and without any extension having been made pursuant to law, the corporation is dissolved automatically insofar as the continuation of its business is concerned.

Considering the foregoing in relation to the contract of lease between the parties herein, when PBM's corporate life ended on January 19, 1977 and its 3-year period for winding up and liquidation expired on January 19, 1980, the option of extending the lease was likewise terminated on January 19, 1977 because PBM failed to renew or extend its corporate life in accordance with law.

FACTS:

Private respondents entered into a contract of lease with Philippine Blooming Mills, Co., Inc., (PBM for brevity) whereby the letter shall lease the aforementioned parcels of land as factory site. PBM was duly organized and incorporated on January 19, 1952 with a corporate term of twenty-five (25) years. This leasehold right of PBM covering the parcels of land was duly annotated at the back of the above stated certificates of title.

The contract of lease provides that the term of the lease is for twenty years beginning from the date of the contract and "is extendable for another term of twenty years at the option of the LESSEE should its term of existence be extended in accordance with law."

On October 11, 1963, PBM executed in favor of Philippine National Bank (PNB for brevity), petitioner herein, a deed of assignment, conveying and transferring all its rights and interests under the contract of lease which it executed with private respondents. The assignment was for and in consideration of the loans granted by PNB to PBM. The deed of assignment was registered and annotated at the back of the private respondents' certificates of title

On November 6, 1963 and December 23, 1963 respectively, PBM executed in favor of PNB a real estate mortgage for a loan of P100,000.00 and an addendum to real estate mortgage for another loan of P1,590,000.00, covering all the improvements constructed by PBM on the leased premises. These mortgages were registered and annotated.

PBM filed a petition for registration of improvements in the titles of real property owned by private respondents docketed as Case No. 6530.

On October 7, 1981, private respondents filed a motion in the same proceedings which was given a different case number to wit, LRC Case No. R-2744, because of the payment of filing fees for the motion. The motion sought to cancel the annotations on respondents' certificates of title pertaining to the assignment by PBM to PNB of the former's leasehold rights, inclusion of improvements and the real estate mortgages made by PBM in favor of PNB, on the ground that the contract of lease entered into between PBM and respondents-movants had already expired by the failure of PBM and/or its assignee to exercise the option to renew the second 20-year lease commencing on March 1, 1974 and also by the failure of PBM to extend its corporate existence in accordance with law. The motion also states that since PBM failed to remove its improvements on the leased premises before the expiration of the contract of lease, such improvements shall accrue to respondents as owners of the land.

On April 22, 1982, respondent court issued an order directing the cancellation of the inscriptions on respondents' certificates of title

ISSUE:

Whether the cancellation of the entries on respondent's certificates of title is valid and proper. (YES)

RULING:

The contract of lease expressly provides that the term of the lease shall be twenty years from the execution of the contract but can be extended for another period of twenty years at the option of the lessee should the corporate term be extended in accordance with law. Clearly, the option of the lessee to extend the lease for another period of twenty years can be exercised only if the lessee as corporation renews or extends its corporate term of existence in accordance with the Corporation Code which is the applicable law. Contracts are to be interpreted according to their literal meaning and should not be interpreted beyond their obvious intendment. Thus, in the instant case, the initial term of the contract of lease which commenced on March 1, 1954 ended on March 1, 1974. PBM as lessee continued to occupy the leased premises beyond that date with the acquiescence and consent of the respondents as lessor. Records show however, that PBM as a corporation had a corporate life of only twenty-five (25) years which ended an January 19, 1977. It should be noted however that PBM allowed its corporate term to expire without complying with the requirements provided by law for the extension of its corporate term of existence.

Section 11 of Corporation Code provides that a corporation shall exist for a period not exceeding fifty (50) years from the date of incorporation unless sooner dissolved or unless said period is extended. Upon the expiration of the period fixed in the articles of incorporation in the absence of compliance with the legal requisites for the extension of the period, the corporation ceases to exist and is dissolved ipso facto (16 Fletcher 671 cited by Aguedo F. Agbayani, Commercial Laws of the Philippines, Vol. 3, 1988 Edition p. 617). When the period of corporate life expires, the corporation ceases to be a body corporate for the purpose of continuing the business for which it was organized. But it shall nevertheless be continued as a body corporate for three years after the time when it would have been so dissolved, for the purpose of prosecuting and defending suits by or against it and enabling it gradually to settle and close its affairs, to dispose of and convey its property and to divide its assets (Sec. 122, Corporation Code). There is no need for the institution of a proceeding for quo warranto to determine the time or date of the dissolution of a corporation because the period of corporate existence is provided in the articles of incorporation. When such period expires and without any extension having been made pursuant to law, the corporation is dissolved automatically insofar as the continuation of its business is concerned. The quo warranto proceeding under Rule 66 of the Rules of Court, as amended, may be instituted by the Solicitor General only for the involuntary dissolution of a corporation on the following grounds: a) when the corporation has offended against a provision of an Act for its creation or renewal; b) when it has forfeited its privileges and franchises by non-user; c) when it has committed or omitted an act which amounts to a surrender of its corporate rights, privileges or franchises; d) when it has mis-used a right, privilege or franchise conferred upon it by law, or when it has exercised a right, privilege or franchise in contravention of law. Hence, there is no need for the SEC to make an involuntary dissolution of a corporation whose corporate term had ended because its articles of incorporation had in effect expired by its own limitation.

Considering the foregoing in relation to the contract of lease between the parties herein, when PBM's corporate life ended on January 19, 1977 and its 3-year period for winding up and liquidation expired on January 19, 1980, the option of extending the lease was likewise terminated on January 19, 1977 because PBM failed to renew or extend its corporate life in accordance with law. From then on, the respondents can exercise their right to terminate the lease pursuant to the stipulations in the contract.

5. MINIMUM CAPITAL STOCK AND SUBSCRIPTION REQUIREMENTS

MSCI-NACUSIP LOCAL CHAPTER, Petitioner, -versus NATIONAL WAGES AND PRODUCTIVITY COMMISSION and MONOMER SUGAR CENTRAL, INC., Respondents
G.R. No. 125198, FIRST DIVISION, MARCH 3, 1997, HERMOSISIMA, JR., J.

By express provision of Section 13, paid-up capital is that portion of the authorized capital stock which has been both subscribed and paid. To illustrate, where the authorized capital stock of a corporation is worth P 1 million and the total subscription amounts to P250,000.00, at least 25% of this amount, namely, P62,500.00 must be paid up per Section 13. The latter, P62,500.00, is the paid-up capital or what should more accurately be termed as "paid-up capital stock."

In the case under consideration, there is no dispute, and the Board even mentioned in its Decision, that MSCI was organized and incorporated on February 15, 1990 with an authorized capital stock of P60 million, P20 million of which was subscribed. Of the P20 million subscribed capital stock, P5 million was paid-up. This fact is only too glaring for the Board to have been misled into believing that MSCI'S paid-up capital stock was P64 million plus and not P5 million.

FACTS:

On January 11, 1990, Asturias Sugar Central, Inc. (ASCI) executed a Memorandum of Agreement with Monomer Trading Industries, Inc. (MTII), whereby MTII shall acquire the assets of ASCI by way of a Deed of Assignment provided that an entirely new organization in place of MTII shall be organized, which new corporation shall be the assignee of the assets of ASCI.

By virtue of this Agreement, a new corporation was organized and incorporated under the corporate name Monomer Sugar Central, Inc. or MSCI, the private respondent herein.

MSCI applied for exemption from the coverage of Wage Order No. RO VI-01 issued by the Board on the ground that it is a distressed employer.

The petitioner herein MSCI-NACUSIP Local Chapter (Union), in opposition, maintained that MSCI is not distressed; that respondent applicant has not complied with the requirements for exemption; and that the financial statements submitted by MSCI do not reflect the true and valid financial status of the company, and that the paid-up capital would have been higher than P5 million and thus impairment would have been lower than 25% had the pre-organization agreement between ASCI and MTII been complied with.

Regional Tripartite Wages and Productivity Board (Board) denied MSCI's application for exemption based on the finding that the applicant's losses of P3,400,738.00 constitute an impairment of only 5.25% of its paid-up capital of P64,688,528.00, can not be said to be sufficient to meet the required 25% in order to qualify for the exemption, as provided in NWPC Guidelines.

The Board held that the paid-up capital of MSCI on the aforesaid dates was actually P64,688,528.00 and not P5 million as claimed by MSCI in its application for exemption and, thus, the established losses amounting to P3,400,738.00 constitute an impairment of only 5.25% of the true paid-up capital of P64 million plus,2 which losses are not enough to meet the required 25% impairment requirement.

This conclusion is anchored on the belief of the Board that the value of the assets of ASCI, party to the Memorandum of Agreement, transferred to MSCI on March 28, 1990 should be taken into consideration in computing the paid-up capital of MSCI to reflect its true financial structure. Moreover, the loans or advances extended by MTII, the other party to the Agreement, to MSCI should allegedly be treated as additional investments to MSCI, 3 and must therefore be included in computing respondent's paid-up capital.

The motion for reconsideration, filed by MSCI was denied by the Board.

A timely appeal was brought before the public respondent Commission.

The Commission reversed and set aside the foregoing orders of the Board, and granted MSCI's application for exemption

In reversing the Board and granting the exemption, the Commission held that the Board exceeded its authority in computing and giving new valuation to what should be the paid-up capital of MSCI. It stressed that RA No. 6727, or the Wage Rationalization Act, and its implementing guidelines have not conferred upon the Board the authority to change the paid-up capital of a corporation

ISSUE:

Whether the correct paid-up capital of MSCI is P 5 million (YES)

RULING:

By express provision of Section 13, paid-up capital is that portion of the authorized capital stock which has been both subscribed and paid. To illustrate, where the authorized capital stock of a corporation is worth P 1 million and the total subscription amounts to P250,000.00, at least 25% of this amount, namely, P62,500.00 must be paid up per Section 13. The latter, P62,500.00, is the paid-up capital or what should more accurately be termed as "paid-up capital stock."

In the case under consideration, there is no dispute, and the Board even mentioned in its Decision, that MSCI was organized and incorporated on February 15, 1990 with an authorized capital stock of P60 million, P20 million of which was subscribed. Of the P20 million subscribed capital stock, P5 million was paid-up. This fact is only too glaring for the Board to have been misled into believing that MSCI'S paid-up capital stock was P64 million plus and not P5 million.

The submission of the Board that the value of the assets of Asturias Sugar Central, Inc. transferred to MSCI on March 28, 1990, as well as the loans or advances made by MTII to MSCI should have been taken into consideration in computing the paid-up capital of MSCI is unmeritorious, at best, and betrays the Board's sheer lack of grasp of a basic concept in Corporation Law, at worst. Not all funds or assets received by the corporation can be considered paid-up capital, for this term has a technical signification in Corporation Law. Such must form part of the authorized capital stock of the corporation, subscribed and then actually paid up.

Furthermore, the Commission aptly observed that the loans and advances of MTII to respondent MSCI cannot be treated as investments, unless the corresponding shares of stocks are issued. But as it turned out, such loans and advances were in fact treated as liabilities of MSCI to MTII as shown in its 1990 audited financial statements.

Henceforth, the paid-up capital stock of MSCI for the period covered by the application for exemption still stood at P5 million. The losses, therefore, amounting to P3,400,738.00 for the period February 15, 1990 to August 31, 1990 impaired MSCI's paid-up capital of P5 million by as much as 68%. Likewise, the losses incurred by MSCI for the interim period from September 1, 1990 to November 30, 1990, as found by the Commission, per MSCI's quarterly income statements, amounting to P13,554,337.33 impaired the company's paid-up capital of P5 million by a whopping 271.08%,8 more than enough to qualify MSCI as a distressed employer. Respondent Commission thus acted well within its jurisdiction in granting MSCI full exemption from Wage Order No. RO VI-01 as a distressed employer.

6. ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

A. NATURE AND FUNCTION OF ARTICLES

B. CONTENTS

CLAVECILLIA RADIO SYSTEM, Petitioner, -versus- HON. AGUSTIN ANTILLON, as City Judge of the Municipal Court of Cagayan de Oro City and NEW CAGAYAN GROCERY, Respondents
G.R. No. L-22238, EN BANC, FEBRUARY 18, 1967, REGALA, J.

Settled is the principle in corporation law that the residence of a corporation is the place where its principal office is established. Since it is not disputed that the Clavecilla Radio System has its principal office in Manila, it follows that the suit against it may properly be filed in the City of Manila.

FACTS:

New Cagayan Grocery filed a complaint against the Clavecilla Radio System alleging, in effect, that on March 12, 1963, the following message, addressed to the former, was filed at the latter's Bacolod Branch Office for transmittal thru its branch office at Cagayan de Oro:

> NECAGRO CAGAYAN DE ORO (CLAVECILLA)
> REURTEL WASHED NOT AVAILABLE REFINED TWENTY FIFTY IF AGREEABLE SHALL SHIP LATER REPLY POHANG

The Cagayan de Oro branch office having received the said message omitted, in delivering the same to the New Cagayan Grocery, the word "NOT" between the words "WASHED" and "AVAILABLE," thus changing entirely the contents and purport of the same and causing the said addressee to suffer damages.

After service of summons, the Clavecilla Radio System filed a motion to dismiss the complaint on the grounds that it states no cause of action and that the venue is improperly laid.

Thereafter, the City Judge, on September 18, 1963, denied the motion to dismiss for lack of merit and set the case for hearing.

Hence, the Clavecilla Radio System filed a petition for prohibition with preliminary injunction with the Court of First Instance praying that the City Judge of Cagayan de Oro, Honorable Agustin Antillon, be enjoined from further proceeding with the case on the ground of improper venue.

In dismissing the case, the lower court held that the Clavecilla Radio System may be sued either in Manila where it has its principal office or in Cagayan de Oro City where it may be served, as in fact it was served, with summons through the Manager of its branch office in said city. In other words, the court upheld the authority of the city court to take cognizance of the case.1äwphï1.ñët

In appealing, the Clavecilla Radio System contends that the suit against it should be filed in Manila where it holds its principal office.

ISSUE:

Whether the venue is proper (NO)

RULING:

Settled is the principle in corporation law that the residence of a corporation is the place where its principal office is established. Since it is not disputed that the Clavecilla Radio System has its principal office in Manila, it follows that the suit against it may properly be filed in the City of Manila.

The appellee maintain, however, that with the filing of the action in Cagayan de Oro City, venue was properly laid on the principle that the appellant may also be served with summons in that city where it maintains a branch office. This Court has already held in the case of Cohen vs. Benguet Commercial Co., Ltd., 34 Phil. 526; that the term "may be served with summons" does not apply when the defendant resides in the Philippines for, in such case, he may be sued only in the municipality of his residence, regardless of the place where he may be found and served with summons. As any other corporation, the Clavecilla Radio System maintains a residence which is Manila in this case, and a person can have only one residence at a time.

The fact that it maintains branch offices in some parts of the country does not mean that it can be sued in any of these places. To allow an action to be instituted in any place where a corporate entity has its branch offices would create confusion and work untold inconvenience to the corporation.

It is important to remember, as was stated by this Court in Evangelista vs. Santos, et al., supra, that the laying of the venue of an action is not left to plaintiff's caprice because the matter is regulated by the Rules of Court. Applying the provision of the Rules of Court, the venue in this case was improperly laid.

HYATT ELEVATORS AND ESCALATORS CORPORATION, Petitioner, -versus- GOLDSTAR ELEVATORS, PHILS., INC., Respondent

G.R. No. 161026, THIRD DIVISION, OCTOBER 24, 2005, PANGANIBAN, J.

Admittedly, the latter's principal place of business is Makati, as indicated in its Articles of Incorporation. Since the principal place of business of a corporation determines its residence or domicile, then the place indicated in petitioner's articles of incorporation becomes controlling in determining the venue for this case.

Without merit is the argument of petitioner that the locality stated in its Articles of Incorporation does not conclusively indicate that its principal office is still in the same place. We agree with the appellate court in its observation that the requirement to state in the articles the place where the principal office of the corporation is to be located "is not a meaningless requirement. That proviso would be rendered nugatory if corporations were to be allowed to simply disregard what is expressly stated in their Articles of Incorporation.

FACTS:

In 1988, HYATT was appointed by LG Industrial Systems Co. Ltd. (LGISC) and LG International Corporation (LGIC) as the exclusive distributor of LG elevators and escalators in the Philippines under a 'Distributorship Agreement'.

LGISC, in the latter part of 1996, made a proposal to change the exclusive distributorship agency to that of a joint venture partnership. While it looked forward to a healthy and fruitful negotiation for a joint venture, however, the various meetings it had with LGISC and LGIC, through the latter's representatives, were conducted in utmost bad faith and with malevolent intentions; in the middle of the negotiations, in order to put pressures upon it, LGISC and LGIC terminated the Exclusive Distributorship Agreement.

HYATT filed a Complaint for unfair trade practices and damages under Articles 19, 20 and 21 of the Civil Code of the Philippines LGISC and LGIC

LGISC and LGIC filed a Motion to Dismiss which the Trial court denied.

On December 4, 2000, HYATT filed a motion for leave of court to amend the complaint, alleging that subsequent to the filing of the complaint, it learned that LGISC transferred all its organization, assets and goodwill, as a consequence of a joint venture agreement with Otis Elevator Company of the USA, to LG Otis Elevator Company (LG OTIS, for brevity). Thus, LGISC was to be substituted or changed to LG OTIS, its successor-in-interest.

Likewise, the motion averred that GOLDSTAR was being utilized by LG OTIS and LGIC in perpetrating their unlawful and unjustified acts against HYATT. Consequently, in order to afford complete relief, GOLDSTAR was to be additionally impleaded as a party-defendant. Hence, in the Amended Complaint, HYATT impleaded GOLDSTAR as a party-defendant, and all references to LGISC were correspondingly replaced with LG OTIS.

Trial court admitted the Amended Complaint.

LG OTIS (LGISC) and LGIC filed a motion for reconsideration thereto but was similarly rebuffed.

GOLDSTAR filed a Motion to Dismiss the amended complaint, raising the following grounds: (1) the venue was improperly laid, as neither HYATT nor defendants reside in Mandaluyong City, where the original case was filed; and (2) failure to state a cause of action since the amended complaint fails to allege with certainty what specific ultimate acts Goldstar performed in violation of Hyatt's rights.

In the Order dated May 27, 2002, which is the main subject of the present petition, the Trial court denied the motion to dismiss.

GOLDSTAR filed a motion for reconsideration thereto which was denied

The CA ruled that the trial court had committed palpable error amounting to grave abuse of discretion when the latter denied respondent's Motion to Dismiss. The appellate court held that the venue was clearly improper, because none of the litigants "resided" in Mandaluyong City, where the case was filed.

According to the appellate court, since Makati was the principal place of business of both respondent and petitioner, as stated in the latter's Articles of Incorporation, that place was controlling for purposes of determining the proper venue. The fact that petitioner had abandoned its principal office in Makati years prior to the filing of the original case did not affect the venue where personal actions could be commenced and tried.

Hence, this Petition

ISSUE:

Whether the venue is proper (NO)

RULING:

Residence is the permanent home -- the place to which, whenever absent for business or pleasure, one intends to return. Residence is vital when dealing with venue. A corporation, however, has no residence in the same sense in which this term is applied to a natural person. This is precisely the reason why the Court in Young Auto Supply Company v. Court of Appeals ruled that "for practical purposes, a corporation is in a metaphysical sense a resident of the place where its principal office is located as stated in the articles of incorporation." Even before this ruling, it has already been established that the residence of a corporation is the place where its principal office is established

Admittedly, the latter's principal place of business is Makati, as indicated in its Articles of Incorporation. Since the principal place of business of a corporation determines its residence or domicile, then the place indicated in petitioner's articles of incorporation becomes controlling in determining the venue for this case.

Without merit is the argument of petitioner that the locality stated in its Articles of Incorporation does not conclusively indicate that its principal office is still in the same place. We agree with the appellate court in its observation that the requirement to state in the articles the place where the principal office of the corporation is to be located "is not a meaningless requirement. That proviso would be rendered nugatory if corporations were to be allowed to simply disregard what is expressly stated in their Articles of Incorporation.

Inconclusive are the bare allegations of petitioner that it had closed its Makati office and relocated to Mandaluyong City, and that respondent was well aware of those circumstances. Assuming arguendo that they transacted business with each other in the Mandaluyong office of petitioner, the fact remains that, in law, the latter's residence was still the place indicated in its Articles of Incorporation. Further unacceptable is its faulty reasoning that the ground for the CA's dismissal of its Complaint was its failure to amend its Articles of Incorporation so as to reflect its actual and present principal office. The appellate court was clear enough in its ruling that the Complaint was dismissed because the venue had been improperly laid, not because of the failure of petitioner to amend the latter's Articles of Incorporation.

Indeed, it is a legal truism that the rules on the venue of personal actions are fixed for the convenience of the plaintiffs and their witnesses. Equally settled, however, is the principle that choosing the venue of an action is not left to a plaintiff's caprice; the matter is regulated by the Rules of Court.

Allowing petitioner's arguments may lead precisely to what this Court was trying to avoid in Young Auto Supply Company v. CA: the creation of confusion and untold inconveniences to party litigants. Thus enunciated the CA:

"x x x. To insist that the proper venue is the actual principal office and not that stated in its Articles of Incorporation would indeed create confusion and work untold inconvenience. Enterprising litigants may, out of some ulterior motives, easily circumvent the rules on venue by the simple expedient of closing old offices and opening new ones in another place that they may find well to suit their needs."

C. AMENDMENT

7. REGISTRATION AND ISSUANCE OF CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION

8. ADOPTION OF BY-LAWS

A. NATURE AND FUNCTION OF BY-LAWS

JOHN GOKONGWEI, JR., Petitioner, -versus- SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, ANDRES M. SORIANO, JOSE M. SORIANO, ENRIQUE ZOBEL, ANTONIO ROXAS, EMETERIO BUNAO, WALTHRODE B. CONDE, MIGUEL ORTIGAS, ANTONIO PRIETO, SAN MIGUEL CORPORATION, EMIGDIO TANJUATCO, SR., and EDUARDO R. VISAYA, Respondents

G.R. No. L-45911, EN BANC, APRIL 11, 1979, ANTONIO, J.

Corporations have the power to make by-laws declaring a person employed in the service of a rival company to be ineligible for the corporation's Board of Directors.

As respondent SMC aptly observes, knowledge by CFC-Robina of SMC's costs in various industries and regions in the country win enable the former to practice price discrimination. CFC-Robina can segment the entire consuming population by geographical areas or income groups and change varying prices in order to maximize profits from every market segment. CFC-Robina could determine the most profitable volume at which it could produce for every product line in which it competes with SMC. Access to SMC pricing policy by CFC-Robina would in effect destroy free competition and deprive the consuming public of opportunity to buy goods of the highest possible quality at the lowest prices.

FACTS:

On October 22, 1976, Gokongwei, as stockholder of San Miguel Corporation, filed with the SEC a petition for "declaration of nullity of amended by-laws, cancellation of certificate of filing of amended by- laws, injunction and damages with prayer for a preliminary injunction" against the majority of the members of the Board of Directors and San Miguel Corporation as an unwilling petitioner.

Gokongwei alleged that respondents amended its bylaws unlawfully. Prior to the questioned amendment, petitioner had all the qualifications to be a director of respondent corporation, and that in amending the by-laws, respondents purposely provided for petitioner's disqualification and deprived him of his vested right as afore-mentioned hence the amended by-laws are null and void.
It was alleged that corporations have no inherent power to disqualify a stockholder from being elected as a director and, therefore, the questioned act is ultra vires and void; that the Board has the prerogative of determining whether they are engaged in competitive or antagonistic business; that the Board may consider such factors as business and family relationship, is unreasonable and oppressive and, therefore, void; and that the portion of the amended by-laws which requires that "all nominations for election of directors ... shall be submitted in writing to the Board of Directors at least five (5) working days before the date of the Annual Meeting" is likewise unreasonable and oppressive.

It was, therefore, prayed that the amended by-laws be declared null and void and the certificate of filing thereof be cancelled, and that individual respondents be made to pay damages, in specified amounts, to petitioner.

ISSUE:

Whether amended by-laws of SMC of disqualifying a competitor from nomination or election to the Board of Directors of SMC are valid and reasonable (YES)

RULING:

It is recognized by an authorities that 'every corporation has the inherent power to adopt by-laws 'for its internal government, and to regulate the conduct and prescribe the rights and duties of its members towards itself and among themselves in reference to the management of its affairs. At common law, the rule was "that the power to make and adopt by-laws was inherent in every corporation as one of its necessary and inseparable legal incidents. And it is settled throughout the United States that in the absence of positive legislative provisions limiting it, every private corporation has this inherent power as one of its necessary and inseparable legal incidents, independent of any specific enabling provision in its charter or in general law, such power of self-government being essential to enable the corporation to accomplish the purposes of its creation.

In this jurisdiction, under section 21 of the Corporation Law, a corporation may prescribe in its by-laws "the qualifications, duties and compensation of directors, officers and employees ... " This must necessarily refer to a qualification in addition to that specified by section 30 of the Corporation Law, which provides that "every director must own in his right at least one share of the capital stock of the stock corporation of which he is a director ... " In Government v. El Hogar, the Court sustained the validity of a provision in the corporate by-law requiring that persons elected to the Board of Directors must be holders of shares of the paid up value of P5,000.00, which shall be held as security for their action, on the ground that section 21 of the Corporation Law expressly gives the power to the corporation to provide in its by-laws for the qualifications of directors and is "highly prudent and in conformity with good practice. "

Also, there is no vested right of stockholder to be elected director.

Any person "who buys stock in a corporation does so with the knowledge that its affairs are dominated by a majority of the stockholders and that he impliedly contracts that the will of the majority shall govern in all matters within the limits of the act of incorporation and lawfully enacted by-laws and not forbidden by law." To this extent, therefore, the stockholder may be considered to have "parted with his personal right or privilege to regulate the disposition of his property which he has invested in the capital stock of the corporation, and surrendered it to the will of the majority of his fellow incorporators. ... It cannot therefore be justly said that the contract, express or implied, between the corporation and the stockholders is infringed ... by any act of the former which is authorized by a majority ...."

Pursuant to section 18 of the Corporation Law, any corporation may amend its articles of incorporation by a vote or written assent of the stockholders representing at least two-thirds of the subscribed capital stock of the corporation If the amendment changes, diminishes or restricts the rights of the existing shareholders then the disenting minority has only one right, viz.: "to object thereto in writing and demand payment for his share." Under section 22 of the same law, the owners of the majority of the subscribed capital stock may amend or repeal any by-law or adopt new by-laws. It cannot be said, therefore, that petitioner has a vested right to be elected director, in the face of the fact that the law at the time such right as stockholder was acquired contained the prescription that the corporate charter and the by-law shall be subject to amendment, alteration and modification.
It being settled that the corporation has the power to provide for the qualifications of its directors, the next question that must be considered is whether the disqualification of a competitor from being elected to the Board of Directors is a reasonable exercise of corporate authority.

A DIRECTOR STANDS IN A FIDUCIARY RELATION TO THE CORPORATION AND ITS SHAREHOLDERS
Although in the strict and technical sense, directors of a private corporation are not regarded as trustees, there cannot be any doubt that their character is that of a fiduciary insofar as the corporation and the stockholders as a body are concerned. As agents entrusted with the management of the corporation for the collective benefit of the stockholders, "they occupy a fiduciary relation, and in this sense the relation is one of trust."

"The ordinary trust relationship of directors of a corporation and stockholders", according to Ashaman v. Miller, "is not a matter of statutory or technical law. It springs from the fact that directors have the control and guidance of corporate affairs and property and hence of the property interests of the stockholders. Equity recognizes that stockholders are the proprietors of the corporate interests and are ultimately the only beneficiaries thereof * * *.

Justice Douglas, in Pepper v. Litton, emphatically restated the standard of fiduciary obligation of the directors of corporations, thus:

A director is a fiduciary. ... Their powers are powers in trust. ... He who is in such fiduciary position cannot serve himself first and his cestuis second. ... He cannot manipulate the affairs of his corporation to their detriment and in disregard of the standards of common decency. He cannot by the intervention of a corporate entity violate the ancient precept against serving two masters ... He cannot utilize his inside information and strategic position for his own preferment. He cannot violate rules of fair play by doing indirectly through the corporation what he could not do so directly. He cannot violate rules of fair play by doing indirectly though the corporation what he could not do so directly. He cannot use his power for his personal advantage and to the detriment of the stockholders and creditors no matter how absolute in terms that power may be and no matter how meticulous he is to satisfy technical requirements. For that power is at all times subject to the equitable limitation that it may not be exercised for the aggrandizement, preference or advantage of the fiduciary to the exclusion or detriment of the cestuis.

And in Cross v. West Virginia Cent, & P. R. R. Co., it was said:

... A person cannot serve two hostile and adverse master, without detriment to one of them. A judge cannot be impartial if personally interested in the cause. No more can a director. Human nature is too weak -for this. Take whatever statute provision you please giving power to stockholders to choose directors, and in none will you find any express prohibition against a discretion to select directors having the company's interest at heart, and it would simply be going far to deny by mere implication the existence of such a salutary power

... If the by-law is to be held reasonable in disqualifying a stockholder in a competing company from being a director, the same reasoning would apply to disqualify the wife and immediate member of the family of such stockholder, on account of the supposed interest of the wife in her husband's affairs, and his suppose influence over her. It is perhaps true that such stockholders ought not to be condemned as selfish and dangerous to the best interest of the corporation until tried and tested. So it is also true that we cannot condemn as selfish and dangerous and unreasonable the action of the board in passing the by-law. The strife over the matter of control in this corporation as in many others is perhaps carried on not altogether in the spirit of brotherly love and affection. The only test that we can apply is as to whether or not the action of the Board is authorized and sanctioned by law. ... .
These principles have been applied by this Court in previous cases.

AN AMENDMENT TO THE CORPORATION BY-LAW WHICH RENDERS A STOCKHOLDER INELIGIBLE TO BE DIRECTOR, IF HE BE ALSO DIRECTOR IN A CORPORATION WHOSE BUSINESS IS IN COMPETITION WITH THAT OF THE OTHER CORPORATION, HAS BEEN SUSTAINED AS VALID
It is a settled state law in the United States, according to Fletcher, that corporations have the power to make by-laws declaring a person employed in the service of a rival company to be ineligible for the corporation's Board of Directors. ... An amendment which renders ineligible, or if elected, subjects to removal, a director if he be also a director in a corporation whose business is in competition with or is antagonistic to the other corporation is valid."

This is based upon the principle that where the director is so employed in the service of a rival company, he cannot serve both, but must betray one or the other. Such an amendment "advances the benefit of the corporation and is good." An exception exists in New Jersey, where the Supreme Court held that the Corporation Law in New Jersey prescribed the only qualification, and therefore the corporation was not empowered to add additional qualifications. This is the exact opposite of the situation in the Philippines because as stated heretofore, section 21 of the Corporation Law expressly provides that a corporation may make by-laws for the qualifications of directors. Thus, it has been held that an officer of a corporation cannot engage in a business in direct competition with that of the corporation where he is a director by utilizing information he has received as such officer, under "the established law that a director or officer of a corporation may not enter into a competing enterprise which cripples or injures the business of the corporation of which he is an officer or director.

It is also well established that corporate officers "are not permitted to use their position of trust and confidence to further their private interests." In a case where directors of a corporation cancelled a contract of the corporation for exclusive sale of a foreign firm's products, and after establishing a rival business, the directors entered into a new contract themselves with the foreign firm for exclusive sale of its products, the court held that equity would regard the new contract as an offshoot of the old contract and, therefore, for the benefit of the corporation, as a "faultless fiduciary may not reap the fruits of his misconduct to the exclusion of his principal.

The doctrine of "corporate opportunity" is precisely a recognition by the courts that the fiduciary standards could not be upheld where the fiduciary was acting for two entities with competing interests. This doctrine rests fundamentally on the unfairness, in particular circumstances, of an officer or director taking advantage of an opportunity for his own personal profit when the interest of the corporation justly calls for protection.

It is not denied that a member of the Board of Directors of the San Miguel Corporation has access to sensitive and highly confidential information, such as: (a) marketing strategies and pricing structure; (b) budget for expansion and diversification; (c) research and development; and (d) sources of funding, availability of personnel, proposals of mergers or tie-ups with other firms.

It is obviously to prevent the creation of an opportunity for an officer or director of San Miguel Corporation, who is also the officer or owner of a competing corporation, from taking advantage of the information which he acquires as director to promote his individual or corporate interests to the prejudice of San Miguel Corporation and its stockholders, that the questioned amendment of the by-laws was made. Certainly, where two corporations are competitive in a substantial sense, it would seem improbable, if not impossible, for the director, if he were to discharge effectively his duty, to satisfy his loyalty to both corporations and place the performance of his corporation duties above his personal concerns.

Thus, in McKee & Co. v. First National Bank of San Diego, supra the court sustained as valid and reasonable an amendment to the by-laws of a bank, requiring that its directors should not be directors, officers, employees, agents, nominees or attorneys of any other banking corporation, affiliate or subsidiary thereof. Chief Judge Parker, in McKee, explained the reasons of the court, thus: ... A bank director has access to a great deal of information concerning the business and plans of a bank which would likely be injurious to the bank if known to another bank, and it was reasonable and prudent to enlarge this minimum disqualification to include any director, officer, employee, agent, nominee, or attorney of any other bank in California. The Ashkins case, supra, specifically recognizes protection against rivals and others who might acquire information which might be used against the interests of the corporation as a legitimate object of by-law protection. With respect to attorneys or persons associated with a firm which is attorney for another bank, in addition to the direct conflict or potential conflict of interest, there is also the danger of inadvertent leakage of confidential information through casual office discussions or accessibility of files. Defendant's directors determined that its welfare was best protected if this opportunity for conflicting loyalties and potential misuse and leakage of confidential information was foreclosed.

In McKee the Court further listed qualificational by-laws upheld by the courts, as follows:
(1) A director shall not be directly or indirectly interested as a stockholder in any other firm, company, or association which competes with the subject corporation.
(2) A director shall not be the immediate member of the family of any stockholder in any other firm, company, or association which competes with the subject corporation,
(3) A director shall not be an officer, agent, employee, attorney, or trustee in any other firm, company, or association which compete with the subject corporation.
(4) A director shall be of good moral character as an essential qualification to holding office.
(5) No person who is an attorney against the corporation in a law suit is eligible for service on the board. (At p. 7.)

These are not based on theorical abstractions but on human experience — that a person cannot serve two hostile masters without detriment to one of them.

The offer and assurance of petitioner that to avoid any possibility of his taking unfair advantage of his position as director of San Miguel Corporation, he would absent himself from meetings at which confidential matters would be discussed, would not detract from the validity and reasonableness of the by-laws here involved. Apart from the impractical results that would ensue from such arrangement, it would be inconsistent with petitioner's primary motive in running for board membership — which is to protect his investments in San Miguel Corporation. More important, such a proposed norm of conduct would be against all accepted principles underlying a director's duty of fidelity to the corporation, for the policy of the law is to encourage and enforce responsible corporate management. As explained by Oleck: "The law win not tolerate the passive attitude of directors ... without active and conscientious participation in the managerial functions of the company. As directors, it is their duty to control and supervise the day to day business activities of the company or to promulgate definite policies and rules of guidance with a vigilant eye toward seeing to it that these policies are carried out. It is only then that directors may be said to have fulfilled their duty of fealty to the corporation."

Sound principles of corporate management counsel against sharing sensitive information with a director whose fiduciary duty of loyalty may well require that he disclose this information to a competitive arrival. These dangers are enhanced considerably where the common director such as the petitioner is a controlling stockholder of two of the competing corporations. It would seem manifest that in such situations, the director has an economic incentive to appropriate for the benefit of his own corporation the corporate plans and policies of the corporation where he sits as director. Indeed, access by a competitor to confidential information regarding marketing strategies and pricing policies of San Miguel Corporation would subject the latter to a competitive disadvantage and unjustly enrich the competitor, for advance knowledge by the competitor of the strategies for the development of existing or new markets of existing or new products could enable said competitor to utilize such knowledge to his advantage.

There is another important consideration in determining whether or not the amended by-laws are reasonable. The Constitution and the law prohibit combinations in restraint of trade or unfair competition. Thus, section 2 of Article XIV of the Constitution provides: "The State shall regulate or prohibit private monopolies when the public interest so requires. No combinations in restraint of trade or unfair competition shall be snowed."

There are other legislation in this jurisdiction, which prohibit monopolies and combinations in restraint of trade (e.g. Article 186 of RPC).

Basically, these anti-trust laws or laws against monopolies or combinations in restraint of trade are aimed at raising levels of competition by improving the consumers' effectiveness as the final arbiter in free markets. These laws are designed to preserve free and unfettered competition as the rule of trade. "It rests on the premise that the unrestrained interaction of competitive forces will yield the best allocation of our economic resources, the lowest prices and the highest quality ... ."

The terms "monopoly", "combination in restraint of trade" and "unfair competition" appear to have a well defined meaning in other jurisdictions. A "monopoly" embraces any combination the tendency of which is to prevent competition in the broad and general sense, or to control prices to the detriment of the public.

Obviously, if a competitor has access to the pricing policy and cost conditions of the products of San Miguel Corporation, the essence of competition in a free market for the purpose of serving the lowest priced goods to the consuming public would be frustrated, The competitor could so manipulate the prices of his products or vary its marketing strategies by region or by brand in order to get the most out of the consumers. Where the two competing firms control a substantial segment of the market this could lead to collusion and combination in restraint of trade. Reason and experience point to the inevitable conclusion that the inherent tendency of interlocking directorates between companies that are related to each other as competitors is to blunt the edge of rivalry between the corporations, to seek out ways of compromising opposing interests, and thus eliminate competition. As respondent SMC aptly observes, knowledge by CFC-Robina of SMC's costs in various industries and regions in the country win enable the former to practice price discrimination. CFC-Robina can segment the entire consuming population by geographical areas or income groups and change varying prices in order to maximize profits from every market segment. CFC-Robina could determine the most profitable volume at which it could produce for every product line in which it competes with SMC. Access to SMC pricing policy by CFC-Robina would in effect destroy free competition and deprive the consuming public of opportunity to buy goods of the highest possible quality at the lowest prices.

Neither are We persuaded by the claim that the by-law was Intended to prevent the candidacy of petitioner for election to the Board. If the by-law were to be applied in the case of one stockholder but waived in the case of another, then it could be reasonably claimed that the by-law was being applied in a discriminatory manner. However, the by law, by its terms, applies to all stockholders. The equal protection clause of the Constitution requires only that the by-law operate equally upon all persons of a class. Besides, before petitioner can be declared ineligible to run for director, there must be hearing and evidence must be submitted to bring his case within the ambit of the disqualification. Sound principles of public policy and management, therefore, support the view that a by-law which disqualifies a competition from election to the Board of Directors of another corporation is valid and reasonable.

In the absence of any legal prohibition or overriding public policy, wide latitude may be accorded to the corporation in adopting measures to protect legitimate corporation interests. Thus, "where the reasonableness of a by-law is a mere matter of judgment, and upon which reasonable minds must necessarily differ, a court would not be warranted in substituting its judgment instead of the judgment of those who are authorized to make by-laws and who have expressed their authority.

Although it is asserted that the amended by-laws confer on the present Board powers to perpetua themselves in power such fears appear to be misplaced. This power, but is very nature, is subject to certain well established limitations. One of these is inherent in the very convert and definition of the terms "competition" and "competitor". "Competition" implies a struggle for advantage between two or more forces, each possessing, in substantially similar if not Identical degree, certain characteristics essential to the business sought. It means an independent endeavor of two or more persons to obtain the business patronage of a third by offering more advantageous terms as an inducement to secure trade.

The test must be whether the business does in fact compete, not whether it is capable of an indirect and highly unsubstantial duplication of an isolated or non-characteristics activity. [47] It is, therefore, obvious that not every person or entity engaged in business of the same kind is a competitor. Such factors as quantum and place of business, Identity of products and area of competition should be taken into consideration. It is, therefore, necessary to show that petitioner's business covers a substantial portion of the same markets for similar products to the extent of not less than 10% of respondent corporation's market for competing products. While We here sustain the validity of the amended by-laws, it does not follow as a necessary consequence that petitioner is ipso facto disqualified. Consonant with the requirement of due process, there must be due hearing at which the petitioner must be given the fullest opportunity to show that he is not covered by the disqualification. As trustees of the corporation and of the stockholders, it is the responsibility of directors to act with fairness to the stockholders. Pursuant to this obligation and to remove any suspicion that this power may be utilized by the incumbent members of the Board to perpetuate themselves in power, any decision of the Board to disqualify a candidate for the Board of Directors should be reviewed by the Securities behind Exchange Commission en banc and its decision shall be final unless reversed by this Court on certiorari. Indeed, it is a settled principle that where the action of a Board of Directors is an abuse of discretion, or forbidden by statute, or is against public policy, or is ultra vires, or is a fraud upon minority stockholders or creditors, or will result in waste, dissipation or misapplication of the corporation assets, a court of equity has the power to grant appropriate relief.

CITIBANK, N.A., Petitioner, -versus- HON. SEGUNDINO G. CHUA, SANTIAGO M. KAPUNAN and LUIS L. VICTOR, ASSOCIATE JUSTICES OF THE HON. COURT OF APPEALS, THIRD DIVISION, MANILA, HON. LEONARDO B. CANARES, Judge of Regional, Trial Court of Cebu, Branch 10, and SPOUSES CRESENCIO AND ZENAIDA VELEZ, Respondents

G.R. No. 102300, SECOND DIVISION, March 17, 1993, CAMPOS JR., J.

It is clear that corporate powers may be directly conferred upon corporate officers or agents by statute, the articles of incorporation, the by-laws or by resolution or other act of the board of directors. In addition, an officer who is not a director may also appoint other agents when so authorized by the by-laws or by the board of directors. Such are referred to as express powers. There are also powers incidental to express powers conferred. It is a fundamental principle in the law of agency that every delegation of authority, whether general or special, carries with it, unless the contrary be expressed, implied authority to do all of those acts, naturally and ordinarily done in such cases, which are reasonably necessary and proper to be done in order to carry into effect the main authority conferred.

Since the by-laws are a source of authority for corporate officers and agents of the corporation, a resolution of the Board of Directors of Citibank appointing an attorney in fact to represent and bind it during the pre-trial conference of the case at bar is not necessary because its by-laws allow its officers, to execute a power of attorney to a designated bank officer, William W. Ferguson in this case, clothing him with authority to direct and manage corporate affairs.

FACTS:

Private respondents alleged in their complaint that the petitioner bank extended to them credit lines sufficiently secured with real estate and chattel mortgages on equipment. They claim that petitioner offered them special additional accommodation of Five Million Pesos (P5,000,000.00).

For the failure of petitioner bank to comply with this restructuring agreement private respondents sued for specific performance and damages. Petitioner bank submitted its answer to the complaint filed by private respondents.

On the date of the pre-trial conference, counsel for petitioner bank appeared, presenting a special power of attorney executed by Citibank officer Florencia Tarriela in favor of petitioner bank's counsel, the J.P. Garcia & Associates, to represent and bind petitioner bank at the pre-trial conference of the case at bar.

Inspite of this special power of attorney, counsel for private respondents orally moved to declare petitioner bank as in default on the ground that the special power of attorney was not executed by the Board of Directors of Citibank. Petitioner bank was then required to file a written opposition to this oral motion to declare it as in default.

In its opposition, petitioner bank attached another special power of attorney made by William W. Ferguson, Vice President and highest ranking officer of Citibank, Philippines, constituting and appointing the J.P. Garcia & Associates to represent and bind the BANK at the pre-trial conference and/or trial of the case of "Cresencio Velez, et al. vs. Citibank, N.A.". 4 In an Order dated April 23, 1990, respondent judge denied private respondents' oral motion to declare petitioner bank as in default and set the continuation of the pre-trial conference for May 2, 1990.

On the scheduled pre-trial conference, private respondents reiterated, by way of asking for reconsideration, their oral motion to declare petitioner bank as in default for its failure to appear through an authorized agent and that the documents presented are not in accordance with the requirements of the law.

Respondent judge issued an order declaring petitioner bank as in default. This order, received by petitioner bank cited the following as reason for the declaration of default:

"Defendant-bank, although a foreign corporation, is bound by Philippine laws when doing and conducting business in the Philippines (Sec. 129, B.P. Blg. 68), and its corporate powers could only be exercised by its Board of Directors (Sec. 23, B.P. Blg. 68). The exercise by the Board of Directors of such power could only be valid if it bears the approval of the majority of the Board (Sec. 25, par. 2, Corporation Code). The records does not show the requisite document. The alleged authority (Special Power of Attorney, Annex "A") executed by Mr. William W. Ferguson in favor of the alleged Citibank employees, assuming the same to be a delegable authority, to represent the defendant in the pre-trial conference, made no mention of J.P. Garcia & Associates as one of the employees of the defendant.

It stands to reason therefore, that the defendant-bank has no proper representation during the pre-trial conference. CA affirmed.

Petitioner bank contends that no board resolution was necessary for its legal counsel, Atty. Julius Z. Neri, or Citibank employees to act as its attorney-in-fact in the case at bar because petitioner bank's by-laws grant to its Executing Officer and Secretary Pro-Tem the power to delegate to a Citibank officer, in this case William W. Ferguson, the authority to represent and defend the bank and its interests.

Furthermore, it contends that the Court of Appeals erred in holding that the by-laws of petitioner bank cannot be given effect because it did not have the imprimatur of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) as required by Section 46 of the Corporation Code of the Philippines.

ISSUES:

(1) Whether a resolution of the board of directors of a corporation is always necessary for granting authority to an agent to represent the corporation in court cases (NO)
(2) Whether by-laws of the petitioner foreign corporation which has previously been granted a license to do business in the Philippines, are effective in this jurisdiction (YES)

RULING:
(1)
In the corporate hierarchy, there are three levels of control: (1) the board of directors, which is responsible for corporate policies and the general management of the business affairs of the corporation; (2) the officers, who in theory execute the policies laid down by the board, but in practice often have wide latitude in determining the course of business operations; and (3) the stockholders who have the residual power over fundamental corporate changes, like amendments of the articles of incorporation. However, just as a natural person may authorize another to do certain acts in his behalf, so may the board of directors of a corporation validly delegate some of its functions to individual officers or agents appointed by it.

Thus, although as a general rule, all corporate powers are to be exercised by the board of directors, exceptions are made where the Code provides otherwise.

Section 25 of said Code provides that the directors of the corporation shall elect its corporate officers, and further provides as follows:

> "SEC. 25. Corporate officers; quorum. — . . . The directors or trustees and officers to be elected shall perform the duties enjoined on them by law and by the by-laws of the corporation . . ."

Furthermore, Section 47 of the same Code enumerates what may be contained in the by-laws, among which is a provision for the "qualifications, duties and compensation of directors or trustees, officers and employees"

Taking all the above provisions of law together, it is clear that corporate powers may be directly conferred upon corporate officers or agents by statute, the articles of incorporation, the by-laws or by resolution or other act of the board of directors. In addition, an officer who is not a director may also appoint other agents when so authorized by the by-laws or by the board of directors. Such are referred to as express powers. There are also powers incidental to express powers conferred. It is a fundamental principle in the law of agency that every delegation of authority, whether general or special, carries with it, unless the contrary be expressed, implied authority to do all of those acts, naturally and ordinarily done in such cases, which are reasonably necessary and proper to be done in order to carry into effect the main authority conferred.

Since the by-laws are a source of authority for corporate officers and agents of the corporation, a resolution of the Board of Directors of Citibank appointing an attorney in fact to represent and bind it during the pre-trial conference of the case at bar is not necessary because its by-laws allow its officers, the Executing Officer and the Secretary Pro-Tem, to execute a power of attorney to a designated bank officer, William W. Ferguson in this case, clothing him with authority to direct and manage corporate affairs. The relevant provision in the general power of attorney granted to him are as follows:

"A. That the Executing Officer and the Secretary Pro-Tem are of full age, competent to act in the premises, to me personally known, and that they are authorized to execute this instrument by virtue of the powers granted to them pursuant to the By-Laws of the Bank and the laws of the United States of America, and that the Executing Officer said that he, on the one hand, hereby revokes and cancels any instrument of power of attorney previously executed on behalf of the Bank for use in the PHILIPPINES, in favor of WILLIAM W. FERGUSON (hereinafter referred to as the "Attorney-in-fact"), of legal age, a Banker, and now residing in the PHILIPPINES, and that he (the Executing Officer), on the other hand, does hereby authorize and empower the Attorney-in-fact, acting in the name or on behalf of the Bank, or any of its Branches, or any interest it or they may have or represent, said revocation and authorization to be effective as of this date as follows:

xxx xxx xxx

XVII. To represent and defend the Bank and its interest before any and all judges and courts, of all classes and jurisdictions, in any action, suit or proceeding in which the Bank may be a party or may be interested in administrative, civil, criminal, contentious or contentious-administrative matters, and in all kinds of lawsuits, recourses or proceedings of any kind or nature, with complete and absolute representation of the Bank, whether as plaintiff or defendant, or as an interested party for any reason whatsoever . . .

xxx xxx xxx

XXI. To substitute or delegate this Power of Attorney in whole or in part in favor of such one or more employees of the Bank, as he may deem advisable, but without divesting himself of any of the powers granted to him by this Power of Attorney; and to grant and execute in favor of any one or more such employees, powers of attorney containing all or such authorizations, as he may deem advisable. . . "

Since paragraph XXI above specifically allows Ferguson to delegate his powers in whole or in part, there can be no doubt that the special power of attorney in favor, first, of J.P. Garcia & Associates and later, of the bank's employees, constitutes a valid delegation of Ferguson's express power (under paragraph XVII above) to represent petitioner bank in the pre-trial conference in the lower court.

(2)
The Court of Appeals relied on Section 46 of the Corporation Code to support its conclusion that the by-laws in question are without effect because they were not approved by the SEC. Said section reads as follows:
"SEC. 46. Adoption of by-laws. — Every corporation formed under this Code must, within one (1) month after receipt of official notice of the issuance of its certificate of incorporation by the Securities and Exchange Commission, adopt a code of by-laws for its government not inconsistent with this Code. For the adoption of by-laws by the corporation, the affirmative vote of the stockholders representing at least a majority of the outstanding capital stock, or of at least a majority of the members in the case of non-stock corporations, shall be necessary. The by-laws shall be signed by the stockholders or members voting for them and shall be kept in the principal office of the corporation, subject to the inspection of the stockholders or members during office hours; and a copy thereof, duly certified to by a majority of the directors or trustees and countersigned by the secretary of the corporation, shall be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission which shall be attached to the original articles of incorporation.

Notwithstanding the provisions of the preceding paragraph, by-laws may be adopted and filed prior to incorporation; in such case, such by-laws shall be approved and signed by all the incorporators and submitted to the Securities and Exchange Commission, together with the articles of incorporation.

In all cases, by-laws shall be effective only upon the issuance by the Securities and Exchange Commission of a certification that the by-laws are not inconsistent with this Code."

A careful reading of the above provision would show that a corporation can submit its by-laws, prior to incorporation, or within one month after receipt of official notice of the issuance of its certificate of incorporation by the SEC. When the third paragraph of the above provision mentions "in all cases", it can only refer to these two options; i.e., whether adopted prior to incorporation or within one month after incorporation, the by-laws shall be effective only upon the approval of the SEC. But even more important, said provision starts with the phrase "Every corporation formed under this Code", which can only refer to corporations incorporated in the Philippines. Hence, Section 46, in so far as it refers to the effectivity of corporate by-laws, applies only to domestic corporations and not to foreign corporations.

On the other hand, Section 125 of the same Code requires that a foreign corporation applying for a license to transact business in the Philippines must submit, among other documents, to the SEC, a copy of its articles of incorporation and by-laws, certified in accordance with law. Unless these documents are submitted, the application cannot be acted upon by the SEC. In the following section, the Code specifies when the SEC can grant the license applied for. Section 126 provides in part:
"SEC. 126. Issuance of a license. — If the Securities and Exchange Commission is satisfied that the applicant has complied with all the requirements of this Code and other special laws, rules and regulations, the Commission shall issue a license to the applicant to transact business in the Philippines for the purpose or purposes specified in such license . . ."

Since the SEC will grant a license only when the foreign corporation has complied with all the requirements of law, it follows that when it decides to issue such license, it is satisfied that the applicant's by-laws, among the other documents, meet the legal requirements. This, in effect, is an approval of the foreign corporations by-laws. It may not have been made in express terms, still it is clearly an approval. Therefore, petitioner bank's by-laws, though originating from a foreign jurisdiction, are valid and effective in the Philippines.

In pursuance of the authority granted to him by petitioner bank's by-laws, its Executing Officer appointed William W. Ferguson, a resident of the Philippines, as its Attorney-in-Fact empowering the latter, among other things, to represent petitioner bank in court cases. In turn, William W. Ferguson executed a power of attorney in favor of J.P. Garcia & Associates (petitioner bank's counsel) to represent petitioner bank in the pre-trial conference before the lower court. This act of delegation is explicity authorized by paragraph XXI of his own appointment, which we have previously cited.

LOYOLA GRAND VILLAS HOMEOWNERS (SOUTH) ASSOCIATION, INC., Petitioner, -versus- HON. COURT OF APPEALS, HOME INSURANCE AND GUARANTY CORPORATION, EMDEN ENCARNACION and HORATIO AYCARDO, Respondents
G.R. No. 117188, SECOND DIVISION, AUGUST 7, 1997, ROMERO, J.

Failure to file the by-laws does not automatically operate to dissolve a corporation but is now considered only a ground for such dissolution.

FACTS:

LGVHAI was organized on February 8, 1983 as the association of homeowners and residents of the Loyola Grand Villas. It was registered with the Home Financing Corporation, the predecessor of herein respondent HIGC, as the sole homeowners' organization in the said subdivision under Certificate of Registration No. 04-197. It was organized by the developer of the subdivision and its first president was Victorio V. Soliven, himself the owner of the developer. For unknown reasons, however, LGVHAI did not file its corporate by-laws.

Sometime in 1988, the officers of the LGVHAI tried to register its by-laws. They failed to do so. To the officers' consternation, they discovered that there were two other organizations within the subdivision — the North Association and the South Association.

In July, 1989, when Soliven inquired about the status of LGVHAI, Atty. Joaquin A. Bautista, the head of the legal department of the HIGC, informed him that LGVHAI had been automatically dissolved for two reasons. First, it did not submit its by-laws within the period required by the Corporation Code and, second, there was non-user of corporate charter because HIGC had not received any report on the association's activities.

These developments prompted the officers of the LGVHAI to lodge a complaint with the HIGC. They questioned the revocation of LGVHAI's certificate of registration without due notice and hearing and concomitantly prayed for the cancellation of the certificates of registration of the North and South Associations by reason of the earlier issuance of a certificate of registration in favor of LGVHAI.

Private respondents obtained a favorable ruling from HIGC. CA affirmed.

Petitioner contends that, since Section 46 uses the word "must" with respect to the filing of by-laws, noncompliance therewith would result in "self-extinction" either due to non-occurrence of a suspensive condition or the occurrence of a resolutory condition "under the hypothesis that by the issuance of the certificate of registration alone the corporate personality is deemed already formed." It asserts that the Corporation Code provides for a "gradation of violations of requirements." Hence, Section 22 mandates that the corporation must be formally organized and should commence transaction within two years from date of incorporation. Otherwise, the corporation would be deemed dissolved. On the other hand, if the corporation commences operations but becomes continuously inoperative for five years, then it may be suspended or its corporate franchise revoked.

ISSUE:

> Whether the LGVHAI's failure to file its by-laws within the period prescribed by Section 46 of the Corporation Code had the effect of automatically dissolving the said corporation. (NO)

RULING:

As correctly postulated by the petitioner, interpretation of this provision of law begins with the determination of the meaning and import of the word "must" in this section Ordinarily, the word "must" connotes an imperative act or operates to impose a duty which may be enforced. It is synonymous with "ought" which connotes compulsion or mandatoriness. However, the word "must" in a statute, like "shall," is not always imperative. It may be consistent with an exercise of discretion. In this jurisdiction, the tendency has been to interpret "shall" as the context or a reasonable construction of the statute in which it is used demands or requires. This is equally true as regards the word "must." Thus, if the languages of a statute considered as a whole and with due regard to its nature and object reveals that the legislature intended to use the words "shall" and "must" to be directory, they should be given that meaning.

The law itself provides the answer to the issue propounded by petitioner.

Taken as a whole and under the principle that the best interpreter of a statute is the statute itself (optima statuli interpretatix est ipsum statutum), Section 46 aforequoted reveals the legislative intent to attach a directory, and not mandatory, meaning for the word "must" in the first sentence thereof. Note should be taken of the second paragraph of the law which allows the filing of the by-laws even prior to incorporation. This provision in the same section of the Code rules out mandatory compliance with the requirement of filing the by-laws "within one (1) month after receipt of official notice of the issuance of its certificate of incorporation by the Securities and Exchange Commission." It necessarily follows that failure to file the by-laws within that period does not imply the "demise" of the corporation. By-laws may be necessary for the "government" of the corporation but these are subordinate to the articles of incorporation as well as to the Corporation Code and related statutes.

There are in fact cases where by-laws are unnecessary to corporate existence or to the valid exercise of corporate powers, thus:

In the absence of charter or statutory provisions to the contrary, by-laws are not necessary either to the existence of a corporation or to the valid exercise of the powers conferred upon it, certainly in all cases where the charter sufficiently provides for the government of the body; and even where the governing statute in express terms confers upon the corporation the power to adopt by-laws, the failure to exercise the power will be ascribed to mere nonaction which will not render void any acts of the corporation which would otherwise be valid.

As Fletcher aptly puts it:

It has been said that the by-laws of a corporation are the rule of its life, and that until by-laws have been adopted the corporation may not be able to act for the purposes of its creation, and that the first and most important duty of the members is to adopt them. This would seem to follow as a matter of principle from the office and functions of by-laws. Viewed in this light, the adoption of by-laws is a matter of practical, if not one of legal, necessity. Moreover, the peculiar circumstances attending the formation of a corporation may impose the obligation to adopt certain by-laws, as in the case of a close corporation organized for specific purposes. And the statute or general laws from which the corporation derives its corporate existence may expressly require it to make and adopt by-laws and specify to some extent what they shall contain and the manner of their adoption. The mere fact, however, of the existence of power in the corporation to adopt by-laws does not ordinarily and of necessity make the exercise of such power essential to its corporate life, or to the validity of any of its acts.

Although the Corporation Code requires the filing of by-laws, it does not expressly provide for the consequences of the non-filing of the same within the period provided for in Section 46. However, such omission has been rectified by Presidential Decree No. 902-A, the pertinent provisions on the jurisdiction of the SEC of which state:

> Sec. 6. In order to effectively exercise such jurisdiction, the Commission shall possess the following powers:
> xxx xxx xxx
> (1) To suspend, or revoke, after proper notice and hearing, the franchise or certificate of registration of corporations, partnerships or associations, upon any of the grounds provided by law, including the following:
> xxx xxx xxx
> 5. Failure to file by-laws within the required period;
> xxx xxx xxx

In the exercise of the foregoing authority and jurisdiction of the Commission or by a Commissioner or by such other bodies, boards, committees and/or any officer as may be created or designated by the Commission for the purpose. The decision, ruling or order of any such Commissioner, bodies, boards, committees and/or officer may be appealed to the Commission sitting en banc within thirty (30) days after receipt by the appellant of notice of such decision, ruling or order. The Commission shall promulgate rules of procedures to govern the proceedings, hearings and appeals of cases falling with its jurisdiction.

That the failure to file by-laws is not provided for by the Corporation Code but in another law is of no moment. P.D. No. 902-A, which took effect immediately after its promulgation on March 11, 1976, is very much apposite to the Code. Accordingly, the provisions abovequoted supply the law governing the situation in the case at bar, inasmuch as the Corporation Code and P.D. No. 902-A are statutes in pari materia. Interpretare et concordare legibus est optimus interpretandi. Every statute must be so construed and harmonized with other statutes as to form a uniform system of jurisprudence.

As the "rules and regulations or private laws enacted by the corporation to regulate, govern and control its own actions, affairs and concerns and its stockholders or members and directors and officers with relation thereto and among themselves in their relation to it," by-laws are indispensable to corporations in this jurisdiction. These may not be essential to corporate birth but certainly, these are required by law for an orderly governance and management of corporations. Nonetheless, failure to file them within the period required by law by no means tolls the automatic dissolution of a corporation.

In this regard, private respondents are correct in relying on the pronouncements of this Court in Chung Ka Bio v.Intermediate Appellate Court, as follows:

> . . . . Moreover, failure to file the by-laws does not automatically operate to dissolve a corporation but is now considered only a ground for such dissolution.

FOREST HILLS GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB, INC., Petitioner, -versus- GARDPRO, INC., Respondent

G.R. No. 164686, FIRST DIVISION, OCTOBER 22, 2014, BERSAMIN, J.

The relevant provisions of the articles of incorporation and the bylaws of Forest Hills governed the relations of the parties as far as the issues between them were concerned. Indeed, the articles of incorporation of Forest Hills defined its charter as a corporation and the contractual relationships between Forest Hills and the State, between its stockholders and the State, and between Forest Hills and its stockholder; hence, there could be no gainsaying that the contents of the articles of incorporation were binding not only on Forest Hills but also on its shareholders. On the other hand, the bylaws were the self-imposed rules resulting from the agreement between Forest Hills and its members to conduct the corporate business in a particular way. In that sense, the by-laws were the private "statutes" by which Forest Hills was regulated, and would function. The charter and the by-laws were thus the fundamental documents governing the conduct of Forest Hills' corporate affairs; they established norms of procedure for exercising rights, and reflected the purposes and intentions of the incorporators. Until repealed, the by-laws were a continuing rule for the government of Forest Hills and its officers, the proper function being to regulate the transaction of the incidental business of Forest Hills.

FACTS:

In 1996, Gardpro, Inc. (Gardpro) bought class "C" common shares of stock, which were special corporate shares that entitled the registered owner to designate two nominees or representatives for membership in the Club.

Gardpro designated Fernando R. Martin and Rolando N. Reyes to be its corporate nominees; hence, the two applied for membership in the Club. Forest Hills charged them membership fees of ₱50,000.00 each, prompting Martin to immediately call up Albert and complain about being thus charged despite having been assured that no such fees would be collected from them. With Albert assuring that the fees were temporary, both nominees of Gardpro paid the fees. At that time, the ₱45,000.00 membership fees of corporate members were increased to ₱75,000.00 per nominee by virtue of the August 26, 1997 resolution of the Board of Directors. Any nominee who paid the fees within a specified period was entitled to a discount of ₱25,000.00. Both nominees of Gardpro were then admitted as members upon approval of their applications by the Board of Directors. Later, Gardpro decided to change its designated nominees, and Forest Hills charged Gardpro new membership fees of ₱75,000.00 per nominee. When Gardpro refused to pay, the replacement did not take place.

Gardpro filed a complaint in the SEC. Martin and Reyes testified that when the shares of stock were being marketed, nothing about payment of membership fees was explained to them; that upon his inquiry, a certain Ms. Cacho, an agent of FEMAI, had told Martin that if a corporation bought class "C" common shares, its nominees would be automatically entitled to become members of the Club; that all that the corporation would have to do thereafter was to pay the monthly dues; that Albert had assured Martin that the membership fees he had paid would be refunded; and that Martin was not furnished copies of the by-laws of Forest Hills. On June 30, 2000, SEC Hearing Officer ruled in favor of Gardpro. SEC En Banc and CA affirmed.

ISSUES:

(1) Whether Court of Appeals committed an error of law in not holding that, under the applicable provisions of law on the interpretation of contracts, the replacement nominees of Gardpro, Inc., who were applying for membership in Forest Hills, should pay the required membership fees. (NO)
(2) Whether CA encroached upon the prerogative of Forest Hills to determine its own rules and procedure governing membership as well as in infringing on the power of its Board of Directors to decide upon all questions on the construction of Articles of Incorporation, By-Laws and rules and regulations of the Club (NO)

RULING:

(1)
Forest Hills was not authorized under its articles of incorporation and by-laws to collect new membership fees for the replacement nominees of Gardpro.

There is no question that Gardpro held class "C" common stocks that entitled it to two memberships in the Club. Its nominees could be admitted as regular members upon approval of the Board of Directors but only one nominee for each class "C" share as designated in the resolution could vote as such. A regular member was then entitled to use all the facilities and privileges of the Club. In that regard, Gardpro could only designate as its nominees/representatives its officers whose functions and office were defined by its own by-laws.

There was an inconsistency between the by-laws of Forest Hills and the affidavit of Albert as to the amounts of the membership fees of corporate members. On one hand, Section 13.7 (Membership Fees) of the by-laws stated that "the membership fee of Forty Five Thousand Pesos (₱45,000.00) x x x for corporate members must be paid by the applicant;" on the other, Albert's affidavit alleged that "each nominee shall pay the ₱75,000.00 membership fee." To resolve the inconsistency, the by-laws should prevail because they constituted the private statutes of the corporation and its members and must be strictly complied with and applied to the letter.

Martin attested that he and Reyes, as the nominees of Gardpro, paid ₱50,000.00 each as membership fees. With the payment of the fees being the personal obligation of Gardpro, the Court leaves the matter to the internal determination of Gardpro and its nominees.

The relevant provisions of the articles of incorporation and the bylaws of Forest Hills governed the relations of the parties as far as the issues between them were concerned. Indeed, the articles of incorporation of Forest Hills defined its charter as a corporation and the contractual relationships between Forest Hills and the State, between its stockholders and the State, and between Forest Hills and its stockholder; hence, there could be no gainsaying that the contents of the articles of incorporation were binding not only on Forest Hills but also on its shareholders. On the other hand, the bylaws were the self-imposed rules resulting from the agreement between Forest Hills and its members to conduct the corporate business in a particular way. In that sense, the by-laws were the private "statutes" by which Forest Hills was regulated, and would function. The charter and the by-laws were thus the fundamental documents governing the conduct of Forest Hills' corporate affairs; they established norms of procedure for exercising rights, and reflected the purposes and intentions of the incorporators. Until repealed, the by-laws were a continuing rule for the government of Forest Hills and its officers, the proper function being to regulate the transaction of the incidental business of Forest Hills. The bylaws constituted a binding contract as between Forest Hills and its members, and as between the members themselves. Every stockholder governed by the by-laws was entitled to access them. The by-laws were self-imposed private laws binding on all members, directors and officers of Forest Hills. The prevailing rule is that the provisions of the articles of incorporation and the by-laws must be strictly complied with and applied to the letter.

(2)
The complaint of Gardpro stated a cause of action, and thus contained the operative acts that gave rise to its remedial right against Forest Hills. The cause of action required not only the interpretation of contracts and the application of corporate laws but also the application of the civil law itself, particularly its tenets on unjust enrichment and those regulating property rights arising from ownership. If Forest Hills were allowed to charge nominees membership fees, and then to still charge their replacement nominees every time a corporate member changed its nominees, Gardpro would be unduly deprived of its full enjoyment and control of its property even as the former would be unjustly enriched.

The interpretation and application of laws have been assigned to the Judiciary under our system of constitutional government. Indeed, defining and interpreting the laws are truly a judicial function. Hence, the CA could not be denied the authority to interpret the provisions of the articles of incorporation and by-laws of Forest Hills, because such provisions, albeit in the nature of private laws, impacted on the definition of the rights and obligations of the parties. This, notwithstanding that Section 16.4 of the bylaws gave to the Board of Directors of Forest Hills the authority to decide all questions on the construction of its articles of incorporation and by-laws, and its rules and regulations.

B. REQUISITES OF VALID BY-LAWS

GRACE CHRISTIAN HIGH SCHOOL, Petitioner, -versus- THE COURT OF APPEALS, GRACE VILLAGE ASSOCIATION, INC., ALEJANDRO G. BELTRAN, and ERNESTO L. GO, Respondents
G.R. No. 108905, SECOND DIVISION, OCTOBER 23, 1997, MENDOZA, J.

These provisions of the former and present corporation law leave no room for doubt as to their meaning: the board of directors of corporations must be elected from among the stockholders or members. There may be corporations in which there are unelected members in the board but it is clear that in the examples cited by petitioner the unelected members sit as ex officio members, i.e., by virtue of and for as long as they hold a particular office. But in the case of petitioner, there is no reason at all for its representative to be given a seat in the board. Nor does petitioner claim a right to such seat by virtue of an office held.

FACTS:

On December 20, 1975, a committee of the board of directors of Grace Village Association Inc. prepared a draft of an amendment to the by-laws, reading as follows:

VI. ANNUAL MEETING

The Annual Meeting of the members of the Association shall be held on the second Thursday of January of each year. Each Charter or Associate Member of the Association is entitled to vote. He shall be entitled to as many votes as he has acquired thru his monthly membership fees only computed on a ratio of TEN (P10.00) PESOS for one vote.

The Charter and Associate Members shall elect the Directors of the Association. The candidates receiving the first fourteen (14) highest number of votes shall be declared and proclaimed elected until their successors are elected and qualified. GRACE CHRISTIAN HIGH SCHOOL representative is a permanent Director of the ASSOCIATION.

This draft was never presented to the general membership for approval. Nevertheless, from 1975, after it was presumably submitted to the board, up to 1990, petitioner was given a permanent seat in the board of directors of the association. On February 13, 1990, the association's committee on election in a letter informed James Tan, principal of the school, that "it was the sentiment that all directors should be elected by members of the association" because "to make a person or entity a permanent Director would deprive the right of voters to vote for fifteen (15) members of the Board," and "it is undemocratic for a person or entity to hold office in perpetuity."

For this reason, Tan was told that "the proposal to make the Grace Christian High School representative as a permanent director of the association, although previously tolerated in the past elections should be reexamined." Following this advice, notices were sent to the members of the association that the provision on election of directors of the 1968 by-laws of the association would be observed.

Petitioner requested the chairman of the election committee to change the notice of election by following the procedure in previous elections, claiming that the notice issued for the 1990 elections ran "counter to the practice in previous years" and was "in violation of the by-laws (of 1975)" and "unlawfully deprived Grace Christian High School of its vested right [to] a permanent seat in the board."

As the association denied its request, the school brought suit for mandamus in the Home Insurance and Guaranty Corporation to compel the board of directors of the association to recognize its right to a permanent seat in the board.

HIGC affirmed the decision of the hearing officer which denied the petition. Petitioner appealed but CA likewise affirmed.

ISSUES:

Whether Grace Christian High School is entitled to the permanent seat in the Board of the Grace Village Association (NO).

RULING:

These provisions of the former and present corporation law leave no room for doubt as to their meaning: the board of directors of corporations must be elected from among the stockholders or members. There may be corporations in which there are unelected members in the board but it is clear that in the examples cited by petitioner the unelected members sit as ex officio members, i.e., by virtue of and for as long as they hold a particular office. But in the case of petitioner, there is no reason at all for its representative to be given a seat in the board. Nor does petitioner claim a right to such seat by virtue of an office held. In fact it was not given such seat in the beginning. It was only in 1975 that a proposed amendment to the by-laws sought to give it one.

Since the provision in question is contrary to law, the fact that for fifteen years it has not been questioned or challenged but, on the contrary, appears to have been implemented by the members of the association cannot forestall a later challenge to its validity. Neither can it attain validity through acquiescence because, if it is contrary to law, it is beyond the power of the members of the association to waive its invalidity. For that matter the members of the association may have formally adopted the provision in question, but their action would be of no avail because no provision of the by-laws can be adopted if it is contrary to law.

It is probable that, in allowing petitioner's representative to sit on the board, the members of the association were not aware that this was contrary to law. It should be noted that they did not actually implement the provision in question except perhaps insofar as it increased the number of directors from 11 to 15, but certainly not the allowance of petitioner's representative as an unelected member of the board of directors. It is more accurate to say that the members merely tolerated petitioner's representative and tolerance cannot be considered ratification.

Nor can petitioner claim a vested right to sit in the board on the basis of "practice." Practice, no matter how long continued, cannot give rise to any vested right if it is contrary to law. Even less tenable is petitioner's claim that its right is "coterminus with the existence of the association."

C. BINDING EFFECTS

CHINA BANKING CORPORATION, Petitioner, -versus- COURT OF APPEALS, and VALLEY GOLF and COUNTRY CLUB, INC., Respondents
G.R. No. 117604, FIRST DIVISION, MARCH 26, 1997, KAPUNAN, J.

The purpose of a by-law is to regulate the conduct and define the duties of the members towards the corporation and among themselves. They are self-imposed and, although adopted pursuant to statutory authority, have no status as public law. Therefore, it is the generally accepted rule that third persons are not bound by by-laws, except when they have knowledge of the provisions either actually or constructively.

In order to be bound, the third party must have acquired knowledge of the pertinent by-laws at the time the transaction or agreement between said third party and the shareholder was entered into, in this case, at the time the pledge agreement was executed. VGCCI could have easily informed petitioner of its by-laws when it sent notice formally recognizing petitioner as pledgee of one of its shares registered in Calapatia's name. Petitioner's belated notice of said by-laws at the time of foreclosure will not suffice.

FACTS:

On 21 August 1974, Galicano Calapatia, Jr. (Calapatia) a stockholder of private respondent Valley Golf & Country Club, Inc. (VGCCI), pledged his Stock Certificate No. 1219 to petitioner China Banking Corporation (CBC). Petitioner wrote VGCCI requesting that the aforementioned pledge agreement be recorded in its books. VGCCI replied that the deed of pledge executed by Calapatia in petitioner's favor was duly noted in its corporate books. The pledge was due to the loan obtained by Calapatia from CBC.

Due to Calapatia's failure to pay his obligation, CBC, filed a petition for extrajudicial foreclosure

CBC informed VGCCI of the foreclosure proceedings and requested that the pledged stock be transferred to its name and the same be recorded in the corporate books. However, VGCCI expressed its inability to accede to petitioner's request in view of Calapatia's unsettled accounts with the club.

Notary Public de Vera held a public auction and petitioner emerged as the highest bidder at P20,000.00 for the pledged stock. Consequently, petitioner was issued the corresponding certificate of sale.

VGCCI sent Calapatia a notice demanding full payment of his overdue account in the amount of P18,783.24. Said notice was followed by a demand letter for the same amount and another notice.

VGCCI caused to be published in the newspaper Daily Express a notice of auction sale of a number of its stock certificates, to be held on 10 December 1986 at 10:00 a.m. Included therein was Calapatia's own share of stock (Stock Certificate No. 1219). VGCCI informed Calapatia of the termination of his membership due to the sale of his share of stock in the auction.

CBC advised VGCCI that it is the new owner of Calapatia's Stock Certificate No. 1219 by virtue of being the highest bidder in the September 17, 1985 auction and requested that a new certificate of stock be issued in its name. VGCCI replied that "for reason of delinquency" Calapatia's stock was sold at the public auction held on December 10, 1986 for P25,000.00.

CBC protested the sale by VGCCI of the subject share of stock and thereafter filed a case with RTC MaKATI for the nullification of the December 10, 1986 auction and for the issuance of a new stock certificate in its name. The RTC dismissed the complaint for lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter on the theory that it involves an intra-corporate dispute denied petitioner's motion for reconsideration.

CBC filed a complaint with the SEC for the nullification of the sale of Calapatia's stock by VGCCI.

SEC Hearing Officer rendered a decision in favor of VGCCI, stating that "considering that the said share is delinquent, (VGCCI) had valid reason not to transfer the share in the name of the petitioner in the books of (VGCCI) until liquidation of delinquency. The case was dismissed. SEC Hearing Officer denied petitioner's motion for reconsideration.

Petitioner appealed to the SEC en banc which issued an order reversing the decision of its hearing officer. The Commission en banc believes that appellant-petitioner has a prior right over the pledged share and because of pledgor's failure to pay the principal debt upon maturity, appellant-petitioner can proceed with the foreclosure of the pledged share. VGCCI sought reconsideration of the order. However, the SEC denied the same.

The CA rendered its decision nullifying and setting aside the orders of the SEC and its hearing officer on ground of lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter and, consequently, dismissed petitioner's original complaint. The Court of Appeals declared that the controversy between CBC and VGCCI is not intra-corporate.

Petitioner moved for reconsideration but the same was denied by the Court of Appeals.

VGCCI likewise insists that due to Calapatia's failure to settle his delinquent accounts, it had the right to sell the share in question in accordance with the express provision found in its by-laws.

ISSUES:

(1) Whether SEC has jurisdiction (YES)
(2) Whether CBC is bound by VGCI's by-laws (NO).

RULING:
(1)
As to the first query, there is no question that the purchase of the subject share or membership certificate at public auction by petitioner (and the issuance to it of the corresponding Certificate of Sale) transferred ownership of the same to the latter and thus entitled petitioner to have the said share registered in its name as a member of VGCCI. It is readily observed that VGCCI did not assail the transfer directly and has in fact, in its letter of 27 September 1974, expressly recognized the pledge agreement executed by the original owner, Calapatia, in favor of petitioner and has even noted said agreement in its corporate books. In addition, Calapatia, the original owner of the subject share, has not contested the said transfer.

By virtue of the afore-mentioned sale, petitioner became a bona fide stockholder of VGCCI and, therefore, the conflict that arose between petitioner and VGCCI aptly exemplies an intra-corporate controversy between a corporation and its stockholder under Sec. 5(b) of P.D. 902-A.

An important consideration, moreover is that VGCCI caps its argument by asserting that its corporate by-laws should prevail. The bone of contention, thus, is the proper interpretation and application of VGCCI's by-laws, a subject which irrefutably calls for the special competence of the SEC.
VGCCI likewise insists that due to Calapatia's failure to settle his delinquent accounts, it had the right to sell the share in question in accordance with the express provision found in its by-laws.

(2)
Private respondent's insistence comes to naught. It is significant to note that VGCCI began sending notices of delinquency to Calapatia after it was informed by petitioner (through its letter dated 14 May 1985) of the foreclosure proceedings initiated against Calapatia's pledged share, although Calapatia has been delinquent in paying his monthly dues to the club since 1975. Stranger still, petitioner, whom VGCCI had officially recognized as the pledgee of Calapatia's share, was neither informed nor furnished copies of these letters of overdue accounts until VGCCI itself sold the pledged share at another public auction. By doing so, VGCCI completely disregarded petitioner's rights as pledgee. It even failed to give petitioner notice of said auction sale. Such actuations of VGCCI thus belie its claim of good faith.

In defending its actions, VGCCI likewise maintains that petitioner is bound by its by-laws. It argues in this wise:

The general rule really is that third persons are not bound by the by-laws of a corporation since they are not privy thereto (Fleischer v. Botica Nolasco, 47 Phil. 584). The exception to this is when third persons have actual or constructive knowledge of the same. In the case at bar, petitioner had actual knowledge of the by-laws of private respondent when petitioner foreclosed the pledge made by Calapatia and when petitioner purchased the share foreclosed on September 17, 1985. This is proven by the fact that prior thereto, i.e., on May 14, 1985 petitioner even quoted a portion of private respondent's by-laws which is material to the issue herein in a letter it wrote to private respondent. Because of this actual knowledge of such by-laws then the same bound the petitioner as of the time when petitioner purchased the share. Since the by-laws was already binding upon petitioner when the latter purchased the share of Calapatia on September 17, 1985 then the petitioner purchased the said share subject to the right of the private respondent to sell the said share for reasons of delinquency and the right of private respondent to have a first lien on said shares as these rights are provided for in the by-laws very very clearly.

VGCCI misunderstood the import of our ruling in Fleischer v. Botica Nolasco Co.:

And moreover, the by-law now in question cannot have any effect on the appellee. He had no knowledge of such by-law when the shares were assigned to him. He obtained them in good faith and for a valuable consideration. He was not a privy to the contract created by said by-law between the shareholder Manuel Gonzales and the Botica Nolasco, Inc. Said by-law cannot operate to defeat his rights as a purchaser.

An unauthorized by-law forbidding a shareholder to sell his shares without first offering them to the corporation for a period of thirty days is not binding upon an assignee of the stock as a personal contract, although his assignor knew of the by-law and took part in its adoption.

When no restriction is placed by public law on the transfer of corporate stock, a purchaser is not affected by any contractual restriction of which he had no notice.

The assignment of shares of stock in a corporation by one who has assented to an unauthorized by-law has only the effect of a contract by, and enforceable against, the assignor; the assignee is not bound by such by-law by virtue of the assignment alone.

A by-law of a corporation which provides that transfers of stock shall not be valid unless approved by the board of directors, while it may be enforced as a reasonable regulation for the protection of the corporation against worthless stockholders, cannot be made available to defeat the rights of third persons.

In order to be bound, the third party must have acquired knowledge of the pertinent by-laws at the time the transaction or agreement between said third party and the shareholder was entered into, in this case, at the time the pledge agreement was executed. VGCCI could have easily informed petitioner of its by-laws when it sent notice formally recognizing petitioner as pledgee of one of its shares registered in Calapatia's name. Petitioner's belated notice of said by-laws at the time of foreclosure will not suffice.

The ruling of the SEC en banc is particularly instructive:

By-laws signifies the rules and regulations or private laws enacted by the corporation to regulate, govern and control its own actions, affairs and concerns and its stockholders or members and directors and officers with relation thereto and among themselves in their relation to it. In other words, by-laws are the relatively permanent and continuing rules of action adopted by the corporation for its own government and that of the individuals composing it and having the direction, management and control of its affairs, in whole or in part, in the management and control of its affairs and activities.

The purpose of a by-law is to regulate the conduct and define the duties of the members towards the corporation and among themselves. They are self-imposed and, although adopted pursuant to statutory authority, have no status as public law.

Therefore, it is the generally accepted rule that third persons are not bound by by-laws, except when they have knowledge of the provisions either actually or constructively. In the case of Fleisher v. Botica Nolasco, 47 Phil. 584, the Supreme Court held that the by-law restricting the transfer of shares cannot have any effect on the transferee of the shares in question as he "had no knowledge of such by-law when the shares were assigned to him. He obtained them in good faith and for a valuable consideration. He was not a privy to the contract created by the by-law between the shareholder . . .and the Botica Nolasco, Inc. Said by-law cannot operate to defeat his right as a purchaser.

By analogy of the above-cited case, the Commission en banc is of the opinion that said case is applicable to the present controversy. Appellant-petitioner bank as a third party cannot be bound by appellee-respondent's by-laws. It must be recalled that when appellee-respondent communicated to appellant-petitioner bank that the pledge agreement was duly noted in the club's books there was no mention of the shareholder-pledgor's unpaid accounts. The transcript of stenographic notes of the June 25, 1991 Hearing reveals that the pledgor became delinquent only in 1975. Thus, appellant-petitioner was in good faith when the pledge agreement was contracted.

The Commission en banc also believes that for the exception to the general accepted rule that third persons are not bound by by-laws to be applicable and binding upon the pledgee, knowledge of the provisions of the VGCI By-laws must be acquired at the time the pledge agreement was contracted. Knowledge of said provisions, either actual or constructive, at the time of foreclosure will not affect pledgee's right over the pledged share. Art. 2087 of the Civil Code provides that it is also of the essence of these contracts that when the principal obligation becomes due, the things in which the pledge or mortgage consists maybe alienated for the payment to the creditor.

In a letter dated March 10, 1976 addressed to Valley Golf Club, Inc., the Commission issued an opinion to the effect that:

According to the weight of authority, the pledgee's right is entitled to full protection without surrender of the certificate, their cancellation, and the issuance to him of new ones, and when done, the pledgee will be fully protected against a subsequent purchaser who would be charged with constructive notice that the certificate is covered by the pledge.

The pledgee is entitled to retain possession of the stock until the pledgor pays or tenders to him the amount due on the debt secured. In other words, the pledgee has the right to resort to its collateral for the payment of the debts.

To cancel the pledged certificate outright and the issuance of new certificate to a third person who purchased the same certificate covered by the pledge, will certainly defeat the right of the pledgee to resort to its collateral for the payment of the debt. The pledgor or his representative or registered stockholders has no right to require a return of the pledged stock until the debt for which it was given as security is paid and satisfied, regardless of the length of time which have elapsed since debt was created.

A bona fide pledgee takes free from any latent or secret equities or liens in favor either of the corporation or of third persons, if he has no notice thereof, but not otherwise. He also takes it free of liens or claims that may subsequently arise in favor of the corporation if it has notice of the pledge, although no demand for a transfer of the stock to the pledgee on the corporate books has been made. (12-A Fletcher 5634, 1982 ed., citing Snyder v. Eagle Fruit Co., 75 F2d739)

Similarly, VGCCI's contention that petitioner is duty-bound to know its by-laws because of Art. 2099 of the Civil Code which stipulates that the creditor must take care of the thing pledged with the diligence of a good father of a family, fails to convince. The case of Cruz & Serrano v. Chua A. H. Lee, is clearly not applicable:

In applying this provision to the situation before us it must be borne in mind that the ordinary pawn ticket is a document by virtue of which the property in the thing pledged passes from hand to hand by mere delivery of the ticket; and the contract of the pledge is, therefore, absolvable to bearer. It results that one who takes a pawn ticket in pledge acquires domination over the pledge; and it is the holder who must renew the pledge, if it is to be kept alive.

It is quite obvious from the aforequoted case that a membership share is quite different in character from a pawn ticket and to reiterate, petitioner was never informed of Calapatia's unpaid accounts and the restrictive provisions in VGCCI's by-laws.

Finally, Sec. 63 of the Corporation Code which provides that "no shares of stock against which the corporation holds any unpaid claim shall be transferable in the books of the corporation" cannot be utilized by VGCCI. The term "unpaid claim" refers to "any unpaid claim arising from unpaid subscription, and not to any indebtedness which a subscriber or stockholder may owe the corporation arising from any other transaction." In the case at bar, the subscription for the share in question has been fully paid as evidenced by the issuance of Membership Certificate No. 1219. What Calapatia owed the corporation were merely the monthly dues. Hence, the aforequoted provision does not apply.

PMI COLLEGES, Petitioner, -versus- THE NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS COMMISSION and ALEJANDRO GALVAN, Respondents
G.R. No. 121466, SECOND DIVISION, AUGUST 15, 1997, ROMERO, J.

The Court cannot concede that the employment contract would be invalid just because the signatory thereon was not the Chairman of the Board which allegedly violated petitioner's by-laws. Since by-laws operate merely as internal rules among the stockholders, they cannot affect or prejudice third persons who deal with the corporation, unless they have knowledge of the same." No proof appears on record that private respondent ever knew anything about the provisions of said by-laws. In fact, petitioner itself merely asserts the same without even bothering to attach a copy or excerpt thereof to show that there is such a provision.

FACTS:

Petitioner, hired private respondent as contractual instructor. Pursuant to this engagement, private respondent then organized classes in marine engineering.

Initially, private respondent and other instructors were compensated for services rendered during the first three periods of the abovementioned contract. However, for reasons unknown to private respondent, he stopped receiving payment for the succeeding rendition of services.

This claim of non-payment was embodied in a letter dated March 3, 1992, written by petitioner's Acting Director, Casimiro A. Aguinaldo, addressed to its President, Atty. Santiago Pastor, calling attention to and appealing for the early approval and release of the salaries of its instructors including that of private respondent. It appeared further in said letter that the salary of private respondent corresponding to the shipyard and plant visits and the ongoing on-the-job training of Class 41 on board MV "Sweet Glory" of Sweet Lines, Inc. was not yet included. This request of the Acting Director apparently went unheeded. Private respondent was soon constrained to file a complaint before the National Capital Region Arbitration Branch on September 14, 1993 seeking payment for salaries earned from the following: (1) basic seaman course Classes 41 and 42 for the period covering October 1991 to September 1992; (2) shipyard and plant visits and on-the-job training of Classes 41 and 42 for the period covering October 1991 to September 1992 on board M/V "Sweet Glory" vessel; and (3) as Acting Director of Seaman Training Course for 3-1/2 months.

Later in the proceedings below, petitioner manifested that Mr. Tomas G. Cloma, Jr., a member of the petitioner's Board of Trustees wrote a letter to the Chairman of the Board on May 23, 1994, clarifying the case of private respondent and stating therein, inter alia, that under petitioner's by-laws only the Chairman is authorized to sign any contract and that private respondent, in any event, failed to submit documents on the alleged shipyard and plant visits in Cavite Naval Base. Thus, petitioner argued that the employment contract is invalid.

Attempts at amicable settlement having failed, the parties were required to submit their respective position papers.

National Labor Relations Commission rendered a Decision affirming in toto the decision of Labor declaring petitioner PMI Colleges liable to pay private respondent Alejandro Galvan

ISSUES:

Whether the contract of employment is valid (YES)

RULING:

Petitioner places so much emphasis on its argument that private respondent did not produce a copy of the contract pursuant to which he rendered services. This argument is, of course, puerile. The absence of such copy does not in any manner negate the existence of a contract of employment since "Contracts shall be obligatory, in whatever form they have been entered into, provided all the essential requisites for their validity are present." The only exception to this rule is "when the law requires that a contract be in some form in order that it may be valid or enforceable, or that a contract be proved in a certain way." However, there is no requirement under the law that the contract of employment of the kind entered into by petitioner with private respondent should be in any particular form. While it may have been desirable for private respondent to have produced a copy of his contract if one really exists, but the absence thereof, in any case, does not militate against his claims.

Neither can we concede that such contract would be invalid just because the signatory thereon was not the Chairman of the Board which allegedly violated petitioner's by-laws. Since by-laws operate merely as internal rules among the stockholders, they cannot affect or prejudice third persons who deal with the corporation, unless they have knowledge of the same." No proof appears on record that private respondent ever knew anything about the provisions of said by-laws. In fact, petitioner itself merely asserts the same without even bothering to attach a copy or excerpt thereof to show that there is such a provision. How can it now expect the Labor Arbiter and the NLRC to believe it? That this allegation has never been denied by private respondent does not necessarily signify admission of its existence because technicalities of law and procedure and the rules obtaining in the courts of law do not strictly apply to proceedings of this nature.

CATHERINE CHING, LORENZO CHING, LAURENCE CHING, AND CHRISTINE CHING, Petitioners, -versus- QUEZON CITY SPORTS CLUB, INC.; MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS, NAMELY: ANTONIO T. CHUA, MARGARET MARY A. RODAS, ALEJANDRO G. YABUT, JR., ROBERT C. GAW, EDGARDO A. HO, ROMULO D. SALES, BIENVENIDO ALANO, AUGUSTO E. OROSA, AND THE FINANCE MANAGER, LOURDES RUTH M. LOPEZ, Respondents

G.R. No. 200150, FIRST DIVISION, NOVEMBER 7, 2016, DE CASTRO, J.

In construing and applying the provisions of the articles of incorporation and by-laws of the country club, the Court, also in Forest Hills, sustained the application by the Court of Appeals therein of the rules on interpretation of contracts under Articles 1370 and 1374 of the Civil Code. The plain meaning rule embodied in Article 1370 of the Civil Code provides that if the terms of the contract are clear and leave no doubt upon the intention of the contracting parties, the literal meaning of its stipulations shall control; while Article 1374 of the Civil Code declares that "[t]he various stipulations of a contract shall be interpreted together, attributing to the doubtful ones that sense which may result from all of them taken jointly." Verily, all stipulations of the contract are considered and the whole agreement is rendered valid and enforceable, instead of treating some provisions as superfluous, void, or inoperable.

Section 35(a) of the By-Laws requires notice and hearing prior to a member's suspension. Definitely, in this case, petitioner Catherine did not receive notice specifically advising her that she could be suspended for nonpayment of the special assessment imposed by Board Resolution No. 7-2001 and affording her a hearing prior to her suspension through Board Resolution No. 3-2002. Respondents merely relied on the general notice printed in petitioner Catherine's Statements of Account from September 2001 to April 2002 warning of automatic suspension for accounts of over P20,000.00 which are past due for 60 days, and accounts regardless of amount which are 75 days in arrears. While said general notice in the Statements of Account might have been sufficient for purposes of Section 33(a) of the By-Laws, it fell short of the stricter requirement under Section 35(a) of the same By-Laws

FACTS:

Because respondent Club was not in a financial position to pay the monetary awards in NLRC NCR Case No. 00-07-06219, respondent BOD approved on September 20, 200I Board Resolution No. 7-2001,[3]entitled "Special Assessment for Club Members in Relation to the Marie Rose Navarro, et al. v. QCSI, et al. Case," resolving to "seek the assistance of its members by assessing each member the amount of TWO THOUSAND FIVE HUNDRED PESOS (P2,500.00) payable in five (5) equal monthly payments starting the month of September 2001."

Petitioner Catherine was duly notified of the implementation of the special assessment through a Letter dated September 25, 2001 from the Treasurer of respondent Club. The amount of P500.00 was debited and/or charged to Catherine's account each month from September 2001 to January 2002, as reflected in the Statements of Account[5] issued by respondent Club

Petitioner Catherine believed that the imposition of the special assessment in Board Resolution No. 7-2001 was unjust and/or illegal, however, she took no action against the same. Petitioner Catherine simply avoided paying the special assessment by settling the amounts due in her Statements of Account from September 2001 to January 2002 short of P500.00.

Respondent BOD then passed Board Resolution No. 3-2002 on April 18, 2002 which suspended the privileges of the members of respondent Club who had not yet paid the special assessment

Petitioners instituted before the RTC a Complaint for damages against respondents, based on Articles 19, 20, and 21 of the Civil Code.

The RTC rendered. It based on the "Business Judgment Rule" and Philippine Stock Exchange, Inc. v. Court of Appeals, which stated that questions of policy and management are left to the honest decision of the officers and directors of a corporation; and the courts are without authority to substitute their judgment for that of the BOD unless said judgment had been attended with bad faith. The RTC found no evidence of bad faith on the part of respondents in adopting Board Resolution.

CA reversed and ruled in favor of respondent.

Petitioners, on one hand, maintain that petitioner Catherine's nonpayment of the special assessment of P2,500.00 was a violation of a resolution of the respondent Board, to which Section 35(a) of the By-Laws of respondent Club - requiring notice and hearing prior to the member's suspension - should have applied:

SUSPENSION AND EXPULSION

Sec. 35. (a)
For violating these By-Laws or rules and regulations of the Club, or resolution and orders duly promulgated at Board or stockholders' meeting, or for any other causes and acts of a member which in the opinion of the Board are serious or prejudicial to the Club such as acts or conduct of a member or the immediate members of his family, his guest or visitors, which the Board may deem disorderly or injurious to the interest or hostile to the objects of the Club, the offending member may be suspended, or expelled by a two-thirds (2/33) vote of the Board of Directors upon proper notice and hearing.

Respondents, on the other hand, invoke Section 33(a) of the By-Laws of respondent Club, which allows the suspension of a member with unpaid bills after notice:

Sec. 33. (a)
Billing of Members, Posting of Suspended Accounts As soon as possible after the end of every month, a statement showing the account or bill of a member for said month will be prepared and sent to them. If the bill of any regular member remains unpaid by the 20th of the month following that in which the bill was incurred, the Treasurer shall notify him that if his bill is not paid in full by the end of the same month, his name will be posted as suspended the following day at the Clubhouse Bulletin Board. While posted, a regular member together with the immediate members of his family mal not use the facilities or avail of the privileges of the Club.

ISSUES:

Whether there was a violation of the petitioner's right to due process (YES)

RULING:
In construing and applying the provisions of the articles of incorporation and by-laws of the country club, the Court, also in Forest Hills, sustained the application by the Court of Appeals therein of the rules on interpretation of contracts under Articles 1370 and 1374 of the Civil Code. The plain meaning rule embodied in Article 1370 of the Civil Code provides that if the terms of the contract are clear and leave no doubt upon the intention of the contracting parties, the literal meaning of its stipulations shall control; while Article 1374 of the Civil Code declares that "[t]he various stipulations of a contract shall be interpreted together, attributing to the doubtful ones that sense which may result from all of them taken jointly." Verily, all stipulations of the contract are considered and the whole agreement is rendered valid and enforceable, instead of treating some provisions as superfluous, void, or inoperable.

Being guided accordingly, the Court now turns to the pertinent By-Laws of respondent Club.

At cursory glance, it would seem that the suspension of petitioner Catherine's privileges was due to the P2,500.00 special assessment charged in her Statements of Account from September 2001 to January 2002, which remained unpaid for over three months by the time respondent BOD passed Board Resolution No. 3-2002 on April 18, 2002; and for one year and four months by the time respondent Lopez issued her Memorandum dated May 22, 2003. However, tracing back, the P2,500.00 special assessment was not an ordinary account or bill incurred by petitioners in respondent Club, as contemplated in Section 33(a) of the By-Laws.

Section 33(a) of the By-Laws refers to the regular dues and ordinary accounts or bills incurred by members as they avail of the services at respondent Club, and for which the members are charged in their monthly Statement of Account. The immediate payment or collection of the amount charged in the member's monthly Statement of Account is essential so respondent Club can carry-on its day-to-day operations, which is why Section 33(a) allows for the automatic suspension of a nonpaying member after a specified period and notification.

The special assessment in the instant case arose from an extraordinary circumstance, i.e., the necessity of raising payment for the monetary judgment against respondent Club in an illegal dismissal case. The special assessment of P2,500.00 was imposed upon the members by respondent BOD through Board Resolution No. 7-2001 dated September 20, 2001; it only so happened that said Board Resolution was implemented by directly charging the special assessment, in P500.00 installments, in the members' Statements of Account for five months. Thus, petitioner Catherine's nonpayment of the special assessment was, ultimately, a violation of Board Resolution No. 7-2001, covered by Section 35(a) of the By-Laws. This much was acknowledged by respondent BOD itself when it mentioned in Board Resolution No. 3-2002 that "to enforce Board Resolution No. 7-2001," it was suspending the members who did not pay the special assessment.

Section 35(a) of the By-Laws requires notice and hearing prior to a member's suspension. Definitely, in this case, petitioner Catherine did not receive notice specifically advising her that she could be suspended for nonpayment of the special assessment imposed by Board Resolution No. 7-2001 and affording her a hearing prior to her suspension through Board Resolution No. 3-2002. Respondents merely relied on the general notice printed in petitioner Catherine's Statements of Account from September 2001 to April 2002 warning of automatic suspension for accounts of over P20,000.00 which are past due for 60 days, and accounts regardless of amount which are 75 days in arrears. While said general notice in the Statements of Account might have been sufficient for purposes of Section 33(a) of the By-Laws, it fell short of the stricter requirement under Section 35(a) of the same By-Laws. Petitioner Catherine's right to due process was clearly violated.

d. Amendment or Revision

- Cebu Country Club, Inc., et al. vs. Ricardo F. Elizagaque, G.R. No. 160273, January 18, 2008

CEBU COUNTRY CLUB, INC., SABINO R. DAPAT, RUBEN D. ALMENDRAS, JULIUS Z. NERI, DOUGLAS L. LUYM, CESAR T. LIBI, RAMONTITO* E. GARCIA and JOSE B. SALA, PetitionerS – versus- RICARDO F. ELIZAGAQUE, Respondent.

G.R. No. 160273, FIRST DIVISION, January 18, 2008, SANDOVAL-GUTIERREZ, J.:

The exercise of a right, though legal by itself, must nonetheless be in accordance with the proper norm. When the right is exercised arbitrarily, unjustly or excessively and results in damage to another, a legal wrong is committed for which the wrongdoer must be held responsible. It bears reiterating that the trial court and the Court of Appeals held that petitioners' disapproval of respondent's application is characterized by bad faith.

FACTS

Cebu Country Club, Inc. (CCCI), petitioner, is a domestic corporation operating as a non-profit and non-stock private membership club, having its principal place of business in Banilad, Cebu City. Petitioners herein are members of its Board of Directors.

Sometime in 1987, San Miguel Corporation, a special company proprietary member of CCCI, designated respondent Ricardo F. Elizagaque, its Senior Vice President and Operations Manager for the Visayas and Mindanao, as a special non-proprietary member. The designation was thereafter approved by the CCCI's Board of Directors.

In 1996, respondent filed with CCCI an application for proprietary membership. The application was indorsed by CCCI's two (2) proprietary members, namely: Edmundo T. Misa and Silvano Ludo.

As the price of a proprietary share was around the P5 million range, Benito Unchuan, then president of CCCI, offered to sell respondent a share for only P3.5 million. Respondent, however, purchased the share of a certain Dr. Butalid for only P3 million. Consequently, on September 6, 1996, CCCI issued Proprietary Ownership Certificate No. 1446 to respondent.

During the meetings dated April 4, 1997 and May 30, 1997 of the CCCI Board of Directors, action on respondent's application for proprietary membership was deferred. In another Board meeting held on July 30, 1997, respondent's application was voted upon. Subsequently, or on August 1, 1997, respondent received a letter from Julius Z. Neri, CCCI's corporate secretary, informing him that the Board disapproved his application for proprietary membership.

Edmundo T. Misa, on behalf of respondent, repeatedly wrote CCCI a letter of reconsideration but CCCI did not reply. Consequently, respondent filed with the Regional Trial Court (RTC), Branch 71, Pasig City a complaint for damages against petitioners. After trial, the RTC rendered its Decision in favor of respondent.

On appeal by petitioners, the Court of Appeals affirmed the trial court's Decision with modification.

ISSUE

Whether in disapproving respondent's application for proprietary membership with CCCI, petitioners are liable to respondent for damages, and if so, whether their liability is joint and several. (YES)

CCCI's Articles of Incorporation provide in part:
SEVENTH: That this is a non-stock corporation and membership therein as well as the right of participation in its assets shall be limited to qualified persons who are duly accredited owners of Proprietary Ownership Certificates issued by the corporation in accordance with its By-Laws.

Corollary, Section 3, Article 1 of CCCI's Amended By-Laws provides:

SECTION 3. HOW MEMBERS ARE ELECTED – The procedure for the admission of new members of the Club shall be as follows:

(a) Any proprietary member, seconded by another voting proprietary member, shall submit to the Secretary a written proposal for the admission of a candidate to the "Eligible-for-Membership List";
(b) Such proposal shall be posted by the Secretary for a period of thirty (30) days on the Club bulletin board during which time any member may interpose objections to the admission of the applicant by communicating the same to the Board of Directors;
(c) After the expiration of the aforesaid thirty (30) days, the Board may, by unanimous vote of all directors present at a regular or special meeting, approve the inclusion of the candidate in the "Eligible-for-Membership List".

(d) Once included in the "Eligible-for-Membership List" and after the candidate shall have acquired in his name a valid POC duly recorded in the books of the corporation as his own, he shall become a Proprietary Member, upon a non-refundable admission fee of P1,000.00, provided that admission fees will only be collected once from any person.

As shown by the records, the Board adopted a secret balloting known as the "black ball system" of voting wherein each member will drop a ball in the ballot box. A white ball represents conformity to the admission of an applicant, while a black ball means disapproval. Pursuant to Section 3(c), as amended, cited above, a unanimous vote of the directors is required. When respondent's application for proprietary membership was voted upon during the Board meeting on July 30, 1997, the ballot box contained one (1) black ball. Thus, for lack of unanimity, his application was disapproved.

Obviously, the CCCI Board of Directors, under its Articles of Incorporation, has the right to approve or disapprove an application for proprietary membership. But such right should not be exercised arbitrarily.

It bears stressing that the amendment to Section 3(c) of CCCI's Amended By-Laws requiring the unanimous vote of the directors present at a special or regular meeting was not printed on the application form respondent filled and submitted to CCCI. What was printed thereon was the original provision of Section 3(c) which was silent on the required number of votes needed for admission of an applicant as a proprietary member.

Petitioners explained that the amendment was not printed on the application form due to economic reasons. We find this excuse flimsy and unconvincing. Such amendment, aside from being extremely significant, was introduced way back in 1978 or almost twenty (20) years before respondent filed his application. We cannot fathom why such a prestigious and exclusive golf country club, like the CCCI, whose members are all affluent, did not have enough money to cause the printing of an updated application form.
It is thus clear that respondent was left groping in the dark wondering why his application was disapproved. He was not even informed that a unanimous vote of the Board members was required. When he sent a letter for reconsideration and an inquiry whether there was an objection to his application, petitioners apparently ignored him. Certainly, respondent did not deserve this kind of treatment. Having been designated by San Miguel Corporation as a special non-proprietary member of CCCI, he should have been treated by petitioners with courtesy and civility. At the very least, they should have informed him why his application was disapproved.

The exercise of a right, though legal by itself, must nonetheless be in accordance with the proper norm. When the right is exercised arbitrarily, unjustly or excessively and results in damage to another, a legal wrong is committed for which the wrongdoer must be held responsible.6 It bears reiterating that the trial court and the Court of Appeals held that petitioners' disapproval of respondent's application is characterized by bad faith.

Lastly, petitioners' argument that they could not be held jointly and severally liable for damages because only one (1) voted for the disapproval of respondent's application lacks merit.
Section 31 of the Corporation Code provides:

SEC. 31. Liability of directors, trustees or officers. — Directors or trustees who willfully and knowingly vote for or assent to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or who are guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation or acquire any personal or pecuniary interest in conflict with their duty as such directors, or trustees shall be liable jointly and severally for all damages resulting therefrom suffered by the corporation, its stockholders or members and other persons.

Corporate Powers

1. General Powers, Theory of General Capacity

- National Power Corporation vs. Honorable Abraham P. Vera, Presiding Judge, Regional Trial Court, National Capital Judicial Region, Branch 90, Quezon City and Sea Lion International Port Terminal Services, Inc., G.R. No. 83558, February 27, 1989

NATIONAL POWER CORPORATION, Petitioner –versus- ABRAHAM P. VERA, Presiding Judge, Regional Trial Court, National Capital Judicial Region, Branch 90, Quezon City and SEA LION INTERNATIONAL PORT TERMINAL SERVICES, INC, Respondents.
G.R. No. 83558, THIRD DIVISION, February 27, 1989, CORTEZ, J.:

The Court in the case of Teresa Electric & Power Co., Inc. v. Public Service Commission and Filipinos Cement Corporation [G.R. No. L-21804, September 25, 1967, 21 SCRA 198] in interpreting a provision found in respondent corporations articles of incorporation authorizing the corporation to perform any and all acts connected with the business of manufacturing portland cement or arising therefrom or incidental thereto, concluded that the corporation must be deemed authorized to operate and maintain an electric power plant exclusively for its own use in connection with the operation of its cement factory in a remote barrio. The Court found that the operation of such plant was necessarily connected with the business of manufacturing cement.
In the instant case, it is an undisputed fact that the pier located at Calaca, Batangas, which is owned by NPC, receives the various shipments of coal which is used exclusively to fuel the Batangas Coal-Fired Thermal Power Plant of the NPC for the generation of electric power. The stevedoring services which involve the unloading of the coal shipments into the NPC pier for its eventual conveyance to the power plant are incidental and indispensable to the operation of the plant The Court holds that NPC is empowered under its Charter to undertake such services, it being reasonably necessary to the operation and maintenance of the power plant.

FACTS

Petitioner, National Power Corporation (NPC), seeks to annul the order of respondent judge dated June 8, 1988 issuing a writ of preliminary injunction which enjoined NPC from further undertaking stevedoring and arrastre services in its pier located at the Batangas Coal-Fired Thermal Power Plant at Calaca, Batangas and directing it either to enter into a contract for stevedoring and arrastre services or to conduct a public bidding therefor. Private respondent was also allowed to continue stevedoring and arrastre services at the pier.

The instant petition arose from a complaint for prohibition and mandamus with damages filed by private respondent against NPC and Philippine Ports Authority (PPA), wherein private respondent alleged that NPC had acted in bad faith and with grave abuse of discretion in not renewing its Contract for Stevedoring Services for Coal-Handling Operations at NPC's plant, and in taking over its stevedoring services.

Soon after the filing of private respondent's complaint, respondent judge issued a restraining order against NPC enjoining the latter from undertaking stevedoring services at its pier. Consequently, NPC filed an "Urgent Motion" to dissolve the restraining order, asserting, inter alia: (1) that by virtue of Presidential Decree No. 1818, respondent judge had no jurisdiction to issue the order; and (2) that private respondent, whose contract with NPC had expired prior to the commencement of the suit, failed to establish a cause of action for a writ of preliminary injunction.

Respondent judge issued the assailed Order denying NPC's motion and issuing a writ of preliminary injunction, after finding that NPC was not empowered by its Charter, Republic Act No. 6395, as amended, to engage in stevedoring and arrastre services. Hence, the instant petition.

On June 15, 1988, the Court issued a temporary restraining order. After private respondent filed its comment to the petition, and petitioner filed its reply, the Court considered the issues joined and the case submitted for decision.

ISSUE

Whether or not the undertaking of stevedoring services is empowered by the NPC's charter powers. (YES)

RULING

The undertaking of stevedoring services is empowered by the NPC's charter powers. To carry out the national policy of total electrification of the country, specifically the development of hydroelectric generation of power and the production of electricity from nuclear, geothermal and other sources to meet the needs of industrial development and dispersal and the needs of rural electrification [Secs. 1 and 2, Rep. Act No. 6395, as amended], the NPC was created and empowered not only to construct, operate and maintain power plants, reservoirs, transmission lines, and other works, but also:

xxx xxx xxx

... To exercise such powers and do such things as may be reasonably necessary to carry out the business and purposes for which it was organized, or which, from time to time, may be declared by the Board to be necessary, useful, incidental or auxiliary to accomplish said purpose, . . . [Sec. 3 (1) of Rep. Act No. 6395, as amended.]

In determining whether or not an NPC act falls within the purview of the above provision, the Court must decide whether or not a logical and necessary relation exists between the act questioned and the corporate purpose expressed in the NPC charter. For if that act is one which is lawful in itself and not otherwise prohibited, and is done for the purpose of serving corporate ends, and reasonably contributes to the promotion of those ends in a substantial and not in a remote and fanciful sense, it may be fairly considered within the corporation's charter powers [Montelibano v. Bacolod-Murcia Milling Co., Inc., G.R. No. L-15092, May 18, 1962, 5 SCRA 36.]

This Court is, guided by jurisprudence in the application of the above standard. In the 1963 case of Republic of the Philippines v. Acoje Mining Company, Inc. [G.R. No. L-18062, February 28, 1963, 7 SCRA 3611 the Court affirmed the rule that a corporation is not restricted to the exercise of powers expressly conferred upon it by its charter, but has the power to do what is reasonably necessary or proper to promote the interest or welfare of the corporation. Thus, the Court, finding that a "post office is a vital improvement in the living condition of its employees and laborers who came to settle in its mining camp which is far removed from the postal facilities or means of communication accorded to people living in a city or municipality" [Id., at P. 365], held that respondent mining corporation was empowered to operate and maintain postal facilities servicing its employees and their families at its mining camp in Sta. Cruz, Zambales despite absence of a provision in the company's charter authorizing the former to do so.

The Court in the case of Teresa Electric & Power Co., Inc. v. Public Service Commission and Filipinos Cement Corporation [G.R. No. L-21804, September 25, 1967, 21 SCRA 198] in interpreting a provision found in respondent corporations articles of incorporation authorizing the corporation to perform any and all acts connected with the business of manufacturing portland cement or arising therefrom or incidental thereto, concluded that the corporation must be deemed authorized to operate and maintain an electric power plant exclusively for its own use in connection with the operation of its cement factory in a remote barrio. The Court found that the operation of such plant was necessarily connected with the business of manufacturing cement.

In the instant case, it is an undisputed fact that the pier located at Calaca, Batangas, which is owned by NPC, receives the various shipments of coal which is used exclusively to fuel the Batangas Coal-Fired Thermal Power Plant of the NPC for the generation of electric power. The stevedoring services which involve the unloading of the coal shipments into the NPC pier for its eventual conveyance to the power plant are incidental and indispensable to the operation of the plant The Court holds that NPC is empowered under its Charter to undertake such services, it being reasonably necessary to the operation and maintenance of the power plant.

- Aurbach vs. Sanitary Wares Manufacturing Corporation, 180 SCRA 130 (1989)

WOLRGANG AURBACH, JOHN GRIFFIN, DAVID P. WHITTINGHAM and CHARLES CHAMSAY, Petitioners –versus- SANITARY WARES MANUFACTURING CORPORATOIN, ERNESTO V. LAGDAMEO, ERNESTO R. LAGDAMEO, JR., ENRIQUE R. LAGDAMEO, GEORGE F. LEE, RAUL A. BONCAN, BALDWIN YOUNG and AVELINO V. CRUZ, Respondents.

G.R. No. 75875, THIRD DIVISION, December 15, 1989, GUTIERREZ, JR., J.:

The legal concept of a joint venture is of common law origin. It has no precise legal definition but it has been generally understood to mean an organization formed for some temporary purpose. The main distinction in common law jurisdictions is that the partnership contemplates a general business with some degree of continuity, while the joint venture is formed for the execution of a single transaction, and is thus of a temporary nature.

This observation is not entirely accurate in this jurisdiction, since under the Civil Code, a partnership may be particular or universal, and a particular partnership may have for its object a specific undertaking. It would seem therefore that under Philippine law, a joint venture is a form of partnership and should thus be governed by the law of partnerships. The Supreme Court has however recognized a distinction between these two business forms, and has held that although a corporation cannot enter into a partnership contract, it may however engage in a joint venture with others.

FACTS

Saniwares, a domestic corporation was incorporated for the primary purpose of manufacturing and marketing sanitary wares. One of the incorporators, went abroad to look for foreign partners, who could help in its expansion plans. In 1962, ASI, a foreign corporation domiciled in Delaware, United States entered into an Agreement with Saniwares and some Filipino investors whereby ASI and the Filipino investors agreed to participate in the ownership of an enterprise which would engage primarily in the business of manufacturing in the Philippines and selling here and abroad vitreous china and sanitary wares. The parties agreed that the business operations in the Philippines shall be carried on by an incorporated enterprise and that the name of the corporation shall initially be "Sanitary Wares Manufacturing Corporation."

The joint enterprise prospered. Unfortunately, with the business successes, there came a deterioration of the initially harmonious relations between the two groups. According to the Filipino group, a basic disagreement was due to their desire to expand the export operations of the company to which ASI objected. The annual stockholders' meeting was held. Disposing of the preliminary items in the agenda, the stockholders then proceeded to the election of the members of the board of directors. The ASI group nominated three persons namely; Wolfgang Aurbach, John Griffin and David P. Whittingham. The Philippine investors nominated six, namely; Ernesto Lagdameo, Sr., Raul A. Boncan, Ernesto R. Lagdameo, Jr., George F. Lee, and Baldwin Young.

Mr. Eduardo R, Ceniza then nominated Mr. Luciano E. Salazar, who in turn nominated Mr. Charles Chamsay. The chairman, Baldwin Young ruled the last two nominations out of order on the basis of section 5 (a) of the Agreement, the consistent practice of the parties during the past annual stockholders' meetings to nominate only nine persons as nominees for the nine-member board of directors. There were protests against the action of the Chairman and heated arguments ensued.
These incidents triggered off the filing of separate petitions by the parties with the (SEC). The first petition filed was for preliminary injunction by Saniwares, Emesto V. Lagdameo, Baldwin Young, Raul A. Bonean Ernesto R. Lagdameo, Jr., Enrique Lagdameo and George F. Lee against Luciano Salazar and Charles Chamsay. The second petition was for quo warranto and application for receivership by Wolfgang Aurbach, John Griffin, David Whittingham, Luciano E. Salazar and Charles Chamsay against the group of Young and Lagdameo and Avelino F. Cruz. Both sets of parties except for Avelino Cruz claimed to be the legitimate directors of the corporation.

Hearing officer who rendered a decision upholding the election of the Lagdameo Group and dismissing the quo warranto petition of Salazar and Chamsay. The ASI Group and Salazar appealed the decision to the SEC en banc which affirmed the hearing officer's decision.

Intermediate Appellate Court in its decision ordered the remand of the case to the Securities and Exchange Commission with the directive that a new stockholders' meeting of Saniwares be ordered. These consolidated petitions seek the review of the amended decision of the Court of Appeals in CA-G.R. SP Nos. 05604 and 05617 which set aside the earlier decision dated June 5, 1986, of the then Intermediate Appellate Court and directed that in all subsequent elections for directors of Sanitary Wares Manufacturing Corporation (Saniwares), American Standard Inc. (ASI) cannot nominate more than three (3) directors; that the Filipino stockholders shall not interfere in ASI's choice of its three (3) nominees; that, on the other hand, the Filipino stockholders can nominate only six (6) candidates and in the event they cannot agree on the six (6) nominees, they shall vote only among themselves to determine who the six (6) nominees will be, with cumulative voting to be allowed but without interference from ASI.

ISSUES

1. Whether or not the business established was a joint venture, not s corporation. (YES)
2. Whether or not the ASI Group may vote their additional 10% equity during elections of Saniwares' board of directors. (NO)

RULING

1. Joint Venture, the rule is that whether the parties to a particular contract have thereby established among themselves a joint venture or some other relation depends upon their actual intention which is determined in accordance with the rules governing the interpretation and construction of contracts.

Our examination of important provisions of the Agreement as well as the testimonial evidence presented by the Lagdameo and Young Group shows that the parties agreed to establish a joint venture and not a corporation. The history of the organization of Saniwares and the unusual arrangements which govern its policy making body are all consistent with a joint venture and not with an ordinary corporation. According to the unrebutted testimony of Mr. Baldwin Young, he negotiated the Agreement with ASI in behalf of the Philippine nationals. He testified that ASI agreed to accept the role of minority vis-a-vis the Philippine National group of investors, on the condition that the Agreement should contain provisions to protect ASI as the minority.

It is pertinent to note that the provisions of the Agreement requiring a 7 out of 9 votes of the board of directors for certain actions, in effect gave ASI (which designates 3 directors under the Agreement) an effective veto power. Furthermore, the grant to ASI of the right to designate certain officers of the corporation; the super-majority voting requirements for amendments of the articles and by-laws; and most significantly to the issues of tms case, the provision that ASI shall designate 3 out of the 9 directors and the other stockholders shall designate the other 6, clearly indicate that there are two distinct groups in Saniwares, namely ASI, which owns 40% of the capital stock and the Philippine National stockholders who own the balance of 60%, and that 2) ASI is given certain protections as the minority stockholder.

Premises considered, we believe that under the Agreement there are two groups of stockholders who established a corporation with provisions for a special contractual relationship between the parties, i.e., ASI and the other stockholders.

Moreover, ASI in its communications referred to the enterprise as joint venture. Baldwin Young also testified that Section 16(c) of the Agreement that "Nothing herein contained shall be construed to constitute any of the parties hereto partners or joint venturers in respect of any transaction hereunder" was merely to obviate the possibility of the enterprise being treated as partnership for tax purposes and liabilities to third parties.

2. This Court should recognize and uphold the division of the stockholders into two groups, and at the same time uphold the right of the stockholders within each group to cumulative voting in the process of determining who the group's nominees would be. In practical terms, as suggested by appellant Luciano E. Salazar himself, this means that if the Filipino stockholders cannot agree who their six nominees will be, a vote would have to be taken among the Filipino stockholders only. During this voting, each Filipino stockholder can cumulate his votes.

ASI, however, should not be allowed to interfere in the voting within the Filipino group. Otherwise, ASI would be able to designate more than the three directors it is allowed to designate under the Agreement, and may even be able to get a majority of the board seats, a result which is clearly contrary to the contractual intent of the parties.

Such a ruling will give effect to both the allocation of the board seats and the stockholder's right to cumulative voting. Moreover, this ruling will also give due consideration to the issue raised by the appellees on possible violation or circumvention of the Anti-Dummy Law (Com. Act No. 108, as amended) and the nationalization requirements of the Constitution and the laws if ASI is allowed to nominate more than three directors.

ASI Group and petitioner Salazar, now reiterate their theory that the ASI Group has the right to vote their additional equity pursuant to Section 24 of the Corporation Code which gives the stockholders of a corporation the right to cumulate their votes in electing directors and adds that this right if granted to the ASI Group would not necessarily mean a violation of the Anti-Dummy Act.

ASI Group's argument is correct within the context of Section 24 of the Corporation Code. The point of query, however, is whether or not that provision is applicable to a joint venture with clearly defined agreements.

The legal concept of a joint venture is of common law origin. It has no precise legal definition but it has been generally understood to mean an organization formed for some temporary purpose. The main distinction in common law jurisdictions is that the partnership contemplates a general business with some degree of continuity, while the joint venture is formed for the execution of a single transaction, and is thus of a temporary nature. This observation is not entirely accurate in this jurisdiction, since under the Civil Code, a partnership may be particular or universal, and a particular partnership may have for its object a specific undertaking. It would seem therefore that under Philippine law, a joint venture is a form of partnership and should thus be governed by the law of partnerships. The Supreme Court has however recognized a distinction between these two business forms, and has held that although a corporation cannot enter into a partnership contract, it may however engage in a joint venture with others.

With these findings, we the decisions of the SEC Hearing Officer and SEC which were impliedly affirmed by the appellate court declaring the first 9: Wolfgang Aurbach, John Griffin, David P Whittingham, Emesto V. Lagdameo, Baldwin young, Raul A. Boncan, Emesto V. Lagdameo, Jr., Enrique Lagdameo, and George F. Lee as the duly elected directors of Saniwares at the March 8,1983 annual stockholders' meeting.

- BENJIE B. GEORG represented by BENJAMIN C. BELARMINO, JR. vs. HOLY TRINITY COLLEGE, INC. (G .R. No. 190408, July 20, 2016, PEREZ, J.)

BENJIE B. GEORG represented by BENJAMIN C. BELARMINO, JR., Petitioner –versus- HOLY TRINITY COLLEGE, INC., Respondent.
G.R. No. 190408, THIRD DIVISION, July 20, 2016, PEREZ., J.:

The existence of apparent authority may be ascertained through (1) the general manner in which the corporation holds out an officer or agent as having the power to act or, in other words, the apparent authority to act in general, with which it clothes him; or (2) the acquiescence in his acts of a particular nature, with actual or constructive knowledge thereof, whether within or beyond the scope of his ordinary powers.26

In this case, Sr. Medalle formed and organized the Group. She had been giving financial support to the Group, in her capacity as President of Holy Trinity College. Sr. Navarro admitted that the Board of Trustees never questioned the existence and activities of the Group. Thus, any agreement or contract entered into by Sr. Medalle as President of Holy Trinity College relating to the Group bears the consent and approval of respondent. It is through these dynamics that we cannot fault petitioner for relying on Sr. Medalle's authority to transact with petitioner.

FACTS

The Holy Trinity College Grand Chorale and Dance Company (the Group) was organized in 1987 by Sister Teresita Medalle (Sr. Medalle), the President of respondent Holy Trinity College in Puerto Princesa City. The Grand Chorale and Dance Company were two separate groups but for the purpose of performing locally or abroad, they were usually introduced as one entity. The Group was composed of students from Holy Trinity College.

In 2001, the Group was slated to perform in Greece, Italy, Spain and Germany. Edward Enriquez (Enriquez), who allegedly represented Sr. Medalle, contacted petitioner Benjie B. Georg to seek assistance for payment of the Group's international airplane tickets. Petitioner is the Filipino wife of a German national Heinz Georg. Petitioner, in turn, requested her brother, Atty. Benjamin Belarmino, Jr. (Atty. Belarmino), to represent her in the negotiation with Enriquez. Enriquez was referred to petitioner by Leonora Dietz (Dietz), another Filipino-German who has helped Philippine cultural groups obtain European engagements, including financial assistance.

On 24 April 2001, a Memorandum of Agreement with Deed of Assignment3 (MOA) was executed. Under the said Agreement, petitioner, through her travel agency, will advance the payment of international airplane tickets amounting to P4,624,705.00 in favor of the Group on the assurance of the Group represented by Sr. Medalle through Enriquez that there is a confirmed financial allocation of P4,624,705.00 from the foundation-grantor, S.C. Roque Foundation (the Foundation). The second-party assignor assigned said amount in favor of petitioner. Petitioner paid for the Group's domestic and international airplane tickets.

Petitioner claimed that the second-party assignor/respondent and the foundation-grantor have not paid and refused to pay their obligation under the MOA. Petitioner prayed that they be ordered to solidarily pay the amount of P4,624,705.00 representing the principal amount mentioned in the Agreement, moral, exemplary, and actual damages, legal fees, and cost of suit.

ISSUE

Whether respondent is liable under the Memorandum of Agreement. (YES)

RULING

The trial court categorically ruled that Sr. Medalle affixed her thumbmark as President of Holy Trinity College and therefore, respondent is a party to the MOA, viz:

From the foregoing discussion and gathering also from the circumstances that is more or less contemporaneous and subsequent to the execution of the Memorandum of Agreement, this [c]ourt holds the view that when Sr. Teresita Medalle, O.P. affixed her thumb mark in the Memorandum of Agreement, that it was in her capacity as the President of the Holy Trinity College and not that of the Holy Trinity College Grand Chorale and Dance Company.

As aptly found the adjective "ITS" in the Memorandum of Agreement which describes the Parties thereat as:

HOLY TRINITY COLLEGE GRAND CHORALE & DANCE COMPANY Co., with postal address at Holy Trinity College, Puerto Princesa City, Palawan, herein represented by its President Sister TERESITA M. MEDALLE, O.P. and/or its attorney-in-fact EDWARD V. ENRIQUEZ ...

is descriptive that the entity being referred to is indeed the Holy Trinity College. Otherwise, if what were represented to by Sr. Teresita Medalle, O.P. was the Holy Trinity College Grand Chorale and Dance Co., it might have been written as:
Holy Trinity College Grand Chorale & Dance Company., represented by its President Sister Medalle, O.P., and/or its attorney-in-fact Edward V. Enriquez, with postal address at Holy Trinity College, Puerto Princesa City Palawan

The [c]ourt gives credence though to the testimony of Jearold Loyola that indeed the said Grand Chorale and Dance Company are not registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission and is therefore possessing no juridical personality and merely owe its life and existence through the school administration of the Holy Trinity College through its President, Holy Trinity College. There is no doubt indeed, that Sister Teresita Medalle was the President of the Holy Trinity College. She was never at any given time the President of the Holy Trinity Collge Grand Chorale & Dance Company, which is just similar to any science or math club in the school. We do not expect much less find it absurb that Sister Teresita Medalle, O.P. being the school President and Vice Chairman of the Board of Trustees would allow herself to go down to her level and hold a position as a President of student organization.

With the foregoing disquisitions, the import of the participation of Sister Teresita Medalle, O.P. in that Memorandum of Agreement, was in her capacity as the Holy Trinity College, Inc., Puerto Princesa City, Palawan. This Court cannot isolate the fact that right at the very commencement of conceptualization of the said European Tour 2001 sometime in 2001, it was Sister Teresita Medalle who spearheaded the whole activity. As above-mentioned, Sister Teresita Medalle personally communicated with Leonor Dietz, their coordinator in Germany and has herself made arrangement for the procurement of the visa of the group. The Grand Chorale and Dance Co., as testified to by Jearold Loyola have no hands (sic) at all in the financial aspect of the group. It was also Sister Teresita Medalle who arranges for the itinerary of the group and they have no discretion of disobeying. This makes clear to the understanding of the [c]ourt that [n]ot all contracts are drawn in perfection. Otherwise, there would have been no case at all that reached the courts of law.

Per records, it appears that the Holy Trinity Grand Chorale and Dance Company were actually two separate entities formed and organized by Sr. Medalle in her capacity as President of Holy Trinity College. Sr. Medalle made the following admission in her deposition.

Moreover, it was established, through the testimonies of the Group's Artistic Director, Jearold Loyola, the Musical Director, and Vocal Coach Errol Gallespen, that they were hired and given honorarium by Sr. Medalle. The costumes of the Group were financed by respondent. They also testified that all the performances of the group were directly under the supervision of the school administration. Effectively, respondent has control and supervision of the Group particularly in the selection, hiring and termination of the members. The trial court was convinced that the Group derived its existence and continuous operation from the school administration. Pertinently, the Court found:

The [c]ourt also found from the testimony of Jearold Loyola that in fact, the name Holy Trinity College Grand Chorale and Dance Company, is a joint common calling of two (2) separate performing groups, that is:

Holy Trinity College Grand Chorale, and Holy Trinity College Dance Company.

The Holy Trinity College Grand Chorale is being headed by Errol Gallespen as the Musical Director while the Holy Trinity College Dance Company is headed by Jearold Loyola as the Artistic Director. Because they usually perform together; that for brevity they were commonly called as Holy Trinity College Grand Chorale and Dance Company.

The nature of the said performing groups as well as their relation with the Memorandum of Agreement under consideration, is briefly described by Jearold Loyola.

In fine, the school administration of the Holy Trinity College has control and supervision of the Grand Chorale and Dance Company particularly in the selection and hiring of its trainers but as to their termination as well. A fortiori, Jearold Loyola and Errol Gallespen were formally severed per April 30, 2001 Letter of Sr. Estrella Tangan. This clearly shows that indeed, the Holy Trinity College Grand Chorale and Dance Company were both under the power of the school administration. Moreover, it is also clear that the costumes were likewise financed by the school administration

With the foregoing, the [c]ourt is convinced that the indeed the Holy Trinity College Grand Chorale and Dance Company do not have a life of its own and merely derive its creation, existence and continued operation or performance at the hands of the school administration. Without the decision of the school administration, the said Chorale and Dance Company is completely inoperative.

Sr. Aurelia Navarro (Sr. Navarro) claimed that she was appointed as Acting President on 21 March 2001. The trial court correctly observed some inconsistencies in the statements of Sr. Tangan and Sr. Navarro, to wit:

This [c]ourt also finds it confusing as well, when and if at all Sister Teresita Medalle, ceased to be the President of the Holy Trinity College. The own testimonial and documentary evidence of the [respondent] Holy Trinity College is seemingly conflicting and more so that the defense is conflicting. It was admitted, though by both parties that the thumb mark in the Memorandum of Agreement dated April 24, 2001, was that of Sister Teresita Medalle during which period Sister Aurelia Navarro so testified that Sister Teresita Medalle was the President per appointment dated March 27, 2001 issued by Sr. Ma. Aurora R. Villanueva, Prioress General of Congregation of St. Catherine of Siena (Exhibit 1). She knows this because she was the Secretary attesting to the said appointment and considering that she was still a member of the Board of Trustees during that date and until the year 2003.

The said appointment letter states, thus:

I direct you to accept the office of President of the Holy Trinity College and to full your duties with love and diligence for the good of the congregation and for the welfare of our Holy Mother Church.
It did not appear though that Sister Estrella Tangan accepted (as required) the said appointment. No evidence was on this matter was presented.

On the other hand, the April 23, 2001 Letter of Estrella Tangan (Exhibit G) herself to Jearold Loyola and Errol Gallespen, was clear to say that, it was not Sister Estrella Tangan who succeeded as the President or acted as President but Sister Lina Tuyac, O.P.

Sr. Medalle, as President of Holy Trinity, is clothed with sufficient authority to enter into a loan agreement. As held by the trial court, the Holy Trinity College's Board of Trustees never contested the standing of the Dance and Chorale Group and had in fact lent its support in the form of sponsoring unifonns or freely allowed the school premises to be used by the group for their practice sessions.
Assuming arguendo that Sr. Medalle was not authorized by the Holy Trinity College Board, the doctrine of apparent authority applies in this case.

The doctrine of apparent authority provides that a corporation will be estopped from denying the agent's authority if it knowingly permits one of its officers or any other agent to act within the scope of an apparent authority, and it holds him out to the public as possessing the power to do those acts.25

The existence of apparent authority may be ascertained through (1) the general manner in which the corporation holds out an officer or agent as having the power to act or, in other words, the apparent authority to act in general, with which it clothes him; or (2) the acquiescence in his acts of a particular nature, with actual or constructive knowledge thereof, whether within or beyond the scope of his ordinary powers.26

In this case, Sr. Medalle formed and organized the Group. She had been giving financial support to the Group, in her capacity as President of Holy Trinity College. Sr. Navarro admitted that the Board of Trustees never questioned the existence and activities of the Group. Thus, any agreement or contract entered into by Sr. Medalle as President of Holy Trinity College relating to the Group bears the consent and approval of respondent. It is through these dynamics that we cannot fault petitioner for relying on Sr. Medalle's authority to transact with petitioner.

Finding that Sr. Medalle possessed full mental faculty in affixing her thumbmark in the MOA and that respondent is hereby bound by her actions, we reverse the ruling of the Court of Appeals.

- LYLITH B. FAUSTO, JONATHAN FAUSTO, RICO ALVIA, ARSENIA TOCLOY, LOURDES ADOLFO and ANECITA MANCITA, Petitioners, - versus - MULTI AGRI-FOREST AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT COOPERATIVE (formerly MAF CAMARINES SUR EMPLOYEES COOPERATIVE, INC.), Respondent. (G.R. No. 213939, THIRD DIVISION, October 12, 2016, REYES, J.)

LYLITH B. FAUSTO, JONATHAN FAUSTO, RICO ALVIA, ARSENIA TOCLOY, LOURDES ADOLFO and ANECITA MANCITA*, Petitioners –versus-* MULTI AGRI-FOREST AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT COOPERATIVE (formerly MAF CAMARINES SUR EMPLOYEES COOPERATIVE, INC.), Respondent.

G.R. No. 213939, THIRD DIVISION, October 12, 2016, REYES., J.:

FACTS

Multi Agri-Forest and Community Development Cooperative (respondent) is a registered credit cooperative, where petitioners are active members. Petitioners obtained several loans from the respondent. However, they failed to pay their loans despite repeated demands. Thus, the respondent, through its acting manager Nacario, filed 5 separate complaints for collection of sum of money before the MTCC of Naga City against petitioners.

In defense, petitioners filed a motion to dismiss by way of demurrer to evidence on the ground of lack of authority of Nacario to file the complaints and to sign the verification against forum shopping. To counter the argument, respondent argued that there was a subsequent board resolution confirming the authority of Nacario to file the complaints on behalf of the respondent.

MTCC denied the petitioners' demurrer to evidence for lack of merit, because of their failure to raise the supposed lack of authority in their answer; hence, the said defense was deemed waived. It ruled that petitioners are liable for the payment of loans.

On appeal, the RTC affirmed the ruling of MTCC. Then, the CA affirmed the decision of the RTC.

ISSUE

Whether Nacario has authority to file the complaints. (YES)

RULING

The Respondent's Board of Directors ratified the acts of Nacario. As a rule, both the Corporation Code and the Cooperative Code recognize the authority of the board of directors, through a duly-issued board resolution, to act and represent the corporation or the cooperative, as the case may be, in the conduct of official business.

Based on jurisprudence, the following officials or employees of the company can sign the verification and certification without the need of a board resolution: 1. Chairperson of the BOD; 2. President; 3. The general Manager or Acting General manager; 4. Personnel Officer; and 5. An employment specialist in a labor case.

Further, the lack of authority of a corporate officer to undertake an action on behalf of the corporation or cooperative may be cured by ratification through the subsequent issuance of a board resolution, recognizing the validity of the action or the authority of the concerned officer.

Here, the respondent expressly recognized the authority of Nacario to file the complaints.

- GABRIEL YAP, SR. duly represented by GILBERT YAP and also in his personal capacity, GABRIEL YAP, JR., and HYMAN YAP, vs. LETECIA SIAO, L YNEL SIAO, JANELYN SIAO, ELEANOR FAYE SIAO, SHELETT SIAO and HONEYLET SIAO (G.R. No. 212493)
- CEBU SOUTH MEMORIAL GARDEN, INC. vs. LETECIA SIAO, L YNEL SIAO, JANELYN SIAO, ELEANOR FAYE SIAO, SHELETT SIAO and HONEYLET SIAO (G.R. No. 212504, June 1, 2016, PEREZ, J.)

GABRIEL YAP, SR. DULY REPRESENTED BY GILBERT YAP AND ALSO IN HIS PERSONAL CAPACITY, GABRIEL YAP, JR., AND HYMAN YAP, Petitioners –versus- LETECIA SIAO, LYNEL SIAO, JANELYN SIAO, ELEANOR FAYE SIAO, SHELETT SIAO AND HONEYLET SIAO, Respondents.
G.R. No. 212493, THIRD DIVISION, June 1, 2016, PEREZ., J.:

In Fuji Television Network v. Espiritu, we highlighted two rules relative to certification against forum-shopping:
4) As to certification against forum shopping, non-compliance therewith or a defect therein, unlike in verification, is generally not curable by its subsequent submission or correction thereof, unless there is a need to relax the Rule on the ground of "substantial compliance" or presence of "special circumstances or compelling reasons."

5) The certification against forum shopping must be signed by all the plaintiffs or petitioners in a case; otherwise, those who did not sign will be dropped as parties to the case. Under reasonable or justifiable circumstances, however, as when all the plaintiffs or petitioners share a common interest and invoke a common cause of action or defense, the signature of only one of them in the certification against forum shopping substantially complies with the Rule.

Clearly, a defect in the certification is allowed on the ground of substantial compliance as in this case. Applying the above-mentioned rule, the signatures of petitioners Gabriel Yap, Jr. and Hyman Yap are not indispensable for the validity of the certification. These petitioners indeed share a common cause of action with Gilbert Yap in that they are impleaded as officers and directors of Cebu South Memorial Garden, the very same corporation represented by Gilbert Yap.

FACTS

Respondent Letecia Siao's husband Sergio Siao was indebted to petitioner Gabriel Yap, Sr. Petitioners claim that the titles to the subject parcels of land were in the possession of Gabriel Yap, Sr. as collateral for the loan. In consideration of condoning the loan, Gabriel Yap, Sr. returned the titles to Letecia Siao on the condition that the parcels of land covered by the titles would be developed into memorial lots.

Petitioners claimed that respondents refused to transfer the ownership of the three parcels of land to Cebu South Memorial Garden, Inc., causing them to be exposed to numerous lawsuits from the buyers of the burial plots.

Respondents argued that Letecia Siao was coerced to sign the Certificate of Agreement, rendering it null and void. A panel of commissioners was appointment to determine the financial standing of petitioner corporation and the actual money received by Letecia Siao.

During the pendency of the case before the commissioners, respondents filed a Motion for Payment of Monthly Support for Leticia Siao's family and herself. Respondents relied on the agreement made by the parties during the preliminary conference to abide by the terms of the Certificate of Agreement. The RTC granted the motion for monthly support and ordered Gabriel Yap, Sr. to pay immediately Letecia Siao the amount of P1,300,000.00. Resultantly, petitioners filed a Motion for Summary Judgment on 24 May 2002 alleging that respondents had abandoned their defense of the nullity of the Certificate of Agreement when they agreed to implement its provisions.

Judge Generosa G. Labra of RTC of Cebu City issued an Order denying the motion and holding that there were no existing admissions or admitted facts by respondents to be considered. Petitioners filed a Motion for Reconsideration. Petitioners elevated the matter to the Court of Appeals.

The Court of Appeals through Associate Justice Eugenio S. Labitoria, reversed the trial court's decision and ordered its judge to render summary judgment in favor of petitioners.
Respondents sought for reconsideration but it was denied by the appellate court. Respondents did not file an appeal before the Supreme Court within the reglementary period. Thus, the Decision became final and executory on 7 June 2004 and the same had been recorded in the Book of Entries of Judgment.

In compliance with the Order that had become final, RTC of Cebu City Judge Meinrado P. Paredes rendered a Summary Judgment,

The motion for reconsideration filed by respondents was denied. Once again, respondents filed an appeal under Rule 41 of the Rules of Court seeking to reverse and set aside the Summary Judgment rendered by the RTC.

On 9 October 2013, the Court of Appeals set aside the Summary Judgment on a technicality. The appellate court found that the certification against forum-shopping appended to the complaint is defective because there was no board resolution and special power of attorney vesting upon Gilbert Yap the authority to sign the certification on behalf of petitioner corporation and individual petitioners.

ISSUE

Whether the certificate against forum shopping is defective. (NO)

RULING

In the leading case of Cagayan Valley Drug Corporation v. Commission on Internal Revenue, the Court, in summarizing numerous jurisprudence, rendered a definitive rule that the following officials or employees of the company can sign the verification and certification without need of a board resolution: (1) the Chairperson of the Board of Directors, (2) the President of a corporation, (3) the General Manager or Acting General Manager, (4) Personnel Officer, and (5) an Employment Specialist in a labor case. The rationale behind the rule is that these officers are "in a position to verify the truthfulness and correctness of the allegations in the petition."

In Ateneo de Naga University v. Manalo, we held that the lone signature of the University President was sufficient to fulfill the verification requirement, because such officer had sufficient knowledge to swear to the truth of the allegations in the petition.

In People's Aircargo and Warehousing Co., Inc. v. CA, we held that in the absence of a charter or by-law provision to the contrary, the president of a corporation is presumed to have the authority to act within the domain of the general objectives of its business and within the scope of his or her usual duties. Moreover, even if a certain contract or undertaking is outside the usual powers of the president, the corporation's ratilication of the contract or undertaking and the acceptance of benefits therefrom make the corporate president's actions binding on the corporation.

Bolstering our conclusion that the certification of non-forum shopping is valid is the subsequent appending of the board resolution to petitioners' motion for reconsideration. The Board Resolution reads:

BOARD RESOLUTION NO. 01
Series of 2013

WHEREAS, the corporation is presently facing a Civil Case entitled Cebu South Memorial Garden, Inc. versus Letecia Siao, Lynel Siao, Janelyn Siao, Eleanor Faye Siao, Shelett Siao and Honeylet Siao, and docketed as Civil Case No. CEB-23707 before the Regional Trial Court of Ccbu City, Branch 13, and is mostly like to [raise] to the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court by our corporation or by the opposing party depending on the outcome of the said case.

WHEREAS, the corporation needs to appoint its authorized representative who will be vested with the authority to sign the Verification and Certificate of Forum Shopping for any and all pleadings to be filed before the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court as the need of the case requires.

WHEREAS, the corporation also needs to ratify the action taken by the president of the corporation in the person of Gilbert Yap who signed the Verification and the Certificate of Non-Forum Shopping in the Complaint filed by this corporation before the Regional Trial Court of Cebu City last April 27, 1999 and docketed as [Civil Case No. CEB-23707].

WHEREFORE, it is hereby resolved that:

1. The action of the president Gilbert Yap in signing the Verification and Certificate of Non-forum Shopping in [Civil Case No. CEB-23707] filed before the Regional Trial Court of Cebu City on April 27, 1999 is hereby ratified/affirmed by this Board with all legal effects and consequences.

2. The corporate president Gilbert Yap is given full authority to sign the Verification and Certificate on Non-forum Shopping for all pleadings to be filed with the Court of Appeals and after with the Supreme Court of the Philippines.

The Board of Directors of Cebu South Memorial Garden, through a Board Resolution, not only authorized the President of the corporation to sign the Certificate of Forum-Shopping but it ratified the action taken by Gilbert Yap in signing the forum-shopping certificate.

In Fuji Television Network v. Espiritu, we highlighted two rules relative to certification against forum-shopping:

4) As to certification against forum shopping, non-compliance therewith or a defect therein, unlike in verification, is generally not curable by its subsequent submission or correction thereof, unless there is a need to relax the Rule on the ground of "substantial compliance" or presence of "special circumstances or compelling reasons."

5) The certification against forum shopping must be signed by all the plaintiffs or petitioners in a case; otherwise, those who did not sign will be dropped as parties to the case. Under reasonable or justifiable circumstances, however, as when all the plaintiffs or petitioners share a common interest and invoke a common cause of action or defense, the signature of only one of them in the certification against forum shopping substantially complies with the Rule.

Clearly, a defect in the certification is allowed on the ground of substantial compliance as in this case. Applying the above-mentioned rule, the signatures of petitioners Gabriel Yap, Jr. and Hyman Yap are not indispensable for the validity of the certification. These petitioners indeed share a common cause of action with Gilbert Yap in that they are impleaded as officers and directors of Cebu South Memorial Garden, the very same corporation represented by Gilbert Yap.

At any rate, any objection as to compliance with the requirement of verification in the complaint should have been raised in the proceedings below, and not in the appellate court for the first time.

Considering that this case has dragged on for 15 years with no concrete solution in sight, we shall proceed to discuss the merits.

We reiterate the ruling penned by Justice Labitoria of the Court of Appeals in CA-G.R. SP No. 73850[31] directing the trial court to render a summary judgment. The issues and arguments posed by respondents have already been passed upon and resolved by the Court of Appeals. By appealing the summary judgment, respondents are in effect asking the Court of Appeals to revisit the same issues. We cannot allow this under the principle of the "law of the case."

The "law of the case" doctrine applies in a situation where an appellate court has made a ruling on a question on appeal and thereafter remands the case to the lower court to effect the ruling; the question settled by the appellate court becomes the law of the case at the lower court and in any subsequent appeal. It means that whatever is irrevocably established as the controlling legal rule or decision between the same parties in the same case continues to be the law of the case, whether correct on general principles or not, so long as the facts on which the legal rule or decision was predicated continue to be the facts of the case before the court.

The rationale behind this rule is to enable an appellate court to perform its duties satisfactorily and efficiently, which would be impossible if a question, once considered and decided by it, were to be litigated anew in the same case upon any and every subsequent appeal. Without it, there would be endless litigation. Litigants would be free to speculate on changes in the personnel of a court, or on the chance of having propositions rewritten once gravely ruled on solemn argument and handed down as the law of a given case.

In the Labitoria decision, the Court of Appeals directed the trial court to render a summary judgment on the ground that there was no longer any legal controversy regarding the Certificate of Agreement when respondents relied on the same agreement to ask for support. This ruling became the law of the case between the parties which cannot be disturbed. Respondents cannot raise this same issue in another petition.

- Ligaya Esguerra, et al. vs. Holcim Philippines, Inc., G.R. No. 182571, September 2, 2013

LIGAYA ESGUERRA, LOWELL ESGUERRA AND LIESELL ESGUERRA Petitioners –versus- HOLCIM PHILIPPINES, INC., Respondents.
G.R. No. 182571, FIRST DIVISION, September 2, 2013, REYES., J.:

In Bank of the Philippine Islands v. Court of Appeals, the Court held that the application of the rules must be the general rule, and the suspension or even mere relaxation of its application, is the exception. This Court may go beyond the strict application of the rules only on exceptional cases when there is truly substantial compliance with the rule.

In the case at bar, HOLCIM attached to its Petition for Certiorari before the CA a Secretary's Certificate authorizing Mr. Paul M. O'Callaghan (O'Callaghan), its Chief Operating Officer, to nominate, designate and appoint the corporation's authorized representative in court hearings and conferences and the signing of court pleadings.

FACTS

As a backgrounder and as stated in our Decision dated December 27, 2002 in G.R. No. 120004, therein respondent Esguerra filed on December 12, 1989 with the RTC, Malolos, Bulacan, Branch 16 an action to annul the Free Patent in the name of de Guzman. Esguerra claimed that he was the owner of Lot 3308-B, located at Matiktik, Norzagaray, Bulacan, covered by Transfer Certificate of Title No. T-1685-P (M) of the Registry of Deeds of Bulacan, with an approximate area of 47,000 square meters. Esguerra learned that the said parcel of land was being offered for sale by de Guzman to Hi-Cement Corporation (now named HOLCIM Philippines, Inc.). The former possessor of the land, Felisa Maningas, was issued Free Patent No. 575674 which was subsequently issued in the name of de Guzman over said parcel of land located at Gidgid, Norzagaray, Bulacan with an area of 20.5631 hectares and described in Psu-216349, covered by Original Certificate of Title (OCT) No. P-3876. Esguerra also demanded that the portion of his property, which has been encroached upon and included in de Guzman's Free Patent, be excluded. He later amended his complaint to implead Hi-Cement as a co-defendant since the latter was hauling marble from the subject land. He also prayed that Hi-Cement be ordered to desist from hauling marble, to account for the marble already hauled and to pay him.

The RTC dismissed Esguerra's complaint but on appeal, the CA reversed in the Decision and declared De Guzman's OCT No. P-3876 null and void insofar as the disputed area which is part of Lot 3308-B, covered by TCT No. 1685-p in the name of Esguerra, ordered defendant-appellee Hi-Cement Corporation to immediately cease and desist from quarrying or extracting marble from the disputed area, ordered defendant-appellee Hi-Cement Corporation to make an accounting of the compensation or royalty it has paid to defendant-appellee Iluminada de Guzman for marbles quarried from the disputed area of 38,451 square meters from the time of the filing of the amended complaint and ordered defendant-appellee Iluminada de Guzman to pay and turn over to Esguerra all such amounts that she has received from her co-defendant Hi-Cement Corporation as compensation or royalty for marbles extracted or quarried from the disputed area of 38,451 square meters beginning March 23, 1990.

In our Decision dated December 27, 2002 in G.R. No. 120004, the Court affirmed in toto the aforesaid CA's decision. After attaining finality, the case was remanded to the RTC for execution.

Thereafter, the heirs of Esguerra, herein petitioners, filed an Omnibus with the RTC, manifesting that the Court's decision in G.R. No. 120004 has yet to be executed, and thus prayed that Sheriff be directed to submit his Return on the execution of the judgment, that defendant Iluminada de Guzman and Hi-Cement (now Union Cement Corporation Matictic, Sapang Kawayn [sic], Norzagaray, Bulacan) be directed to appear before this Honorable Court and that the plaintiffs be granted other legal and equitable reliefs. RTC issued an order granting the same.

However, contrary to the Order dated December 1, 2004, de Guzman and HOLCIM were not examined. Rather, the petitioners presented Engineer Louie Balicanta who testified that upon an examination of the topographical maps covering the land of the deceased Esguerra, the estimated volume of limestone hauled or quarried therefrom covering the years 1990 to 2003 was 3,535,020.471 cubic meters. Then the petitioners filed their Formal Offer of Exhibits.

Later, the petitioners filed a Supplement to the Motion for Execution dated August 16, 2005 and a Motion for Alias Writ of Execution dated November 9, 2005. They claimed that the royalties due them amounted to ₱10.00 per metric ton. Thus, for the 9,187,257.67 metric tons of limestone which HOLCIM allegedly acquired, the petitioners should receive a total royalty of ₱91,872,576.72.19. On December 1, 2005, the RTC made a finding that the total volume of limestone which HOLCIM allegedly quarried from the subject land amounted to ₱91,872,576.72. It also ordered the issuance of an Alias Writ of Execution for the royalties which were purportedly due to the petitioners.

The petitioners filed an Urgent Motion for Clarification praying that the alias writ of execution be clarified for the purpose of directing [de Guzman] and/or Hi-Cement Corporation and/or HOLCIM to pay the petitioners the amount of ₱91,872,576.72. Subsequently, an alias writ of execution and notices of garnishment on several banks, garnishing all amounts that may have been deposited or owned by HOLCIM, were issued on December 20, 2005 and December 21, 2005 respectively.

HOLCIM filed a motion for reconsideration. It alleged that it did not owe any amount of royalty to the petitioners for the extracted limestone from the subject land. HOLCIM averred that it had actually entered into an Agreement with the petitioners governing their respective rights and obligations in relation to the limestone allegedly extracted from the land in question. HOLCIM further asserted that it had paid advance royalty to the petitioners from year 1993, in an aggregate sum of ₱694,184.22, an amount more than the ₱218,693.10 which the petitioners were entitled under the Agreement.

On January 13, 2006, the petitioners filed its Opposition to the Motion for Reconsideration dated January 7, 2006, claiming that the Motion for Reconsideration is barred by the omnibus motion rule because HOLCIM failed to question the petitioners' motion for execution of this Court's decision in G.R. No. 120004. The petitioners also averred that HOLCIM is barred by estoppel to question the execution of the decision based on the Agreement, because said Agreement is in contravention with the trial court's previous orders which required HOLCIM to deposit to the clerk of court the royalties due the deceased Esguerra. The petitioners also argued that the Agreement is a way to evade the trial court's orders and has been procured by taking advantage of the petitioners' financial distress after Esguerra died.

HOLCIM filed a Manifestation and Motion (for Ocular Inspection).31 It asked the court to conduct an ocular inspection, advancing the argument that HOLCIM did not extract limestone from any portion of the 47,000-sq m property which Esguerra owned; and that the pictures, which the petitioners presented to prove that HOLCIM has been extracting limestone from the subject land until year 2005, were actually photographs of areas outside the contested land.

RTC denied HOLCIM's motion for reconsideration and motion for ocular inspection. It held that the petitioners proved their entitlement to the royalties totaling to ₱91,872,576.72. The RTC also blamed HOLCIM for not presenting its own witnesses and evidence. It further stated that to grant the motions for reconsideration and ocular inspection is to reopen the case despite the fact that the trial court has no more power to do so since the execution of this Court's decision in G.R. No. 120004 is now a matter of right on the petitioners' part.

HOLCIM filed a Petition for Certiorari (with Urgent Applications for Temporary Restraining Order and/or Writ of Preliminary Injunction) with the CA. On June 30, 2006, the petitioners filed their Comment on [the] "Petition for Certiorari" and Opposition, to which HOLCIM filed a Reply35 on July 25, 2006. On August 31, 2007, the CA promulgated the now assailed decision finding merit in HOLCIM's petition. The MR was denied, thus, the petitioner filed this petition for review under Rule 45 of the Rules of Court. Petitioners claim that HOLCIM's petition for certiorari in the CA failed to comply with the rules on Verification and Certification of Non-Forum Shopping because the latter did not secure and/or attach a certified true copy of a board resolution authorizing any of its officers to file said petition.51 Thus, the CA should have dismissed outright HOLCIM's petition before it.

ISSUE

Whether or not the petition for certiorari filed by HOLCIM before the CA complied with the rules on Verification and Certification of Non-Forum Shopping.

RULING

The general rule is that a corporation can only exercise its powers and transact its business through its board of directors and through its officers and agents when authorized by a board resolution or its bylaws. The power of a corporation to sue and be sued is exercised by the board of directors. The physical acts of the corporation, like the signing of documents, can be performed only by natural persons duly authorized for the purpose by corporate bylaws or by a specific act of the board. Absent the said board resolution, a petition may not be given due course.

In Bank of the Philippine Islands v. Court of Appeals, the Court held that the application of the rules must be the general rule, and the suspension or even mere relaxation of its application, is the exception. This Court may go beyond the strict application of the rules only on exceptional cases when there is truly substantial compliance with the rule.

In the case at bar, HOLCIM attached to its Petition for Certiorari before the CA a Secretary's Certificate authorizing Mr. Paul M. O'Callaghan (O'Callaghan), its Chief Operating Officer, to nominate, designate and appoint the corporation's authorized representative in court hearings and conferences and the signing of court pleadings. It also attached the Special Power of Attorney dated June 9, 2006, signed by O'Callaghan, appointing Sycip Salazar Hernandez & Gatmaitan and/or any of its lawyers to represent HOLCIM; and consequently, the Verification and Certification of Non Forum Shopping signed by the authorized representative.

To be sure, HOLCIM, in its Reply filed in the CA, attached another Secretary's Certificate, designating and confirming O'Callaghan's power to authorize Sycip Salazar Hernandez & Gatmaitan and/or any of its lawyers to file for and on behalf of HOLCIM, the pertinent civil and/or criminal actions in Civil Case No. 725-M-89 pending before the RTC, including any petition to be filed with the CA and/or the Supreme Court in connection with the Orders dated December 1, 2005, December 20, 2005 and June 7, 2006.

The foregoing convinces the Court that the CA did not err in admitting HOLCIM's petition before it. HOLCIM attached all the necessary documents for the filing of a petition for certiorari before the CA. Indeed, there was no complete failure to attach a Certificate of Non-Forum Shopping. In fact, there was such a certificate. While the board resolution may not have been attached, HOLCIM complied just the same when it attached the Secretary's Certificate dated July 17, 2006, thus proving that O'Callaghan had the authority from the board of directors to appoint the counsel to represent them in Civil Case No. 725-M-89. The Court recognizes the compliance made by HOLCIM in good faith since after the petitioners pointed out the said defect, HOLCIM submitted the Secretary's Certificate dated July 17, 2006, confirming the earlier Secretary's Certificate dated June 9, 2006.

For the Court, the ruling in General Milling Corporation v. NLRC is applicable where the Court rendered a decision in favor of the petitioner despite its failure to attach the Certification of Non-Forum Shopping. The Court held that there was substantial compliance when it eventually submitted the required documents. Substantial justice dictates that technical and procedural rules must give way because a deviation from the rigid enforcement of the rules will better serve the ends of justice. The Court ratiocinated: The rules of procedure are intended to promote, rather than frustrate, the ends of justice, and while the swift unclogging of court dockets is a laudable objective, it, nevertheless, must not be met at the expense of substantial justice. Technical and procedural rules are intended to help secure, not suppress, the cause of justice and a deviation from the rigid enforcement of the rules may be allowed to attain that prime objective for, after all, the dispensation of justice is the core reason for the existence of courts.60 (Citation omitted) HOLCIM's filing in the CA of a petition for certiorari under Rule 65 of the 1997 Rules of Civil Procedure is proper.

- Mid Pasig Land and Development Corporation vs. Tablante, G.R. No. 162924, February 4, 2010; PNCC Skyway Traffic Management and Security Division Workers Organization vs. PNCC Skyway Corporation, GR No. 171231, February 17, 2010

MID-PASIG LAND DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, Petitioner –versus- MARIO TABLANTE, doing business under the name and style ECRM ENTERPRISES; ROCKLAND CONSTRUCTION COMPANY; LAURIE LITAM; and MC HOME DEPOT, INC, Respondents.
G.R. No. 162924, THIRD DIVISION, February 4, 2010, NACHURA., J.:

In a slew of cases, however, the Supreme Court have recognized the authority of some corporate officers to sign the verification and certification against forum shopping. We have held that the following officials or employees of the company can sign the verification and certification without need of a board resolution: (1) the Chairperson of the Board of Directors, (2) the President of a corporation, (3) the General Manager or Acting General Manager, (4) Personnel Officer, and (5) an Employment Specialist in a labor case.

It is thus clear that the failure to attach the Secretary's Certificate, attesting to General Manager Antonio Merelos's authority to sign the Verification and Certification of Non-Forum Shopping, should not be considered fatal to the filing of the petition. Nonetheless, the requisite board resolution was subsequently submitted to the CA, together with the pertinent documents. Considering that petitioner substantially complied with the rules, the dismissal of the petition was, therefore, unwarranted.

FACTS

Petitioner is the registered owner of a piece of land situated in Pasig City, bounded by Meralco Avenue, Ortigas Avenue, Doña Julia Vargas Avenue, and Valle Verde Subdivision. Petitioner, represented by its Chairman and President, Ronaldo Salonga, and ECRM Enterprises, represented by its proprietor, Mario P. Tablante, executed an agreement whereby the former would lease to the latter an area, approximately one (1) hectare, of the aforesaid land, for a period of three (3) months, to be used as the staging area for the Home and Garden Exhibition Fair.

On March 6, 2000, the date of the expiration of the Lease Agreement, Tablante assigned all his rights and interests under the said agreement to respondents Litam and/or Rockland Construction Company, Inc. (Rockland) under a Deed of Assignment of the same date. Petitioner eventually learned that respondent Tablante had executed a Contract of Lease with respondent MC Home Depot, Inc. over the same parcel of land. Thereafter, respondent MC Home Depot, Inc. constructed improvements on the land and subdivided the area into fifty-nine (59) commercial stalls, which it leased to various entities. Upon the expiration of the lease, petitioner demanded that respondents vacate the land.

Consequently, petitioner filed for unlawful detainer against herein respondents.

Meantime, the MTC rendered judgment in the unlawful detainer case. In the main, the trial court ruled that the issue did not involve material or physical possession, but rather, whether or not ECRM had the right to exercise an option to renew its lease contract. The MTC stated that, considering that this issue was incapable of pecuniary estimation, jurisdiction over the case was vested in the RTC. The trial court, dismissed for lack of merit.

On appeal, RTC affirmed in toto. A petition for certiorari was consequently filed with the CA. In the assailed resolution CA resolved to dismiss the petition on the following grounds:

1) The verification and certification against non-forum shopping was signed by a certain Antonio A. Merelos as General Manager of the petitioner-corporation without attaching therewith a Corporate Secretary's certificate or board resolution that he is authorized to sign for and on behalf of the petitioner; and

2) Lack of pertinent and necessary documents which are material portions of the record as required by Section 2, Rule 42 of the Rules of Civil Procedure.

ISSUES

Whether or not Court of Appeals committed reversible error in holding that the verification and certification against forum-shopping in the petition failed to attach the board resolution showing the authority of the affiant. (YES)

RULING

It must be borne in mind that Sec. 23, in relation to Sec. 25 of the Corporation Code, clearly enunciates that all corporate powers are exercised, all business conducted, and all properties controlled by the board of directors. A corporation has a separate and distinct personality from its directors and officers and can only exercise its corporate powers through the board of directors. Thus, it is clear that an individual corporate officer cannot solely exercise any corporate power pertaining to the corporation without authority from the board of directors. This has been our constant holding in cases instituted by a corporation.

In a slew of cases, however, we have recognized the authority of some corporate officers to sign the verification and certification against forum shopping. We have held that the following officials or employees of the company can sign the verification and certification without need of a board resolution: (1) the Chairperson of the Board of Directors, (2) the President of a corporation, (3) the General Manager or Acting General Manager, (4) Personnel Officer, and (5) an Employment Specialist in a labor case.

The rationale applied in the foregoing cases is to justify the authority of corporate officers or representatives of the corporation to sign the verification or certificate against forum shopping, being "in a position to verify the truthfulness and correctness of the allegations in the petition.

It is thus clear that the failure to attach the Secretary's Certificate, attesting to General Manager Antonio Merelos's authority to sign the Verification and Certification of Non-Forum Shopping, should not be considered fatal to the filing of the petition. Nonetheless, the requisite board resolution was subsequently submitted to the CA, together with the pertinent documents. Considering that petitioner substantially complied with the rules, the dismissal of the petition was, therefore, unwarranted. Time and again, we have emphasized that dismissal of an appeal on a purely technical ground is frowned upon especially if it will result in unfairness. The rules of procedure ought not to be applied in a very rigid, technical sense for they have been adopted to help secure, not override, substantial justice. For this reason, courts must proceed with caution so as not to deprive a party of statutory appeal.

- Spouses Afulugencia vs. Metropolitan Bank and Trust Co. G.R. No. 185145, February 05, 2014

SPOUSES VICENTE AFULUGENCIA and LETICIA AFULUGENCIA, Petitioners –versus- METROPOLITAN BANK & TRUST CO. and EMMANUEL L. ORTEGA, Clerk of Court, Regional Trial Court and Ex-Officio Sheriff, Province of Bulacan,, Respondents.
G.R. No. 185145, SECOND DIVISION, February 5, 2014, DEL CASTILLO, J.:

As a rule, in civil cases, the procedure of calling the adverse party to the witness stand is not allowed, unless written interrogatories are first served upon the latter. This is embodied in Section 6, Rule 25 of the Rules, which provides –

Sec. 6. Effect of failure to serve written interrogatories.
Unless thereafter allowed by the court for good cause shown and to prevent a failure of justice, a party not served with written interrogatories may not be compelled by the adverse party to give testimony in open court, or to give a deposition pending appeal.

Petitioners may not be allowed, at the incipient phase of the presentation of their evidence-in-chief at that, to present Metrobank's officers – who are considered adverse parties as well, based on the principle that corporations act only through their officers and duly authorized agents – as their main witnesses; nor may they be allowed to gain access to Metrobank's documentary evidence for the purpose of making it their own.

FACTS

Petitioners, spouses Vicente and Leticia Afulugencia, filed a Complaint for nullification of mortgage, foreclosure, auction sale, certificate of sale and other documents, with damages, against respondents Metropolitan Bank & Trust Co. (Metrobank) and Emmanuel L. Ortega (Ortega) before the Regional Trial Court (RTC) of Malolos City, where it was docketed as Civil Case No. 336-M-2004 and assigned to Branch 7.

Metrobank is a domestic banking corporation existing under Philippine laws, while Ortega is the Clerk of Court and Ex-Officio Sheriff of the Malolos RTC.

After the filing of the parties' pleadings and with the conclusion of pre-trial, petitioners filed a Motion for Issuance of Subpoena Duces Tecum Ad Testificandum to require Metrobank's officers to appear and testify as the petitioners' initial witnesses during the August 31, 2006 hearing for the presentation of their evidence-in-chief, and to bring the documents relative to their loan with Metrobank, as well as those covering the extrajudicial foreclosure and sale of petitioners' 200-square meter land in Meycauayan, Bulacan.

Metrobank filed an Opposition arguing that for lack of a proper notice of hearing, the Motion must be denied; that being a litigated motion, the failure of petitioners to set a date and time for the hearing renders the Motion ineffective and pro forma; that pursuant to Sections 1 and 611 of Rule 25 of the Rules, Metrobank's officers – who are considered adverse parties – may not be compelled to appear and testify in court for the petitioners since they were not initially served with written interrogatories; that petitioners have not shown the materiality and relevance of the documents sought to be produced in court; and that petitioners were merely fishing for evidence.

Petitioners submitted a Reply to Metrobank's Opposition, stating that the lack of a proper notice of hearing was cured by the filing of Metrobank's Opposition; that applying the principle of liberality, the defect may be ignored; that leave of court is not necessary for the taking of Metrobank's officers' depositions; that for their case, the issuance of a subpoena is not unreasonable and oppressive, but instead favorable to Metrobank, since it will present the testimony of these officers just the same during the presentation of its own evidence; that the documents sought to be produced are relevant and will prove whether petitioners have paid their obligations to Metrobank in full, and will settle the issue relative to the validity or invalidity of the foreclosure proceedings; and that the Rules do not prohibit a party from presenting the adverse party as its own witness.

The trial court issued an Order denying petitioners' Motion for Issuance of Subpoena Duces Tecum Ad Testificandum. Upon appeal, the Court of Appeals affirmed the RTC ruling.

ISSUE

Whether the Court of Appeals committed error in holding that the petitioners must first serve written interrogatories to respondent bank's officers before they can be subpoenaed. (NO)

RULING

As a rule, in civil cases, the procedure of calling the adverse party to the witness stand is not allowed, unless written interrogatories are first served upon the latter. This is embodied in Section 6, Rule 25 of the Rules, which provides –

Sec. 6. Effect of failure to serve written interrogatories.

Unless thereafter allowed by the court for good cause shown and to prevent a failure of justice, a party not served with written interrogatories may not be compelled by the adverse party to give testimony in open court, or to give a deposition pending appeal.

One of the purposes of the above rule is to prevent fishing expeditions and needless delays; it is there to maintain order and facilitate the conduct of trial. It will be presumed that a party who does not serve written interrogatories on the adverse party beforehand will most likely be unable to elicit facts useful to its case if it later opts to call the adverse party to the witness stand as its witness. Instead, the process could be treated as a fishing expedition or an attempt at delaying the proceedings; it produces no significant result that a prior written interrogatories might bring.

Another reason for the rule is that by requiring prior written interrogatories, the court may limit the inquiry to what is relevant, and thus prevent the calling party from straying or harassing the adverse party when it takes the latter to the stand.

Thus, the rule not only protects the adverse party from unwarranted surprises or harassment; it likewise prevents the calling party from conducting a fishing expedition or bungling its own case. Using its own judgment and discretion, the court can hold its own in resolving a dispute, and need not bear witness to the parties perpetrating unfair court practices such as fishing for evidence, badgering, or altogether ruining their own cases. Ultimately, such unnecessary processes can only constitute a waste of the court's precious time, if not pointless entertainment.

In the present case, petitioners seek to call Metrobank's officers to the witness stand as their initial and main witnesses, and to present documents in Metrobank's possession as part of their principal documentary evidence. This is improper. Petitioners may not be allowed, at the incipient phase of the presentation of their evidence-in-chief at that, to present Metrobank's officers – who are considered adverse parties as well, based on the principle that corporations act only through their officers and duly authorized agents – as their main witnesses; nor may they be allowed to gain access to Metrobank's documentary evidence for the purpose of making it their own. This is tantamount to building their whole case from the evidence of their opponent. The burden of proof and evidence falls on petitioners, not on Metrobank; if petitioners cannot prove their claim using their own evidence, then the adverse party Metrobank may not be pressured to hang itself from its own defense.

It is true that under the Rules, a party may, for good cause shown and to prevent a failure of justice, be compelled to give testimony in court by the adverse party who has not served written interrogatories. But what petitioners seek goes against the very principles of justice and fair play; they would want that Metrobank provide the very evidence with which to prosecute and build their case from the start. This they may not be allowed to do.

Finally, the Court may not turn a blind eye to the possible consequences of such a move by petitioners. As one of their causes of action in their Complaint, petitioners claim that they were not furnished with specific documents relative to their loan agreement with Metrobank at the time they obtained the loan and while it was outstanding. If Metrobank were to willingly provide petitioners with these documents even before petitioners can present evidence to show that indeed they were never furnished the same, any inferences generated from this would certainly not be useful for Metrobank. One may be that by providing petitioners with these documents, Metrobank would be admitting that indeed, it did not furnish petitioners with these documents prior to the signing of the loan agreement, and while the loan was outstanding, in violation of the law.

2. Specific Powers, Theory of Specific Capacity

a. Power to Extend or Shorten Corporate Term

- Philippine National Bank vs. the Court of First Instance of Rizal, Pasig, et al., G.R. No. 63201, May 27, 1992

PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK, Petitioner –versus- THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE OF RIZAL, PASIG — BRANCH XXI, PRESIDED BY JUDGE GREGORIO G. PINEDA, CHUNG SIONG PEK @ BONIFACIO CHUNG SIONG PEK AND VICTORIA CHING GENG TY @ VICTORIA CHENG GENG TY, and THE REGISTER OF DEEDS OF RIZAL, PASIG, METRO MANILA AND/OR HIS DEPUTIES AND AGENTS, Respondents.

G.R. No. L-63201, FIRST DIVISION, May 27, 1992, MEDIALDEA, J.:

FACTS

Private respondents are the registered owners of three parcels of land in Pasig. Private respondents entered into a contract of lease with Philippine Blooming Mills (PBM for brevity) whereby the latter shall lease parcels of land as factory site. PBM was duly organized and incorporated on January 19, 1952 with a corporate term of 25 years. The leasehold right of PBM was duly annotated at the back of the certificates of title.

The contract of lease provides that the term of the lease is for 20 years beginning from the date of the contract and "is extendable for another term of 20 years at the option of the LESSEE should its term of existence be extended in accordance with law." The contract also states that the lessee agrees to "use the property as factory site and for that purpose to construct whatever buildings or improvements may be necessary or convenient and/or for any purpose it may deem fit; and before the termination of the lease to remove all such buildings and improvements."
In accordance with the contract, PBM introduced on the land certain buildings, machineries and other useful improvements. These constructions and improvements were registered with the Registry of Deeds of Rizal and annotated at the back of the respondents' certificates of title.

PBM executed in favor of petitioner PNB a deed of assignment, conveying and transferring all its rights and interests under the contract of lease. The assignment was for and in consideration of the loans granted by PNB to PBM. The deed of assignment was registered and annotated at the back of the private respondents' certificates of title.

On November 6, 1963 and December 23, 1963 respectively, PBM executed in favor of PNB a REM for a loan of P100,000 and an addendum to REM for another loan of P1,590,000 covering all the improvements constructed by PBM on the leased premises. These mortgages were registered and annotated at the back of respondents' certificates.

PBM filed a petition for registration of improvements in the titles of real property owned by private respondents.

Private respondents filed a motion in the same proceedings. The motion sought to cancel the annotations on respondents' certificates of title pertaining to the assignment by PBM to PNB of the former's leasehold rights, inclusion of improvements and the real estate mortgages made by PBM in favor of PNB, on the ground that the contract of lease had already expired by the failure of PBM and/or its assignee to exercise the option to renew the second 20-year lease commencing on March 1, 1974 and also by the failure of PBM to extend its corporate existence in accordance with law. The motion also states that since PBM failed to remove its improvements on the leased premises before the expiration of the contract of lease, such improvements shall accrue to respondents as owners of the land.

Respondent court issued an order directing the cancellation of the inscriptions on respondents' certificates of title. PNB filed a motion for reconsideration but was denied.

Private respondents filed a motion for entry of final judgment and issuance of a writ of execution of the order. The respondent court granted the motion and ordered the Register of Deeds to cancel the entries on respondents' certificates of title stated in the order of April 22, 1982.

PNB filed an omnibus motion to set aside the entry of judgment on the ground that it has no prior notice or knowledge of the order which denied its motion for reconsideration and that while there was a certification from the Bureau of Posts that three registry notices were sent to petitioner's counsel, there was no allegation or certification whatsoever that said notices were actually received by the addressee. The respondent court denied the omnibus motion.

Petitioner submits that the respondent court committed grave abuse of discretion in ordering the cancellation of entries in the certificates of title of respondents on the following grounds:

The motion for cancellation would amount to a collateral attack upon the due incorporation of PBM which cannot be done legally, 2) the contract of lease between PBM as petitioner's assignor and private respondents did not expire since PBM exercised its option to renew the lease with the acquiescence of private respondents, and 3) respondent court's ruling that ownership over the improvements passed from PBM to private respondents upon the expiration of lease violates the law and the contract between the parties.

Private respondent's motion with the respondent court was for the cancellation of the entries on their titles on the ground that the contract of lease executed between them and PBM had expired. This action is civil in nature and is within the jurisdiction of the respondent court. The circumstance that PBM as one of the contracting parties is a corporation whose corporate term had expired and which fact was made the basis for the termination of the lease is not sufficient to confer jurisdiction on the Securities and Exchange Commission over the case. Presidential Decree No. 902-A, as amended, enumerates the cases over which the SEC has exclusive jurisdiction and authority to resolve. The case at bar is not covered by the enumeration.

ISSUE

Whether or not the corporate life of PBM was extended by the continuance of the lease and subsequent registration of the title to the improvements under its name. (NO)

RULING

The respondent court did not act in excess of its jurisdiction in ordering the cancellation of the entries on respondent's certificates of title.

The contract of lease expressly provides that the term of the lease shall be 20 years from the execution of the contract but can be extended for another period of 20 years at the option of the lessee should the corporate term be extended in accordance with law. Clearly, the option of the lessee to extend the lease for another period of 20 years can be exercised only if the lessee as corporation renews or extends its corporate term. Contracts are to be interpreted according to their literal meaning. Thus, in the instant case, the initial term of the contract of lease which commenced on March 1, 1954 ended on March 1, 1974. PBM as lessee continued to occupy the leased premises beyond that date with the acquiescence and consent of the respondents as lessor. Records show however, that PBM as a corporation had a corporate life of only 25 years which ended on January 19, 1977. It should be noted however that PBM allowed its corporate term to expire without complying with the requirements provided by law for the extension of its corporate term of existence.

Section 11 of Corporation Code provides that a corporation shall exist for a period not exceeding 50 years from the date of incorporation unless sooner dissolved or unless said period is extended. Upon the expiration of the period fixed in the articles of incorporation in the absence of compliance with the legal requisites for the extension of the period, the corporation ceases to exist and is dissolved ipso facto. When the period of corporate life expires, the corporation ceases to be a body corporate for the purpose of continuing the business for which it was organized. But it shall nevertheless be continued as a body corporate for three years after the time when it would have been so dissolved, for the purpose of prosecuting and defending suits by or against it and enabling it gradually to settle and close its affairs, to dispose of and convey its property and to divide its assets (Sec. 122, Corporation Code). There is no need for the institution of a proceeding for quo warranto to determine the time or date of the dissolution of a corporation because the period of corporate existence is provided in the articles of incorporation. When such period expires and without any extension having been made pursuant to law, the corporation is dissolved automatically insofar as the continuation of its business is concerned. The quo warranto proceeding under Rule 66 of the Rules of Court, as amended, may be instituted by the Solicitor General only for the involuntary dissolution of a corporation on the following grounds: a) when the corporation has offended against a provision of an Act for its creation or renewal; b) when it has forfeited its privileges and franchises by non-user; c) when it has committed or omitted an act which amounts to a surrender of its corporate rights, privileges or franchises; d) when it has mis-used a right, privilege or franchise conferred upon it by law, or when it has exercised a right, privilege or franchise in contravention of law. Hence, there is no need for the SEC to make an involuntary dissolution of a corporation whose corporate term had ended because its articles of incorporation had in effect expired by its own limitation.

Considering the foregoing in relation to the contract of lease between the parties herein, when PBM's corporate life ended on January 19, 1977 and its 3-year period for winding up and liquidation expired on January 19, 1980, the option of extending the lease was likewise terminated on January 19, 1977 because PBM failed to renew or extend its corporate life in accordance with law. From then on, the respondents can exercise their right to terminate the lease pursuant to the stipulations in the contract.

b. Power to Increase or Decrease Capital Stock or Incur, Create, Increase Bonded Indebtedness

- Datu Tagoranao Benito vs. Securities & Exchange Commission, 123 SCRA 722 (1983)

DATU TAGORANAO BENITO, Petitioner –versus- SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION and JAMIATUL PHILIPPINE-AL ISLAMIA, INC., Respondents.
G.R. No. L-56655, FIRST DIVISION, July 25, 1983, RELOVA, J.:

However, the general rule is that pre-emptive right is recognized only with respect to new issue of shares, and not with respect to additional issues of originally authorized shares. This is on the theory that when a corporation at its inception offers its first shares, it is presumed to have offered all of those which it is authorized to issue. An original subscriber is deemed to have taken his shares knowing that they form a definite proportionate part of the whole number of authorized shares. When the shares left unsubscribed are later re-offered, he cannot therefore claim a dilution of interest.

FACTS

On February 6, 1959, the Articles of Incorporation of respondent Jamiatul Philippine-Al Islamia, Inc. (originally Kamilol Islam Institute, Inc.) were filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) and were approved on December 14, 1962. The corporation had an authorized capital stock of P200,000.00 divided into 20,000 shares at a par value of P10.00 each. Of the authorized capital stock, 8,058 shares worth P80,580.00 were subscribed and fully paid for. Herein petitioner Datu Tagoranao Benito subscribed to 460 shares worth P4,600.00.

On October 28, 1975, the respondent corporation filed a certificate of increase of its capital stock from P200,000.00 to P1,000,000.00. It was shown in said certificate that P191,560.00 worth of shares were represented in the stockholders' meeting held on November 25, 1975 at which time the increase was approved. Thus, P110,980.00 worth of shares were subsequently issued by the corporation from the unissued portion of the authorized capital stock of P200,000.00. Of the increased capital stock of P1,000,000.00, P160,000.00 worth of shares were subscribed by Mrs. Fatima A. Ramos, Mrs. Tarhata A. Lucman and Mrs. Moki-in Alonto.

Petitioner Datu Tagoranao filed with respondent Securities and Exchange Commission a petition alleging that the additional issue (worth P110,980.00) of previously subscribed shares of the corporation was made in violation of his pre-emptive right to said additional issue and that the increase in the authorized capital stock of the corporation from P200,000.00 to P1,000,000.00 was illegal considering that the stockholders of record were not notified of the meeting wherein the proposed increase was in the agenda. Petitioner prayed that the additional issue of shares of previously authorized capital stock as well as the shares issued from the increase in capital stock of respondent corporation be cancelled; that the secretary of respondent corporation be ordered to register the 2,540 shares acquired by him (petitioner) from Domocao Alonto and Moki-in Alonto; and that the corporation be ordered to render an accounting of funds to the stockholders.

In their answer, respondents denied the material allegations of the petition and, by way of special defense, claimed that petitioner has no cause of action and that the stock certificates covering the shares alleged to have been sold to petitioner were only given to him as collateral for the loan of Domocao Alonto and Moki-in Alonto.

Hearing Officer Ledor E. Macalalag of the Securities and Exchange Commission, after due proceedings, rendered a decision which was affirmed by the Commission En Banc that the issuance by the corporation of its unissued shares was validly made and was not subject to the pre-emptive rights of stockholders.

ISSUE

Whether the issuance of the 11,098 shares is null and void. (NO)

RULING

As aptly stated by the Securities and Exchange Commission in its decision:
xxx xxx xxx

... the questioned issuance of the unsubscribed portion of the capital stock worth P110,980.00 is ' not invalid even if assuming that it was made without notice to the stockholders as claimed by petitioner.

The power to issue shares of stocks in a corporation is lodged in the board of directors and no stockholders' meeting is necessary to consider it because additional issuance of shares of stocks does not need approval of the stockholders. The by-laws of the corporation itself states that 'the Board of Trustees shall, in accordance with law, provide for the issue and transfer of shares of stock of the Institute and shall prescribe the form of the certificate of stock of the Institute. (Art. V, Sec. 1).

Petitioner bewails the fact that in view of the lack of notice to him of such subsequent issuance, he was not able to exercise his right of pre-emption over the unissued shares. However, the general rule is that pre-emptive right is recognized only with respect to new issue of shares, and not with respect to additional issues of originally authorized shares. This is on the theory that when a corporation at its inception offers its first shares, it is presumed to have offered all of those which it is authorized to issue. An original subscriber is deemed to have taken his shares knowing that they form a definite proportionate part of the whole number of authorized shares. When the shares left unsubscribed are later re-offered, he cannot therefore claim a dilution of interest. (Campos and Lopez-Campos Selected Notes and Cases on Corporation Law, p. 855, citing Yasik V. Wachtel 25 Del. Ch. 247,17A. 2d 308 (1941). (pp. 33-34, Rollo)

With respect to the claim that the increase in the authorized capital stock was without the consent, expressed or implied, of the stockholders, it was the finding of the Securities and Exchange Commission that a stockholders' meeting was held on November 25,1975, presided over by Mr. Ahmad Domocao Alonto, Chairman of the Board of Trustees and, among the many items taken up then were the change of name of the corporation from Kamilol Islam Institute Inc. to Jamiatul Philippine-Al Islamia, Inc., the increase of its capital stock from P200,000.00 to P1,000,000.00, and the increase of the number of its Board of Trustees from five to nine. "Despite the insistence of petitioner, this Commission is inclined to believe that there was a stockholders' meeting on November 25, 1975 which approved the increase. The petitioner had not sufficiently overcome the evidence of respondents that such meeting was in fact held. What petitioner successfully proved, however, was the fact that he was not notified of said meeting and that he never attended the same as he was out of the country at the time. The documentary evidence of petitioner conclusively proved that he was attending the Mecca pilgrimage when the meeting was held on November 25, 1975. (Exhs. 'Q', 'Q-14', 'R', 'S' and 'S-l'). While petitioner doubts the authenticity of the alleged minutes of the proceedings (Exh. '4'), the Commission notes with significance that said minutes contain numerous details of various items taken up therein that would negate any claim that it was not authentic. Another thing that petitioner was able to disprove was the allegation in the certificate of increase (Exh. 'E-l') that all stockholders who did not subscribe to the increase of capital stock have waived their pre-emptive right to do so. As far as the petitioner is concerned, he had not waived his pre-emptive right to subscribe as he could not have done so for the reason that he was not present at the meeting and had not executed a waiver, thereof. Not having waived such right and for reasons of equity, he may still be allowed to subscribe to the increased capital stock proportionate to his present shareholdings." (pp. 36-37, Rollo)

- Central Textile Mills, Inc. vs. National Wages and Productivity Commission, et al., G.R. No. 104102, August 7, 1996

CENTRAL TEXTILE MILLS, INC., Petitioner –versus- NATIONAL WAGES AND PRODUCTIVITY COMMISSION, REGIONAL TRIPARTITE WAGES AND PRODUCTIVITY BOARD-NATIONAL CAPITAL REGION, and UNITED CMC TEXTILE WORKERS UNION, Respondents.
G.R. No. 104102, SECOND DIVISION, August 7, 1996, ROMERO, J.:

If a certificate of increase has not yet been issued by the SEC, the subscribers to the unauthorized issuance are not to be deemed as stockholders possessed of such legal rights as the rights to vote and dividends.

In the case at hand, petitioner's capital held answerable for the additional wages would include funds it only holds in trust, which to reiterate may not be deemed par of its paid-up capital, the losses of which shall be the basis of the 25% referred to above. To include such funds in the paid-up capital would be prejudicial to the corporation as an employer considering that the records clearly show that it is entitled to exemption, even as the anomaly was brought about by an auditing error.

FACTS

On December 20, 1990, respondent Regional Tripartite Wages and Productivity Board-National Capital Region (the Board) issued Wage Order No. NCR-02 (WO No. NCR-02), which took effect on January 9, 1991. Said wage order mandated a P12.00 increase in the minimum daily wage of all employees and workers in the private sector in the NCR, but exempted from its application distressed employers whose capital has been impaired by at least twenty-five percent (25%) in the preceding year.

By virtue of these provisions, petitioner filed on April 11, 1991 its application for exemption from compliance with WO No. NCR-02 due to financial losses.

In an order dated October 22, 1991, the Board's Vice-Chairman, Ernesto Gorospe, disapproved petitioner's application for exemption after concluding from the documents submitted that petitioner sustained an impairment of only 22.41%.

On February 4, 1992, petitioner's motion for reconsideration was dismissed by the Board for lack of merit. The Board, except for Vice-Chairman Gorospe who took no part in resolving the said motion for reconsideration, opined that according to the audited financial statements submitted by petitioner to them, to the Securities and Exchange Commission and to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, petitioner had a total paid-up capital of P305,767,900.00 as of December 31, 1990, which amount should be the basis for determining the capital impairment of petitioner, instead of the authorized capital stock of P128,000,000.00 which it insists should be the basis of computation.

The Board also noted that petitioner did not file with the SEC the August 15, 1990 resolution of its Board of Directors, concurred in by its stockholders representing at least two-thirds of its outstanding capital stock, approving an increase in petitioner's authorized capital stock from P128,000,000.00 to P640,000,000.00. Neither did it file any petition to amend its Articles of Incorporation brought about by such increase in its capitalization.

Petitioner maintains in the instant action that its authorized capital stock, not its unauthorized paid-up capital, should be used in arriving at its capital impairment for 1990. Citing two SEC Opinions dated August 10, 1971, and July 28, 1978, interpreting Section 38 of the Corporation Code, it claims that "the capital stock of a corporation stand(s) increased or decreased only from and after approval and the issuance of the certificate of filing of increase of capital stock."

ISSUE

Whether petitioner's authorized capital stock, not its unauthorized paid-up capital, should be used in arriving at its capital impairment for 1990. (YES)

RULING

The guidelines on exemption specifically refer to paid-up capital, not authorized capital stock, as the basis of capital impairment for exemption from WO No. NCR-02. The records reveal, however, that petitioner included in its total paid-up capital payments on advance subscriptions, although the proposed increase in its capitalization had not yet been approved by, let alone presented for the approval of, the SEC. As observed by the Board in its order of February 4, 1992, "the aforementioned (r)esolution (of August 15, 1990) has not been filed by the corporation with the SEC, nor was a petition to amend its Articles of Incorporation by reason of the increase in its capitalization filed by the same."

It is undisputed that petitioner incurred a net loss of P68,844,222.49 in 1990, and its authorized capital stock as of that time stood at P128,000,000.00. On August 15, 1990, a Board resolution increasing the capital stock of the corporation was affirmed by the requisite number of stockholders. Although no petition to that effect was ever submitted to the SEC for its approval, petitioner already started receiving subscriptions and payments on the proposed increase, which it allegedly held conditionally, that is, pending approval of the same by the SEC.

In its Memorandum, however, petitioner admitted, without giving any reason thereof, that it indeed "received 'subscriptions' and 'payments' to the said proposed increase in capital stock, even in the absence of SEC approval of the increase as required by the Corporation Code." Thus, by the end of 1990, the corporation had a subscribed capital stock of P482,748,900.00 and, after deducting P176,981,000.00 in subscriptions receivables, a total paid-up capital of P305,767,900.00, P177,767,900.00 of this sum constituted the unauthorized increase in its subscribed capital stock, which are actually payments on future issues of shares.

These payments cannot as yet be deemed part of petitioner's paid-up capital, technically speaking, because its capital stock has not yet been legally increased. Thus, its authorized capital stock in the year when exemption from WO No. NCR-02 was sought stood at P128,000,000.00, which was impaired by losses of nearly 50%. Such payments constitute deposits on future subscriptions, money which the corporation will hold in trust for the subscribers until it files a petition to increase its capitalization and a certificate of filing of increase of capital stock is approved and issued by the SEC. As a trust fund, this money is still withdrawable by any of the subscribers at any time before the issuance of the corresponding shares of stock, unless there is a pre-subscription agreement to the contrary, which apparently is not present in the instant case. Consequently, if a certificate of increase has not yet been issued by the SEC, the subscribers to the unauthorized issuance are not to be deemed as stockholders possessed of such legal rights as the rights to vote and dividends.

The Court observes that the subject wage order exempts from its coverage employers whose capital has been impaired by at least 25% because if impairment is less than this percentage, the employer can still absorb the wage increase. In the case at hand, petitioner's capital held answerable for the additional wages would include funds it only holds in trust, which to reiterate may not be deemed par of its paid-up capital, the losses of which shall be the basis of the 25% referred to above. To include such funds in the paid-up capital would be prejudicial to the corporation as an employer considering that the records clearly show that it is entitled to exemption, even as the anomaly was brought about by an auditing error.

- Majority Stockholders of Ruby Industrial Corporation v. Miguel Lim, in his Personal Capacity as Stockholder of Ruby Industrial Corporation and Representing The Minority Stockholders of Ruby Industrial Corporation and The Management Committee of Ruby Industrial Corporation, G.R. No. 165887, June 6, 2011, J. Villarama, Jr.

MAJORITY STOCKHOLDERS OF RUBY INDUSTRIAL CORPORATION, Petitioner –versus- MIGUEL LIM, in his personal capacity as Stockholder of Ruby Industrial Corporation and representing the MINORITY STOCKHOLDERS OF RUBY INDUSTRIAL CORPORATION and the MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE OF RUBY INDUSTRIAL CORPORATION, Respondent.
G.R. No. 165887, THIRD DIVISION, June 6, 2011, VILLARAMA, JR., J.:

A stock corporation is expressly granted the power to issue or sell stocks. The power to issue shares of stock in a corporation is lodged in the board of directors and no stockholders' meeting is required to consider it because additional issuances of shares of stock do not need approval of the stockholders. What is only required is the board resolution approving the additional issuance of shares. The corporation shall also file the necessary application with the SEC to exempt these from the registration requirements under the Revised Securities Act (now the Securities Regulation Code).

In this case, that the payment schedules as embodied in the said Revised plan which gives Benhar undue advantage over the other creditors goes against the very essence of rehabilitation, which requires that no creditor should be preferred over the other. One of the salient features of the Revised Benhar/Ruby Plan is to Call on unissued shares forP11.814 M and if minority will take up their pre-emptive rights and dilute minority shareholdings.

FACTS

Ruby Industrial Corporation (RUBY) is a domestic corporation engaged in glass manufacturing. Reeling from severe liquidity problems beginning in 1980, RUBY filed on December 13, 1983 a petition for suspension of payments with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). On December 20, 1983, the SEC issued an order declaring RUBY under suspension of payments and enjoining the disposition of its properties pending hearing of the petition, except insofar as necessary in its ordinary operations, and making payments outside of the necessary or legitimate expenses of its business.

Subsequently, two (2) rehabilitation plans were submitted to the SEC: the BENHAR/RUBY Rehabilitation Plan of the majority stockholders led by Yu Kim Giang, and the Alternative Plan of the minority stockholders represented by Miguel Lim (Lim).

Under the BENHAR/RUBY Plan, Benhar International, Inc. (BENHAR) -- a domestic corporation engaged in the importation and sale of vehicle spare parts which is wholly owned by the Yu family and headed by Henry Yu, who is also a director and majority stockholder of RUBY -- shall lend its ₱60 million credit line in China Bank to RUBY, payable within ten (10) years. Moreover, BENHAR shall purchase the credits of RUBY's creditors and mortgage RUBY's properties to obtain credit facilities for RUBY. Upon approval of the rehabilitation plan, BENHAR shall control and manage RUBY's operations. For its service, BENHAR shall receive a management fee equivalent to 7.5% of RUBY's net sales.

The BENHAR/RUBY Plan was opposed by 40% of the stockholders, including Lim, a minority shareholder of RUBY. ALFC, the biggest unsecured creditor of RUBY and chairman of the management committee, also objected to the plan as it would transfer RUBY's assets beyond the reach and to the prejudice of its unsecured creditors.

On the other hand, the Alternative Plan of RUBY's minority stockholders proposed to: (1) pay all RUBY's creditors without securing any bank loan; (2) run and operate RUBY without charging management fees; (3) buy-out the majority shares or sell their shares to the majority stockholders; (4) rehabilitate RUBY's two plants; and (5) secure a loan at 25% interest, as against the 28% interest charged in the loan under the BENHAR/RUBY Plan.

On October 28, 1988, the SEC Hearing Panel approved the BENHAR/RUBY Plan. The minority stockholders thru Lim appealed to the SEC En Banc which, in its November 15, 1988 Order, enjoined the implementation of the BENHAR/RUBY Plan. SEC En Banc granted the writ of preliminary injunction against the enforcement of the BENHAR/RUBY Plan. BENHAR, Henry Yu, RUBY and Yu Kim Giang questioned the issuance of the writ in their petition filed in the Court of Appeals (CA), docketed as CA-G.R. SP No. 16798. The CA denied their appeal. Upon elevation to this Court , we issued a minute resolution dated February 28, 1990 denying the petition and upholding the injunction against the implementation of the BENHAR/RUBY Plan.

Earlier, in 1990, after the SEC En Banc enjoined the implementation of BENHAR/RUBY Plan, RUBY filed with the SEC En Banc an ex parte petition to create a new management committee and to approve its revised rehabilitation plan (Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan). Under the revised plan, BENHAR shall receive ₱34.068 million of the ₱60.437 Million credit facility to be extended to RUBY, as reimbursement for BENHAR's payment to some of RUBY's creditors. The SEC En Banc directed RUBY to submit its revised rehabilitation plan to its creditors for comment and approval while the petition for the creation of a new management committee was remanded for further proceedings to the SEC Hearing Panel. The Alternative Plan of RUBY's minority stockholders was also forwarded to the hearing panel for evaluation.

On April 26, 1991, over ninety percent (90%) of RUBY's creditors objected to the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan and the creation of a new management committee.

Notwithstanding the objections of 90% of RUBY's creditors and three members of the MANCOM, the SEC Hearing Panel approved on September 18, 1991 the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan and dissolved the existing management committee. It also created a new management committee and appointed BENHAR as one of its members.

The original management committee (MANCOM), Lim and ALFC appealed to the SEC En Banc which affirmed the approval of the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan and the creation of a new management committee on July 30, 1993. To ensure that the management of RUBY will not be controlled by any group, the SEC appointed SEC lawyers Ruben C. Ladia and Teresita R. Siao as additional members of the new management committee. Further, it declared that BENHAR's membership in the new management committee is subject to the condition that BENHAR will extend its credit facilities to RUBY without using the latter's assets as security or collateral.

Lim, ALFC and MANCOM moved for reconsideration while RUBY and BENHAR asked the SEC to reconsider the portion of its Order prohibiting BENHAR from utilizing RUBY's assets as collateral. On October 15, 1993, the SEC denied the motion of Lim, ALFC and the original management committee but granted RUBY and BENHAR's motion and allowed BENHAR to use RUBY's assets as collateral for loans, subject to the approval of the majority of all the members of the new management committee. Lim, ALFC and MANCOM appealed to the CA which by Decision set aside the SEC's approval of the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan and remanded the case to the SEC for further proceedings. The CA ruled that the revised plan circumvented its earlier decision (CA-G.R. SP No. 18310) nullifying the deeds of assignment executed by RUBY's creditors in favor of BENHAR. Since under the revised plan, BENHAR was to receive ₱34.068 Million of the ₱60.437 Million credit facility to be extended to RUBY, as settlement for its advance payment to RUBY's seven (7) secured creditors, such payments made by BENHAR under the void Deeds of Assignment, in effect were recognized as payable to BENHAR under the revised plan. The motion for reconsideration filed by BENHAR and RUBY was likewise denied by the CA.

Undaunted, RUBY and BENHAR filed a petition for review in this Court alleging that the CA gravely abused its discretion in substituting its judgment for that of the SEC, and in allowing Lim, ALFC and MANCOM to file separate petitions prepared by lawyers representing themselves as belonging to different firms. We sustained the CA's ruling that the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan contained provisions which circumvented its final decision nullifying the deeds of assignment of credits and mortgages executed by RUBY's creditors in favor of BENHAR, as well as this Court's Resolution affirming the said CA's decision.

After the finality of the above decision, the SEC set the case for further proceedings. On March 14, 2000, Bank of the Philippine Islands (BPI), one of RUBY's secured creditors, filed a Motion to Vacate Suspension Order on grounds that there is no existing management committee and that no decision has been rendered in the case for more than 16 years already, which is beyond the period mandated by Sec. 3-8 of the Rules of Procedure on Corporate Recovery. RUBY filed its opposition, asserting that the MANCOM never relinquished its status as the duly appointed management committee as it resisted the orders of the second and third management committees subsequently created, which have been nullified by the CA and later this Court. As to the applicability of the cited rule under the Rules on Corporate Recovery, RUBY pointed out that this case was filed long before the effectivity of said rules. It also pointed out that the undue delay in the approval of the rehabilitation plan being due to the numerous appeals taken by the minority stockholders and MANCOM to the CA and this Court, from the SEC approval of the BENHAR/RUBY Plan. Since there have already been steps taken to finally settle RUBY's obligations with its creditors, it was contended that the application of the mandatory period under the cited provision would cause prejudice and injustice to RUBY.

It appears that even earlier during the pendency of the appeals in the CA, BENHAR and RUBY have performed other acts in pursuance of the BENHAR/RUBY Plan approved by the SEC.

On September 1, 1996, Lim received a Notice of Stockholders' Meeting scheduled on September 3, 1996 signed by a certain Mr. Edgardo M. Magtalas, the "Designated Secretary" of RUBY and stating the matters to be taken up in said meeting, which include the extension of RUBY's corporate term for another twenty-five (25) years and election of Directors. At the scheduled stockholders' meeting of September 3, 1996, Lim together with other minority stockholders, appeared in order to put on record their objections on the validity of holding thereof and the matters to be taken therein.

Specifically, they questioned the percentage of stockholders present in the meeting which the majority claimed stood at 74.75% of the outstanding capital stock of RUBY.

The aforesaid stockholders meeting was the subject of the Motion to Cite For Contempt and Supplement to Motion to Cite For Contempt filed by Lim before the CA where their petitions for review were then pending. Lim argued that the majority stockholders claimed to have increased their shares to 74.75% by subscribing to the unissued shares of the authorized capital stock (ACS). Lim pointed out that such move of the majority was in implementation of the BENHAR/RUBY Plan which calls for capital infusion of ₱11.814 Million representing the unissued and unsubscribed portion of the present ACS of ₱23.7 Million, and the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan which proposed an additional subscription of ₱30 Million. Since the implementation of both majority plans have been enjoined by the SEC and CA, the calling of the special stockholders meeting by the majority stockholders clearly violated the said injunction orders.

The aforementioned capital infusion was taken up by RUBY's board of directors in a special meeting held on October 2, 1991 following the issuance by the SEC of its Order dated September 18, 1991 approving the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan and creating a new management committee to oversee its implementation. During the said meeting, the board asserted its authority and resolved to take over the management of RUBY's funds, properties and records and to demand an accounting from the MANCOM which was ordered dissolved by the SEC.

The resolution to extend RUBY's corporate term, which was to expire on January 2, 1997, was approved during the September 3, 1996 stockholders meeting, as recommended by the board of directors composed of Henry Yu (Chairman), James Yu, David Yukimteng, Harry L. Yu, Yu Kim Giang, Mary L. Yu and Vivian L. Yu. The board certified that said resolution was approved by stockholders representing two-thirds (2/3) of RUBY's outstanding capital stock. Per Certification dated August 31, 1995 issued by Yu Kim Giang as Executive Vice-President of RUBY, the majority stockholders own 74.75% of RUBY's outstanding capital stock as of October 27, 1991. The Amended Articles of Incorporation was filed with the SEC on September 24, 1996.

On March 17, 2000, Lim filed a Motion informing the SEC of acts being performed by BENHAR and RUBY through directors who were illegally elected, despite the pendency of the appeal before this Court questioning the SEC approval of the BENHAR/RUBY Plan and creation of a new management committee. Lim reiterated that before the matter of extension of corporate life can be passed upon by the stockholders, it is necessary to determine the percentage ownership of the outstanding shares of the corporation. The majority stockholders claimed that they have increased their shareholdings from 59.828% to 74.75% as a result of the illegal and invalid stockholders' meeting on September 3, 1996. The additional subscription of shares cannot be done as it implements the BENHAR/RUBY Plan against which an existing injunction is still effective based on the SEC Order dated January 6, 1989, and which was struck down under the final decision of this Court in G.R. Nos. 124185-87.

Hence, the implementation of the new percentage stockholdings of the majority stockholders and the calling of stockholders' meeting and the subsequent resolution approving the extension of corporate life of RUBY for another twenty-five (25) years, were all done in violation of the decisions of the CA and this Court, and without compliance with the legal requirements under the Corporation Code. There being no valid extension of corporate term, RUBY's corporate life had legally ceased. Consequently, Lim moved that the SEC: (1) declare as null and void the infusion of additional capital made by the majority stockholders and restore the capital structure of RUBY to its original structure prior to the time injunction was issued; and (2) declare as null and void the resolution of the majority stockholders extending the corporate life of RUBY for another twenty-five (25) years.

The MANCOM concurred with Lim and made a similar manifestation/comment regarding the irregular and invalid capital infusion and extension of RUBY's corporate term approved by stockholders representing only 60% of RUBY's outstanding capital stock. It further stated that the foregoing acts were perpetrated by the majority stockholders without even consulting the MANCOM, which technically stepped into the shoes of RUBY's board of directors. Since RUBY was still under a state of suspension of payment at the time the special stockholders' meeting was called, all corporate acts should have been made in consultation and close coordination with the MANCOM.

ISSUE

Whether the additional capital infusion was valid. (NO)

RULING

A stock corporation is expressly granted the power to issue or sell stocks. The power to issue shares of stock in a corporation is lodged in the board of directors and no stockholders' meeting is required to consider it because additional issuances of shares of stock do not need approval of the stockholders. What is only required is the board resolution approving the additional issuance of shares. The corporation shall also file the necessary application with the SEC to exempt these from the registration requirements under the Revised Securities Act (now the Securities Regulation Code). But CA found, which the Court affirmed, that the payment schedules as embodied in the said Revised plan which gives Benhar undue advantage over the other creditors goes against the very essence of rehabilitation, which requires that no creditor should be preferred over the other. One of the salient features of the Revised Benhar/Ruby Plan is to Call on unissued shares forP11.814 M and if minority will take up their pre-emptive rights and dilute minority shareholdings.

With the nullification of the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan by both CA and SC on January 20, 1998, the legitimate concerns of the minority stockholders and MANCOM who objected to the capital infusion which resulted in the dilution of their shareholdings, the expiration of RUBY's corporate term and the pending incidents on the void deeds of assignment of credit – all these should have been duly considered and acted upon by the SEC when the case was remanded to it for further proceedings. With the final rejection of the courts of the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan, it was grave error for the SEC not to act decisively on the motions filed by the minority stockholders who have maintained that the issuance of additional shares did not help improve the situation of RUBY except to stifle the opposition coming from the MANCOM and minority stockholders by diluting the latter's shareholdings. Worse, the SEC ignored the evidence adduced by the minority stockholders indicating that the correct amount of subscription of additional shares was not paid by the majority stockholders and that SEC official records still reflect the 60%-40% percentage of ownership of RUBY.

The SEC remained indifferent to the reliefs sought by the minority stockholders, saying that the issue of the validity of the additional capital infusion was belatedly raised. Even assuming the October 2, 1991 board meeting indeed took place, the SEC did nothing to ascertain whether indeed, as the minority claimed: (1) the minority stockholders were not given notice as required and reasonable time to exercise their pre-emptive rights; and (2) the capital infusion was not for the purpose of rehabilitation but a mere ploy to divest the minority stockholders of their 40.172% shareholding and reduce it to a mere 25.25%.

Pre-emptive right under Sec. 39 of the Corporation Code refers to the right of a stockholder of a stock corporation to subscribe to all issues or disposition of shares of any class, in proportion to their respective shareholdings. The right may be restricted or denied under the articles of incorporation, and subject to certain exceptions and limitations. The stockholder must be given a reasonable time within which to exercise their preemptive rights. Upon the expiration of said period, any stockholder who has not exercised such right will be deemed to have waived it.

The validity of issuance of additional shares may be questioned if done in breach of trust by the controlling stockholders. Thus, even if the pre-emptive right does not exist, either because the issue comes within the exceptions in Section 39 or because it is denied or limited in the articles of incorporation, an issue of shares may still be objectionable if the directors acted in breach of trust and their primary purpose is to perpetuate or shift control of the corporation, or to "freeze out" the minority interest. In this case, the following relevant observations should have signaled greater circumspection on the part of the SEC -- upon the third and last remand to it pursuant to our January 20, 1998 decision -- to demand transparency and accountability from the majority stockholders, in view of the illegal assignments and objectionable features of the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan, as found by the CA and as affirmed by this Court:

There can be no gainsaying the well-established rule in corporate practice and procedure that the will of the majority shall govern in all matters within the limits of the act of incorporation and lawfully enacted by-laws not proscribed by law. It is, however, equally true that other stockholders are afforded the right to intervene especially during critical periods in the life of a corporation like reorganization, or in this case, suspension of payments, more so, when the majority seek to impose their will and through fraudulent means, attempt to siphon off Ruby's valuable assets to the great prejudice of Ruby itself, as well as the minority stockholders and the unsecured creditors.

c. Power to Deny Pre-Emptive Rights

d. Power to Sell or Dispose of Corporate Assets

- Rosita Peña vs. the Court of Appeals, Spouses Rising T. Yap and Catalina Yap, Pampanga Bus Co., Inc., Jesus Domingo, Joaquin Briones, Salvador Bernardez, Marcelino Enriquez and Edgardo A. Zabat, G.R. No. 91478, February 7, 1991

ROSITA PEÑA, Petitioner –versus- . THE COURT OF APPEALS, SPOUSES RISING T. YAP and CATALINA YAP, PAMPANGA BUS CO., INC., JESUS DOMINGO, JOAQUIN BRIONES, SALVADOR BERNARDEZ, MARCELINO ENRIQUEZ and EDGARDO A. ZABAT*, Respondents*.
G.R. No. 91478, FIRST DIVISION, February 7, 1991, GANCAYCO, J.:

FACTS

Pampanga Bus Co. or PAMBUSCO is the original owners of the subject lots. It mortgaged the same to the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP) This mortgage was foreclosed. In the foreclosure sale, the said properties were awarded to Rosita Peña as highest bidder. A certificate of sale was issued in her favor by the sheriff. Thereafter, the certificate of sale was registered.

Later on, the board of directors of PAMBUSCO, through three (3) out of its five (5) directors, resolved to assign its right of redemption over the aforesaid lots and authorized one of its members, Atty. Joaquin Briones "to execute and sign a Deed of Assignment for and in behalf of PAMBUSCO in favor of any interested party . . ."

Consequently, Briones executed a Deed of Assignment of PAMBUSCO's redemption right over the subject lots in favor of Marcelino Enriquez. The latter then redeemed the said properties and a certificate of redemption was issued in his favour.
A day after the aforesaid certificate was issued, Enriquez executed a deed of absolute sale of the subject properties in favor of plaintiffs-appellants, the spouses Rising T. Yap and Catalina Lugue.

However, Peña wrote the Sheriff notifying him that the redemption was not valid as it was made under a void deed of assignment. She then requested the recall of the said redemption and a restraint on any registration or transaction regarding the lots in question.

Plaintiffs-appellants, the spouses Rising T. Yap and Catalina Lugue filed a complaint for recovery of possession against defendants Rosita Peña and Washington Distillery Thereafter, the defendants with prior leave of court filed a third-party complaint third-party defendants PAMBUSCO, Jesus Domingo, Joaquin Briones, Salvador Bernardez (as members of the Board of Directors of PAMBUSCO), Marcelino Enriquez, and Deputy Sheriff Edgardo Zabat of Pampanga. All these third-party defendants, however, were declared as in default for failure to file their answer, except Edgardo Zabat who did file his answer but failed to appear at the pre-trial. After trial, a decision was rendered by the court dismissing the complaint filed by the plaintiffs against the defendants and declaring as null and void the resolution of the Board of Directors of PAMBUSCO approved on November 19, 1974 assigning the PAMBUSCO's right of redemption concerning the parcels involved herein on appeal the decision is reversed. Defendant-appellee Peña is hereby ordered to vacate the lands in question and pay the plaintiffs-appellants the accrued rentals.

ISSUE

Whether or not the Court of Appeals erred in holding that the resolution of respondent, assigning its right of redemption is not void or at the very least legally defective. (YES)

RULING

The by-laws of a corporation are its own private laws which substantially have the same effect as the laws of the corporation. They are in effect, written, into the charter. In this sense they become part of the fundamental law of the corporation with which the corporation and its directors and officers must comply.

Apparently, only three (3) out of five (5) members of the board of directors of respondent PAMBUSCO convened on November 19, 1974 by virtue of a prior notice of a special meeting. There was no quorum to validly transact business since, under Section 4 of the amended by-laws, at least four (4) members must be present to constitute a quorum in a special meeting of the board of directors of respondent PAMBUSCO.

Moreover, the records show that respondent PAMBUSCO ceased to operate as of November 15, 1949 as evidenced by a letter of the SEC to said corporation dated April 17, 1980.[13] Being a dormant corporation for several years, it was highly irregular, if not anomalous, for a group of three (3) individuals representing themselves to be the directors of respondent PAMBUSCO to pass a resolution disposing of the only remaining asset of the corporation in favor of a former corporate officer.

As a matter of fact, the three (3) alleged directors who attended the special meeting on November 19, 1974 were not listed as directors of respondent PAMBUSCO in the latest general information sheet of respondent PAMBUSCO filed with the SEC dated 18 March 1951.[14] Similarly, the latest list of stockholders of respondent PAMBUSCO on file with the SEC does not show that the said alleged directors were among the stockholders of respondent PAMBUSCO.

It is also undisputed that at the time of the passage of the questioned resolution, respondent PAMBUSCO was insolvent and its only remaining asset was its right of redemption over the subject properties. Since the disposition of said redemption right of respondent PAMBUSCO by virtue of the questioned resolution was not approved by the required number of stockholders under the law, the said resolution, as well as the subsequent assignment executed on March 8, 1975 assigning to respondent Enriquez the said right of redemption, should be struck down as null and void.

- Islamic Directorate of the Philippines, Manuel F. Perea and Securities & Exchange Commission,vs. Court of Appeals And Iglesia Ni Cristo, G.R. No. 117897, May 14, 1997

ISLAMIC DIRECTORATE OF THE PHILIPPINES, MANUEL F. PEREA and SECURITIES & EXCHANGE COMMISSION, Petitioners –versus- COURT OF APPEALS and IGLESIA NI CRISTO Respondents.

G.R. No. 117897, FIRST DIVISION, May 14, 1997, HERMOSISIMA, JR.,

A sale or other disposition shall be deemed to cover substantially all the corporate property and assets if thereby the corporation would be rendered incapable of continuing the business or accomplishing the purpose for which it was incorporated.

The Tandang Sora property, it appears from the records, constitutes the only property of the IDP. Hence, its sale to a third-party is a sale or disposition of all the corporate property and assets of IDP falling squarely within the contemplation of the foregoing section
.

FACTS

Petitioner IDP-Tamano Group alleges that sometime in 1971, Islamic leaders of all Muslim major tribal groups in the Philippines headed by Dean Cesar Adib Majul organized and incorporated the ISLAMIC DIRECTORATE OF THE PHILIPPINES (IDP), the primary purpose of which is to establish an Islamic Center in Quezon City for the construction of a "Mosque (prayer place), Madrasah (Arabic School), and other religious infrastructures" so as to facilitate the effective practice of Islamic faith in the area.

Towards this end, that is, in the same year, the Libyan government donated money to the IDP to purchase land at Culiat, Tandang Sora, Quezon City, to be used as a Center for the Islamic populace.

The land, with an area of 49,652 square meters, was covered by two titles: Transfer Certificate of Title Nos. RT-26520 (176616) 3 and RT-26521 (170567), 4 both registered in the name of IDP.

According to the petitioner, in 1972, after the purchase of the land by the Libyan government in the name of IDP, Martial Law was declared by the late President Ferdinand Marcos. Most of the members of the 1971 Board of Trustees like Senators Mamintal Tamano, Salipada Pendatun, Ahmad Alonto, and Congressman Al-Rashid Lucman flew to the Middle East to escape political persecution.

Thereafter, two Muslim groups sprung, the Carpizo Group, headed by Engineer Farouk Carpizo, and the Abbas Group, led by Mrs. Zorayda Tamano and Atty. Firdaussi Abbas. Both groups claimed to be the legitimate IDP. Significantly, on October 3, 1986, the SEC, in a suit between these two contending groups, came out with a Decision in SEC Case No. 2687 declaring the election of both the Carpizo Group and the Abbas Group as IDP board members to be null and void.

Neither group, however, took the necessary steps prescribed by the SEC in its October 3, 1986 Decision, and, thus, no valid election of the members of the Board of Trustees of IDP was ever called. Although the Carpizo Group 10 attempted to submit a set of by-laws, the SEC found that, aside from Engineer Farouk Carpizo and Atty. Musib Buat, those who prepared and adopted the by-laws were not bona fide members of the IDP, thus rendering the adoption of the by-laws likewise null and void. On April 20, 1989, without having been properly elected as new members of the Board of Trustee of IDP, the Carpizo Group caused to be signed an alleged Board Resolution of the IDP, authorizing the sale of the subject two parcels of land to the private respondent.

Petitioner 1971 IDP Board of Trustees headed by former Senator Mamintal Tamano, or the Tamano Group, filed a petition before the SEC seeking to declare null and void the Deed of Absolute Sale signed by the Carpizo Group and the INC since the group of Engineer Carpizo was not the legitimate Board of Trustees of the IDP.

Meanwhile, private respondent INC, pursuant to the Deed of Absolute Sale executed in its favor, filed an action for Specific Performance with Damages against the vendor, Carpizo Group to compel said group to clear the property of squatters and deliver complete and full physical possession thereof to INC. Likewise, INC filed a motion in the same case to compel one Mrs. Leticia P. Ligon to produce and surrender to the Register of Deeds of Quezon City the owner's duplicate copy of TCT Nos. RT-26521 and RT-26520 covering the aforementioned two parcels of land, so that the sale in INC's favor may be registered and new titles issued in the name of INC. Mrs. Ligon was alleged to be the mortgagee of the two parcels of land executed in her favor by certain Abdulrahman R.T. Linzag and Rowaida Busran-Sampaco claimed to be in behalf of the Carpizo Group.

The IDP-Tamano Group, on June 11, 1991, sought to intervene in the civil case. Private respondent INC opposed the motion arguing, inter alia, that the issue sought to be litigated by way of intervention is an intra-corporate dispute which falls under the jurisdiction of the SEC.

The RTC without waiting for the decision of the SEC denied petitioner's motion to intervene on the ground of lack of juridical personality of the IDP-Tamano Group and that the issues being raised by way of intervention are intra-corporate in nature, jurisdiction thereto properly pertaining to the SEC and ordered IDP-Carpizo Group to comply with its obligation under the Deed of Sale of clearing the subject lots of squatters and of delivering the actual possession thereof to INC.

In the meantime, the SEC, finally came out with a Decision in SEC Case No. 4012 declaring the sale of the two (2) parcels of land in Quezon City covered by the Deed of Absolute Sale entered into by Iglesia ni Kristo and the Islamic Directorate of the Philippines, Inc. null and void.

INC elevated SEC Case No. 4012 to the public respondent Court of Appeals. On October 28, 1994, the court a quo promulgated a Decision granting INC's petition. The portion of the SEC Decision in SEC Case No. 4012 which declared the sale of the two (2) lots in question to INC as void was ordered set aside by the Court of Appeals.

ISSUE

Whether the Court of Appeals commit reversible error in setting aside that portion of the SEC's Decision in SEC Case No. 4012 which declared the sale of two (2) parcels of land in Quezon City between the IDP-Carpizo Group and private respondent INC null and void. (YES)

RULING

The Carpizo Group-INC sale is deemed null and void ab initio because of the Carpizo Group's failure to comply with Section 40 of the Corporation Code pertaining to the disposition of all or substantially all assets of the corporation:

Sec. 40. Sale or other disposition of assets. — Subject to the provisions of existing laws on illegal combinations and monopolies, a corporation may, by a majority vote of its board of directors or trustees, sell, lease, exchange, mortgage, pledge or otherwise dispose of all or substantially all of its property and assets, including its goodwill, upon terms and conditions and for such consideration, which may be money, stocks, bonds or other instruments for the payment of money or other property or consideration, as its board of directors or trustees may deem expedient, when authorized by the vote of the stockholders representing at least two-thirds (2/3) of the outstanding capital stock; or in case of non-stock corporation, by the vote of at least two-thirds (2/3) of the members, in a stockholders' or members' meeting duly called for the purpose. Written notice of the proposed action and of the time and place of the meeting shall be addressed to each stockholder or member at his place of residence as shown on the books of the corporation and deposited to the addressee in the post office with postage prepaid, or served personally: Provided, That any dissenting stockholder may exercise his appraisal right under the conditions provided in this Code.

A sale or other disposition shall be deemed to cover substantially all the corporate property and assets if thereby the corporation would be rendered incapable of continuing the business or accomplishing the purpose for which it was incorporated.

x x x x x x x x x

The Tandang Sora property, it appears from the records, constitutes the only property of the IDP. Hence, its sale to a third-party is a sale or disposition of all the corporate property and assets of IDP falling squarely within the contemplation of the foregoing section. For the sale to be valid, the majority vote of the legitimate Board of Trustees, concurred in by the vote of at least 2/3 of the bona fide members of the corporation should have been obtained. These twin requirements were not met as the Carpizo Group which voted to sell the Tandang Sora property was a fake Board of Trustees, and those whose names and signatures were affixed by the Carpizo Group together with the sham Board Resolution authorizing the negotiation for the sale were, from all indications, not bona fide members of the IDP as they were made to appear to be. Apparently, there are only fifteen (15) official members of the petitioner corporation including the eight (8) members of the Board of Trustees. All told, the disputed Deed of Absolute Sale executed by the fake Carpizo Board and private respondent INC was intrinsically void ab initio.

- Y-1 Leisure Philippines, Inc. vs. Yu, G.R. No. 207161, September 8, 2015

Y-I LEISURE PHILIPPINES, INC., YATS INTERNATIONAL LTD. AND Y-I CLUBS AND RESORTS, INC.,, Petitioners –versus- JAMES YU*, Respondent.*
G.R. No. 207161, ENBANC, September 8, 2015, MENDOZA, JR.,

While the Corporation Code allows the transfer of all or substantially all of the assets of a corporation, the transfer should not prejudice the creditors of the assignor corporation.

Under the business-enterprise transfer, the petitioners have consequently inherited the liabilities of MADCI because they acquired all the assets of the latter corporation. The continuity of MADCI's land developments is now in the hands of the petitioners, with all its assets and liabilities. There is absolutely no certainty that Yu can still claim its refund from MADCI with the latter losing all its assets. To allow an assignor to transfer all its business, properties and assets without the consent of its creditors will place the assignor's assets beyond the reach of its creditors. Thus, the only way for Yu to recover his money would be to assert his claim against the petitioners as transferees of the assets.

FACTS

Mt. Arayat Development Co. Inc. (MADCI) was a real estate development corporation, which was registered before the Security and Exchange Commission (SEC). On the other hand, respondent James Yu (Yu) was a businessman, interested in purchasing golf and country club shares.

Sometime in 1997, MADCI offered for sale shares of a golf and country club located in the vicinity of Mt. Arayat in Arayat, Pampanga, for the price of P550.00 per share. Relying on the representation of MADCI's brokers and sales agents, Yu bought 500 golf and 150 country club shares for a total price of P650,000.00 which he paid by installment with fourteen (14) Far East Bank and Trust Company (FEBTC) checks.

Upon full payment of the shares to MADCI, Yu visited the supposed site of the golf and country club and discovered that it was non-existent. In a letter, dated February 5, 2000, Yu demanded from MADCI that his payment be returned to him.6 MADCI recognized that Yu had an investment of P650,000.00, but the latter had not yet received any refund.

Yu filed with the RTC a complaint for collection of sum of money and damages with prayer for preliminary attachment against MADCI and its president Rogelio Sangil (Sangil) to recover his payment for the purchase of golf and country club shares. In his transactions with MADCI, Yu alleged that he dealt with Sangil, who used MADCI's corporate personality to defraud him.

In his Answer, Sangil alleged that Yu dealt with MADCI as a juridical person and that he did not benefit from the sale of shares. He added that the return of Yu's money was no longer possible because its approval had been blocked by the new set of officers of MADCI, which controlled the majority of its board of directors.

In its Answer, MADCI claimed that it was Sangil who defrauded Yu. It invoked the Memorandum of Agreement (MOA), dated May 29, 1999, entered into by MADCI, Sangil and petitioner Yats International Ltd. (YIL). Under the MOA, Sangil undertook to redeem MADCI proprietary shares sold to third persons or settle in full all their claims for refund of payments.12 Thus, it was MADCI's position that Sangil should be ultimately liable to refund the payment for shares purchased.

After the pre-trial, Yu filed an Amended Complaint, wherein he also impleaded YIL, Y-I Leisure Phils., Inc. (YILPI) and Y-I Club & Resorts, Inc. (YICRI). According to Yu, he discovered in the Registry of Deeds of Pampanga that, substantially, all the assets of MADCI, consisting of one hundred twenty (120) hectares of land located in Magalang, Pampanga, were sold to YIL, YILPI and YICRI. The transfer was done in fraud of MADCI's creditors, and without the required approval of its stockholders and board of directors under Section 40 of the Corporation Code. Yu also alleged that Sangil even filed a case in Pampanga which assailed the said irregular transfers of lands.

In their Answer, YIL, YILPI and YICRI alleged that they only had an interest in MADCI in 1999 when YIL bought some of its corporate shares pursuant to the MOA. This occurred two (2) years after Yu bought his golf and country club shares from MADCI. As a mere stockholder of MADCI, YIL could not be held responsible for the liabilities of the corporation. As to the transfer of properties from MADCI to YILPI and subsequently to YICRI, they averred that it was not undertaken to defraud MADCI's creditors and it was done in accordance with the MOA. In fact, it was stipulated in the MOA that Sangil undertook to settle all claims for refund of third parties.

The president and chief executive officer of YILPI and YICRI, and managing director of YIL, Denny On Yat Wang (Wang), was presented as a witness by YIL. He testified that YIL was an investment company engaged in the development of real estates, projects, leisure, tourism, and related businesses.20 He explained that YIL subscribed to. the shares of MADCI because it was interested in its golf course development project in Pampanga.21 Thus, he signed the MOA on behalf of YIL and he paid P31.5 million to subscribe to MADCI's shares, subject to the fulfilment of Sangil's obligations.

The RTC ruled that because MADCI did not deny its contractual obligation with Yu, it must be liable for the return of his payments. The trial court also ruled that Sangil should be solidarily liable with MADCI because he used the latter as a mere alter ego or business conduit. The RTC, however, exonerated YIL, YILPI and YICRI from liability because they were not part of the transactions between MADCI and Sangil, on one hand and Yu, on the other hand. It opined that YIL, YILPI and YICRI even had the foresight of protecting the creditors of MADCI when they made Sangil responsible for settling the claims of refunds of thirds persons in the proprietary shares.

Upon appeal, the Court of Appeals partly granted the appeals and modified the RTC decision by holding YIL and its companies, YILPI and YICRI, jointly and severally, liable for the satisfaction of Yu's claim.

ISSUE

Whether the Court of Appeals erred in ruling that petitioners Yats Group should be held jointly and severally liable to respondent Yu. (NO)

RULING

The Nell Doctrine states the general rule that the transfer of all the assets of a corporation to another shall not render the latter liable to the liabilities of the transferor. If any of the above-cited exceptions are present, then the transferee corporation shall assume the liabilities of the transferor.

The exception of the Nell doctrine, which finds its legal basis under Section 40, provides that the transferee corporation assumes the debts and liabilities of the transferor corporation because it is merely a continuation of the latter's business. A cursory reading of the exception shows that it does not require the existence of fraud against the creditors before it takes full force and effect. Indeed, under the Nell Doctrine, the transferee corporation may inherit the liabilities of the transferor despite the lack of fraud due to the continuity of the latter's business.

The purpose of the business-enterprise transfer is to protect the creditors of the business by allowing them a remedy against the new owner of the assets and business enterprise. Otherwise, creditors would be left "holding the bag," because they may not be able to recover from the transferor who has "disappeared with the loot," or against the transferee who can claim that he is a purchaser in good faith and for value. Based on the foregoing, as the exception of the Nell doctrine relates to the protection of the creditors of the transferor corporation, and does not depend on any deceit committed by the transferee -corporation, then fraud is certainly not an element of the business enterprise doctrine.

Bearing in mind that fraud is not required to apply the business-enterprise transfer, the next issue to be resolved is whether the petitioners indeed became a continuation of MADCI's business. Synthesizing Section 40 and the previous rulings of this Court, it is apparent that the business-enterprise transfer rule applies when two requisites concur: (a) the transferor corporation sells all or substantially all of its assets to another entity; and (b) the transferee corporation continues the business of the transferor corporation. Both requisites are present in this case.

According to its articles of incorporation, the primary purpose of MADCI was "[t]o acquire by purchase, lease, donation or otherwise, and to own, use, improve, develop, subdivide, sell, mortgage, exchange, lease, develop and hold for investment or otherwise, real estate of all kinds, whether improved, managed or otherwise disposed of buildings, houses, apartment, and other structures of whatever kind, together with their appurtenance." During the trial before the RTC, Sangil testified that MADCI was a development company which acquired properties in Magalang, Pampanga to be developed into a golf course.

The CA found that MADCI had an entire asset consisting of 120 hectares of land, and that its sale to the petitioners rendered it incapable of continuing its intended golf and country club business. The Court holds that such finding is fully substantiated by the records of the case. The MOA itself stated that MADCI had 120 hectares of agricultural land in Magalang, Pampanga, for the development of a golf course. MADCI had the right of ownership over these properties consisting of 97 land titles, except for the 27 titles previous delivered to YIL. The 120-hectare land, however, was then sold to YILPI, and then transferred to YICRI.

Respondent Yu testified that he verified the landholdings of MADCI with the Register of Deeds in Pamapanga and discovered that all its lands were transferred to YICRI. Because the properties of MADCI were already conveyed, Yu had no other way of collecting his refund.

Based on these factual findings, the Court is convinced that MADCI indeed had assets consisting of 120 hectares of landholdings in Magalang, Pampanga, to be developed into a golf course, pursuant to its primary purpose. Because of its alleged violation of the MOA, however, MADCI was made to transfer all its assets to the petitioners. No evidence existed that MADCI subsequently acquired other lands for its development projects. Thus, MADCI, as a real estate development corporation, was left without any property to develop eventually rendering it incapable of continuing the business or accomplishing the purpose for which it was incorporated.

Consequently, the transfer of the assets of MADCI to the petitioners should have complied with the requirements under Section 40. Nonetheless, the present petition is not concerned with the validity of the transfer; but the respondent's claim of refund of his P650,000.00 payment for golf and country club shares. Both the CA and the RTC ruled that MADCI and Sangil were liable.

On the question of whether the petitioners must also be held solidarily liable to Yu, the Court answers in the affirmative.

While the Corporation Code allows the transfer of all or substantially all of the assets of a corporation, the transfer should not prejudice the creditors of the assignor corporation. Under the business-enterprise transfer, the petitioners have consequently inherited the liabilities of MADCI because they acquired all the assets of the latter corporation. The continuity of MADCI's land developments is now in the hands of the petitioners, with all its assets and liabilities. There is absolutely no certainty that Yu can still claim its refund from MADCI with the latter losing all its assets. To allow an assignor to transfer all its business, properties and assets without the consent of its creditors will place the assignor's assets beyond the reach of its creditors. Thus, the only way for Yu to recover his money would be to assert his claim against the petitioners as transferees of the assets.

e. Power to Acquire Own Shares

- Boman Environmental Development Corporation vs. Hon. Court of Appeals and Nilcar Y. Fajilan, G.R. No. 77860, November 22, 1988

BOMAN ENVIRONMENTAL DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, Petitioner –versus- HON. COURT OF APPEALS and NILCAR Y. FAJILAN, Respondent.
G.R. No. 77860, FIRST DIVISION, November 22, 1988, GRINO-AQUINO, J.

Section 5(b) of P.D. No. 902-A, as amended, grants the SEC original and exclusive jurisdiction to hear and decide cases involving—

b) Controversies arising out of intra-corporate or partnership relations, between and among stockholders members, or associates; between any or all of them and the corporation, partnership or association of which they are stockholders, members or associates, respectively; ... (Emphasis supplied.) This case involves an intra-corporate controversy because the parties are a stockholder and the corporation. As correctly observed by the trial court, the perfection of the agreement to sell Fajilan's participation and interests in BEDECO and the execution of the promissory note for payment of the price of the sale did not remove the dispute from the coverage of Section 5(b) of P.D. No. 902, as amended, for both the said agreement (Annex C) and the promissory note (Annex D) arose from intra-corporate relations. Indeed, all the signatories of both documents were stockholders of the corporation at the time of signing the same. It was an intra-corporate transaction, hence, this suit is an intra-corporate controversy.

FACTS

On May 7, 1984, respondent Nilcar Y. Fajilan offered in writing to resign as President and Member of the Board of Directors of petitioner, Boman Environmental Development Corporation (BEDECO), and to sell to the company all his shares, rights, and interests therein for P 300,000 plus the transfer to him of the company's Isuzu pick-up truck which he had been using.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of BEDECO on June 14, 1984, Fajilan's resignation as president was accepted and new officers were elected. Fajilan's offer to sell his shares back to the corporation was approved, the Board promising to pay for them on a staggered basis from July 15, 1984 to December 15, 1984. The resolution of the Board was communicated to Fajilan through a letter-agreement to which he affixed his conformity.

However, BEDECO paid only P50,000 on July 15, 1984 and another P50,000 on August 31, 1984 and defaulted in paying the balance of P200,000.

On April 30, 1985, Fajilan filed a complaint in the Regional Trial Court of Makati for collection of that balance from BEDECO. In an order dated September 9, 1985, the trial court, through Judge Ansberto Paredes, dismissed the complaint for lack of jurisdiction. It ruled that the controversy arose out of intracorporate relations, hence, the Securities and Exchange Commission has original and exclusive jurisdiction to hear and decide it.

His motion for reconsideration of that order having been denied, Fajilan filed a "Petition for Certiorari, and mandamus with Preliminary Attachment" in the Intermediate Appellate Court.

In a decision dated March 2, 1987, the Court of Appeals set aside Judge Paredes' order of dismissal and directed him to take cognizance of the case. BEDECO's motion for reconsideration was denied in a resolution dated March 24, 1987 of the Court of Appeals. The CA ruled that the intra-corporate matter of the resignation of petitioner as Member of the Board of Directors and President of respondent corporation has long been settled without issue.

The Board of Directors of respondent corporation has likewise long settled the sale by petitioner of all his shares, rights and interests in favor of the corporation. No controversy arose out of this transaction. The jurisdiction of the Securities and Exchange Commission therefore need not be invoked on this matter.

ISSUE

Whether or not a suit brought by a withdrawing stockholder against the corporation to enforce payment of the balance due on the consideration (evidenced by a corporate promissory note) for the surrender of his shares of stock and interests in the corporation, involves an intra-corporate dispute. (YES)

RULING

Section 5(b) of P.D. No. 902-A, as amended, grants the SEC original and exclusive jurisdiction to hear and decide cases involving—

b) Controversies arising out of intra-corporate or partnership relations, between and among stockholders members, or associates; between any or all of them and the corporation, partnership or association of which they are stockholders, members or associates, respectively; ... (Emphasis supplied.)

This case involves an intra-corporate controversy because the parties are a stockholder and the corporation. As correctly observed by the trial court, the perfection of the agreement to sell Fajilan's participation and interests in BEDECO and the execution of the promissory note for payment of the price of the sale did not remove the dispute from the coverage of Section 5(b) of P.D. No. 902, as amended, for both the said agreement (Annex C) and the promissory note (Annex D) arose from intra-corporate relations. Indeed, all the signatories of both documents were stockholders of the corporation at the time of signing the same. It was an intra-corporate transaction, hence, this suit is an intra-corporate controversy.

Fajilan's offer to resign as president and director "effective as soon as my shares and interests thereto (sic) are sold and fully paid" (Annex A-1, p. 239, Rollo) implied that he would remain a stockholder until his shares and interests were fully paid for, for one cannot be a director or president of a corporation unless he is also a stockholder thereof. The fact that he was replaced as president of the corporation did not necessaryily mean that he ceased to be a stockholder considering how the corporation failed to complete payment of the consideration for the purchase of his shares of stock and interests in the goodwill of the business. There has been no actual transfer of his shares to the corporation. In the books of the corporation he is still a stockholder.

Fajilan's suit against the corporation to enforce the latter's promissory note or compel the corporation to pay for his shareholdings is cognizable by the SEC alone which shall determine whether such payment will not constitute a distribution of corporate assets to a stockholder in preference over creditors of the corporation. The SEC has exclusive supervision, control and regulatory jurisdiction to investigate whether the corporation has unrestricted retained earnings to cover the payment for the shares, and whether the purchase is for a legitimate corporate purpose as provided in Sections 41 and 122 of the Corporation Code, which reads as follows:

SEC. 41. Power to acquire own shares.—A stock corporation shall have the power to purchase or acquire its own shares for a legitimate corporate purpose or purposes, including but not limited to the following cases: Provided, That the corporation has unrestricted retained earnings in its books to cover the shares to be purchased or acquired;

1. To eliminate fractional shares arising out of stock dividends;
2. To collect or compromise an indebtedness to the corporation, arising out of unpaid subscription, in a delinquency sale, and to purchase delinquent shares sold during said sale; and
3. To pay dissenting or withdrawing stockholders entitled to payment for their shares under the provisions of this Code,

Sec. 12. Corporate liquidation. ...

xxx xxx xxx
Except by decrease of capital stock and as otherwise allowed by this Code, no corporation shall distribute any of its assets or property except upon lawful dissolution and after payment of all its debts and liabilities, (77a, 89a, 16a).

These provisions of the Corporation Code should be deemed written into the agreement between the corporation and the stockholders even if there is no express reference to them in the promissory note. The principle is well settled that an existing law enters into and forms part of a valid contract without need for the parties' expressly making reference to it (Lakas ng Manggagawang Makabayan vs. Abiera, 36 SCRA 437).

The requirement of unrestricted retained earnings to cover the shares is based on the trust fund doctrine which means that the capital stock, property and other assets of a corporation are regarded as equity in trust for the payment of corporate creditors. The reason is that creditors of a corporation are preferred over the stockholders in the distribution of corporate assets. There can be no distribution of assets among the stockholders without first paying corporate creditors. Hence, any disposition of corporate funds to the prejudice of creditors is null and void. "Creditors of a corporation have the right to assume that so long as there are outstanding debts and liabilities, the board of directors will not use the assets of the corporation to purchase its own stock ..."(Steinberg vs. Velasco, 52 Phil. 953.)

f. Power to Invest Corporate Funds in another Corporation or Business

- Heirs of Antonio Pael and Andrea Alcantara and CrisantoPael vs. Court of Appeals, Jorge H. Chin and Renato B. Mallari, G.R. No. 133547, February 10, 2000

HEIRS OF ANTONIO PAEL and ANDREA ALCANTARA and CRISANTO PAEL, Petitioners –versus- COURT OF APPEALS, JORGE H. CHIN and RENATO B. MALLARI, Respondents.
G.R. No. 133547, FIRST DIVISION, February 10, 2000, YNARES-SANTIAGO, J.

A person not included as a party to a case cannot be bound by the decision made by a court.

A person who was not impleaded in the complaint could not be bound by the decision rendered thereon for no man shall be effected by a proceeding to which he is a stranger.

Generally accepted is the principle that no man shall be affected by any proceeding to which he is a stranger and strangers to a case are not bound by judgment rendered by the court

In this case, the Supreme Court held that the trial-court's decision is not only erroneous but is void from the beginning as the title was given to the Paels despite the fact that they were not parties and have been total strangers to the said case. They were never impleaded nor did they intervene in the case wherein the disputed property was awarded to them.

FACTS

Spouses Maria and Pedro Destura together with private respondents executed a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) which provided that Chin and Mallari, as first parties; Pedro Destura, as second party; and a certain Jaime B. Lumasag, Jr., as third party, whereby the parties agreed to sell the property subject of this petition to an interested buyer and to share in the proceeds, with Lumasag acting as broker of the sale. However, the prospective buyer of Lumasag backed out and the sale did not materialize. However, Pedro filed for the nullification of the said MOA but was dismissed by the RTC.

Inspite of the decision against her husband, Maria Destura filed a similar action one month after the decision before the Regional Trial Court. The trial court in the Maria case, rendered judgment by default nullifying the MOA and ordering the cancellation of Chin's and Mallari's titles and did not award any affirmative relief to Maria but instead, ordered the reinstatement of TCT in the names of the Paels, who were non-parties in the case.

From the adverse decision and order of the trial court, Chin and Mallari filed a petition for annulment of judgment before the CA and rendered the assailed decision, declaring as null and void both the cancellation of the their titles over the subject property and reinstatement of the title in the names of the Paels.

While the petition for annulment was pending before the CA, or on January 28, 1998, a certain corporation called PFINA Properties, Inc. filed a motion for leave of court to intervene and to admit petition-in-intervention. It alleged that PFINA acquired the property subject of the litigation for substantial and valuable consideration from the Paels, by virtue of a deed of assignment dated January 25, 1983, and that the title was issued in its name by the Paels. This motion was opposed by Chin and Mallari. They cite the fact that the alleged acquisition of the property by PFINA supposedly occurred as early as January 25, 1983, and for fifteen (15) years, inspite of numerous proceedings before different courts and agencies involving the disputed property, both the Paels and PFINA were silent about the alleged change of ownership. No steps to register the sale or secure transfer titles were undertaken during this period.

The new title was obtained by PFINA by the RD despite its knowledge that there was a pending case for annulment before the appellate court.

Atty. Cleofe, the RD of QC who cancelled the TCT in the names of Paels, and issued the new title in the name of PFINA acted in gross and evident bad faith. Not only was the Register a party respondent fully knowledgeable and served with all processes in the annulment case, but the petition before the CA was also annotated at the back of the title of the Paels.

Only after a period of fifteen (15) years did PFINA come forward to present the deed and claim the subject properties. The said deed and the circumstances surrounding its issuance are suspect. The deed may be fabricated and the signatures of the parties and witnesses forged.

The CA gave credence to the objections interposed by private respondents. In its Resolution, it cited badges or indicia of fraud in the alleged acquisition of the property by PFINA as well as the cancellation of the title of the Paels and issuance of a new title in favor of PFINA.

ISSUE

Whether or not PFINA can acquired the property subject of the litigation for substantial and valuable consideration from the Paels by virtue of a deed of assignment, (NO)

HELD

The Court held that the trial-court's decision is not only erroneous but is void from the beginning as the title was given to the Paels despite the fact that they were not parties and have been total strangers to the said case. They were never impleaded nor did they intervene in the case wherein the disputed property was awarded to them.

The Court also upheld the appellate court in ruling that Maria Destura's complaint should have been dismissed on the ground of litis pendentia and res judicata, considering that her husband Pedro Destura had earlier filed a complaint against respondents Chin and Mallari, for, among others, annulment of their titles and annulment of the MOA.

The highly anomalous and deplorable conduct of the Register of Deeds of Quezon City in registering the reinstated title in favor of the Paels who were non-parties to the case, inspite of his being a defendant in the case, resulted in the sale of this vast tract of land by the Paels to anybody right and left, including Letty Sy, PFINA, and presumably others who have not come forward to intervene in this case.

The Paels, having no longer any right over the subject property, had nothing to sell to PFINA. Therefore, the title obtained by PFINA allegedly by virtue of the deed of assignment executed by the Paels in its favor is a nullity. Worse, the Register of Deeds of Quezon City connived and conspired with PFINA when the former registered the deed of assignment on the basis of fake and spurious documents.
The Court of Appeals also found it unbelievable for PFINA to acquire extremely valuable real estate in Quezon City for only P30.00 per square meter. In 1983, PFINA Mining and Exploration, Inc. was a mining company. It changed its corporate name to PFINA Properties, Inc., only on January 22, 1998, six (6) days before filing its petition-in-intervention with the Court of Appeals. In its petition, PFINA claimed to have bought urban real estate in 1983, notwithstanding that at the time it was still a mining company which had no business dabbling in the highly speculative urban real estate trade.

g. Power to Declare Dividends

- Madrigal & Company, Inc. vs. Hon. Ronaldo B. Zamora, et al., G.R. No. L-48237, June 30, 1987

MADRIGAL & COMPANY, INC., Petitioner –versus- HON. RONALDO B. ZAMORA, PRESIDENTIAL ASSISTANT FOR LEGAL AFFAIRS, THE HON. SECRETARY OF LABOR, and MADRIGAL CENTRAL OFFICE EMPLOYEES UNION, Respondents**.
G.R. No. L-48237, FIRST DIVISION, June 30, 1987, SARMIENTO, J.

"[t]he dividends received by the company are corporate earnings arising from corporate investment." Indeed, as found by the Commission, the petitioner had entered such earnings in its financial statements as profits, which it would not have done if they were not in fact profit.

As such shareholder, the dividends paid to it were its own money, which may then be available for wage increments. It is not a case of a corporation distributing dividends in favor of its stockholders, in which case, such dividends would be the absolute property of the stockholders and hence, out of reach by creditors of the corporation. Here, the petitioner was acting as stockholder itself, and in that case, the right to a share in such dividends, by way of salary increases, may not be denied its employees.

FACTS

Madrigal & Company, Inc., was engaged in the management of Rizal Cement Co., Inc. Admittedly, the petitioner and Rizal Cement Co., Inc. are sister companies. Both are owned by the same or practically the same stockholders. The Madrigal Central Office Employees Union, sought for the renewal of its collective bargaining agreement with the petitioner, proposing a wage increase of P200.00 a month, an allowance of P100.00 a month, and other economic benefits. The petitioner, however, requested for a deferment in the negotiations.

Then, in an alleged board resolution, petitioner reduced its capital stock and its authorized capitalization. It then wrote a letter to the Department of Labor averring that it is incurring losses and so it will enforce a retrenchment program. The letter is however unsupported by documents and so the Department of Labor ignored it. However, MCI went on to dismiss several employees.

The union commenced Case No. LR-5415 with the NLRC on a complaint for unfair labor practice. The labor arbiter granted a general wage increase of P200.00 plus a monthly living allowance of P100.00. The arbiter specifically found that the petitioner had been making substantial profits in its operation since 1972 through 1975. The petitioner appealed.

However, petitioner applied for clearance to terminate 18 employees. The union complained of illegal lockout against the petitioner. The Secretary of Labor found the dismissals to be contrary to law and ordered the petitioner to reinstate some 40 employees, 37 of them with backwages. The petitioner then moved for reconsideration, which the Acting Labor Secretary, Amado Inciong, denied. Thereafter, the petitioner filed an appeal to the Office of the President. MCI insists that it is incurring losses; that as such, it has to reduce its capitalization; that the profits it is earning are cash dividends from RCC; that under the law, dividends are the absolute property of a stockholder like MCI and cannot be compelled to share it with creditors (like the employees).

The respondent, the Presidential Assistant on Legal Affairs, affirmed with modification the Labor Department's decision. Hence the petition (G.R. No. 48237.)

Meanwhile, the NLRC rendered a decision affirming the labor arbiter's judgment in Case No. LR-5415. The petitioner appealed to the Secretary of Labor which dismissed the appeal. Also the other petition (G.R. No. 49023)

h. Power to Enter Into Management Contract

i. Ultra Vires Acts

i. Consequences of Ultra Vires Acts

- Republic of the Philippines vs. Acoje Mining Company, Inc., G.R. No. L-18062, February 28, 1963

REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES, Plaintiff-Appellee –ver sus- ACOJE MINING COMPANY, INC., Defendant-Appellant.
G.R. No. L-18062, FIRST DIVISION, February 28, 1963, BAUTISTA ANGELO, J
.

Thus, it has been held that "although not expressly authorized to do so a corporation may become a surety where the particular transaction is reasonably necessary or proper to the conduct of its business," And here it is undisputed that the establishment of the local post office is a reasonable and proper adjunct to the conduct of the business of appellant company. Indeed, such post office is a vital improvement in the living condition of its employees and laborers who came to settle in its mining camp which is far removed from the postal facilities or means of communication accorded to people living in a city or municipality.

FACTS

Acoje Mining Company, Inc. wrote the Director of Posts requesting the opening of a post, telegraph and money order offices at its mining camp at Sta. Cruz, Zambales, to service its employees and their families that were living in said camp. Acting on the request, the Director of Posts wrote in reply stating that if aside from free quarters the company would provide for all essential equipment and assign a responsible employee to perform the duties of a postmaster without compensation from his office until such time as funds therefor may be available he would agree to put up the offices requested. The company in turn replied signifying its willingness to comply with all the requirements outlined in the letter of the Director of Posts requesting at the same time that it be furnished with the necessary forms for the early establishment of a post office branch.

Later, the Director of Posts again wrote a letter to the company stating: "In cases where a post office will be opened under circumstances similar to the present, it is the policy of this office to have the company assume direct responsibility for whatever pecuniary loss may be suffered by the Bureau of Posts by reason of any act of dishonesty, carelessness or negligence on the part of the employee of the company who is assigned to take charge of the post office," thereby suggesting that a resolution be adopted by the board of directors of the company expressing conformity to the above condition relative to the responsibility to be assumed by it in the event a post office branch is opened as requested.

The company informed the Director of Posts of the passage by its board of directors of a resolution of the following tenor: "That the requirement of the Bureau of Posts that the Company should accept full responsibility for all cash received by the Postmaster be complied with, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Bureau of Posts." The letter further states that the company feels that that resolution fulfills the last condition imposed by the Director of Posts and that, therefore, it would request that an inspector be sent to the camp for the purpose of acquainting the postmaster with the details of the operation of the branch office.

The post office branch was opened at the camp with one Hilario M. Sanchez as postmaster. He is an employee of the company. Later, the postmaster went on a three-day leave but never returned. The company immediately informed the officials of the Manila Post Office and the provincial auditor of Zambales of Sanchez' disappearance with the result that the accounts of the postmaster were checked and a shortage was found in the amount of P13,867.24.

The several demands made upon the company for the payment of the shortage in line with the liability it has assumed having failed, the government commenced the present action on September 10, 1954 before the Court of First Instance of Manila seeking to recover the amount of Pl3,867.24. The company in its answer denied liability for said amount contending that the resolution of the board of directors wherein it assumed responsibility for the act of the postmaster is ultra vires, and in any event its liability under said resolution is only that of a guarantor who answers only after the exhaustion of the properties of the principal, aside from the fact that the loss claimed by the plaintiff is not supported by the office record.

After trial, the court a quo found that, of the amount claimed by plaintiff totalling P13,867.24, only the sum of P9,515.25 was supported by the evidence, and so it rendered judgment for the plaintiff only for the amount last mentioned. The court rejected the contention that the resolution adopted by the company is ultra vires and that the obligation it has assumed is merely that of a guarantor.
Defendant took the present appeal.

ISSUE

Whether the resolution adopted by the board of directors is ultra vires. (NO)

RULING

The contention that the resolution adopted by the company dated August 31, 1949 is ultra vires in the sense that it has no authority to act on a matter which may render the company liable as a guarantor has no factual or legal basis. In the first place, it should be noted that the opening of a post office branch at the mining camp of appellant corporation was undertaken because of a request submitted by it to promote the convenience and benefit of its employees. The idea did not come from the government, and the Director of Posts was prevailed upon to agree to the request only after studying the necessity for its establishment and after imposing upon the company certain requirements intended to safeguard and protect the interest of the government. Thus, after the company had signified its willingness to comply with the requirement of the government that it furnish free quarters and all the essential equipment that may be necessary for the operation of the office including the assignment of an employee who will perform the duties of a postmaster, the Director of Posts agreed to the opening of the post office stating that the company assume direct responsibility for whatever pecuniary loss may be suffered by the Bureau of Posts by reason of any act of dishonesty, carelessness or negligence on the part of the employee of the company who is assigned to take charge of the post office, and accepting this condition, the company, thru its board of directors, adopted forthwith a resolution of the following tenor: "That the requirement of the Bureau of Posts that the company should accept full responsibility for all cash received by the Postmaster, be complied with, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Bureau of Posts." On the basis of the foregoing facts, it is evident that the company cannot now be heard to complain that it is not liable for the irregularity committed by its employee upon the technical plea that the resolution approved by its board of directors is ultra vires. The least that can be said is that it cannot now go back on its plighted word on the ground of estoppel.

The claim that the resolution adopted by the board of directors of appellant company is an ultra vires act cannot also be entertained it appearing that the same covers a subject which concerns the benefit, convenience and welfare of its employees and their families. While as a rule an ultra vires act is one committed outside the object for which a corporation is created as defined by the law of its organization and therefore beyond the powers conferred upon it by law (19 C.J.S., Section 965, p. 419), there are however certain corporate acts that may be performed outside of the scope of the powers expressly conferred if they are necessary to promote the interest or welfare of the corporation.

Thus, it has been held that "although not expressly authorized to do so a corporation may become a surety where the particular transaction is reasonably necessary or proper to the conduct of its business,"[1] and here it is undisputed that the establishment of the local post office is a reasonable and proper adjunct to the conduct of the business of appellant company. Indeed, such post office is a vital improvement in the living condition of its employees and laborers who came to settle in its mining camp which is far removed from the postal facilities or means of communication accorded to people living in a city or municipality.

Even assuming arguendo that the resolution in question constitutes an ultra vires act, the same however is not void for it was approved not in contravention of law, customs, public order or public policy. The term ultra vires should be distinguished from an illegal act for the former is merely voidable which may be enforced by performance, ratification, or estoppel, while the latter is void and cannot be validated.[2] It being merely voidable, an ultra vires act can be enforced or validated if there are equitable grounds for taking such action. Here it is fair that the resolution be upheld at least on the ground of estoppel. On this point, the authorities are overwhelming:

The weight of authority in the state courts is to the effect that a transaction which is merely ultra vires and not malum in se or malum prohibitum, is, if performed by one party, not void as between the parties to all intents and purposes, and that an action may be brought directly on the transaction and relief had according to its terms.

This rule is based on the consideration that as between private corporations, one party cannot receive the benefits which are embraced in total performance of a contract made with it by another party and then set up the invalidity of the transaction as a defense."

The defense of ultra vires rests on violation of trust or duty toward stockholders, and should not be entertained where its allowance will do greater wrong to innocent parties dealing with corporation.. The acceptance of benefits arising from the performance by the other party may give rise to an estoppel precluding repudiation of the transaction

The current of modern authorities favors the rule that where the *ultra vires transaction has been executed by the other party and the corporation has receive*d the benefit of it, the law interposes an estoppel, and will not permit the validity of the transaction or contract to be questioned, and this is especially true where there is nothing in the circumstances to put the other party to the transaction on notice that the corporation has exceeded its powers in entering into it and has in so doing overstepped the line of corporate privileges.

Neither can we entertain the claim of appellant that its liability is only that of a guarantor. On this point, we agree with the following comment of the court a quo: "A mere reading of the resolution of the Board of Directors dated August 31, 1949, upon which the plaintiff based its claim would show that the responsibility of the defendant company is not just that of a guarantor. Notice that the phraseology and the terms employed are so clear and sweeping and that the defendant assumed 'full responsibility for all cash received by the Postmaster.' Here the responsibility of the defendant is not just that of a guarantor. It is clearly that of a principal."

ISSUE

WON the dividends in this case, as understood by MCI, cannot be made available to meet its employees' economic demands. (NO)

RULING

According to the Supreme Court, it agreed with the National Labor Relations Commission that "[t]he dividends received by the company are corporate earnings arising from corporate investment." Indeed, as found by the Commission, the petitioner had entered such earnings in its financial statements as profits, which it would not have done if they were not in fact profits.

Moreover, it is incorrect to say that such profits — in the form of dividends — are beyond the reach of the petitioner's creditors since the petitioner had received them as compensation for its management services in favor of the companies it managed as a shareholder thereof. As such shareholder, the dividends paid to it were its own money, which may then be available for wage increments. It is not a case of a corporation distributing dividends in favor of its stockholders, in which case, such dividends would be the absolute property of the stockholders and hence, out of reach by creditors of the corporation. Here, the petitioner was acting as stockholder itself, and in that case, the right to a share in such dividends, by way of salary increases, may not be denied its employees.

Accordingly, the Court was convinced that the petitioner's capital reduction efforts were, to begin with, a subterfuge, a deception as it were, to camouflage the fact that it had been making profits, and consequently, to justify the mass layoff in its employee ranks, especially of union members. They were nothing but a premature and plain distribution of corporate assets to obviate a just sharing to labor of the vast profits obtained by its joint efforts with capital through the years. Surely, the Court can neither countenance nor condone this. It is an unfair labor practice.

- Visayan vs. National Labor Relations Commission, 196 SCRA 410 (1991)

LUZVIMINDA VISAYAN ET.AL., *Petitioner –versus-*NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS COMMISSION AND FUJIYAMA RESTAURANT AND HOTEL, INC., Respondents.
G.R. No. 69999, SECOND DIVISION, April 30, 1991, PARAS, J.

A corporation can act only through its board of directors. The law is settled that contracts between a corporation and third persons must be made by or under the authority of its board of directors and not by its stockholders. Hence, the action of the stockholders in such matters is only advisory and not in any wise binding on the corporation.

Thus, all acts done by Jureidini and Tsuchiya for and in behalf of respondent corporation, having been made without the requisite authority from the board of directors, were not binding upon the said corporation.

FACTS

Fujiyama Hotel & Restaurant, Inc. was formally organized in April, 1978 with Aquilino Rivera holding a majority interest in the corporation. Upon organization in 1978, respondent corporation immediately opened a Japanese establishment, known as Fujiyama Hotel & Restaurant, located at 1413 M. Adriatico St., Ermita, Manila.

In June, 1980, Lourdes Jureidini and Milagros Tsuchiya, allegedly pretending to be stockholders of the corporation, filed a case with the then Court of First Instance of Manila, Branch XXXVI against Rivera and Akasako to wrest control over the establishment. In June, 1981, the said court issued a writ of preliminary mandatory injunction transferring possession of all the assets of the company and the management thereof to Jureidini and Tsuchiya. The stockholders and directors of the corporation were thereby excluded from the management and operation of the restaurant. Upon assuming management, Jureidini and Tsuchiya replaced almost all of the existing employees with new ones.

Meanwhile, Rivera et., al elevated the case to the Supreme Court assailing the issuance of the writ of preliminary mandatory injunction by the CFI. The SC ruled in favor of the original owners and directed Jureidini and Tsuchiya to refrain from managing and/or interfering with the management of the business and assets of petitioner corporation.

When Rivera and Akasako regained control and management of Fujiyama Hotel & Restaurant, Inc., they refused to recognize as employees all persons that were hired by Jureidini and Tsuchiya, instead reinstated the employees previously hired by them.

This gave rise to the filing of the present case by the dismissed employees hired by Jureidini and Tsuchiya (some of whom had allegedly been hired by Rivera and Akasako even before Jureidini and Tsuchiya assumed management of the corporation) against Fujiyama Hotel & Restaurant, Inc. for illegal dismissal, which case was docketed as NLRC-NCR Case No. 6-4110-82. On motion of private respondent corporation, the Labor Arbiter included Jureidini and Tsuchiya as third-party respondents therein. Thereafter, the parties, except Jureidini and Tsuchiya, submitted their respective position papers and affidavits in support of their contentions. On the basis of said position papers and affidavits, the Labor Arbiter rendered a decision on September 21, 1982 ordering respondent company and/or Akasako, Jureidini and Tsuchiya to reinstate all the complainants to their former positions plus backwages and to pay jointly and severally the complainants their unpaid wages plus their share in the service charges. (NLRC Decision, pp. 4-5; Rollo, pp. 25-26).

The dismissed employees hired by Jureidini and Tsuchiya filed case of illegal dismissal against Fujiyama Hotel & Restaurant, Inc. before the Labor Arbiter which on motion of private respondent corporation, included Jureidini and Tsuchiya as third-party respondents.

The LA ordered respondent company and/or Akasako, Jureidini and Tsuchiya to reinstate all the complainants to their former positions plus backwages and to pay jointly and severally the complainants their unpaid wages plus their share in the service charges.

The NLRC denied the appeal of private respondent for having been filed out of time. Subsequently, a motion for reconsideration, the NLRC set aside the LA's decision absolving the corporation but remanded the case to the LA for proceedings to determine who are the complainants hired by said Jureidini and Tsuchiya.

ISSUE

Whether all acts done solely by Jureidini and Tsuchiya allegedly, for and in behalf of private respondent during the 1-year period they took over were binding upon the corporation thus making it liable for the dismissal of the employees. (NO)

RULING

Under the Corporation Code, the corporate powers of all corporations shall be exercised, all business conducted and all property of such corporations controlled and held by the board of directors or trustees to be elected from among the holders of stocks, or where there is no stock, from among the members of the corporation, who shall hold office for one (1) year and until their successors are elected and qualified. A corporation can act only through its board of directors. The law is settled that contracts between a corporation and third persons must be made by or under the authority of its board of directors and not by its stockholders. Hence, the action of the stockholders in such matters is only advisory and not in any wise binding on the corporation.

In the absence of an authority from the board of directors, no person, not even the officers of the corporation, can validly bind the corporation.

As alleged by Rivera, et al., Jureidini and Tsuchiya were not even officers of respondent corporation as to be considered its agents, which act prompted the Court to order said persons, under pain of contempt, to turn over the management and assets of respondent corporation to Rivera et al., as shown by the Court's resolution of May 26, 1982.

Thus, all acts done by Jureidini and Tsuchiya for and in behalf of respondent corporation, having been made without the requisite authority from the board of directors, were not binding upon the said corporation. One of these unauthorized acts was the unwarranted termination of the original employees of respondent corporation who were validly hired by its board of directors, vis-a-vis, the hiring of new employees, the petitioners in the case at bar, to replace the said original employees. Since said acts were not binding upon the corporation, no employer-employee existed between the Fujiyama Hotel & Restaurant, Inc. and the herein petitioners.

- Yao Ka Sin Trading vs. Court of Appeals, 209 SCRA 763 (1992)

YAO KA SIN TRADING, OWNED AND OPERATED BY YAO KA SIN*, Petitioner –versus-* HONORABLE COURT OF APPEALS AND PRIME WHITE CEMENT CORPORATION, REPRESENTED BY ITS PRESIDENT-CHAIRMAN, CONSTANCIO B. MAGLANA, Respondents.
G.R. No. 53820, THIRD DIVISION, June 15, 1992, DAVIDE, JR., J.

A corporation act only through its officers and agents, "all acts within the powers of said corporation may be performed by agents of its selection; and, except so far as limitations or restrictions may be imposed by special charter, by-law, or statutory provisions, the same general principles of law which govern the relation of agency for a natural person govern the officer or agent of a corporation, of whatever status or rank, in respect to his power to act for the corporation; and agents when once appointed, or members acting in their stead, are subject to the same rules, liabilities and incapacities as are agents of individuals and private persons."

While there can be no question that Mr. Maglana was an officer -- the President and Chairman -- of private respondent corporation at the time he signed Exhibit "A", the above provisions of said private respondent's By-Laws do not in any way confer upon the President the authority to enter into contracts for the corporation independently of the Board of Directors. That power is exclusively lodged in the latter.

FACTS

Constancio B. Maglana, President and Chairman of the Board of private respondent Prime White Cement Corporation (PWCC) sent a letter-offer (Exhibit "A") to Yao Ka Sin Trading (YKS) which describes itself as a business concern of single proprietorship, and is represented by its manager, Mr. Henry Yao regarding the delivery of bags of white cement. However, after the signing of the letter-offer, the Board of Directors of PWCC disapproved the same. YKS then filed with the then Court of First Instance of Leyte a complaint for Specific Performance with Damages against PWCC.

PWCC denied under oath the material averments in the complaint and alleged that: (a) YKS "has no legal personality to sue having no legal personality even by fiction to represent itself;" (b) Mr. Maglana, its President and Chairman, was lured into signing Exhibit "A"; (c) such signing was subject to the condition that Exhibit "A" be approved by the Board of Directors of PWCC, as corporate commitments are made through it; (d) the latter disapproved it, hence Exhibit "A" was never consummated and is not enforceable against PWCC; (e) it agreed to sell 10,000 bags of white cement, not under Exhibit "A", but under a separate contract prepared by the Board; (f) the rejection by the Board of Exhibit "A" was made known to YKS through various letters sent to it, copies of which were attached to the Answer as Annexes 1, 2 and 3;[18] (g) YKS knew, per Delivery Order[19] and Official Receipt[20] issued by PWCC, that only 10,000 bags were sold to it, without any terms or conditions, at P24.30 per bag FOB Asturias, Cebu; (h) YKS is solely to blame for the failure to take complete delivery of 10,000 bags for it did not send its boat or truck to PWCC's plant; and (i) YKS has, therefore, no cause of action

The trial court disregarded PWCC's theory. The trial court interpreted the provision of the By-Laws -- granting its Board of Directors the power to enter into an agreement or contract of any kind with any person through the President -- to mean that the latter may enter into such contract or agreement at any time and that the same is not subject to the ratification of the board of directors but "subject only to the declared objects and purpose of the corporation and existing laws

Upon, the Court of Appeals reversed and set aside the RTC decision.

ISSUE

Whether or not the letter-offer, as accepted by YKS, is a contract that binds the PWCC. (NO)

RULING

The respondent Court correctly ruled that Exhibit "A" is not binding upon the private respondent. Mr. Maglana, its President and Chairman, was not empowered to execute it.

Since a corporation, such as the private respondent, can act only through its officers and agents, "all acts within the powers of said corporation may be performed by agents of its selection; and, except so far as limitations or restrictions may be imposed by special charter, by-law, or statutory provisions, the same general principles of law which govern the relation of agency for a natural person govern the officer or agent of a corporation, of whatever status or rank, in respect to his power to act for the corporation; and agents when once appointed, or members acting in their stead, are subject to the same rules, liabilities and incapacities as are agents of individuals and private persons." Moreover, "x x x a corporate officer or agent may represent and bind the corporation in transactions with third persons to the extent that authority to do so has been conferred upon him, and this includes powers which have been intentionally conferred, and also such powers as, in the usual course of the particular business, are incidental to, or may be implied from, the powers intentionally, conferred, powers added by custom and usage, as usually pertaining to the particular officer or agent, and such apparent powers as the corporation has caused persons dealing with the officer or agent to believe that it has conferred."

While there can be no question that Mr. Maglana was an officer -- the President and Chairman -- of private respondent corporation at the time he signed Exhibit "A", the above provisions of said private respondent's By-Laws do not in any way confer upon the President the authority to enter into contracts for the corporation independently of the Board of Directors. That power is exclusively lodged in the latter. Nevertheless, to expedite or facilitate the execution of the contract, only the President -- and not all the members of the Board, or so much thereof as are required for the act -- shall sign it for the corporation. This is the import of the words through the president in Exhibit "8-A" and the clear intent of the power of the chairman "to execute and sign for and in behalf of the corporation all contracts and agreements which the corporation may enter into" in Exhibit "I-1". Both powers presuppose a prior act of the corporation exercised through the Board of Directors. No greater power can be implied from such express, but limited, delegated authority. Neither can it be logically claimed that any power greater than that expressly conferred is inherent in Mr. Maglana's position as president and chairman of the corporation.

Although there is authority "that if the president is given general control and supervision over the affairs of the corporation, it will be presumed that he has authority to make contracts and do acts within the course of its ordinary business," We find such inapplicable in this case. We note that the private corporation has a general manager who, under its By-Laws has, inter alia, the following powers: "(a) to have the active and direct management of the business and operation of the corporation, conducting the same according to the order, directives or resolutions of the Board of Directors or of the president." It goes without saying then that Mr. Maglana did not have a direct and active hand in the management of the business and operations of the corporation. Besides, no evidence was adduced to show that Mr. Maglana had, in the past, entered into contracts similar to that of Exhibit "A" either with the petitioner or with other parties.

- Metropolitan Bank & Trust Co. vs. Quilts & All, Inc., 222 SCRA 480 (1993);

METROPOLITAN BANK & TRUST COMPANY, Petitioner –versus- QUILTS & ALL, INC, Respondent.

G.R. No. 91436, THIRD DIVISION, May 24, 1993, MELO, J.

In the case of Bacolod-Murcia Milling Co., Inc. vs. First Farmers Milling Co., Inc. [103 SCRA 436 (1981)] the Court further stated:

. . . Granting, for the sake of argument, that, indeed, assistance in the 'illegal' act was rendered, the same, however, is not supported by well-pleaded averments of facts. Nowhere is it alleged that defendants-appellees had notice, information or knowledge of any flaw, much less any illegality, in their co-defendants' actuations, assuming that there was such a flaw or illegality. This absence is fatal and buoys up instead the PNB-NIDC's position of lack of cause of action... (at pp. 441-442.)
Although it is averred that the defendants' acts were done in bad faith, the Complaint does not contain any averment of facts showing that the acts were done in the manner alleged. Such a bare statement neither establishes any right or cause of action on the part of the plaintiff-appellant.
On the other hand, Metrobank cannot be faulted for relying on the Secretary's Certificate. It did so in good faith, unaware of any flaw and on the presumption that the ordinary course of business had been followed (Sec. 5-q, Rule 131, Revised Rules of Court) and that the Corporate Secretary had regularly performed her duties.

FACTS

On April 7, 1987, Relita P. de los Santos (de los Santos) then Corporate Secretary issued a Secretary's Certificate which certified that in a special meeting of the Board of Directors of Quilts and All, Inc. (Quilts) its President, Mr. Senen B. Dizon (Dizon) was authorized and empowered to mortgage in favor of Metrobank, a property belonging to Quilts.

On the basis of this Secretary's Certificate, Metrobank restructured Dizon's existing personal loan in the amount of P700,000.00, secured by his house and lot at Angeles City and the property owned by Quilts. Aside from the mortgage lien, the Secretary's Certificate was likewise annotated on TCT No. 74172 on April 10, 1977.

More than a year later, Metrobank received a letter from Atty. Cesar Villanueva, Quilt's counsel offering the amount of P200,000.00 for the cancellation of the mortgage on the property owned by Quilts because, allegedly, "Mr. & Mrs. Senen Dizon had left the Philippines, leaving several creditors." Metrobank refused the offer since the amount offered did not approximate the appraised value of the mortgage property.

Atty. Ranel L. Trinidad, Quilt's new counsel wrote Metrobank reiterating the mortgage cancellation. In addition, counsel claimed that the alleged April 7, 1987 special meeting could not have taken place for lack of the requisite number of directors present to constitute a quorum since the Chairman and 2 other members of the Board of Directors were abroad on that date.

Quilts then filed a complaint against Metrobank, Dizon and de los Santos for annulment and cancellation of mortgage. Metrobank moved to dismiss the complaint based on 1) lack of jurisdiction and 2) failure to state a cause of action. Judge Reynaldo B. Daway, granted the motion on February 9, 1989. However, , upon Quilt's motion, Judge Daway issued an Order, reconsidering and setting aside the dismissal order because the grounds relied upon by Metrobank "did not appear to be indubitable", and deferred the determination of the motion until the trial.

Upon appeal, The Court of Appeals upheld the jurisdiction of the lower Court only with respect to Metrobank. It dismissed the case against Dizon and de los Santos, since the issue of whether or not these two persons had committed ultra vires acts is an intra-corporate matter which falls within the original and exclusive jurisdiction of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) pursuant to Section 5 of Presidential Decree 902-A, as amended. Pending the outcome of the case that would be filed in the SEC, however, the Court of Appeals directed the suspension of the proceedings against Metrobank. The appellate court also stated that paragraph 10 of Quilt's complaint was sufficient basis for Quilt's case against Metrobank.

ISSUE

Whether Quilt's complaint sufficiently states a cause of action against Metrobank. (YES)

RULING

In the case of Alzua and Armalot vs. Johnson, (21 Phil. 308 [1912]), the Supreme Court stated:

. . . neither legal conclusions, nor conclusions or inferences of facts from facts not stated, nor incorrect inferences or conclusions from facts stated, being admitted by a demurrer to a complaint, conclusions of this nature in no wise aid the pleading. The ultimate facts upon which such conclusions rest must be alleged, though merely probative or evidential facts may be and should be omitted. (at p. 381.)
The Court agreed with Metrobank that the complaint does not contain allegations that Metrobank had prior knowledge of, or could have known with the exercise of due diligence, that the recitals in the Secretary's Certificate were false. The complaint does not even allege specific overt acts which show that Metrobank acted in conspiracy with its co-defendants to defraud Quilts.

In the case of Bacolod-Murcia Milling Co., Inc. vs. First Farmers Milling Co., Inc. [103 SCRA 436 (1981)] the Court further stated:

. . . Granting, for the sake of argument, that, indeed, assistance in the 'illegal' act was rendered, the same, however, is not supported by well-pleaded averments of facts. Nowhere is it alleged that defendants-appellees had notice, information or knowledge of any flaw, much less any illegality, in their co-defendants' actuations, assuming that there was such a flaw or illegality. This absence is fatal and buoys up instead the PNB-NIDC's position of lack of cause of action... (at pp. 441-442.)

Although it is averred that the defendants' acts were done in bad faith, the Complaint does not contain any averment of facts showing that the acts were done in the manner alleged. Such a bare statement neither establishes any right or cause of action on the part of the plaintiff-appellant. It is a mere conclusion of law not sustained by declarations of facts, much less admitted by defendants-appellees. It does not, therefore, aid in any wise the complaint in setting forth a cause of action … (pp. 441-442.) On the other hand, Metrobank cannot be faulted for relying on the Secretary's Certificate. It did so in good faith, unaware of any flaw and on the presumption that the ordinary course of business had been followed (Sec. 5-q, Rule 131, Revised Rules of Court) and that the Corporate Secretary had regularly performed her duties.

- See also Lee vs. Court of Appeals, 345 SCRA 579 (2000)

RAMON C. LEE AND ANTONIO DM. LACDAO*, Petitioners –versus-* THE HON. COURT OF APPEALS, SACOBA MANUFACTURING CORP., PABLO GONZALES, JR. AND THOMAS GONZALES, Respondents.

G.R. No. 91436, THIRD DIVISION, February 4, 1992, GUTTIEREZ, JR., J.

FACTS

A complaint for a sum of money was filed by the International Corporate Bank, Inc. against Sacoba Manufacturing Corporation (Sacoba), Pablo Gonzales and Thomas Gonzales (the Gonzalezes) who, in turn, filed a third-party complaint against Alfa Integrated Textile Mills (ALFA) and Ramon Lee (Lee) and Antonio Lacdao (Lacdao). Lee and Lacdao sent a letter to the RTC, claiming the summons for ALFA was erroneously served upon them considering that the management of ALFA had been transferred to the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP), through a Voting Trust Agreement (VTA). The RTC issued an order requiring the issuance of an alias summons upon ALFA through the DBP. In a manifestation, DBP claimed that it was not authorized to receive summons on behalf of ALFA since the DBP had not taken over the company which has a separate and distinct corporate personality and existence. Sacoba and the Gonzalezes filed a Manifestation and Motion for the Declaration of Proper Service of Summons on ALFA through Lee and Lacdao, the president and vice-president, which the trial court granted.

In a Motion for Reconsideration, Lee and Lacdao maintain that with the execution of the VTA between them and the other stockholders of ALFA, as one party, and the DBP, as the other party, the former assigned and transferred all their shares in ALFA to DBP, as trustee. They argue that by virtue to of the VTA, Lee and Lacdao, can no longer be considered directors of ALFA. They ceased to be president and vice-president of ALFA.

Sacoba and the Gonzalezes insist that the VTA between ALFA and the DBP had all the more safeguarded Lee and Lacdao's continuance as officers and directors of ALFA inasmuch as the general object of voting trust is to insure permanency of the tenure of the directors of a corporation.

Initially, The RTC upheld the validity of the service of summons on ALFA through the Lee and Lacdao. However, upon filing of a second motion for reconsideration by Lee and Lacdao, the RTC reversed itself and declared that service upon Lee and Lacdao, who were no longer corporate officers of ALFA, cannot be considered as proper service of summons on ALFA. The CA reversed the RTC Order. Hence, the present petition.

ISSUES

1. Whether the change in the stockholder's status (only holding an equitable title) deprives such stockholder of the right to qualify as a director. (YES)
2. Whether there was proper service of summons on ALFA through Lee and Lacdao. (NO)

RULING

1. The execution of a VTA may create a dichotomy between the equitable or beneficial ownership of the corporate shares of a stockholders, on the one hand, and the legal title thereto on the other hand. Under the 1906 Corporation Code, the eligibility of a director cannot be adversely affected by the simple act of such director being a party to a VTA inasmuch as he remains owner (although beneficial or equitable only) of the shares subject of the VTA pursuant to which a transfer of the stockholder's shares in favor of the trustee is required. No disqualification arises by virtue of the phrase "in his own right" provided under the 1906 Corporation Code. With the omission of the phrase "in his own right" in the 1980 Corporation Code, the election of trustees and other persons who are not beneficial owners of the shares registered in their names on the books of the corporation becomes formally legalized. Hence, this is a clear indication that, under the 1980 Corporation Code, in order to be eligible as a director, what is material is the legal title to, not beneficial ownership of, the stock as appearing on the books of the corporation.

Thus, Lee and Lacdao, by virtue of VTA disposed of all their shares through assignment and delivery in favor of the DBP, as trustee. Consequently, Lee and Lacdao ceased to own at least one share standing in their names on the books of ALFA as required under Section 23 of the 1980 Corporation Code. They also ceased to have anything to do with the management of the enterprise. The petitioners ceased to be directors. Hence, the transfer of the Lee and Lacdao's shares to the DBP created vacancies in their respective positions as directors of ALFA. Considering that the VTA between ALFA and the DBP transferred legal ownership of the stock covered by the agreement to the DBP as trustee, the latter became the stockholder of record with respect to the said shares of stocks. In the absence of a showing that the DBP had caused to be transferred in their names one share of stock for the purpose of qualifying as directors of ALFA, Lee and Lacdao can no longer be deemed to have retained their status as officers of ALFA which was the case before the execution of the subject VTA. There appears to be no dispute from the records that DBP has taken over full control and management of the firm.

2. Under the Rules of Court, if the defendant is a corporation organized under the laws of the Philippines or a partnership duly registered, service may be made on the president, manager, secretary, cashier, agent or any of its directors. Lee and Lacdao do not fall under any of the enumerated officers. The service of summons upon ALFA, through Lee and Lacdao is not valid.

- Atrium Management Corporation vs. Court of Appeals, et al., G.R. No. 109491, February 28, 2001

ATRIUM MANAGEMENT CORPORATION*, Petitioner –versus-* COURT OF APPEALS, E.T. HENRY AND CO., LOURDES VICTORIA M. DE LEON, RAFAEL DE LEON, JR., AND HI-CEMENT CORPORATION, Respondents.

G.R. No. 109491, FIRST DIVISION, February 28, 2001, PARDO, J."

An ultra vires act is one committed outside the object for which a corporation is created as defined by the law of its organization and therefore beyond the power conferred upon it by law"[16] The term "ultra vires" is "distinguished from an illegal act for the former is merely voidable which may be enforced by performance, ratification, or estoppel, while the latter is void and cannot be validated."
The Court finds that there was no sufficient evidence to show that such is the case. Lourdes M. de Leon is the treasurer of the corporation and is authorized to sign checks for the corporation. At the time of the issuance of the checks, there were sufficient funds in the bank to cover payment of the amount of P2 million pesos.

FACTS

On January 3, 1983, Atrium Management Corporation filed with the Regional Trial Court, Manila an action for collection of the proceeds of four postdated checks in the total amount of P2 million. Hi-Cement Corporation through its corporate signatories, petitioner Lourdes M. de Leon, treasurer, and the late Antonio de las Alas, Chairman, issued checks in favor of E.T. Henry and Co. Inc., as payee. E.T. Henry and Co., Inc., in turn, endorsed the four checks to petitioner Atrium Management Corporation for valuable consideration. Upon presentment for payment, the drawee bank dishonored all four checks for the common reason "payment stopped". Atrium, thus, instituted this action after its demand for payment of the value of the checks was denied.

After due proceedings, on July 20, 1989, the trial court rendered a decision ordering Lourdes M. de Leon, her husband Rafael de Leon, E.T. Henry and Co., Inc. and Hi-Cement Corporation to pay petitioner Atrium, jointly and severally, the amount of P2 million corresponding to the value of the four checks, plus interest and attorney's fees.

On appeal, the Court of Appeals promulgated its decision modifying the decision of the trial court, absolving Hi-Cement Corporation from liability and dismissing the complaint as against it. The appellate court ruled that: (1) Lourdes M. de Leon was not authorized to issue the subject checks in favor of E.T. Henry, Inc.; (2) The issuance of the subject checks by Lourdes M. de Leon and the late Antonio de las Alas constituted ultra vires acts; and (3) The subject checks were not issued for valuable consideration.

ISSUE

Whether the issuance of the questioned checks was an ultra vires act. (NO)

RULING

The record revealed that Hi-Cement Corporation issued the four (4) checks to extend financial assistance to E.T. Henry, not as payment of the balance of the P30 million pesos cost of hydro oil delivered by E.T. Henry to Hi-Cement. Why else would petitioner de Leon ask for counterpart checks from E.T. Henry if the checks were in payment for hydro oil delivered by E.T. Henry to Hi-Cement?

Hi-Cement, however, maintains that the checks were not issued for consideration and that Lourdes and E.T. Henry engaged in a "kiting operation" to raise funds for E.T. Henry, who admittedly was in need of financial assistance. The Court finds that there was no sufficient evidence to show that such is the case. Lourdes M. de Leon is the treasurer of the corporation and is authorized to sign checks for the corporation. At the time of the issuance of the checks, there were sufficient funds in the bank to cover payment of the amount of P2 million pesos.

It is, however, our view that there is basis to rule that the act of issuing the checks was well within the ambit of a valid corporate act, for it was for securing a loan to finance the activities of the corporation, hence, not an ultra vires act.

"An ultra vires act is one committed outside the object for which a corporation is created as defined by the law of its organization and therefore beyond the power conferred upon it by law"[16] The term "ultra vires" is "distinguished from an illegal act for the former is merely voidable which may be enforced by performance, ratification, or estoppel, while the latter is void and cannot be validated."

The next question to determine is whether Lourdes M. de Leon and Antonio de las Alas were personally liable for the checks issued as corporate officers and authorized signatories of the check. "Personal liability of a corporate director, trustee or officer along (although not necessarily) with the corporation may so validly attach, as a rule, only when:

"1.He assents (a) to a patently unlawful act of the corporation, or (b) for bad faith or gross negligence in directing its affairs, or (c) for conflict of interest, resulting in damages to the corporation, its stockholders or other persons;

"2.He consents to the issuance of watered down stocks or who, having knowledge thereof, does not forthwith file with the corporate secretary his written objection thereto;

"3.He agrees to hold himself personally and solidarily liable with the corporation; or

"4.He is made, by a specific provision of law, to personally answer for his corporate action."

In the case at bar, Lourdes M. de Leon and Antonio de las Alas as treasurer and Chairman of Hi-Cement were authorized to issue the checks. However, Ms. de Leon was negligent when she signed the confirmation letter requested by Mr. Yap of Atrium and Mr. Henry of E.T. Henry for the rediscounting of the crossed checks issued in favor of E.T. Henry. She was aware that the checks were strictly endorsed for deposit only to the payee's account and not to be further negotiated. What is more, the confirmation letter contained a clause that was not true, that is, "that the checks issued to E.T. Henry were in payment of Hydro oil bought by Hi-Cement from E.T. Henry". Her negligence resulted in damage to the corporation. Hence, Ms. de Leon may be held personally liable therefor.

- Atrium Management Corporation vs. Court of Appeals, et al., G.R. No. 109491, February 28, 2001

MARIA CLARA PIROVANA ET AL., Plaintiffs-Appellees –versus- THE DE LA RAMA STEAMSHIP CO., Defendant-Appellant.

G.R. No. L-5377, EN BANC, December 29, 1954, BAUTISTA ANGELO, J."

Strictly speaking, an act of a corporation outside of its character powers is just as such ultra vires where all the stockholders consent thereto as in a case where none of the stockholders expressly or cannot be ratified so as to make it valid, even though all the stockholders consent thereto; but inasmuch as the stockholders in reality constitute the corporation, it should , it would seem, be estopped to allege ultra vires, and it is generally so held where there are no creditors, or the creditors are not injured thereby, and where the rights of the state or the public are not involved, unless the act is not only ultra vires but in addition illegal and void. of course, such consent of all the stockholders cannot adversely affect creditors of the corporation nor preclude a proper attack by the state because of such ultra vires act. (7 Fletcher Corp., Sec. 3432, p. 585)

Since it is not contended that the donation under consideration is illegal, or contrary to any of the express provision of the articles of incorporation, nor prejudicial to the creditors of the defendant corporation, we cannot but logically conclude, on the strength of the authorities we have quoted above, that said donation, even if ultra vires in the supposition we have adverted to, is not void, and if voidable its infirmity has been cured by ratification and subsequent acts of the defendant corporation. The defendant corporation, therefore, is now prevented or estopped from contesting the validity of the donation.

FACTS

Plaintiffs herein are the minor children of the late Enrico Pirovano represented by their mother and judicial guardian Estefania R. Pirovano. They seek to enforce certain resolutions adopted by the Board of Directors and stockholders of the defendant company giving to said minor children of the proceeds of the insurance policies taken on the life of their deceased father Enrico Pirovano with the company as beneficiary. Defendant's main defense is: that said resolutions and the contract executed pursuant thereto are ultra vires, and, if valid, the obligation to pay the amount given is not yet due and demandable.

Defendant is a corporation duly organized in accordance with law. Enrico Pirovano became the president of the defendant company and under his management the company grew and progressed until it became a multi-million corporation by the time Pirovano was executed by the Japanese during the occupation.

In the meantime, Don Esteban de la Rama, who practically owned and controlled the stock of the defendant corporation, distributed his shareholding among his five daughters, namely, Leonor, Estefania, Lourdes, Lolita and Conchita and his wife Natividad Aguilar. The other stockholders , namely, Eliseo Hervas, Tomas Concepcion, Antonio Juanco, and Jose Aguilar, who were merely employees of Don Esteban, were given 40 shares each, while Pio Pedrosa, Marcial P. Lichauco and Rafael Roces, one share each, because they merely represented the National Development Company. NDC was given representation in the Board Of Directors of the corporation because at that time the latter had an outstanding bonded indebted incurred in the amount of P7,500.00 with NDC. Upon arrangement made with the National Development Company, the outstanding bonded indebtedness was converted into non-voting preferred shares of stock of the De la Rama company under the express condition that they would bear affixed cumulative dividend of 6 per cent per annum and would be redeemable within 15 years.

The first resolution granting to the Pirovano children the proceeds of the insurance policies taken on his life by the defendant company was adopted by the Board of Directors which was submitted to the stockholders of the De la Rama company at a meeting properly convened, and on that same date, July 10, 1946, the same was duly approved.

It appears that, although Don Esteban and the Members of his family were agreeable to giving to the Pirovano children the amount of P400,000 out of the proceeds of the insurance policies taken on the life of Enrico Pirovano, they did not realize that when they provided in the above referred two resolutions that said Amount should be paid in the form of shares of stock, they would be actually giving to the Pirovano children more than what they intended to give.

However, the form of the donation to the Pirovano children was changed from a donation of 4,000 shares of stock as originally planned into a renunciation in favor of the children of all the company's "right, title, and interest as beneficiary in and to the proceeds of the abovementioned life insurance policies.

The trial court resolved all the issues raised by the parties in favor of the plaintiffs and, after considering the evidence, both oral and documentary, arrived at the conclusion that said contract or donation is not ultra vires, but an act executed within the powers of the defendant corporation in accordance with its articles of incorporation and by laws, sanctioned and approved by its Board of Directors and stockholders; and subsequently ratified by other subsequent acts of the defendant company.

ISSUE

Whether the contract or donation is not ultra vires. (YES)

RULING

After a careful perusal of the provisions on the purposes of the formed corporation, the Supreme Court found that the corporation was given broad and almost unlimited powers to carry out the purposes for which it was organized among them, (1) "To invest and deal with the moneys of the company not immediately required, in such manner as from time to time may be determined" and, (2) "to aid in any other manner any person, association, or corporation of which any obligation or in which any interest is held by this corporation or in the affairs or prosperity of which this corporation has a lawful interest." The world deal is broad enough to include any manner of disposition, and refers to moneys not immediately required by the corporation, and such disposition may be made in such manner as from time to time may be determined by the corporations. The donation in question undoubtedly comes within the scope of this broad power for it is a fact appearing in the evidence that the insurance proceeds were not immediately required when they were given away.

In fact, the evidence shows that the corporation declared a 100 per cent cash dividend, or P2,000,000, and later on another 30 per cent cash dividend. This is clear proof of the solvency of the corporation. It may be that, as insinuated, Don Esteban wanted to make use of the insurance money to rehabilitate the central owned by a sister corporation, known as Hijos de I. de la Rama and Co., Inc., situated in Bago, Negros Occidental, but this, far from reflecting against the solvency of the De la Rama company, only shows that the funds were not needed by the corporation.

The Court did not see much distinction between the acts of generosity or benevolence extended to some employees of the corporation, and even to some in whom the corporation was merely interested because of certain moral or political considerations, and the donation which the corporation has seen fit to give to the children of the late Enrico Pirovano from the point of view of the power of the corporation as expressed in its articles of incorporation. And if the former had been sanctioned and had been considered valid and intra vires, we see no plausible reasons why the latter should now be deemed ultra vires. It may perhaps be argued that the donation given to the children of the late Enrico Pirovano is so large and disproportionate that it can hardly be considered a pension of gratuity that can be placed on a par with the instances above mentioned, but this argument overlooks one consideration: the gratuity here given was not merely motivated by pure liberality or act of generosity, but by a deep sense of recognition of the valuable services rendered by the late Enrico Pirovano which had immensely contributed to the growth of the corporation to the extent that from its humble capitalization it blossomed into a multi-million corporation that it is today. In other words of the very resolutions granting the donation or gratuity, said donation was given not only because the company was so indebted to him that it saw fit and proper to make provisions for his children, but it did so out of a sense of gratitude. Another factor that we should bear in mind is that Enrico Pirovano was not only a high official of the company but was at the same time a member of the De la Rama family, and the recipient of the donation are the grandchildren of Don Esteban de la Rama. This we, may say, is the motivating root cause behind the grant of this bounty.

But although business corporations cannot contribute to charity or benevolence, yet they are not required always to insist on the full extent of their legal rights. They are not forbidden for the recognizing moral obligation of which strict law takes no cognizance. They are not prohibited from establishing a reputation for board, liberal, equitable dealing which may stand them in good stead in competition with less fair rivals. Thus, an incorporated fire insurance company which policies except losses from explosions may nevertheless pay a loss from that cause when other companies are accustomed to do so, such liberal dealing being deemed conducive to the prosperity of the corporation." (Modern Law of Corporations, Machen, Vol. 1, p. 81).

Strictly speaking, an ultra vires act is one outside the scope of the power conferred by the legislature, and although the term has been used indiscriminately, it is properly distinguishable from acts which are illegal, in excess or abuse of power, or executed in an unauthorized manner, or acts within corporate powers but outside the authority of particular officers or agents (19 C. J. S. 419).

Corporate transactions which are illegal because prohibited by statute or against public policy are ordinarily void and unenforceable regardless of the part performance, ratification, or estoppel; but general prohibitions against exceeding corporate powers and prohibitions intended to protect a particular class or specifying the consequences of violation may not preclude enforcement of the transaction and an action may be had for the part unaffected by the illegality or for equitable restitution. (19 C.J.S. 421.)

Generally, a transaction within corporate powers but executed in an irregular or unauthorized manner is voidable only, and may become enforceable by reason of ratification or express or implied assent by the stockholders or by reason of estoppel of the corporation or the other party to the transaction to raise the objection, particularly where the benefits are retained.

As appears in paragraphs 960-964 supra, the general rule is that a corporation must act in the manner and with the formalities, if any, prescribed by its character or by the general law. However, a corporation transaction or contract which is within the corporation powers, which is neither wrong in itself nor against public policy, but which is defective from a failure to observe in its execution a requirement of law enacted for the benefit or protection of a certain class, is voidable and is valid until avoided, not void until validated; the parties for whose benefit the requirement was enacted may ratify it or be estoppel to assert its invalidity, and third persons acting in good faith are not usually affected by an irregularity on the part of the corporation in the exercise of its granted powers. (19 C.J.S., 423-24.)

It is true that there are authorities which told that ultra vires acts, or those performed beyond the powers conferred upon the corporation either by law or by its articles of incorporation, are not only voidable, but wholly void and of no legal effect, and that such acts cannot be validated by ratification or be the basis of any action in court; but such ruling does not constitute the weight of authority, the reason being that they fail to make the important distinction we have above adverted to. Because rule has been rejected by most of the state courts and even by the modern treaties or corporations (7 Flethcer, Cyc. Corps., 563-564). And now it can be said that the majority of the cases hold that acts which are merely ultra vires, or acts which are not illegal, may be ratified by the stockholders of a corporation (Brooklyn Heights R. Co. vs. Brooklyn City R. Co., 135 N.Y. Supp. 1001).

Strictly speaking, an act of a corporation outside of its character powers is just as such ultra vires where all the stockholders consent thereto as in a case where none of the stockholders expressly or cannot be ratified so as to make it valid, even though all the stockholders consent thereto; but inasmuch as the stockholders in reality constitute the corporation, it should , it would seem, be estopped to allege ultra vires, and it is generally so held where there are no creditors, or the creditors are not injured thereby, and where the rights of the state or the public are not involved, unless the act is not only ultra vires but in addition illegal and void. of course, such consent of all the stockholders cannot adversely affect creditors of the corporation nor preclude a proper attack by the state because of such ultra vires act. (7 Fletcher Corp., Sec. 3432, p. 585)

Since it is not contended that the donation under consideration is illegal, or contrary to any of the express provision of the articles of incorporation, nor prejudicial to the creditors of the defendant corporation, we cannot but logically conclude, on the strength of the authorities we have quoted above, that said donation, even if ultra vires in the supposition we have adverted to, is not void, and if voidable its infirmity has been cured by ratification and subsequent acts of the defendant corporation. The defendant corporation, therefore, is now prevented or estopped from contesting the validity of the donation. This is specially so in this case when the very directors who conceived the idea of granting said donation are practically the stockholders themselves, with few nominal exception. This applies to the new stockholder Jose Cojuangco who acquired his interest after the donation has been made because of the rule that a "purchaser of shares of stock cannot avoid ultra vires acts of the corporation authorized by its vendor, except those done after the purchase" (7 Fletcher, Cyc. Corps. section 3456, p. 603; Pascual vs. Del Saz Orozco, 19 Phil., 82.) Indeed, how can the stockholders now pretend to revoke the donation which has been partly consummated? How can the corporation now set at naught the transfer made to Mrs. Pirovano of the property in New York, U.S.A., the price of which was paid by her but of the proceeds of the insurance policies given as donation. To allow the corporation to undo what it has done would only be most unfair but would contravene the well-settled doctrine that the defense of ultra vires cannot be set up or availed of in completed transactions (7 Fletcher, Cyc. Corps. Section 3497, p. 652; 19 C.J.S., 431).

- UNIVERSITY OF MINDANAO, INC., Petitioner, v. BANGKO SENTRAL PILIPINAS, ET AL.,Respondents. (G.R. No. 194964-65, January 11, 2016, LEONEN,J.)

UNIVERSITY OF MINDANAO, INC., Petitioner–versus- BANGKO SENTRAL NG PILIPINAS, ET AL., Respondents.

G.R. No. 194964-65, SECOND DIVISION, January 11, 2016, LEONEN, J.

Corporate acts that are outside those express definitions under the law or articles of incorporation or those "committed outside the object for which a corporation is created" are ultra vires. The only exception to this rule is when acts are necessary and incidental to carry out a corporation's purposes, and to the exercise of powers conferred by the Corporation Code and under a corporation's articles of incorporation.

Securing FISLAI's loans by mortgaging petitioner's properties does not appear to have even the remotest connection to the operations of petitioner as an educational institution. Securing loans is not an adjunct of the educational institution's conduct of business. It does not appear that securing third-party loans was necessary to maintain petitioner's business of providing instruction to individuals.

FACTS

University of Mindanao is an educational institution. Its Board of Trustees was chaired by Guillermo B. Torres. His wife, Dolores P. Torres, sat as University of Mindanao's Assistant Treasurer.

Before 1982, Guillermo B. Torres and Dolores P. Torres incorporated and operated two (2) thrift banks: (1) First Iligan Savings & Loan Association, Inc. (FISLAI); and (2) Davao Savings and Loan Association, Inc. (DSLAI). Guillermo B. Torres chaired both thrift banks. He acted as FISLAI's President, while his wife, Dolores P. Torres, acted as DSLAI's President and FISLAI's Treasurer.

Upon Guillermo B. Torres' request, Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas issued a P1.9 million standby emergency credit to FISLAI. The release of standby emergency credit was evidenced by three (3) promissory notes in the amounts of P500,000.00, P600,000.00, and P800,000.00, respectively. All these promissory notes were signed by Guillermo B. Torres, and were co-signed by either his wife, Dolores P. Torres, or FISLAI's Special Assistant to the President, Edmundo G. Ramos, Jr.

On May 25, 1982, University of Mindanao's Vice President for Finance, Saturnino Petalcorin, executed a deed of real estate mortgage over University of Mindanao's property in Cagayan de Oro City in favor of Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas. It was allegedly executed on University of Mindanao's behalf.

As proof of his authority to execute a real estate mortgage for University of Mindanao, Saturnino Petalcorin showed a Secretary's Certificate signed by University of Mindanao's Corporate Secretary, Aurora de Leon.

The Secretary's Certificate was supported by an excerpt from the minutes of the January 19, 1982 alleged meeting of University of Mindanao's Board of Trustees.

On October 21, 1982, Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas granted FISLAI an additional loan of P620,700.00. Guillermo B. Torres and Edmundo Ramos executed a promissory note to cover that amount.

On November 5, 1982, Saturnino Petalcorin executed another deed of real estate mortgage, allegedly on behalf of University of Mindanao, over its two properties in Iligan City. This mortgage served as additional security for FISLAI's loans.

On January 17, 1983, Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas' mortgage lien over the Iligan City properties and Aurora de Leon's certification were annotated and mortgage lien over the Iligan City properties was also annotated on the tax declarations covering the Iligan City properties.

On January 11, 1985, FISLAI, DSLAI, and Land Bank of the Philippines entered into a Memorandum of Agreement intended to rehabilitate the thrift banks, which had been suffering from their depositors' heavy withdrawals. Among the terms of the agreement was the merger of FISLAI and DSLAI, with DSLAI as the surviving corporation. DSLAI later became known as Mindanao Savings and Loan Association, Inc. (MSLAI).

Guillermo B. Torres died on March 2, 1989.
MSLAI failed to recover from its losses and was liquidated on May 24, 1991.

On June 18, 1999, Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas sent a letter to University of Mindanao, informing it that the bank would foreclose its properties if MSLAI's total outstanding obligation of P12,534,907.73 remained unpaid.

University of Mindanao, through its Vice President for Accounting, Gloria E. Detoya, denied that University of Mindanao's properties were mortgaged. It also denied having received any loan proceeds from Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas.

On July 16, 1999, University of Mindanao filed two Complaints for nullification and cancellation of mortgage. One Complaint was filed before the Regional Trial Court of Cagayan de Oro City, and the other Complaint was filed before the Regional Trial Court of Iligan City.

University of Mindanao alleged in its Complaints that it did not obtain any loan from Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas. It also did not receive any loan proceeds from the bank.

University of Mindanao also alleged that Aurora de Leon's certification was anomalous. It never authorized Saturnino Petalcorin to execute real estate mortgage contracts involving its properties to secure FISLAI's debts. It never ratified the execution of the mortgage contracts. Moreover, as an educational institution, it cannot mortgage its properties to secure another person's debts.
On November 23, 2001, the Regional Trial Court of Cagayan de Oro City rendered a Decision in favor of University of Mindanao,

The Regional Trial Court of Cagayan de Oro City found that there was no board resolution giving Saturnino Petalcorin authority to execute mortgage contracts on behalf of University of Mindanao. The Cagayan de Oro City trial court gave weight to Aurora de Leon's testimony that University of Mindanao's Board of Trustees did not issue a board resolution that would support the Secretary's Certificate she issued. She testified that she signed the Secretary's Certificate only upon Guillermo B. Torres' orders.

Saturnino Petalcorin testified that he had no authority to execute a mortgage contract on University of Mindanao's behalf. He merely executed the contract because of Guillermo B. Torres' request. Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas' witness Daciano Pagui, Jr. also admitted that there was no board resolution giving Saturnino Petalcorin authority to execute mortgage contracts on behalf of University of Mindanao.

The Regional Trial Court of Cagayan de Oro City ruled that Saturnino Petalcorin was not authorized to execute mortgage contracts for University of Mindanao. Hence, the mortgage of University of Mindanao's Cagayan de Oro City property was unenforceable. Saturnino Petalcorin's unauthorized acts should be annulled.

Similarly, the Regional Trial Court of Iligan City rendered a Decision on December 7, 2001 in favor of University of Mindanao.

The Iligan City trial court found that the Secretary's Certificate issued by Aurora de Leon was fictitious37 and irregular for being unnumbered.38 It also did not specify the identity, description, or location of the mortgaged properties.

The Iligan City trial court gave credence to Aurora de Leon's testimony that the University of Mindanao's Board of Trustees did not take up the documents in its meetings. Saturnino Petalcorin corroborated her testimony.

The Iligan City trial court ruled that the lack of a board resolution authorizing Saturnino Petalcorin to execute documents of mortgage on behalf of University of Mindanao made the real estate mortgage contract unenforceable under Article 140341 of the Civil Code.42 The mortgage contract and the subsequent acts of foreclosure and auction sale were void because the mortgage contract was executed without University of Mindanao's authority.

The Iligan City trial court also ruled that the annotations on the titles of University of Mindanao's properties do not operate as notice to the University because annotations only bind third parties and not owners. Further, Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas' right to foreclose the University of Mindanao's properties had already prescribed.

Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas separately appealed the Decisions of both the Cagayan de Oro City and the Iligan City trial courts.

After consolidating both cases, the Court of Appeals issued a Decision on December 17, 2009 in favor of Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas.

ISSUE

Whether petitioner is bound by the real estate mortgage secured by Saturnino. (NO)

RULING

Petitioner argues that the execution of the mortgage contract was ultra vires. As an educational institution, it may not secure the loans of third persons. Securing loans of third persons is not among the purposes for which petitioner was established.

Petitioner is correct.

Corporations are artificial entities granted legal personalities upon their creation by their incorporators in accordance with law. Unlike natural persons, they have no inherent powers. Third persons dealing with corporations cannot assume that corporations have powers. It is up to those persons dealing with corporations to determine their competence as expressly defined by the law and their articles of incorporation.

A corporation may exercise its powers only within those definitions. Corporate acts that are outside those express definitions under the law or articles of incorporation or those "committed outside the object for which a corporation is created" are ultra vires.

The only exception to this rule is when acts are necessary and incidental to carry out a corporation's purposes, and to the exercise of powers conferred by the Corporation Code and under a corporation's articles of incorporation. This exception is specifically included in the general powers of a corporation under Section 36 of the Corporation Code

As an educational institution, petitioner serves:

a. To establish, conduct and operate a college or colleges, and/or university;
b. To acquire properties, real and/or personal, in connection with the establishment and operation of such college or colleges;
c. To do and perform the various and sundry acts and things permitted by the laws of the Philippines unto corporations like classes and kinds;
d. To engage in agricultural, industrial, and/or commercial pursuits in line with educational program of the corporation and to acquire all properties, real and personal[,] necessary for the purposes[;]
e. To establish, operate, and/or acquire broadcasting and television stations also in line with the educational program of the corporation and for such other purposes as the Board of Trustees may determine from time to time;
f. To undertake housing projects of faculty members and employees, and to acquire real estates for this purpose;
g. To establish, conduct and operate and/or invest in educational foundations; [As amended on December 15, 1965][;]
h. To establish, conduct and operate housing and dental schools, medical facilities and other related undertakings;
i. To invest in other corporations. [As amended on December 9, 1998]. [Amended Articles of Incorporation of the University of Mindanao, Inc. – the Petitioner].
j. Petitioner does not have the power to mortgage its properties in order to secure loans of other persons. As an educational institution, it is limited to developing human capital through formal instruction. It is not a corporation engaged in the business of securing loans of others.
k. Hiring professors, instructors, and personnel; acquiring equipment and real estate; establishing housing facilities for personnel and students; hiring a concessionaire; and other activities that can be directly connected to the operations and conduct of the education business may constitute the necessary and incidental acts of an educational institution.

l. Securing FISLAI's loans by mortgaging petitioner's properties does not appear to have even the remotest connection to the operations of petitioner as an educational institution. Securing loans is not an adjunct of the educational institution's conduct of business. It does not appear that securing third-party loans was necessary to maintain petitioner's business of providing instruction to individuals.

This court ruled that a contract executed by a corporation shall be presumed valid if on its face its execution was not beyond the powers of the corporation to do. Thus:
When a contract is not on its face necessarily beyond the scope of the power of the corporation by which it was made, it will, in the absence of proof to the contrary, be presumed to be valid. Corporations are presumed to contract within their powers. The doctrine of ultra vires, when invoked for or against a corporation, should not be allowed to prevail where it would defeat the ends of justice or work a legal wrong.
However, this should not be interpreted to mean that such presumption applies to all cases, even when the act in question is on its face beyond the corporation's power to do or when the evidence contradicts the presumption.

Presumptions are "inference[s] as to the existence of a fact not actually known, arising from its usual connection with another which is known, or a conjecture based on past experience as to what course human affairs ordinarily take." Presumptions embody values and revealed behavioral expectations under a given set of circumstances.

Presumptions may be conclusive or disputable.

Conclusive presumptions are presumptions that may not be overturned by evidence, however strong the evidence is. They are made conclusive not because there is an established uniformity in behavior whenever identified circumstances arise. They are conclusive because they are declared as such under the law or the rules. Rule 131, Section 2 of the Rules of Court identifies two (2) conclusive presumptions:

SEC. 2. Conclusive presumptions.— The following are instances of conclusive presumptions:
(a) Whenever a party has, by his own declaration, act, or omission, intentionally and deliberately led another to believe a particular thing true, and to act upon such belief, he cannot, in any litigation arising out of such declaration, act or omission, be permitted to falsify it;

(b) The tenant is not permitted to deny the title of his landlord at the time of the commencement of the relation of landlord and tenant between them.

On the other hand, disputable presumptions are presumptions that may be overcome by contrary evidence. They are disputable in recognition of the variability of human behavior. Presumptions are not always true. They may be wrong under certain circumstances, and courts are expected to apply them, keeping in mind the nuances of every experience that may render the expectations wrong.
Thus, the application of disputable presumptions on a given circumstance must be based on the existence of certain facts on which they are meant to operate. "[P]resumptions are not allegations, nor do they supply their absence[.]" Presumptions are conclusions. They do not apply when there are no facts or allegations to support them.

In this case, the presumption that the execution of mortgage contracts was within petitioner's corporate powers does not apply. Securing third-party loans is not connected to petitioner's purposes as an educational institution.

- OFFICE of the OMBUDSMAN v. ANTONIO Z. DE GUZMAN, G.R. No. 197886, October 4, 2017, Third Division, LEONEN, J.

OFFICE OF THE OMBUDSMAN, Petitioner–versus- ANTONIO Z. DE GUZMAN, Respondent.
G.R. No. 197886, THIRD DIVISION, October 4, 2017, LEONEN, J.

A contract entered into by corporate officers who exceed their authority generally does not bind the corporation except when the contract is ratified by the Board of Director .
There was no evidence presented that the Board of Directors repudiated the contract dated May 7, 2004 with Aboitiz One. The contract remained effective until January 31, 2006. Considering that the Board of Directors remained silent and the Postmaster Generals continued to approve the payments to Aboitiz One, they are presumed to have substantially ratified respondent's unauthorized acts. Therefore, respondent's action is not considered ultra vires.

FACTS

Sometime in 2001, the Philippine Postal Corporation entered into a contract with Aboitiz Air Transport Corporation (Aboitiz Air) for the carriage of mail at a rate of P5.00 per kilogram.5 This contract would expire on December 31, 2002. After the expiry of its contract with Aboitiz Air, the Philippine Postal Corporation purchased 40 vehicles for mail deliveries in Luzon. It also hired 25 drivers for these vehicles on a contractual basis. All of these drivers' contracts would expire on March 31, 2004, except that of a certain Oliver A. Cruz.

The Central Mail Exchange Center of the Philippine Postal Corporation conducted a post study of the delivery system and submitted a recommendation that the Philippine Postal Corporation would save P6,110,152.44 per annum if deliveries were outsourced instead at the cost of P8.00 per kilogram. The Board of Directors of the Philippine Postal Corporation held a Special Board Meeting where De Guzman, the Officer-in-Charge, endorsed for approval the Central Mail Exchange Center's recommendation to outsource mail delivery in Luzon. However, De Guzman sent a letter to Aboitiz Air, now Aboitiz One, Inc. (Aboitiz One), to re-assume to undertake the carriage of mail from and to Regions 1, 2, 5, & CAR starting 11 May 2004 until further notice. Aboitiz One accepted the proposal and commenced its delivery operations in Luzon on May 20, 2004. When Postmaster General Diomedo P. Villanueva (Postmaster General Villanueva) resumed work, the Aboitiz One contract had already been fully implemented. Thus, the Postmaster General approved payments made to Aboitiz One for services rendered.

Atty. Sim Oresca Mata, Jr. filed an administrative complaint with the Office of the Ombudsman against De Guzman. He alleged that the Aboitiz One contract renewal was done without public bidding and that the rate per kilogram was unilaterally increased without the Philippine Postal Corporation Board of Directors' approval.

In his Counter-Affidavit, De Guzman alleged that the Office of the Ombudsman no longer had jurisdiction over the case since it was filed one (1) year and five (5) months after the commission of the act complained of, or after he sent his May 7, 2004 letter to Aboitiz. He also alleged that the contract renewal was approved by the Board of Directors in the April 29, 2004 Special Meeting. He maintained that the expiration of the employment contracts of the drivers caused a delay in the delivery of mail, which justified the approval of the outsourcing of deliveries.

The Office of the Ombudsman rendered its Decision finding De Guzman guilty of grave misconduct and dishonesty. De Guzman filed his Motion for Reconsideration but it was denied. Thus, he filed a Petition for Review with the Court of Appeals, insisting that the outsourcing of mail deliveries in Luzon was approved by the Philippine Postal Corporation Board of Directors and that the lack of bidding was justified by the delivery delays due to the expiration of the mail delivery drivers' employment contracts. The Court of Appeals rendered its Decision annulling the Decision and Order of the Office of the Ombudsman and setting aside the Complaint against De Guzman for lack of merit.22 The Court of Appeals found that according to the Minutes of the April 29, 2004 Special Board Meeting, the engagement of Aboitiz's services was approved by the Board of Directors and likewise found that the rate increase per kilogram from P5.00 to P8.00 was approved by the Board of Directors in the April 29, 2004 Special Board Meeting after considering and deliberating on the Central Mail Exchange Center's study on the rates of Aboitiz One's competitors.

ISSUE

Whether the act of De Guzman in procuring Aboitiz One's services in outsourcing mail deliveries in Luzon considered ultra vires. (NO)

RULING

Respondent was designated Officer-in-Charge when the contract between the Philippine Postal Corporation and Aboitiz One was effected, since the Postmaster General had taken a leave of absence. Thus, he is considered to have been exercising the functions of the Postmaster General during this period. Under Republic Act No. 7354,40 the powers of the Philippine Postal Corporation are exercised by the Board of Directors, with the President appointing all seven (7) members and "with the Postmaster General as one of the members to represent the government shareholdings."

The Postmaster General manages the Philippine Postal Corporation and has the power to sign contracts on behalf of the corporation as "authorized and approved by the Board [of Directors]." Valid corporate acts are those that have "the vote of at least a majority of the members present at a meeting at which there is a quorum."

There is no board resolution authorizing respondent to enter into a contract with Aboitiz One for the outsourcing of mail deliveries in Luzon. Likewise, there are no Minutes of the April 29, 2004 Special Board Meeting. Thus, respondent relies on the transcript of stenographic notes taken during the April 29, 2004 Special Board Meeting46 to prove that he had the Board of Directors' approval to enter into the contract.

While the minutes of a board meeting are not equivalent to a board resolution, they may be examined to determine what actually took place during the meeting. In Brias v. Hord:

The minutes of the transactions of a board such as the present, prepared by its secretary or some person named or appointed for the purpose of keeping a record of the proceedings, are generally accepted, once approved by the board, as prima facie evidence of what actually took place during that meeting.

Ideally, there would have been minutes taken after the conduct of the board meeting. In its absence, as in this case, the transcript may be resorted to in order to determine the Board of Directors' action on a particular measure, For a corporate act of the Philippine Postal Corporation to be valid, it must have the vote of at least a majority of the members in a meeting where there is a quorum. In this instance, six (6) out of seven (7) members were present during the April 29, 2004 Special Board Meeting.

However, the Board of Directors never actually took a vote on whether or not it should renew its contract with Aboitiz One for the outsourcing of its mail deliveries. A "no comment" from two (2) of the directors present cannot be considered as a unanimous approval. One (1) of the directors even required the presentation of the draft contract before its approval. There was also no board resolution issued after approving it. As there was no majority vote or a board resolution, respondent was not authorized to enter into the contract51 dated May 7, 2004.

A contract entered into by corporate officers who exceed their authority generally does not bind the corporation except when the contract is ratified by the Board of Director .

There was no evidence presented that the Board of Directors repudiated the contract dated May 7, 2004 with Aboitiz One. The contract remained effective until January 31, 2006. While the transcript of the April 29, 2004 Special Board meeting does not mention the proposal to increase the cost of delivery from P5.00 to P8.00 per kilogram, the Central Mail Exchange Center's cost-benefit analysis and recommendation for price increase was sent to the Board of Directors on April 20, 2004. This memorandum was the reason for the April 29, 2004 Special Board Meeting. Therefore, the Board of Directors was informed that the renewal of the Aboitiz One contract would include an increase in costs.

Considering that the Board of Directors remained silent and the Postmaster Generals continued to approve the payments to Aboitiz One, they are presumed to have substantially ratified respondent's unauthorized acts. Therefore, respondent's action is not considered ultra vires.

- Development Bank of the Philippines v. Commission on Audit, G.R. No. 210838, [July 3, 2018]

DEVELOPMENT BANK OF THE PHILIPPINES, Petitioner–versus- COMMISSION ON AUDIT, Respondent.
G.R. No. 210838, EN BANC, July 3, 2018, TIJAM, J.

Notably, while Sec. 13 of DBP's charter as amended on February 14, 1998, exempts it from existing laws on compensation and position classification, it concludes by expressly stating that DBP's system of compensation shall nonetheless conform to the principles under the SSL. From this, there is no basis to conclude that the DBP's BOD was conferred unbridled authority to fix the salaries and allowances of its officers and employees. The authority granted DBP to freely fix its compensation structure under which it may grant allowances and monetary awards remains circumscribed by the SSL; it may not entirely depart from the spirit of the guidelines therein.

All told, the grant of GFPA was indeed an ultra vires act or beyond the authority of DBP's BOD.

FACTS

DBP, a government financial institution created and operating under its own charter, was faced with labor unrest in 2003 due to its employees' insistence that they be paid their benefits. After a series of conferences referred to as a governance forum, the employees' group and DBP arrived at an agreement to put an end to the division causing disruptions in bank operations. The DBP Board of Directors (BOD) adopted Board Resolution No. 01336, approving a one-time grant called the Governance Forum Productivity Award (GFPA) to DBP's officers and employees. The total amount distributed was PhP170,893,689.00.

An audit team was subsequently constituted to look into the legality of the GFPA pursuant to Office Order No. 2003-078 of the COA Legal and Adjudication Office. As a result, Audit Observation Memorandum (AOM) No. 0018 dated January 7, 2005 found the grant of the GFPA without legal basis and recommended its refund.

Meanwhile, the Executive Committee (Execom) of the DBP adopted Resolution No. 015110 dated November 16, 2005, which granted the payment of Amelioration Allowance (AA) to bank employees. The amount due as AA for individual employees was offset against the GFPA already received by them.

DBP received Notice of Disallowance (ND) disallowing the grant of the GFPA. According to COA's Legal and Adjudication Team, industrial peace may not be used as a legal and sufficient basis in granting monetary awards. Furthermore, the GFPA partakes the nature of a compromise agreement and circumvents the rule that only a settled claim may be a subject of compromise.

In its Motion for Reconsideration, DBP assailed the ND by arguing that payment of the GFPA was made pursuant to the power of its Board of Directors (BOD) to enter into a compromise agreement for settlement of employees' claims; that industrial peace is a valid consideration for a compromise agreement; and that the GFPA was superseded and rendered inexistent by the grant of the AA to DBP's employees.

COA's Fraud Audit and Investigation Office (FAIO) treated DBP's Motion for Reconsideration (MR) as an appeal and upheld the disallowance thru the Decision No. 2010-005. The FAIO ruled that the power of DBP's Board to fix the remuneration and emoluments of its officials and employees is not absolute and is subject to Sections 5 and 6 of Presidential Decree (PD) No. 159717 and Section 3 of Memorandum Order (MO) No. 20 of the Office of the President dated June 25, 2001 requiring prior presidential approval. It held that the power of DBP's BOD to enter into a compromise agreement has no basis in law. Furthermore, the subsequent payment of the AA was a separate matter that does not render the disallowance of the GFPA moot and academic.

ISSUE

Whether the Board of Directors (BOD) of DBP has the power to enter into compromise agreement for settlement of employees' claims. (NO)

RULING

There is no quibbling over the fact that labor unrest impelled the DBP, in the interest of industrial peace, to grant the GFPA to its employees. In the COA's view, it was not within the board's powers to grant a monetary award or benefit as a result of labor negotiations. The DBP, on the other hand, points to Section 9 of its charter in arguing that its BOD was authorized to compromise claims against it, pertinently:

Sec. 9. Powers and Duties of the Board of Directors. The Board of Directors shall have, among others, the following duties, powers and authority:

x x x x

(e)
To compromise or release, in whole or in part, any claim of or settled liability to the Bank regardless of the amount involved, under such terms and conditions it may impose to protect the interests of the Bank. This authority to compromise shall extend to claims against the Bank. xxx (Emphasis supplied)

Emphasizing further that its charter grants it a free hand in the fixing of compensation and allowances of its officers and employees, DBP cites Section 13 thereof:

Sec. 13. Other Officers and Employees. -The Board of Directors shall provide for an organization and staff of officers and employees of the Bank and upon recommendation of the President of the Bank, fix their remunerations and other emoluments. All positions in the Bank shall be governed by the compensation, position classification system and qualification standards approved by the Board of Directors based on a comprehensive job analysis of actual duties and responsibilities. The compensation plan shall be comparable with the prevailing compensation plans in the private sector and shall be subject to periodic review by the Board of Directors once every two (2) years, without prejudice to yearly merit or increases based on the Bank's productivity and profitability. The Bank shall, therefore, be exempt from existing laws, rules, and regulations on compensation, position classification and qualification standard. The Bank shall however, endeavor to make its system conform as closely as possible with the principles under Compensation and Position Classification Act of 1989 (Republic Act No. 6758, as amended). (Emphasis supplied.)

Notably, while Sec. 13 of DBP's charter as amended on February 14, 1998, exempts it from existing laws on compensation and position classification, it concludes by expressly stating that DBP's system of compensation shall nonetheless conform to the principles under the SSL. From this, there is no basis to conclude that the DBP's BOD was conferred unbridled authority to fix the salaries and allowances of its officers and employees. The authority granted DBP to freely fix its compensation structure under which it may grant allowances and monetary awards remains circumscribed by the SSL; it may not entirely depart from the spirit of the guidelines therein.

The policy requiring prior Presidential approval upon recommendation from the Secretary of Budget as provided in PD 1597, with respect to the grant of allowances and benefits, was re-affirmed by the Congress in 2009 through Joint Resolution No. 4, also known as the Salary Standardization Law III which provides that the "coverage, conditions for the grant, including the rates of allowances, benefits, and incentives to all government employees, shall be rationalized in accordance with the policies to be issued by the President upon recommendation of the Department of Budget and Management." This policy mirrors MO No. 20 issued earlier in 2001, which directed the heads of government-owned and controlled corporations, government financial institutions (GFIs), and subsidiaries exempted from the SSL to implement pay rationalization in all senior officer positions. What made the GFPA granted by the DBP to its officers and employees in 2003 unique was that it was the product of a compromise arrived at after negotiations between DBP employees and management referred to as a governance forum. The COA considered the process undertaken as labor negotiations. It appears that DBP misconstrued its authority to compromise. Sec. 9 (e) of its charter authorizes its BOD to compromise or release any claim or settled liability to or against the bank. To interpret the provision as including contested benefits that are demanded by employees of a chartered GFI such as the DBP is a wide stretch. To reiterate, its officers and employees' remunerations may only be granted in the manner provided under Sec. 13 of its charter and conformably with the SSL.

The COA's insistence that industrial peace is not a determining factor under the principles of the SSL in fixing the compensation of DBP's employees, is correct. The grant of a wider latitude to DBP's BOD in fixing remunerations and emoluments does not include an abrogation of the principle that employees in the civil service "cannot use the same weapons employed by the workers in the private sector to secure concessions from their employees." While employees of chartered GFIs enjoy the constitutional right to bargain collectively, they may only do so for non- economic benefits and those not fixed by law, and may not resort to acts amounting to work stoppages or interruptions. There is no other way to view the GFPA, other than as a monetary benefit collectively wrung by DBP's employees under threat of disruption to the bank's smooth operations. We held in Dulce M. Abanilla v. Commission On Audit, reiterating Alliance of Government Workers v. Minister of Labor and Employment:

Subject to the minimum requirements of wage laws and other labor and welfare legislation, the terms and conditions of employment in the unionized private sector are settled through the process of collective bargaining. In government employment, however, it is the legislature and, where properly given delegated power, the administrative heads of government which fix the terms and conditions of employment. And this is effected through statutes or administrative circulars, rules, and regulations, not through collective bargaining agreements.

All told, the grant of GFPA was indeed an ultra vires act or beyond the authority of DBP's BOD. There was no grave abuse of discretion on the part of COA when it disallowed the GFPA on the basis of a compromise agreement to settle a labor dispute. We thus, sustain the disallowance.

3. How Exercised

a. By the Shareholders

- Citibank, N.A. vs. Chua, G.R. No. 102300, March 17, 1993

CITIBANK, N.A., Petitioner, -versus – HON. SEGUNDINO G. CHUA, SANTIAGO M. KAPUNAN and LUIS L. VICTOR, ASSOCIATE JUSTICES OF THE HON. COURT OF APPEALS, THIRD DIVISION, MANILA, HON. LEONARDO B. CANARES, Judge of Regional Trial Court of Cebu, Branch 10, and SPOUSES CRESENCIO AND ZENAIDA VELEZ, Respondents.

G.R. No. 102300, SECOND DIVISION, March 17, 2019, CAMPOS, JR., J.

A corporation can submit its by-laws, prior to incorporation, or within one month after receipt of official notice of the issuance of its certificate of incorporation by the SEC. When the third paragraph of the above provision mentions "in all cases", it can only refer to these two options; i.e., whether adopted prior to incorporation or within one month after incorporation, the by-laws shall be effective only upon the approval of the SEC. But even more important, said provision starts with the phrase "Every corporation formed under this Code", which can only refer to corporations incorporated in the Philippines. Hence, Section 46, in so far as it refers to the effectivity of corporate by-laws, applies only to domestic corporations and not to foreign corporations.

FACTS:

Petitioner is a foreign commercial banking corporation duly licensed to do business in the Philippines. Private respondents, spouses Cresencio and Zenaida Velez, were good clients of petitioner bank until they filed a complaint for specific performance and damages against it.
Private respondents alleged in their complaint that the petitioner bank extended to them credit lines sufficiently secured with real estate and chattel mortgages on equipment. They claim that petitioner Citibank offered them special additional accommodation of Five Million.

This arrangement started on September 4, 1985 until March 11, 1986, when private respondents tried to exchange with petitioner bank six checks amounting to P3,095,000.00 but petitioner bank allegedly refused to continue with the arrangement even after repeated demands. Instead, petitioner bank suggested to private respondents that the total amount covered by the "arrangement be restructured to 30 months with prevailing interest rate on the diminishing balance". 2 Private respondents agreed to such a proposal. Then as a sign of good faith, they issued and delivered a check for P75,000.00 in favor of petitioner bank which was refused by the latter demanding instead full payment of the entire amount.

For the failure of petitioner bank to comply with this restructuring agreement private respondents sued for specific performance and damages. Subsequently, petitioner bank filed a criminal complaint against private respondents for violation of Batas Pambansa Blg. 22 and six counts of estafa.
On the date of the pre-trial conference, counsel for petitioner bank appeared, presenting a special power of attorney executed by Citibank officer Florencia Tarriela in favor of petitioner bank's counsel, the J.P. Garcia & Associates, to represent and bind petitioner bank at the pre-trial conference of the case at bar.

Inspite of this SPA, counsel for private respondents orally moved to declare petitioner bank as in default on the ground that the SPA was not executed by the BOD of Citibank. Petitioner bank was then required to file a written opposition to this oral motion to declare it as in default.

In said opposition petitioner bank attached another SPA made by William W. Ferguson, Vice President and highest ranking officer of Citibank, Philippines, constituting and appointing the J.P. Garcia & Associates to represent and bind the BANK at the pre-trial conference and/or trial.

Respondent judge denied private respondents' oral motion to declare petitioner bank as in default. On the scheduled pre-trial conference, private respondents reiterated, by way of asking for reconsideration, their oral motion to declare petitioner bank as in default for its failure to appear through an authorized agent and that the documents presented are not in accordance with the requirements of the law. Petitioner bank again filed its opposition thereto stating that in order to avoid further arguments on the matter, Citibank will secure another power of attorney from Mr. William W. Ferguson who will represent the defendant Citibank in the pre-trial conferences."

Petitioner bank filed a manifestation attaching therewith a SPA executed by William W. Ferguson in favor of Citibank employees to represent and bind Citibank on the pre-trial conference of the case at bar.

Respondent judge issued an order declaring petitioner bank as in default. This order, received by petitioner bank on September 27, 1990, cited the following as reason for the declaration of default: "The exercise by the Board of Directors of corporate powers could only be valid if it bears the approval of the majority of the Board (Sec. 25, par. 2, Corporation Code). The records does not show the requisite document. The alleged authority (SPA) executed by Mr. William W. Ferguson in favor of the alleged Citibank employees to represent the defendant in the pre-trial conference, made no mention of J.P. Garcia & Associates as one of the employees of the defendant. It stands to reason therefore, that the defendant-bank has no proper representation during the pre-trial conference.
Petitioner bank filed a motion for reconsideration of the above order but it was denied.Petitioner bank then filed a petition for certiorari, prohibition and mandamus with preliminary injunction and/or temporary restraining order with the Court of Appeals. The Court of Appeals dismissed the petition on the following grounds:

"In the first place, petitioner admitted that it did not and could not present a Board resolution from the bank's Board of Directors appointing its counsel, Atty. Julius Z. Neri, as its attorney-in-fact to represent and bind it during the pre-trial conference of this case. This admission is contained on pages 12 and 13 of the instant petition.

In the second place, the "By-Laws" of petitioner which on its face authorizes (sic) the appointment of an attorney-in-fact to represent it in any litigation, has not been approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission, as required by Section 46 of the Corporation Code of the Philippines. Apparently, the "By-Laws" in question was (sic) approved under the laws of the United States, but there is no showing that the same was given the required imprimatur by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Since petitioner is a foreign corporation doing business in the Philippines, it is bound by all laws, rules and regulations applicable to domestic corporations (Sec. 129, Corporation Code).
In the third place, no SPA was presented authorizing petitioner's counsel of record, Atty. Julius Neri and/or J.P. Garcia Associates, to appear for and in behalf of petitioner during the pre-trial.

What petitioner exhibited to the court a quo was a general power of attorney given to one William W. Ferguson who in turn executed a power of attorney in favor of five (5) (sic) Citibank employees to act as attorney-in-fact in Civil Case No. CEB-4751. Yet, during the pre-trial not one of said employees appeared, except counsel who is not even a bank employee.

Furthermore, even assuming the validity of the power of attorney issued by petitioner in favor of Ferguson as well as the power of attorney he issued to five (5) (sic) Citibank employees, said power of attorney has not been shown to be a SPA precisely intended not only to represent the bank at the pre-trial of the case on a certain date but also to enter into any compromise as required in paragraph 3, Article 1878 of the Civil Code and Section 1 (a), Rule 20, Rules of Court." Hence, this instant petition.
Petitioner bank contends that no board resolution was necessary for its legal counsel, Atty. Julius Z. Neri, or Citibank employees to act as its attorney-in-fact in the case at bar because petitioner bank's by-laws grant to its Executing Officer and Secretary Pro-Tem the power to delegate to a Citibank officer, in this case William W. Ferguson, the authority to represent and defend the bank and its interests.

Furthermore, it contends that the CA erred in holding that the by-laws of petitioner bank cannot be given effect because it did not have the imprimatur of the SEC as required by Section 46 of the Corporation Code.

Private respondents refute both contentions. They assail the authority of petitioner bank's legal counsel to appear at the pre-trial conference on two grounds, namely: first, that the authority did not come from the Board of Directors which has the exclusive right to exercise corporate powers; and second, that the authority granted to the Executing Officer in the by-laws was ineffective because the same were not submitted to, nor approved by, the SEC.

ISSUE

Whether a resolution of the board of directors of a corporation is always necessary for granting authority to an agent to represent the corporation in court cases. (NO)

RULING

On the basis of Sec. 23 of the Corporation Code (the board of directors or trustees), although as a general rule, all corporate powers are to be exercised by the board of directors, exceptions are made where the Code provides otherwise.

Section 25 of said Code provides that directors or trustees and officers to be elected shall perform the duties enjoined on them by law and by the by-laws of the corporation. Furthermore, Section 47 of the same Code enumerates what may be contained in the by-laws, among which is a provision for the "qualifications, duties and compensation of directors or trustees, officers and employees".

Taking all the above provisions of law together, it is clear that corporate powers may be directly conferred upon corporate officers or agents by statute, the articles of incorporation, the by-laws or by resolution or other act of the board of directors. In addition, an officer who is not a director may also appoint other agents when so authorized by the by-laws or by the board of directors. Such are referred to as express powers. There are also powers incidental to express powers conferred. It is a fundamental principle in the law of agency that every delegation of authority, whether general or special, carries with it, unless the contrary be expressed, implied authority to do all of those acts, naturally and ordinarily done in such cases, which are reasonably necessary and proper to be done in order to carry into effect the main authority conferred.

Since the by-laws are a source of authority for corporate officers and agents of the corporation, a resolution of the BOD of Citibank appointing an attorney in fact to represent and bind it during the pre-trial conference of the case at bar is not necessary because its by-laws allow its officers, the Executing Officer and the Secretary Pro-Tem,  to execute a power of attorney to a designated bank officer, William W. Ferguson in this case, clothing him with authority to direct and manage corporate affairs.

Since paragraph XXI of the by-laws specifically allows Ferguson to delegate his powers in whole or in part, there can be no doubt that the special power of attorney in favor, first, of J.P. Garcia & Associates and later, of the bank's employees, constitutes a valid delegation of Ferguson's express power (under paragraph XVII) to represent petitioner bank in the pre-trial conference in the lower court.

b. By the Board of Directors

- Lopez Realty, Inc., and Asuncion Lopez Gonzales vs. Florentina Fontecha, et al., and the National Labor Relations Commission, G.R. No. 76801 August 11, 1995

LOPEZ REALTY, INC., AND ASUNCION LOPEZ GONZALES, Petitioners–versus- FLORENTINA FONTECHA, ET AL., AND THE NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS COMMISSION, Respondents.
G.R. No.76801 , SECOND DIVISION, August 11, 1995, PUNO, J.

Be that as it may, jurisprudence tells us that an action of the board of directors during a meeting, which was illegal for lack of notice, may be ratified either expressly, by the action of the directors in subsequent legal meeting, or impliedly, by the corporation's subsequent course of conduct.

In the case at bench, it was established that petitioner corporation did not issue any resolution revoking nor nullifying the board resolutions granting gratuity pay to private respondents. Instead, they paid the gratuity pay, particularly, the first two (2) installments thereof, of private respondents Florentina Fontecha, Mila Refuerzo, Marcial Mamaril and Perfecto Bautista.

FACTS

Lopez Realty, Inc., is a corporation engaged in real estate business, while petitioner Asuncion Lopez Gonzales is one of its majority shareholders. Except for Arturo F. Lopez, the rest of the shareholders also sit as members of the Board of Directors.

Sometime in 1978, Arturo Lopez submitted a proposal relative to the distribution of certain assets of petitioner corporation among its three (3) main shareholders. The proposal had three (3) aspects, viz: (1) the sale of assets of the company to pay for its obligations; (2) the transfer of certain assets of the company to its three (3) main shareholders, while some other assets shall remain with the company; and (3) the reduction of employees with provision for their gratuity pay. The proposal was deliberated upon and approved in a special meeting of the board of directors held on April 17, 1978.

It appears that petitioner corporation approved two (2) resolutions providing for the gratuity pay of its employees. Meanwhile, board member and majority stockholder Teresita Lopez Marquez died. On August 17, 1981, except for Asuncion Lopez Gonzales who was then abroad, the remaining members of the Board of Directors, namely: Rosendo de Leon, Benjamin Bernardino, and Leo Rivera, convened a special meeting and passed a resolution on the manner of giving the gratuity pay for employees that will be laid off and those who will be retained.

Private respondents were the retained employees of petitioner corporation. In a letter, private respondents requested for the full payment of their gratuity pay. Their request was granted in a special meeting held on September 1, 1981. At that, time, however, petitioner Asuncion Lopez Gonzales was still abroad. Allegedly, while she was still out of the country, she sent a cablegram to the corporation, objecting to certain matters taken up by the board in her absence, such as the sale of some of the assets of the corporation. Upon her return, she flied a derivative suit with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) against majority shareholder Arturo F. Lopez.

Notwithstanding the "corporate squabble" between petitioner Asuncion Lopez Gonzales and Arturo Lopez, the first two (2) installments of the gratuity pay of private respondents Florentina Fontecha, Mila Refuerzo, Marcial Mamaril and Perfecto Bautista were paid by petitioner corporation.

Also, petitioner corporation had prepared the cash vouchers and checks for the third installments of gratuity pay of said private respondents (Florentina Fontecha, Mila Refuerzo, Marcial Mamaril and Perfecto Bautista). For some reason, said vouchers were cancelled by petitioner Asuncion Lopez Gonzales.

Likewise, the first, second and third installments of gratuity pay of the rest of private respondents, particularly, Edward Mamaril, Marissa Pascual and Allan Pimentel, were prepared but cancelled by petitioner Asuncion Lopez Gonzales. Despite private respondents' repeated demands for their gratuity pay, corporation refused to pay the same.

Labor Arbiter Raymundo R. Valenzuela rendered judgment in favor of private respondents. Petitioners appealed the adverse ruling of the Labor arbiter to public respondent National Labor Relations Commission. The appeal focused on the alleged non-ratification and non-approval of the assailed Board Resolutions on the payment of the gratuity to some of the private respondents. That such was a mere "mistake" on the part of petitioner corporation since, pursuant to Resolution No. 6, and Resolution No. 10 , said gratuity pay should be given only upon the employees' retirement.

Upon appeal, public respondent, through its Second Division, dismissed the appeal for lack of merit

ISSUE

Whether or not public respondent acted with grave abuse of discretion in holding that private respondents are entitled to receive their gratuity pay under the assailed board resolutions. (NO)

RULING

The general rule is that a corporation, through its board of directors, should act in the manner and within the formalities, if any, prescribed by its charter or by the general law. Thus, directors must act as a body in a meeting called pursuant to the law or the corporation's by-laws, otherwise, any action taken therein may be questioned by any objecting director or shareholder.

Be that as it may, jurisprudence tells us that an action of the board of directors during a meeting, which was illegal for lack of notice, may be ratified either expressly, by the action of the directors in subsequent legal meeting, or impliedly, by the corporation's subsequent course of conduct. Thus, in one case, it was held:

. . . In 2 Fletcher, Cyclopedia of the Law of Private Corporations (Perm. Ed.) sec. 429, at page 290, it is stated:

Thus, acts of directors at a meeting which was illegal because of want of notice may be ratified by the directors at a subsequent legal meeting, or by the corporations course of conduct
. . .
Fletcher, supra, further states in sec. 762, at page 1073-1074:

Ratification by directors may be by an express resolution or vote to that effect, or it may be implied from adoption of the act, acceptance or acquiescence. Ratification may be effected by a resolution or vote of the board of directors expressly ratifying previous acts either of corporate officers or agents; but it is not necessary, ordinarily, to show a meeting and formal action by the board of directors in order to establish a ratification.

In American Casualty Co., v. Dakota Tractor and Equipment Co., 234 F. Supp. 606, 611 (D.N.D. 1964), the court stated:

Moreover, the unauthorized acts of an officer of a corporation may be ratified by the corporation by conduct implying approval and adoption of the act in question. Such ratification may be express or may be inferred from silence and inaction.

In the case at bench, it was established that petitioner corporation did not issue any resolution revoking nor nullifying the board resolutions granting gratuity pay to private respondents. Instead, they paid the gratuity pay, particularly, the first two (2) installments thereof, of private respondents Florentina Fontecha, Mila Refuerzo, Marcial Mamaril and Perfecto Bautista.

Despite the alleged lack of notice to petitioner Asuncion Lopez Gonzales at that time the assailed resolutions were passed, we can glean from the records that she was aware of the corporation's obligation under the said resolutions. More importantly, she acquiesced thereto. As pointed out by private respondents, petitioner Asuncion Lopez Gonzales affixed her signature on Cash Voucher Nos. 81-10-510 and 81-10-506, both dated October 15, 1981, evidencing the 2nd installment of the gratuity pay of private respondents Mila Refuerzo and Florentina Fontecha.

We hold, therefore, that the conduct of petitioners after the passage of resolutions dated August, 17, 1951 and September 1, 1981, had estopped them from assailing the validity of said board resolutions. Assuming, arguendo, that there was no notice given to Asuncion Lopez Gonzalez during the special meetings held on August 17, 1981 and September 1, 1981, it is erroneous to state that the resolutions passed by the board during the said meetings were ultra vires. In legal parlance, "ultra vires" act refers to one which is not within the corporate powers conferred by the Corporation Code or articles of incorporation or not necessary or incidental in the exercise of the powers so conferred.

The assailed resolutions before us cover a subject which concerns the benefit and welfare of the company's employees. To stress, providing gratuity pay for its employees is one of the express powers of the corporation under the Corporation Code, hence, petitioners cannot invoke the doctrine of ultra vires to avoid any liability arising from the issuance the subject resolutions.

We reject petitioners' allegation that private respondents, namely, Mila Refuerzo, Marissa Pascual and Edward Mamaril who resigned from petitioner corporation after the filing of the case, are precluded from receiving their gratuity pay. Pursuant to board resolutions dated August 17, 1981 and September 1, 1981, respectively, petitioner corporation obliged itself to give the gratuity pay of its retained employees in four (4) installments: on September 1, 1981; October 15, 1981; November, 1981; and January 1, 1982. Hence, at the time the aforenamed private respondents tendered their resignation, the aforementioned private respondents were already entitled to receive their gratuity pay.

Petitioners try to convince us that the subject resolutions had no force and effect in view of the non-approval thereof during the Annual Stockholders' Meeting held on March 1, 1982. To strengthen their position, petitioners cite section 28 1/2 of the Corporation Law (Section 40 of the Corporation Code). We are not persuaded.

The cited provision is not applicable to the case at bench as it refers to the sale, lease, exchange or disposition of all or substantially all of the corporation's assets, including its goodwill. In such a case, the action taken by the board of directors requires the authorization of the stockholders on record. It will be observed that, except far Arturo Lopez, the stockholders of petitioner corporation also sit as members of the board of directors. Under the circumstances in field, it will be illogical and superfluous to require the stockholders' approval of the subject resolutions. Thus, even without the stockholders' approval of the subject resolutions, petitioners are still liable to pay private respondents' gratuity pay.

- Premium Marble Resources, Inc. vs. Court of Appeals, G.R. No. 96551, November 4, 1996

PREMIUM MARBLE RESOURCES, INC, Petitioner–versus- FLORENTINA FONTECHA, ET AL., AND THE NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS COMMISSIO THE COURT OF APPEALS and INTERNATIONAL CORPORATE BANK N, Respondents.
G.R. No.96551 , SECOND DIVISION, November 4, 1996, TORRES, J.

By the express mandate of the Corporation Code (Section 26), all corporations duly organized pursuant thereto are required to submit within the period therein stated (30 days) to the Securities and Exchange Commission the names, nationalities and residences of the directors, trustees and officers elected.

The claim, therefore, of petitioners as represented by Atty. Dumadag, that Zaballa, et al., are the incumbent officers of Premium has not been fully substantiated. In the absence of an authority from the board of directors, no person, not even the officers of the corporation, can validly bind the corporation.

FACTS

Premium Marble Resources, Inc. (Premium for brevity), assisted by Atty. Arnulfo Dumadag as counsel, filed an action for damages against International Corporate Bank. The complaint states:
3. Sometime in August to October 1982, Ayala Investment and Development Corporation issued three (3) checks [Nos. 097088, 097414 & 27884] in the aggregate amount of P31,663.88 payable to the plaintiff and drawn against Citibank;

xxx xxx xxx
5. On or about August to October 1982, former officers of the plaintiff corporation headed by Saturnino G. Belen, Jr., without any authority whatsoever from the plaintiff deposited the above-mentioned checks to the current account of his conduit corporation, Intervest Merchant Finance (Intervest, for brevity) which the latter maintained with the defendant bank under account No. 0200-02027-8;

6. Although the checks were clearly payable to the plaintiff corporation and crossed on their face and for payee's account only, defendant bank accepted the checks to be deposited to the current account of Intervest and thereafter presented the same for collection from the drawee bank which subsequently cleared the same thus allowing Intervest to make use of the funds to the prejudice of the plaintiff;

xxx xxx xxx

14. The plaintiff has demanded upon the defendant to restitute the amount representing the value of the checks but defendant refused and continue to refuse to honor plaintiff's demands up to the present;

15. As a result of the illegal and irregular acts perpetrated by the defendant bank, the plaintiff was damaged to the extent of the amount of P31,663.88;

Premium prayed that judgment be rendered ordering defendant bank to pay the amount of P31,663.88 representing the value of the checks plus interest, P100,000.00 as exemplary damages; and P30,000.00 as attorney's fees.

In its Answer International Corporate Bank alleged, inter alia, that Premium has no capacity/personality/authority to sue in this instance and the complaint should, therefore, be dismissed for failure to state a cause of action.
A few days after Premium filed the said case, Printline Corporation, a sister company of Premium also filed an action for damages against International Corporate Bank. Thereafter, both civil cases were consolidated.

Meantime, the same corporation, i.e., Premium, but this time represented by Siguion Reyna, Montecillio and Ongsiako Law Office as counsel, filed a motion to dismiss on the ground that the filing of the case was without authority from its duly constituted board of directors as shown by the excerpt of the minutes of the Premium's board of directors' meeting.

In its opposition to the motion to dismiss, Premium thru Atty. Dumadag contended that the persons who signed the board resolution namely Belen, Jr., Nograles & Reyes, are not directors of the corporation and were allegedly former officers and stockholders of Premium who were dismissed for various irregularities and fraudulent acts; that Siguion Reyna Law office is the lawyer of Belen and Nograles and not of Premium and that the Articles of Incorporation of Premium shows that Belen, Nograles and Reyes are not majority stockholders.

On the other hand, Siguion Reyna Law firm as counsel of Premium in a rejoinder, asserted that it is the general information sheet filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, among others, that is the best evidence that would show who are the stockholders of a corporation and not the Articles of Incorporation since the latter does not keep track of the many changes that take place after new stockholders subscribe to corporate shares of stocks.
In the interim, defendant bank filed a manifestation that it is adopting in toto Premium's motion to dismiss and, therefore, joins it in the praying for the dismissal of the present case on the ground that Premium lacks authority from its duly constituted board of directors to institute the action.

In its Order, the lower court dismissed the consolidated cases and concluded that:

Considering that the officers (directors) of plaintiff corporation enumerated in the Articles of Incorporation, filed on November 9, 1979, were "to serve until their successors are elected and qualified" and considering further that as of March 4, 1981, the officers of the plaintiff corporation were Alberto Nograles, Fernando Hilario, Augusto Galace, Jose L.R. Reyes, Pido Aguilar and Saturnino Belen, Jr., who presumably are the officers represented by the Siguion Reyna Law Firm, and that together with the defendants, they are moving for the dismissal of the above-entitled case, the Court finds that the officers represented by Atty. Dumadag do not as yet have the legal capacity to sue for and in behalf of the plaintiff corporation and/or the filing of the present action (Civil Case 14413) by them before Case No. 2688 of the SEC could be decided is a premature exercise of authority or assumption of legal capacity for and in behalf of plaintiff corporation.

The issues raised in Civil Case No. 14444 are similar to those raised in Civil Case No. 14413. This Court is of the opinion that before SEC Case No. 2688 could be decided, neither the set of officers represented by Atty. Dumadag nor that set represented by the Siguion Reyna, Montecillo and Ongsiako Law Office, may prosecute cases in the name of the plaintiff corporation.

It is clear from the pleadings filed by the parties in these two cases that the existence of a cause of action against the defendants is dependent upon the resolution of the case involving intra-corporate controversy still pending before the SEC.

On appeal, the Court of Appeals affirmed the trial court's Order [4] which dismissed the consolidated cases. Hence, this petition.

ISSUE

Whether the filing of the case for damages against private respondent was authorized by a duly constituted Board of Directors of the petitioner corporation. (NO)

RULING

Petitioner, through the first set of officers, viz., Mario Zavalla, Oscar Gan, Lionel Pengson, Jose Ma. Silva, Aderito Yujuico and Rodolfo Millare, presented the Minutes [5] of the meeting of its Board of Directors held on April 1, 1982, as proof that the filing of the case against private respondent was authorized by the Board. On the other hand, the second set of officers, viz., Saturnino G. Belen, Jr., Alberto C. Nograles and Jose L.R. Reyes, presented a Resolution [6] dated July 30, 1986, to show that Premium did not authorize the filing in its behalf of any suit against the private respondent International Corporate Bank.

Later on, petitioner submitted its Articles of Incorporation [7] dated November 6, 1979 with the following as Directors: Mario C. Zavalla, Pedro C. Celso, Oscar B. Gan, Lionel Pengson, and Jose Ma. Silva.
However, it appears from the general information sheet and the Certification issued by the SEC on August 19, 1986 that as of March 4, 1981, the officers and members of the board of directors of the Premium Marble Resources, Inc. were:
Alberto C. Nograles — President/Director
Fernando D. Hilario — Vice President/Director
Augusto I. Galace — Treasurer
Jose L.R. Reyes — Secretary/Director
Pido E. Aquilar — Director
Saturnino G. Belen, Jr. — Chairman of the Board.

While the Minutes of the Meeting of the Board on April 1, 1982 states that the newly elected officers for the year 1982 were Oscar Gan, Mario Zavalla, Aderito Yujuico and Rodolfo Millare, petitioner failed to show proof that this election was reported to the SEC. In fact, the last entry in their General Information Sheet with the SEC, as of 1986 appears to be the set of officers elected in March 1981. We agree with the finding of public respondent Court of Appeals, that "in the absence of /any board resolution from its board of directors the [sic] authority to act for and in behalf of the corporation, the present action must necessarily fail. The power of the corporation to sue and be sued in any court is lodged with the board of directors that exercises its corporate powers. Thus, the issue of authority and the invalidity of plaintiff-appellant 's subscription which is still pending, is a matter that is also addressed, considering the premises, to the sound judgment of the Securities & Exchange Commission."

By the express mandate of the Corporation Code (Section 26), all corporations duly organized pursuant thereto are required to submit within the period therein stated (30 days) to the Securities and Exchange Commission the names, nationalities and residences of the directors, trustees and officers elected.

Sec. 26 of the Corporation Code provides, thus:
Sec. 26. Report of election of directors, trustees and officers. — Within thirty (30) days after the election of the directors, trustees and officers of the corporation, the secretary, or any other officer of the corporation, shall submit to the Securities and Exchange Commission, the names, nationalities and residences of the directors, trustees and officers elected. . . .

Evidently, the objective sought to be achieved by Section 26 is to give the public information, under sanction of oath of responsible officers, of the nature of business, financial condition and operational status of the company together with information on its key officers or managers so that those dealing with it and those who intend to do business with it may know or have the means of knowing facts concerning the corporation's financial resources and business responsibility.

The claim, therefore, of petitioners as represented by Atty. Dumadag, that Zaballa, et al., are the incumbent officers of Premium has not been fully substantiated. In the absence of an authority from the board of directors, no person, not even the officers of the corporation, can validly bind the corporation.

- Tam Wing Tak vs. Hon. Ramon P. Makasiar, G.R. No. 122452, January 29, 2001

TAM WING TAK, Petitioner–versus- HON. RAMON P. MAKASIAR (in his Capacity as Presiding Judge of the Regional Trial Court of Manila, Branch 35) and ZENON DE GUIA (in his capacity as Chief State Prosecutor), Respondents.

G.R. No.122452 , SECOND DIVISION, January 29, 2001, QUISUMBING, J.

Under Section 36 of the Corporation Code18, read in relation to Section 23, it is clear that where a corporation is an injured party, its power to sue is lodged with its board of directors or trustees.

Note that petitioner failed to show any proof that he was authorized or deputized or granted specific powers by Concord's board of director to sue Victor And Siong for and on behalf of the firm. Clearly, petitioner as a minority stockholder and member of the board of directors had no such power or authority to sue on Concord's behalf.

FACTS

Petitioner, in his capacity as director of Concord-World Properties, Inc., (Concord for brevity), a domestic corporation, filed an affidavit-complaint with the Quezon City Prosecutor's Office, charging Vic Ang Siong with violation of B.P. Blg. 22. Docketed by the Prosecutor as I.S. No. 93-15886, the complaint alleged that a check for the amount of P83,550,000.00, issued by Vic Ang Siong in favor of Concord, was dishonored when presented for encashment.

Vic Ang Siong sought the dismissal of the case on two grounds: First, that petitioner had no authority to file the case on behalf of Concord, the payee of the dishonored check, since the firm's board of directors had not empowered him to act on its behalf. Second, he and Concord had already agreed to amicably settle the issue after he made a partial payment of P19,000,000.00 on the dishonored check. The City Prosecutor dismissed I.S. No. 93-15886 on the following grounds: (1) that petitioner lacked the requisite authority to initiate the criminal complaint for and on Concord's behalf; and (2) that Concord and Vic Ang Siong had already agreed upon the payment of the latter's balance on the dishonored check.

Petitioner then filed Civil Case No. 95-74394 for mandamus with the Regional Trial Court of Quezon City to compel the Chief State Prosecutor to file or cause the filing of an information charging Vic Ang Siong with violation of B.P. Blg. 22 but was dismissed by the trial court and the reconsideration.

ISSUE

Whether mandamus will lie to compel the City Prosecutor to file the necessary information in court. (NO)

In general, mandamus may be resorted to only where one's right is founded clearly in law and not when it is doubtful. The exception is to be found in criminal cases where mandamus is available to compel the performance by the public prosecutor of an ostensibly discretionary function, where by reason of grave abuse of discretion on his part, he willfully refuses to perform a duty mandated by law.16 Thus, mandamus may issue to compel a prosecutor to file an information when he refused to do so in spite of the prima facie evidence of guilt.

Petitioner takes the stance that it was grave abuse for discretion on the part of respondent Chief State Prosecutor to sustain the dismissal of I.S. No. 93-15886 on the grounds that: (1) Vic Ang Siong's obligation which gave rise to the bounced check had already been extinguished by partial payment and agreement to amicably settle balance, and (2) petitioner had no standing to file the criminal complaint since he was neither the payee nor holder of the bad check. Petitioner opines that neither ground justifies dismissal of his complaint.

Petitioner's stand is unavailing. Respondent Chief State Prosecutor in refusing to order the filing of an information for violation of B.P. Blg. 22 against Vic Ang Siong did not act without or in excess of jurisdiction or with grave abuse of discretion.

First, with respect to the agreement between Concord and Victor Ang Siong to amicably settle their difference, we find this resort to an alternative dispute settlement mechanism as not contrary to law, public policy, or public order. Efforts of parties to solve their disputes outside of the courts are looked on with favor, in view of the clogged dockets of the judiciary.

Second, it is not disputed in the instant case that Concord, a domestic corporation, was the payee of the bum check, not petitioner. Therefore, it is Concord, as payee of the bounced check, which is the injured party. Since petitioner was neither a payee nor a holder of the bad check, he had neither the personality to sue nor a cause of action against Vic Ang Siong.

Under Section 36 of the Corporation Code18, read in relation to Section 23, it is clear that where a corporation is an injured party, its power to sue is lodged with its board of directors or turstees. Note that petitioner failed to show any proof that he was authorized or deputized or granted specific powers by Concord's board of director to sue Victor And Siong for and on behalf of the firm.

Clearly, petitioner as a minority stockholder and member of the board of directors had no such power or authority to sue on Concord's behalf. Nor can we uphold his act as a derivative suit. For a derivative suit to prosper, it is required that the minority stockholder suing for and on behalf of the corporation must allege in his complaint that he is suing on a derivative cause of action on behalf of the corporation and all other stockholders similarly situated who may wish to join him in the suit. There is no showing that petitioner has complied with the foregoing requisites. It is obvious that petitioner has not shown any clear legal right which would warrant the overturning of the decision of public respondents to dismiss the complaint against Vic Ang Siong. A public prosecutor, by the nature of his office, is under no compulsion to file a criminal information where no clear legal justification has been shown, and no sufficient evidence of guilt nor prima facie case has been presented by the petitioner. No reversible error may be attributed to the court a quo when it dismissed petitioner's special civil action for mandamus.

c. By the Officers

- The Board of Liquidators, representing the Government of the Republic of the Philippines vs. Heirs of Maximo M. Kalaw, Juan Bocar, Estate of the deceased Casimiro Garcia, and Leonor Moll, G.R. No. L-18805, August 14, 1967

THE BOARD OF LIQUIDATORS representing THE GOVERNMENT OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES, Plaintiff-Appellant –versus- HEIRS OF MAXIMO M. KALAW, JUAN BOCAR, ESTATE OF THE DECEASED CASIMIRO GARCIA,3 and LEONOR MOLL, Defendants-Appellees.
G.R. No.L-18805 , EN BANC, August 14, 1967, SANCHEZ, J.

Settled jurisprudence has it that where similar acts have been approved by the directors as a matter of general practice, custom, and policy, the general manager may bind the company without formal authorization of the board of directors. In varying language, existence of such authority is established, by proof of the course of business, the usage and practices of the company and by the knowledge which the board of directors has, or must be presumed to have, of acts and doings of its subordinates in and about the affairs of the corporation.

In the case at bar, the practice of the corporation has been to allow its general manager to negotiate and execute contracts in its copra trading activities for and in NACOCO's behalf without prior board approval. If the by-laws were to be literally followed, the board should give its stamp of prior approval on all corporate contracts. But that board itself, by its acts and through acquiescence, practically laid aside the by-law requirement of prior approval. Under the given circumstances, the Kalaw contracts are valid corporate acts.

FACTS

The National Coconut Corporation (NACOCO, for short) was chartered as a non-profit governmental organization by Commonwealth Act 518 avowedly for the protection, preservation and development of the coconut industry in the Philippines. On August 1, 1946, NACOCO's charter was amended [Republic Act 5] to grant that corporation the express power "to buy, sell, barter, export, and in any other manner deal in, coconut, copra, and dessicated coconut, as well as their by-products, and to act as agent, broker or commission merchant of the producers, dealers or merchants" thereof. The charter amendment was enacted to stabilize copra prices, to serve coconut producers by securing advantageous prices for them, to cut down to a minimum, if not altogether eliminate, the margin of middlemen, mostly aliens.

General manager and board chairman was Maximo M. Kalaw; defendants Juan Bocar and Casimiro Garcia were members of the Board; defendant Leonor Moll became director only on December 22, 1947.

NACOCO, after the passage of Republic Act 5, embarked on copra trading activities. Amongst the scores of contracts executed by general manager Kalaw are the disputed contracts, for the delivery of copra.

An unhappy chain of events conspired to deter NACOCO from fulfilling these contracts. Nature supervened. Four devastating typhoons visited the Philippines: the first in October, the second and third in November, and the fourth in December, 1947. Coconut trees throughout the country suffered extensive damage. Copra production decreased. Prices spiralled. Warehouses were destroyed. Cash requirements doubled. Deprivation of export facilities increased the time necessary to accumulate shiploads of copra. Quick turnovers became impossible, financing a problem.

When it became clear that the contracts would be unprofitable, Kalaw submitted them to the board for approval. It was not until December 22, 1947 when the membership was completed. Defendant Moll took her oath on that date. A meeting was then held. Kalaw made a full disclosure of the situation, apprised the board of the impending heavy losses. No action was taken on the contracts. Neither did the board vote thereon at the meeting of January 7, 1948 following. Then, on January 11, 1948, President Roxas made a statement that the NACOCO head did his best to avert the losses, emphasized that government concerns faced the same risks that confronted private companies, that NACOCO was recouping its losses, and that Kalaw was to remain in his post. Not long thereafter, that is, on January 30, 1948, the board met again with Kalaw, Bocar, Garcia and Moll in attendance. They unanimously approved the contracts hereinbefore enumerated.

As was to be expected, NACOCO but partially performed the contracts.

The buyers threatened damage suits. Some of the claims were settled, viz: Pacific Vegetable Oil Co., in copra delivered by NACOCO, P539,000.00; Franklin Baker Corporation, P78,210.00; Spencer Kellog & Sons, P159,040.00.

But one buyer, Louis Dreyfus & Go. (Overseas) Ltd., did in fact sue before the Court of First Instance of Manila, upon claims for undelivered copra and for the balance on another contract. These cases culminated in an out-of-court amicable settlement when the Kalaw management was already out.

The corporation thereunder paid Dreyfus P567,024.52 representing 70% of the total claims. With particular reference to the Dreyfus claims, NACOCO put up the defenses that: (1) the contracts were void because Louis Dreyfus & Co. (Overseas) Ltd. did not have license to do business here; and (2) failure to deliver was due to force majeure, the typhoons. All the settlements sum up to P1,343,274.52.

NACOCO seeks to recover the above sum of P1,343,274.52 from general manager and board chairman Maximo M. Kalaw, and directors Juan Bocar, Casimiro Garcia and Leonor Moll. It charges Kalaw with negligence under Article 1902 of the old Civil Code (now Article 2176, new Civil Code); and defendant board members, including Kalaw, with bad faith and/or breach of trust for having approved the contracts.

The lower court came out with a judgment dismissing the complaint without costs as well as defendants' counterclaims, except that plaintiff was ordered to pay the heirs of Maximo Kalaw the sum of P2,601.94 for unpaid salaries and cash deposit due the deceased Kalaw from NACOCO.

ISSUE

Whether the case at bar is to be taken out of the general concept of the powers of a general manager, given the cited provision of the NACOCO by-laws requiring prior directorate approval of NACOCO contracts. (NO)

RULING

Settled jurisprudence has it that where similar acts have been approved by the directors as a matter of general practice, custom, and policy, the general manager may bind the company without formal authorization of the board of directors. In varying language, existence of such authority is established, by proof of the course of business, the usage and practices of the company and by the knowledge which the board of directors has, or must be presumed to have, of acts and doings of its subordinates in and about the affairs of the corporation. So also, x x x authority to act for and bind a corporation may be presumed from acts of recognition in other instances where the power was in fact exercised.

x x x Thus, when, in the usual course of business of a corporation, an officer has been allowed in his official capacity to manage its affairs, his authority to represent the corporation may be implied from the manner in which he has been permitted by the directors to manage its business.

In the case at bar, the practice of the corporation has been to allow its general manager to negotiate and execute contracts in its copra trading activities for and in NACOCO's behalf without prior board approval. If the by-laws were to be literally followed, the board should give its stamp of prior approval on all corporate contracts. But that board itself, by its acts and through acquiescence, practically laid aside the by-law requirement of prior approval.

Under the given circumstances, the Kalaw contracts are valid corporate acts.

But if more were required, we need but turn to the board's ratification of the contracts in dispute on January 30, 1948, though it is our (and the lower court's) belief that ratification here is nothing more than a mere formality.

Authorities, great in number, are one in the idea that "ratification by a corporation of an unauthorized act or contract by its officers or others relates back to the time of the act or contract ratified, and is equivalent to original authority;" and that " [t]he corporation and the other party to the transaction are in precisely the same position as if the act or contract had been authorized at the time." 30 The language of one case is expressive: "The adoption or ratification of a contract by a corporation is nothing more or less than the making of an original contract. The theory of corporate ratification is predicated on the right of a corporation to contract, and any ratification or adoption is equivalent to a grant of prior authority."

Indeed, our law pronounces that "[r]atification cleanses the contract from all its defects from the moment it was constituted." By corporate confirmation, the contracts executed by Kalaw are thus purged of whatever vice or defect they may have.

In sum, a case is here presented whereunder, even in the face of an express by-law requirement of prior approval, the law on corporations is not to be held so rigid and inflexible as to fail to recognize equitable considerations. And, the conclusion inevitably is that the embattled contracts remain valid.

- Rural Bank Of Milaor (Camarines Sur) vs. Francisca Ocfemia, Rowena Barrogo, Marife O. Niño, Felicisimo Ocfemia, Renato Ocfemia Jr., and Winston Ocfemia, G.R. No. 137686, February 8, 2000

RURAL BANK OF MILAOR (CAMARINES SUR), Petitioner–versus- FRANCISCA OCFEMIA, ROWENA BARROGO, MARIFE O. NIÑO, FELICISIMO OCFEMIA, RENATO OCFEMIA JR, and WINSTON OCFEMIA, Respondents.
G.R. No. 137686 , THIRD DIVISION, February 8, 2000, PANGANIBAN, J.

It is settled that when, in the usual course of business of a corporation, an officer has been allowed in his official capacity to manage its affairs, his authority to represent the corporation may be implied from the manner in which he has been permitted by the directors to manage its business.

Notwithstanding the putative authority of the manager to bind the bank in the Deed of Sale, petitioner has failed to file an answer to the Petition below within the reglementary period, let alone present evidence controverting such authority. Indeed, when one of herein respondents, Marife S. Nino, went to the bank to ask for the board resolution, she was merely told to bring the receipts. The bank failed to categorically declare that Tena had no authority.

FACTS

Marife O. Niño, one of the [respondents] in this case, show[s] that she is the daughter of Francisca Ocfemia, a co-[respondent] in this case, and the late Renato Ocfemia who died on July 23, 1994. The parents of her father, Renato Ocfemia, were Juanita Arellano Ocfemia and Felicisimo Ocfemia. Her other co-[respondents] Rowena O. Barrogo, Felicisimo Ocfemia, Renato Ocfemia, Jr. and Winston Ocfemia are her brothers and sisters.

Marife O. Niño knows the five (5) parcels of land subject of this case which are located in Bombon, Camarines Sur and that they are the ones possessing them which were originally owned by her grandparents, Juanita Arellano Ocfemia and Felicisimo Ocfemia. During the lifetime of her grandparents, [respondents] mortgaged the said five (5) parcels of land and two (2) others to the [petitioner] Rural Bank of Milaor.

The spouses Felicisimo Ocfemia and Juanita Arellano Ocfemia were not able to redeem the mortgaged properties consisting of seven (7) parcels of land and so the mortgage was foreclosed and thereafter ownership thereof was transferred to the [petitioner] bank. Out of the seven (7) parcels that were foreclosed, five (5) of them are in the possession of the [respondents] because these five (5) parcels of land described in paragraph 6 of the petition were sold by the [petitioner] bank to the parents of Marife O. Niño.

The aforementioned five (5) parcels of land subject of the deed of sale, have not been, however transferred in the name of the parents of Merife O. Niño after they were sold to her parents by the [petitioner] bank because according to the Assessor's Office the five (5) parcels of land, subject of the sale, cannot be transferred in the name of the buyers as there is a need to have the document of sale registered with the Register of Deeds of Camarines Sur.

In view of the foregoing, Marife O. Niño went to the Register of Deeds of Camarines Sur with the Deed of Sale in order to have the same registered. The Register of Deeds, however, informed her that the document of sale cannot be registered without a board resolution of the [petitioner] Bank. Marife Niño then went to the bank, showed to if the Deed of Sale, the tax declaration and receipt of tax payments and requested the [petitioner] for a board resolution so that the property can be transferred to the name of Renato Ocfemia the husband of petitioner Francisca Ocfemia and the father of the other [respondents] having died already.

The [petitioner] bank refused her request for a board resolution and made many alibi[s]. She was told that the [petitioner] bank ha[d] a new manager and it had no record of the sale. She was asked and she complied with the request of the [petitioner] for a copy of the deed of sale and receipt of payment. The president of the [petitioner] bank told her to get an authority from her parents and other [respondents] and receipts evidencing payment of the consideration appearing in the deed of sale. She complied with said requirements and after she gave all these documents, Marife O. Niño was again told to wait for two (2) weeks because the [petitioner] bank would still study the matter.

After two (2) weeks, Marife O. Niño returned to the [petitioner] bank and she was told that the resolution of the board would not be released because the [petitioner] bank ha[d] no records from the old manager. Because of this, Marife O. Niño brought the matter to her lawyer and the latter wrote a letter on December 22, 1995 to the [petitioner] bank inquiring why no action was taken by the board of the request for the issuance of the resolution considering that the bank was already fully paid [for] the consideration of the sale since January 1988 as shown by the deed of sale itself.

On January 15, 1996 the [petitioner] bank answered [respondents'] lawyer's letter informing the latter that the request for board resolution ha[d] already been referred to the board of directors of the [petitioner] bank with another request that the latter should be furnished with a certified machine copy of the receipt of payment covering the sale between the [respondents] and the [petitioner]. This request of the [petitioner] bank was already complied [with] by Marife O. Niño even before she brought the matter to her lawyer.

After several days from receipt of the letter when Marife O. Niño went to the [petitioner] again and reiterated her request, the manager of the [petitioner] bank told her that they could not issue the required board resolution as the [petitioner] bank ha[d] no records of the sale. Because of this Merife O. Niño already went to their lawyer and ha[d] this petition filed.

ISSUE

Whether or not the board of directors of a rural banking corporation be compelled to confirm a deed of absolute sale of real property owned by the corporation which deed of sale was executed by the bank manager without prior authority of the board of directors of the rural banking corporation. (YES)

RULING

Respondents based their action before the trial court on the Deed of Sale, the substance of which was alleged in and a copy thereof was attached to the Petition for Mandamus. The Deed named Fe S. Tena as the representative of the bank. Petitioner, however, failed to specifically deny under oath the allegations in that contract. In fact, it filed no answer at all, for which reason it was declared in default.

In failing to file its answer specifically denying under oath the Deed of Sale, the bank admitted the due execution of the said contract. Such admission means that it acknowledged that Tena was authorized to sign the Deed of Sale on its behalf. [13] Thus, defenses that are inconsistent with the due execution and the genuineness of the written instrument are cut off by an admission implied from a failure to make a verified specific denial.

In any event, the bank acknowledged, by its own acts or failure to act, the authority of Fe S. Tena to enter into binding contracts. After the execution of the Deed of Sale, respondents occupied the properties in dispute and paid the real estate taxes due thereon. If the bank management believed that it had title to the property, it should have taken some measures to prevent the infringement or invasion of its title thereto and possession thereof.

Likewise, Tena had previously transacted business on behalf of the bank, and the latter had acknowledged her authority. A bank is liable to innocent third persons where representation is made in the course of its normal business by an agent like Manager Tena, even though such agent is abusing her authority. Clearly, persons dealing with her could not be blamed for believing that she was authorized to transact business for and on behalf of the bank.

It is settled that when, in the usual course of business of a corporation, an officer has been allowed in his official capacity to manage its affairs, his authority to represent the corporation may be implied from the manner in which he has been permitted by the directors to manage its business.

Notwithstanding the putative authority of the manager to bind the bank in the Deed of Sale, petitioner has failed to file an answer to the Petition below within the reglementary period, let alone present evidence controverting such authority. Indeed, when one of herein respondents, Marife S. Nino, went to the bank to ask for the board resolution, she was merely told to bring the receipts. The bank failed to categorically declare that Tena had no authority.

In this light, the bank is estopped from questioning the authority of the bank manager to enter into the contract of sale. If a corporation knowingly permits one of its officers or any other agent to act within the scope of an apparent authority, it holds the agent out to the public as possessing the power to do those acts; thus, the corporation will, as against anyone who has in good faith dealt with it through such agent, be estopped from denying the agent's authority.

Unquestionably, petitioner has authorized Tena to enter into the Deed of Sale. Accordingly, it has a clear legal duty to issue the board resolution sought by respondent's. Having authorized her to sell the property, it behooves the bank to confirm the Deed of Sale so that the buyers may enjoy its full use.

The board resolution is, in fact, mere paper work. Nonetheless, it is paper work necessary in the orderly operations of the register of deeds and the full enjoyment of respondents' rights. Petitioner-bank persistently and unjustifiably refused to perform its legal duty. Worse, it was less than candid in dealing with respondents regarding this matter. In this light, the Court finds it proper to assess the bank treble costs, in addition to the award of damages.

- Westmont Bank (formerly Associated Citizens Bank and now United Overseas Bank, Phils.) And The Provincial Sheriff of Rizal vs. Inland Construction and Development Corp., G.R. No. 123650, March 23, 2009

WESTMONT BANK (formerly ASSOCIATED CITIZENS BANK and now UNITED OVERSEAS BANK, PHILS.) AND THE PROVINCIAL SHERIFF OF RIZAL*, Petitioners–versus-* INLAND CONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT CORP, Respondent.
G.R. No. 123650 , SECOND DIVISION, March 23, 2009, CARPIO MORALES, J.

FACTS

Inland Construction and Development Corp. (Inland) obtained various loans and other credit accommodations from petitioner, then known as Associated Citizens Bank ([the bank] which later became United Overseas Bank, Phils., and still later Westmost Bank) in 1977.

To secure the payment of its obligations, Inland executed real estate mortgages over three real properties in Pasig City. Inland likewise issued promissory notes in favor of the bank.

When the first and second promissory notes fell due, Inland defaulted in its payments. It, however, authorized the bank to debit ₱350,000 from its savings account to partially satisfy its obligations.

It appears that by a Deed of Assignment, Conveyance and Release, Felix Aranda, President of Inland, assigned and conveyed all his rights and interests at Hanil-Gonzales Construction & Development (Phils.) Corporation (Hanil-Gonzales Corporation) in favor of Horacio Abrantes (Abrantes), Executive Vice-President and General Manager of Hanil-Gonzales Corporation. Under the same Deed of Assignment, it appears that Abrantes assumed, among other obligations of Inland and Aranda, Promissory Note No. BD-2884-77 in the amount of ₱800,000 as shown in the May 26, 1978 Deed of Assignment of Obligation in which Aranda and Inland, on one hand, and Abrantes and Hanil-Gonzales Corporation, on the other, forged. The bank's Account Officer, Lionel Calo Jr. (Calo), signed for its conformity to the deed.

Inland was served a Notice of Sheriff's Sale foreclosing the real estate mortgages over its real properties, prompting it to file a complaint for injunction against the bank and the Provincial Sheriff of Rizal at the Regional Trial Court (RTC) of Pasig City. This complaint was later amended. Answering the amended complaint, the bank underscored that it "had no knowledge, much less did it give its conformity to the alleged assignment of the obligation.

The trial court found that the bank ratified the act of its account officer Calo, thus: Culled from the evidence on record, the Court finds that the defendant Bank ratified the act of Calo when its Executive Committee failed to repudiate the assignment within a reasonable time and even approved the request for a restructuring of Liberty Const. & Dev. Corp./Hanil-Gonzales Construction & Development Corp.'s obligations, which included the ₱880,000.00 loan (Exhibit "U" to "X", and its submarkings). Clearly, the assumption of the loan was very well known to the defendant Bank and the latter posed no objection to it. In fact, the positive act on the part of the defendant in restructuring the loan of the assignee attest to its consent in the said transaction.

The evidence on record conveys the fact that the Hanil-Gonzales Const. and Development Corp. assumed the obligation of the plaintiff on the SECOND NOTE. Later, it asked the defendant for a restructuring of its loan, including the ₱880,000.00 loan. Thereafter, payments were made by the assignee to the defendant Bank. The preponderance of evidence tilts heavily in favor of the plaintiff claiming that a case of delegacion occurs.

RTC accordingly rendered judgment in favor of Inland. The bank appealed the trial court's decision to the Court of Appeals. CA modified RTC's decision, the decision appealed from is AFFIRMED only insofar as it finds appellant Associated Bank to have ratified the Deed of Assignment (Exhibit "O"), but REVERSED in all other respects, and judgment is accordingly rendered ordering the plaintiff-appellee Inland Construction and Development Corporation to pay defendant-appellant Associated Bank the sum of One Hundred Eighty Six Thousand Two Hundred Forty One Pesos and Eighty Six Centavos (₱186,241.86) with legal interest thereon computed from December 21, 1979 until the same is fully paid.

In the instant case, both the assignors (Aranda and Inland) and assignees (Abrantes and Hanil-Gonzales) in the subject deed of assignment have been major clients of Associated Bank for several years with accounts amounting to millions of pesos. For several years, Associated Bank had, either intentionally or negligently, been habitually clothing Calo with the apparent powers to perform acts in behalf of the bank.

Calo signed the subject deed of assignment on or about May 26, 1978. The principal obligation covered by the deed involved a hefty sum of eight hundred eighty thousand pesos (P880,000.00). Despite the enormity of the amount involved, Associated Bank never made any attempt to repudiate the act of Calo until almost seven (7) years later, when Mitos C. Olivares, Manager of the Cash Department of Associatd Bank, issued an INTER-OFFICE MEMORANDUM dated May 20, 1985 which pertinently reads:

"2) Conforme of Associated Bank signed by Lionel Calo Jr. has no bearing since he has no authority to sign for the bank as he was only an account officer with no signing authority

The abovequoted inter-office memorandum is addressed internally to the other offices within Associated Bank. It is not addressed to Inland or any outsider for that matter. Worse, it was not even offered in evidence by Associated Bank to give Inland the opportunity to object to or comment on the said document, but was merely attached as one of the annexes to the bank's MEMORANDUM FOR DEFENDANTS.

The bank moved for partial reconsideration of the appellate court's decision on the aspect of its ratification of the Deed of Assignment but the same was denied by Resolution of January 24, 1996. The bank, via two different counsels, filed before this Court separate petitions for review, G.R. No. 123650, Associated Citizens Bank, et al. v. Court of Appeals, et al; and G.R. No. 123822, Westmont Bank (formerly Associated Bank) v. Inland Construction & Development Corp., assailing the same appellate court's decision.

ISSUE

Whether or not Court of Appeals erred in affirming the finding of the trial court that petitioner have ratified the deed of assignment. (NO)

RULING

The bank, which had, as reflected early on, become known as Westmont Bank (petitioner), maintains that Calo had no authority to bind it in the Deed of Assignment and that a single, isolated unauthorized act of its agent is not sufficient to establish that it clothed him with apparent authority. Petitioner adds that the records fail to disclose evidence of similar acts of Calo executed either in its favor or in favor of other parties.[19] Moreover, petitioner reasserts that the unauthorized act of Calo never came to its knowledge, hence, it is not estopped from repudiating the Deed of Assignment. The petitions fail.

The general rule remains that, in the absence of authority from the board of directors, no person, not even its officers, can validly bind a corporation. If a corporation, however, consciously lets one of its officers, or any other agent, to act within the scope of an apparent authority, it will be estopped from denying such officer's authority.

The records show that Calo was the one assigned to transact on petitioner's behalf respecting the loan transactions and arrangements of Inland as well as those of Hanil-Gonzales and Abrantes. Since it conducted business through Calo, who is an Account Officer, it is presumed that he had authority to sign for the bank in the Deed of Assignment.

Petitioner cannot feign ignorance of the May 26, 1978 Deed of Assignment, the pertinent portion of which was quoted above. Notably, assignee Abrantes notified petitioner about his assumption of Inland's obligation. Thus, in his July 26, 1979 letter to petitioner, he wrote:

This refers to the accounts of Liberty Construction and Development Corporation (LCDC) and our sister-company, Hanil-Gonzalez Construction & Development Corporation (HGCDC) which as of July 31, 1979 was computed at ₱1,814,442.40, inclusive of interest, penalties and fees, net of marginal deposits. This includes the account of Inland Construction & Development Corporation which had been assumed by HGCDC.

That petitioner sent the following reply-letter, dated November 29, 1982, to the above-quoted letter to it of assignee Abrantes indicates that it had full and complete knowledge of the assumption by Abrantes of Inland's obligation: We are pleased to advise you that our Executive Committee in its meeting last November 25, 1982, has approved your request for the restructuring of your outstanding obligations x x x x.

Respecting this reply-letter of the bank granting Hanil-Gonzales' request to restructure its loans, petitioner, as a banking institution, is expected to have exercised the highest degree of diligence and meticulousness in the conduct of its business. When it received the loan restructuring request, with specific mention of Inland's Promissory Note No. BD-2884-77, petitioner-bank was under obligation to fastidiously scrutinize such loan account. And since it clearly approved the request for restructuring, any "uncertainty" that its reply-letter approving such request may not thus work to prejudice Hanil-Gonzales or Inland.

In the present petitions, petitioner-bank failed to discharge its primary burden of proving that Calo was notauthorized to bind it, as it did not present proof that Calo was unauthorized. It did not present, much less cite, any Resolution from its Board of Directors or its Charter or By-laws from which the Court could reasonably infer that he indeed had no authority to sign in its behalf or bind it in the Deed of Assignment. The May 20, 1985 inter-office memorandum[28] stating that Calo had "no signing authority" remains self-serving as it does not even form part of petitioner's body of evidence. Thus, the assertion that the petitioner cannot be faulted for its delay in repudiating the apparent authority of Calo is similarly flawed, there being no evidence on record that it had actually repudiated such apparent authority. It should be noted that it was the bank which pleaded that defense in the first place. What is extant in the records is a reasonable certainty that the bank had ratified the Deed of Assignment.

- Associated Bank vs. Spouses Rafael and Monaliza Pronstroller, G.R. No. 148444, July 14, 2008

ASSOCIATED BANK (now UNITED OVERSEAS BANK [PHILS.]), Petitioner–versus- SPOUSES RAFAEL and MONALIZA PRONSTROLLER, Respondent.
G.R. No. 148444, THIRD DIVISION, July 14, 2008, NACHURA, J.

The authority of a corporate officer or agent in dealing with third persons may be actual or apparent. The doctrine of "apparent authority," with special reference to banks, had long been recognized in this jurisdiction. Apparent authority is derived not merely from practice. Its existence may be ascertained through 1) the general manner in which the corporation holds out an officer or agent as having the power to act, or in other words, the apparent authority to act in general, with which it clothes him; or 2) the acquiescence in his acts of a particular nature, with actual or constructive knowledge thereof, within or beyond the scope of his ordinary powers.

Hence, petitioner may not impute negligence on the part of the respondents in failing to find out the scope of Atty. Soluta's authority. Indeed, the public has the right to rely on the trustworthiness of bank officers and their acts.

FACTS

Spouses Eduardo and Ma. Pilar Vaca (spouses Vaca) executed a Real Estate Mortgage (REM) in favor of the petitioner over their parcel of residential land and the house constructed thereon, located at No. 18, Lovebird Street, Green Meadows Subdivision 1, Quezon City (herein referred to as the subject property). For failure of the spouses Vaca to pay their obligation, the subject property was sold at public auction with the petitioner as the highest bidder. Transfer Certificate of Title (TCT) in the name of spouses Vaca was cancelled and a new one was issued in the name of the petitioner.

The spouses Vaca, however, commenced an action for the nullification of the real estate mortgage and the foreclosure sale. Petitioner, on the other hand, filed a petition for the issuance of a writ of possession which was denied by the RTC. Petitioner, thereafter, obtained a favorable judgment when the CA granted its petition but the spouses Vaca questioned the CA decision before this Court.

During the pendency of the aforesaid cases, petitioner advertised the subject property for sale to interested buyers for ₱9,700,000.00. Respondents Rafael and Monaliza Pronstroller offered to purchase the property for ₱7,500,000.00. Said offer was made through Atty. Jose Soluta, Jr. (Atty. Soluta), petitioner's Vice-President, Corporate Secretary and a member of its Board of Directors. Petitioner accepted respondents' offer of ₱7.5 million. Consequently, respondents paid petitioner ₱750,000.00 as down payment.

Atty. Soluta, and respondents, executed a Letter-Agreement setting forth therein the terms and conditions of the sale: Selling price shall be at ₱7,500,000.00 payable within ninety (90) days from date hereof. Any interest earned on the aforesaid investment shall be for the buyer's account. However, the 10% deposit is non-interest earning.

Prior to the expiration of the 90-day period, in view of the pendency of the case between the spouses Vaca and petitioner involving the subject property, respondents requested that the balance of the purchase price be made payable only upon service on them of a final decision or resolution of this Court affirming petitioner's right to possess the subject property. Atty. Soluta referred respondents' proposal to petitioner's Asset Recovery and Remedial Management Committee (ARRMC) but the latter deferred action thereon.

On July 14, 1993, a month after they made the request and after the payment deadline had lapsed, respondents and Atty. Soluta, acting for the petitioner, executed another Letter-Agreement allowing the former to pay the balance of the purchase price upon receipt of a final order from this Court (in the Vaca case) and/or the delivery of the property to them free from occupants.

Towards the end of 1993, or in early 1994, petitioner reorganized its management. Atty. Braulio Dayday (Atty. Dayday) became petitioner's Assistant Vice-President and Head of the Documentation Section, while Atty. Soluta was relieved of his responsibilities. Atty. Dayday reviewed petitioner's records of its outstanding accounts and discovered that respondents failed to deposit the balance of the purchase price of the subject property.

He, likewise, found that respondents requested for an extension of time within which to pay. The matter was then resubmitted to the ARRMC during its meeting on March 4, 1994, and it was disapproved. ARRMC, thus, referred the matter to petitioner's Legal Department for rescission or cancellation of the contract due to respondents' breach thereof.

Atty. Dayday informed respondents that their request for extension was disapproved by ARRMC and, in view of their breach of the contract, petitioner was rescinding the same and forfeiting their deposit. Petitioner added that if respondents were still interested in buying the subject property, they had to submit their new proposal. Respondents went to the petitioner's office, talked to Atty. Dayday and gave him the Letter-Agreement of July 14, 1993 to show that they were granted an extension. However, Atty. Dayday claimed that the letter was a mistake and that Atty. Soluta was not authorized to give such extension.

On June 6, 1994, respondents proposed to pay the balance of the purchase price as follows: ₱3,000,000.00 upon the approval of their proposal and the balance after six (6) months. However, the proposal was disapproved by the petitioner's President.

In a letter dated June 9, 1994, petitioner advised respondents that the former would accept the latter's proposal only if they would pay interest at the rate of 24.5% per annum on the unpaid balance. Petitioner also allowed respondents a refund of their deposit of ₱750,000.00 if they would not agree to petitioner's new proposal.
For failure of the parties to reach an agreement, respondents, through their counsel, informed petitioner that they would be enforcing their agreement dated July 14, 1993. Petitioner countered that it was not aware of the existence of the July 14 agreement and that Atty. Soluta was not authorized to sign for and on behalf of the bank. It, likewise, reiterated the rescission of their previous agreement because of the breach committed by respondents.

On July 14, 1994, in the Vaca case, this Court upheld petitioner's right to possess the subject property. On July 28, 1994, respondents commenced the instant suit by filing a Complaint for Specific Performance before the RTC of Antipolo, Rizal. Respondents prayed that petitioner be ordered to sell the subject property to them in accordance with their letter-agreement of July 14, 1993. They, likewise, caused the annotation of a notice of lis pendens at the dorsal portion of TCT of the subject property.

For its part, petitioner contended that their contract had already been rescinded because of respondents' failure to deposit in escrow the balance of the purchase price within the stipulated period.

During the pendency of the case, petitioner sold the subject property to the spouses Vaca, who eventually registered the sale; and on the basis thereof, TCT No. 52593 was cancelled and TCT No. 158082 was issued in their names. As new owners, the spouses Vaca started demolishing the house on the subject property which, however, was not completed by virtue of the writ of preliminary injunction issued by the court.

The trial court finally resolved the matter in favor of respondents finding the defendant's rescission of the Agreement to Sell to be null and void for being contrary to law and public policy. ACCORDINGLY, defendant bank is hereby ordered to accept plaintiffs' payment of the balance of the purchase price and to deliver the title and possession to subject property, free from all liens and encumbrances upon receipt of said payment.

Applying the rule of "apparent authority," the court upheld the validity of the July 14, 1993 Letter-Agreement where the respondents were given an extension within which to make payment. Consequently, respondents did not incur in delay, and thus, the court concluded that the rescission of the contract was without basis and contrary to law.

On appeal, the CA affirmed the RTC decision and upheld Atty. Soluta's authority to represent the petitioner. It further ruled that petitioner had no right to unilaterally rescind the contract; otherwise, it would give the bank officers license to continuously review and eventually rescind contracts entered into by previous officers.

As to whether respondents were estopped from enforcing the July 14, 1993 Letter-Agreement, the appellate court ruled in the negative. It found, instead, that petitioners were estopped from questioning the efficacy of the July 14 agreement because of its failure to repudiate the same for a period of one year. CA ordered Westmont Bank to execute a "Deed of Absolute Sale" in favor of the Appellees over the property and ordered Register of Deeds is hereby ordered to cancel Transfer Certificate of Title under the names of the Spouses Vaca and to issue another under the names of the Appellees.

Petitioner's motion for reconsideration was denied. Hence, this petition.

ISSUE

Whether or not petitioner bound by the July 14, 1993 Letter-Agreement signed by Atty. Soluta under the doctrine of apparent authority. (YES)

RULING

The general rule is that, in the absence of authority from the board of directors, no person, not even its officers, can validly bind a corporation. The power and responsibility to decide whether the corporation should enter into a contract that will bind the corporation is lodged in the board of directors. However, just as a natural person may authorize another to do certain acts for and on his behalf, the board may validly delegate some of its functions and powers to officers, committees and agents. The authority of such individuals to bind the corporation is generally derived from law, corporate bylaws or authorization from the board, either expressly or impliedly, by habit, custom, or acquiescence, in the general course of business.

The authority of a corporate officer or agent in dealing with third persons may be actual or apparent. The doctrine of "apparent authority," with special reference to banks, had long been recognized in this jurisdiction. Apparent authority is derived not merely from practice. Its existence may be ascertained through 1) the general manner in which the corporation holds out an officer or agent as having the power to act, or in other words, the apparent authority to act in general, with which it clothes him; or 2) the acquiescence in his acts of a particular nature, with actual or constructive knowledge thereof, within or beyond the scope of his ordinary powers.

Accordingly, the authority to act for and to bind a corporation may be presumed from acts of recognition in other instances, wherein the power was exercised without any objection from its board or shareholders. Undoubtedly, petitioner had previously allowed Atty. Soluta to enter into the first agreement without a board resolution expressly authorizing him; thus, it had clothed him with apparent authority to modify the same via the second letter-agreement. It is not the quantity of similar acts which establishes apparent authority, but the vesting of a corporate officer with the power to bind the corporation.

Naturally, the third person has little or no information as to what occurs in corporate meetings; and he must necessarily rely upon the external manifestations of corporate consent. The integrity of commercial transactions can only be maintained by holding the corporation strictly to the liability fixed upon it by its agents in accordance with law. What transpires in the corporate board room is entirely an internal matter. Hence, petitioner may not impute negligence on the part of the respondents in failing to find out the scope of Atty. Soluta's authority. Indeed, the public has the right to rely on the trustworthiness of bank officers and their acts.

As early as June 1993, or prior to the 90-day period within which to make the full payment, respondents already requested a modification of the earlier agreement such that the full payment should be made upon receipt of this Court's decision confirming petitioner's right to the subject property. The matter was brought to the petitioner's attention and was in fact discussed by the members of the Board. Instead of acting on said request (considering that the 90-day period was about to expire), the board deferred action on the request. It was only after one year and after the bank's reorganization that the board rejected respondents' request.

We cannot therefore blame the respondents in relying on the July 14, 1993 Letter-Agreement. Petitioner's inaction, coupled with the apparent authority of Atty. Soluta to act on behalf of the corporation, validates the July 14 agreement and thus binds the corporation. All these taken together, lead to no other conclusion than that the petitioner attempted to defraud the respondents. This is bolstered by the fact that it forged another contract involving the same property, with another buyer, the spouses Vaca, notwithstanding the pendency of the instant case.

We would like to emphasize that if a corporation knowingly permits its officer, or any other agent, to perform acts within the scope of an apparent authority, holding him out to the public as possessing power to do those acts, the corporation will, as against any person who has dealt in good faith with the corporation through such agent, be estopped from denying such authority.

- Banate vs. Philippine Countryside Rural Bank (Liloan, Cebu), Inc., G.R. No. 163825, July 13, 2010

VIOLETA TUDTUD BANATE, MARY MELGRID M. CORTEL, BONIFACIO CORTEL, ROSENDO MAGLASANG, and PATROCINIA MONILAR, Petitioners–versus- PHILIPPINE COUNTRYSIDE RURAL BANK (LILOAN, CEBU), INC. and TEOFILO SOON, JR*, Respondents.*

G.R. No. 163825, THIRD DIVISION, July 13, 2010, BRION, J.

Under the doctrine of apparent authority, acts and contracts of the agent, as are within the apparent scope of the authority conferred on him, although no actual authority to do such acts or to make such contracts has been conferred, bind the principal. The principals' liability, however, is limited only to third persons who have been led reasonably to believe by the conduct of the principal that such actual authority exists, although none was given. In other words, apparent authority is determined only by the acts of the principal and not by the acts of the agent.

In the present case, the decision of the trial court was utterly silent on the manner by which PCRB, as supposed principal, has clothed or held out its branch manager as having the power to enter into an agreement, as claimed by petitioners. No proof of the course of business, usages and practices of the bank about, or knowledge that the board had or is presumed to have of, its responsible officers' acts regarding bank branch affairs, was ever adduced to establish the branch managers apparentauthority to verbally alter the terms of mortgage contracts. Neither was there any allegation, much less proof, that PCRB ratified Mondigos act or is estopped to make a contrary claim.

FACTS

On July 22, 1997, petitioner spouses Rosendo Maglasang and Patrocinia Monilar (spouses Maglasang) obtained a loan (subject loan) from PCRB for ₱1,070,000.00. The subject loan was evidenced by a promissory note and was payable on January 18, 1998. To secure the payment of the subject loan, the spouses Maglasang executed, in favor of PCRB a real estate mortgage over their property, including the house constructed thereon (collectively referred to as subject properties), owned by petitioners Mary Melgrid and Bonifacio Cortel (spouses Cortel), the spouses Maglasangs daughter and son-in-law, respectively. Aside from the subject loan, the spouses Maglasang obtained two other loans from PCRB which were covered by separate promissory notes and secured by mortgages on their other properties.

Sometime in November 1997 (before the subject loan became due), the spouses Maglasang and the spouses Cortel asked PCRBs permission to sell the subject properties. They likewise requested that the subject properties be released from the mortgage since the two other loans were adequately secured by the other mortgages. The spouses Maglasang and the spouses Cortel claimed that the PCRB, acting through its Branch Manager, Pancrasio Mondigo, verbally agreed to their request but required first the full payment of the subject loan. The spouses Maglasang and the spouses Cortel thereafter sold to petitioner Violeta Banate the subject properties for ₱1,750,000.00. The spouses Magsalang and the spouses Cortel used the amount to pay the subject loan with PCRB. After settling the subject loan, PCRB gave the owners duplicate certificate of title of to Banate, who was able to secure a new title in her name. The title, however, carried the mortgage lien in favor of PCRB, prompting the petitioners to request from PCRB a Deed of Release of Mortgage. As PCRB refused to comply with the petitioners' request, the petitioners instituted an action for specific performance before the RTC to compel PCRB to execute the release deed.

The petitioners additionally sought payment of damages from PCRB, which, they claimed, caused the publication of a news report stating that they surreptitiously caused the transfer of ownership of the subject property. The petitioners considered the news report false and malicious, as PCRB knew of the sale of the subject properties and, in fact, consented thereto.

PCRB countered the petitioners' allegations by invoking the cross-collateral stipulation in the mortgage deed. Accordingly, PCRB claimed that full payment of the three loans, obtained by the spouses Maglasang, was necessary before any of the mortgages could be released; the settlement of the subject loan merely constituted partial payment of the total obligation. Thus, the payment does not authorize the release of the subject properties from the mortgage lien.

PCRB considered Banate as a buyer in bad faith as she was fully aware of the existing mortgage in its favor when she purchased the subject properties from the spouses Maglasang and the spouses Cortel. It explained that it allowed the release of the owners duplicate certificate of title to Banate only to enable her to annotate the sale. PCRB claimed that the release of the title should not indicate the corresponding release of the subject properties from the mortgage constituted thereon.

After trial, the RTC ruled in favor of the petitioners. It noted that the petitioners, as necessitous men, could not have bargained on equal footing with PCRB in executing the mortgage, and concluded that it was a contract of adhesion. Therefore, any obscurity in the mortgage contract should not benefit PCRB.

Since the subject loan had been fully paid, the RTC considered the petitioners as rightfully entitled to a deed of release of mortgage, pursuant to the verbal agreement that the petitioners made with PCRBs branch manager, Mondigo. Thus, the RTC ordered PCRB to execute a deed of release of mortgage over the subject properties, and to pay the petitioners moral damages and attorneys fees. On appeal, the CA reversed the RTCs decision. The CA did not consider as valid the petitioners' new agreement with Mondigo, which would novate the original mortgage contract containing the cross-collateral stipulation. It ruled that Mondigo cannot orally amend the mortgage contract between PCRB, and the spouses Maglasang and the spouses Cortel; therefore, the claimed commitment allowing the release of the mortgage on the subject properties cannot bind PCRB. Since the cross-collateral stipulation in the mortgage contract (requiring full settlement of all three loans before the release of any of the mortgages) is clear, the parties must faithfully comply with its terms.

Dismayed with the reversal by the CA of the RTCs ruling, the petitioners filed the present appeal by certiorari, claiming that the CA ruling is not in accord with established jurisprudence.

ISSUES

1. Whether the purported agreement between the petitioners and Mondigo novated the mortgage contract over the subject properties and is thus binding upon PCRB. (NO)
2. Whether the doctrine of apparent authority apply. (NO)
3. If the first issue is resolved negatively, whether Banate can demand restitution of the amount paid for the subject properties on the theory that the new agreement with Mondigo is deemed rescinded. (NO)

RULING

1. Before we resolve the issues directly posed, we first dwell on the determination of the nature of the cross-collateral stipulation in the mortgage contract. As a general rule, a mortgage liability is usually limited to the amount mentioned in the contract. However, the amounts named as consideration in a contract of mortgage do not limit the amount for which the mortgage may stand as security if, from the four corners of the instrument, the intent to secure future and other indebtedness can be gathered. This stipulation is valid and binding between the parties and is known as the blanket mortgage clause (also known as the dragnet clause).

In the present case, the mortgage contract indisputably provides that the subject properties serve as security, not only for the payment of the subject loan, but also for such other loans or advances already obtained, or still to be obtained. The cross-collateral stipulation in the mortgage contract between the parties is thus simply a variety of a dragnet clause. After agreeing to such stipulation, the petitioners cannot insist that the subject properties be released from mortgage since the security covers not only the subject loan but the two other loans as well.

The petitioners, however, claim that their agreement with Mondigo must be deemed to have novated the mortgage contract. They posit that the full payment of the subject loan extinguished their obligation arising from the mortgage contract, including the stipulated cross-collateral provision. Consequently, consistent with their theory of a novated agreement, the petitioners maintain that it devolves upon PCRB to execute the corresponding Deed of Release of Mortgage.

We find the petitioners argument unpersuasive. Novation, in its broad concept, may either be extinctive or modificatory. It is extinctive when an old obligation is terminated by the creation of a new obligation that takes the place of the former; it is merely modificatory when the old obligation subsists to the extent that it remains compatible with the amendatory agreement. An extinctive novation results either by changing the object or principal conditions (objective or real), or by substituting the person of the debtor or subrogating a third person in the rights of the creditor (subjective or personal). Under this mode, novation would have dual functions one to extinguish an existing obligation, the other to substitute a new one in its place requiring a conflux of four essential requisites: (1) a previous valid obligation; (2) an agreement of all parties concerned to a new contract; (3) the extinguishment of the old obligation; and (4) the birth of a valid new obligation.

The second requisite is lacking in this case. Novation presupposes not only the extinguishment or modification of an existing obligation but, more importantly, the creation of a valid new obligation. For the consequent creation of a new contractual obligation, consent of both parties is, thus, required. As a general rule, no form of words or writing is necessary to give effect to a novation. Nevertheless, where either or both parties involved are juridical entities, proof that the second contract was executed by persons with the proper authority to bind their respective principals is necessary.

2. Section 23 of the Corporation Code expressly provides that the corporate powers of all corporations shall be exercised by the board of directors. The power and the responsibility to decide whether the corporation should enter into a contract that will bind the corporation are lodged in the board, subject to the articles of incorporation, bylaws, or relevant provisions of law. In the absence of authority from the board of directors, no person, not even its officers, can validly bind a corporation.

However, just as a natural person may authorize another to do certain acts for and on his behalf, the board of directors may validly delegate some of its functions and powers to its officers, committees or agents. The authority of these individuals to bind the corporation is generally derived from law, corporate bylaws or authorization from the board, either expressly or impliedly by habit, custom or acquiescence in the general course of business.

The authority of a corporate officer or agent in dealing with third persons may be actual or apparent. Actual authority is either express or implied. The extent of an agents express authority is to be measured by the power delegated to him by the corporation, while the extent of his implied authority is measured by his prior acts which have been ratified or approved, or their benefits accepted by his principal. The doctrine of apparent authority, on the other hand, with special reference to banks, had long been recognized in this jurisdiction. The existence of apparent authority may be ascertained through:

1) the general manner in which the corporation holds out an officer or agent as having the power to act, or in other words, the apparent authority to act in general, with which it clothes him; or

2) the acquiescence in his acts of a particular nature, with actual or constructive knowledge thereof, within or beyond the scope of his ordinary powers.

Under the doctrine of apparent authority, acts and contracts of the agent, as are within the apparent scope of the authority conferred on him, although no actual authority to do such acts or to make such contracts has been conferred, bind the principal. The principals' liability, however, is limited only to third persons who have been led reasonably to believe by the conduct of the principal that such actual authority exists, although none was given. In other words, apparent authority is determined only by the acts of the principal and not by the acts of the agent. There can be no apparent authority of an agent without acts or conduct on the part of the principal; such acts or conduct must have been known and relied upon in good faith as a result of the exercise of reasonable prudence by a third party as claimant, and such acts or conduct must have produced a change of position to the third partys detriment.

In the present case, the decision of the trial court was utterly silent on the manner by which PCRB, as supposed principal, has clothed or held out its branch manager as having the power to enter into an agreement, as claimed by petitioners. No proof of the course of business, usages and practices of the bank about, or knowledge that the board had or is presumed to have of, its responsible officers' acts regarding bank branch affairs, was ever adduced to establish the branch managers apparentauthority to verbally alter the terms of mortgage contracts. Neither was there any allegation, much less proof, that PCRB ratified Mondigos act or is estopped to make a contrary claim.

Further, we would be unduly stretching the doctrine of apparent authority were we to consider the power to undo or nullify solemn agreements validly entered into as within the doctrines ambit. Although a branch manager, within his field and as to third persons, is the general agent and is in general charge of the corporation, with apparent authority commensurate with the ordinary business entrusted him and the usual course and conduct thereof, yet the power to modify or nullify corporate contracts remains generally in the board of directors. Being a mere branch manager alone is insufficient to support the conclusion that Mondigo has been clothed with apparent authority to verbally alter terms of written contracts, especially when viewed against the telling circumstances of this case: the unequivocal provision in the mortgage contract; PCRBs vigorous denial that any agreement to release the mortgage was ever entered into by it; and, the fact that the purported agreement was not even reduced into writing considering its legal effects on the parties interests. To put it simply, the burden of proving the authority of Mondigo to alter or novate the mortgage contract has not been established.

It is a settled rule that persons dealing with an agent are bound at their peril, if they would hold the principal liable, to ascertain not only the fact of agency but also the nature and extent of the agents authority, and in case either is controverted, the burden of proof is upon them to establish it. As parties to the mortgage contract, the petitioners are expected to abide by its terms. The subsequent purported agreement is of no moment, and cannot prejudice PCRB, as it is beyond Mondigos actual or apparent authority, as above discussed.

3. We agree with PCRB. Even if we were to assume that the purported agreement has been sufficiently established, since it is not binding on the bank for lack of authority of PCRBs branch manager, then the prayer for restitution of the amount paid would have no legal basis. Of course, it will be asked:

what then is the legal significance of the payment made by Banate? Article 2154 of the Civil Code reads:

Art 2154. If something is received when there is no right to demand it, and it was unduly delivered through mistake, the obligation to return it arises.

Notwithstanding the payment made by Banate, she is not entitled to recover anything from PCRB under Article 2154. There could not have been any payment by mistake to PCRB, as the check which Banate issued as payment was to her co-petitioner Mary Melgrid Cortel (the payee), and not to PCRB. The same check was simply endorsed by the payee to PCRB in payment of the subject loan that the Maglasangs owed PCRB.

The mistake, if any, was in the perception of the authority of Mondigo, as branch manager, to verbally alter the mortgage contract, and not as to whether the Cortels, as sellers, were entitled to payment. This mistake (on Mondigos lack of authority to alter the mortgage) did not affect the validity of the payment made to the bank as the existence of the loan was never disputed. The dispute was merely on the effect of the payment on the security given.

Consequently, no right to recover accrues in Banates favor as PCRB never dealt with her. The borrowers-mortgagors, on the other hand, merely paid what was really owed. Parenthetically, the subject loan was due on January 18, 1998, but was paid sometime in November 1997. It appears, however, that at the time the complaint was filed, the subject loan had already matured. Consequently, recovery of the amount paid, even under a claim of premature payment, will not prosper.

- Megan Sugar Corporation vs. RTC of Ilo-ilo Br. 68, G.R. no. 170352, June 1, 2011

MEGAN SUGAR CORPORATION, Petitioners–versus- REGIONAL TRIAL COURT of ILOILO, Branch 68, Dumangas, Iloilo; New Frontier Sugar Corporation and EQUITABLE PCI BANK, Respondents.

G.R. No. 170352, SECOND DIVISION, June 1, 2011, PERALTA, J.

One of the instances of estoppel is when the principal has clothed the agent with indicia of authority as to lead a reasonably prudent person to believe that the agent actually has such authority.

With the case of MEGAN, it had all the opportunity to repudiate the authority of Atty. Sabig since all motions, pleadings and court orders were sent to MEGAN's office. However, MEGAN never questioned the acts of Atty. Sabig and even took time and effort to forward all the court documents to him.

FACTS

New Frontier Sugar Corporation (NFSC) obtained a loan from respondent Equitable PCI Bank (EPCIB). Said loan was secured by a real estate mortgage over NFSC's land consisting of ninety-two (92) hectares located in Passi City, Iloilo, and a chattel mortgage over NFSC's sugar mill. Due to liquidity problems and continued indebtedness to EPCIB, NFSC entered into a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) with Central Iloilo Milling Corporation (CIMICO), whereby the latter agreed to take-over the operation and management of the NFSC raw sugar factory and facilities for the period covering crop years 2000 to 2003.

On April 19, 2002, NFSC filed a complaint for specific performance and collection against CIMICO for the latter's failure to pay its obligations under the MOA.

EPCIB instituted extra-judicial foreclosure proceedings over NFSC's land and sugar mill because of NFSC's failure to pay its debt. During public auction, EPCIB was the sole bidder and was thus able to buy the entire property and consolidate the titles in its name. EPCIB then employed the services of Philippine Industrial Security Agency (PISA) to help it in its effort to secure the land and the sugar mill.

CIMICO and petitioner Megan Sugar Corporation (MEGAN) entered into a MOA whereby MEGAN assumed CIMICO's rights, interests and obligations over the property. As a result of the foregoing undertaking, MEGAN started operating the sugar mill.
On November 29, 2002, during the hearing on the motion for intervention, Atty. Reuben Mikhail Sabig (Atty. Sabig) appeared before the RTC and entered his appearance as counsel for MEGAN. Several counsels objected to Atty. Sabig's appearance since MEGAN was not a party to the proceedings; however, Atty. Sabig explained to the court that MEGAN had purchased the interest of CIMICO and manifested that his statements would bind MEGAN.

ISSUE

Whether petitioner is estopped from questioning the assailed orders because of the acts of Atty. Reuben Mikhail Sabig. (YES)

RULING

The doctrine of estoppel is based upon the grounds of public policy, fair dealing, good faith and justice, and its purpose is to forbid one to speak against his own act, representations, or commitments to the injury of one to whom they were directed and who reasonably relied thereon. The doctrine of estoppel springs from equitable principles and the equities in the case. It is designed to aid the law in the administration of justice where without its aid injustice might result. It has been applied by this Court wherever and whenever special circumstances of a case so demand.

Based on the events and circumstances surrounding the issuance of the assailed orders, this Court rules that MEGAN is estopped from assailing both the authority of Atty. Sabig and the jurisdiction of the RTC. While it is true, as claimed by MEGAN, that Atty. Sabig said in court that he was only appearing for the hearing of Passi Sugar's motion for intervention and not for the case itself, his subsequent acts, coupled with MEGAN's inaction and negligence to repudiate his authority, effectively bars MEGAN from assailing the validity of the RTC proceedings under the principle of estoppel.

In the first place, Atty. Sabig is not a complete stranger to MEGAN. As a matter of fact, as manifested by EPCIB, Atty. Sabig and his law firm SABIG SABIG & VINGCO Law Office has represented MEGAN in other cases where the opposing parties involved were also CIMICO and EPCIB. As such, contrary to MEGAN's claim, such manifestation is neither immaterial nor irrelevant, because at the very least, such fact shows that MEGAN knew Atty. Sabig.

MEGAN can no longer deny the authority of Atty. Sabig as they have already clothed him with apparent authority to act in their behalf. It must be remembered that when Atty. Sabig entered his appearance, he was accompanied by Concha, MEGAN's director and general manager. Concha himself attended several court hearings, and on December 17, 2002, even sent a letter to the RTC asking for the status of the case. A corporation may be held in estoppel from denying as against innocent third persons the authority of its officers or agents who have been clothed by it with ostensible or apparent authority.

Atty. Sabig may not have been armed with a board resolution, but the appearance of Concha made the parties assume that MEGAN had knowledge of Atty. Sabig's actions and, thus, clothed Atty. Sabig with apparent authority such that the parties were made to believe that the proper person and entity to address was Atty. Sabig. Apparent authority, or what is sometimes referred to as the "holding out" theory, or doctrine of ostensible agency, imposes liability, not as the result of the reality of a contractual relationship, but rather because of the actions of a principal or an employer in somehow misleading the public into believing that the relationship or the authority exists.

Like the CA, this Court notes that MEGAN never repudiated the authority of Atty. Sabig when all the motions, pleadings and court orders were sent not to the office of Atty. Sabig but to the office of MEGAN, who in turn, would forward all of the same to Atty. Sabig, to wit:

x x x All the motions, pleadings and other notices in the civil case were mailed to Atty. Reuben Mikhail P. Sabig, Counsel for Megan Sugar, NFSC Compound, Barangay Man-it, Passi, Iloilo City which is the address of the Sugar Central being operated by Megan Sugar. The said address is not the real office address of Atty. Sabig. As pointed out by private respondent Equitable PCI Bank, the office address of Atty. Sabig is in Bacolod City. All orders, pleadings or motions filed in Civil Case 02-243 were received in the sugar central being operated by Megan Central and later forwarded by Megan Sugar to Atty. Sabig who is based in Bacolod City. We find it incredible that, granting that there was no authority given to said counsel, the record shows that it was received in the sugar mill operated by Megan and passed on to Atty. Sabig. At any stage, petitioner could have repudiated Atty. Sabig when it received the court pleadings addressed to Atty. Sabig as their counsel.

One of the instances of estoppel is when the principal has clothed the agent with indicia of authority as to lead a reasonably prudent person to believe that the agent actually has such authority. With the case of MEGAN, it had all the opportunity to repudiate the authority of Atty. Sabig since all motions, pleadings and court orders were sent to MEGAN's office. However, MEGAN never questioned the acts of Atty. Sabig and even took time and effort to forward all the court documents to him.

To this Court's mind, MEGAN cannot feign knowledge of the acts of Atty. Sabig, as MEGAN was aware from the very beginning that CIMICO was involved in an on-going litigation. Such fact is clearly spelled out in MEGAN's MOA with CIMICO, to wit:

- Advance Paper Corporation vs. Arma Traders Corporation, G.R. No 176897, December 11, 2013.

ADVANCE PAPER CORPORATION and GEORGE HAW, in his capacity as President of Advance Paper Corporation, Petitioners–versus- ARMA TRADERS CORPORATION, MANUEL TING, CHENG GUI and BENJAMIN NG, Respondents.

G.R. No. 176897, SECOND DIVISION, December 11, 2013, BRION, J.

A corporate officer or agent may represent and bind the corporation in transactions with third persons to the extent that [the] authority to do so has been conferred upon him, and this includes powers as, in the usual course of the particular business, are incidental to, or may be implied from, the powers intentionally conferred, powers added by custom and usage, as usually pertaining to the particular officer or agent, and such apparent powers as the corporation has caused person dealing with the officer or agent to believe that it has conferred.

In the present petition, we do not agree with the CA's findings that Arma Traders is not liable to pay the loans due to the lack of board resolution authorizing Tan and Uy to obtain the loans. To begin with, Arma Traders' Articles of Incorporation provides that the corporation may borrow or raise money to meet the financial requirements of its business by the issuance of bonds, promissory notes and other evidence of indebtedness.

FACTS

Petitioner Advance Paper is a domestic corporation engaged in the business of producing, printing, manufacturing, distributing and selling of various paper products. Petitioner George Haw (Haw) is the President while his wife, Connie Haw, is the General Manager.

Respondent Arma Traders is also a domestic corporation engaged in the wholesale and distribution of school and office supplies, and novelty products.6 Respondent Antonio Tan (Tan) was formerly the President while respondent Uy Seng Kee Willy (Uy) is the Treasurer of Arma Traders.7 They represented Arma Traders when dealing with its supplier, Advance Paper, for about 14 years.

On the other hand, respondents Manuel Ting, Cheng Gui and Benjamin Ng worked for Arma Traders as Vice-President, General Manager and Corporate Secretary, respectively.

Arma Traders, on various dates, purchased on credit notebooks and other paper products amounting to ₱7,533,001.49 from Advance Paper. As payment for the purchases on credit and the loan transactions, Arma Traders issued 82 postdated checks payable to cash or to Advance Paper. Advance Paper presented the checks to the drawee bank but these were dishonored either for "insufficiency of funds" or "account closed." Despite repeated demands, however, Arma Traders failed to settle its account with Advance Paper. Petitioners then filed a complaint for collection of sum of money with application for preliminary attachment against Arma Traders, Tan, Uy, Ting, Gui, and Ng.

The petitioners claimed that the respondents fraudulently issued the postdated checks as payment for the purchases and loan transactions knowing that they did not have sufficient funds with the drawee banks.

The respondents however, argued that the purchases on credit were spurious, simulated and fraudulent since there was no delivery of the ₱7,000,000.00 worth of notebooks and other paper products.

As to the loan transactions, the respondents countered that these were the personal obligations of Tan and Uy to Advance Paper. These loans were never intended to benefit the respondents.

The respondents also claimed that the loan transactions were ultra vires because the board of directors of Arma Traders did not issue a board resolution authorizing Tan and Uy to obtain the loans from Advance Paper. They claimed that the borrowing of money must be done only with the prior approval of the board of directors because without the approval, the corporate officers are acting in excess of their authority or ultra vires. When the acts of the corporate officers are ultra vires, the corporation is not liable for whatever acts that these officers committed in excess of their authority. Further, the respondents claimed that Advance Paper failed to verify Tan and Uy's authority to transact business with them. Hence, Advance Paper should suffer the consequences.

The respondents accused Tan and Uy for conspiring with the petitioners to defraud Arma Traders through a series of transactions known as rediscounting of postdated checks. In rediscounting, the respondents explained that Tan and Uy would issue Arma Traders' postdated checks to the petitioners in exchange for cash, discounted by as much as 7% to 10% depending on how long were the terms of repayment. The rediscounted percentage represented the interest or profit earned by the petitioners in these transactions.

Tan did not file his Answer and was eventually declared in default.

On the other hand, Uy filed his Answer but was subsequently declared in default upon his failure to appear during the pre-trial. In his Answer, he admitted that Arma Traders together with its corporate officers have been transacting business with Advance Paper. He claimed that he and Tan have been authorized by the board of directors for the past 13 years to issue checks in behalf of Arma Traders to pay its obligations with Advance Paper. Furthermore, he admitted that Arma Traders' checks were issued to pay its contractual obligations with Advance Paper. However, according to him, Advance Paper was informed beforehand that Arma Traders' checks were funded out of the ₱20,000,000.00 worth of collectibles coming from the provinces. Unfortunately, the expected collectibles did not materialize for unknown reasons.

Ng filed his Answer and claimed that the management of Arma Traders was left entirely to Tan and Uy. Thus, he never participated in the company's daily transactions.

The RTC ruled that the purchases on credit and loans were sufficiently proven by the petitioners. Hence, the RTC ordered Arma Traders to pay Advance Paper the sum of ₱15,321,798.25 with interest, and ₱1,500,000.00 for attorney's fees, plus the cost of the suit.

Upon appeal, the CA reversed the trial court's decision.

ISSUE

Whether Arma Traders is liable to pay the loans applying the doctrine of apparent authority. (YES)

RULING

The doctrine of apparent authority provides that a corporation will be estopped from denying the agent's authority if it knowingly permits one of its officers or any other agent to act within the scope of an apparent authority, and it holds him out to the public as possessing the power to do those acts.76 The doctrine of apparent authority does not apply if the principal did not commit any acts or conduct which a third party knew and relied upon in good faith as a result of the exercise of reasonable prudence. Moreover, the agent's acts or conduct must have produced a change of position to the third party's detriment.

In Inter-Asia Investment Industries v. Court of Appeals, we explained:

Under this provision [referring to Sec. 23 of the Corporation Code], the power and responsibility to decide whether the corporation should enter into a contract that will bind the corporation is lodged in the board, subject to the articles of incorporation, bylaws, or relevant provisions of law. However, just as a natural person who may authorize another to do certain acts for and on his behalf, the board of directors may validly delegate some of its functions and powers to officers, committees or agents. The authority of such individuals to bind the corporation is generally derived from law, corporate bylaws or authorization from the board, either expressly or impliedly by habit, custom or acquiescence in the general course of business, viz.:

A corporate officer or agent may represent and bind the corporation in transactions with third persons to the extent that [the] authority to do so has been conferred upon him, and this includes powers as, in the usual course of the particular business, are incidental to, or may be implied from, the powers intentionally conferred, powers added by custom and usage, as usually pertaining to the particular officer or agent, and such apparent powers as the corporation has caused person dealing with the officer or agent to believe that it has conferred.

[A]pparent authority is derived not merely from practice. Its existence may be ascertained through (1) the general manner in which the corporation holds out an officer or agent as having the power to act or, in other words the apparent authority to act in general, with which it clothes him; or (2) the acquiescence in his acts of a particular nature, with actual or constructive knowledge thereof, within or beyond the scope of his ordinary powers. It requires presentation of evidence of similar act(s) executed either in its favor or in favor of other parties. It is not the quantity of similar acts which establishes apparent authority, but the vesting of a corporate officer with the power to bind the corporation. [emphases and underscores ours]

In People's Aircargo and Warehousing Co., Inc. v. Court of Appeals, we ruled that the doctrine of apparent authority is applied when the petitioner, through its president Antonio Punsalan Jr., entered into the First Contract without first securing board approval. Despite such lack of board approval, petitioner did not object to or repudiate said contract, thus "clothing" its president with the power to bind the corporation.

"Inasmuch as a corporate president is often given general supervision and control over corporate operations, the strict rule that said officer has no inherent power to act for the corporation is slowly giving way to the realization that such officer has certain limited powers in the transaction of the usual and ordinary business of the corporation."80 "In the absence of a charter or bylaw provision to the contrary, the president is presumed to have the authority to act within the domain of the general objectives of its business and within the scope of his or her usual duties."

In the present petition, we do not agree with the CA's findings that Arma Traders is not liable to pay the loans due to the lack of board resolution authorizing Tan and Uy to obtain the loans. To begin with, Arma Traders' Articles of Incorporation provides that the corporation may borrow or raise money to meet the financial requirements of its business by the issuance of bonds, promissory notes and other evidence of indebtedness. Likewise, it states that Tan and Uy are not just ordinary corporate officers and authorized bank signatories because they are also Arma Traders' incorporators along with respondents Ng and Ting, and Pedro Chao. Furthermore, the respondents, through Ng who is Arma Traders' corporate secretary, incorporator, stockholder and director, testified that the sole management of Arma Traders was left to Tan and Uy and that he and the other officers never dealt with the business and management of Arma Traders for 14 years. He also confirmed that since 1984 up to the filing of the complaint against Arma Traders, its stockholders and board of directors never had its meeting.

Thus, Arma Traders bestowed upon Tan and Uy broad powers by allowing them to transact with third persons without the necessary written authority from its non-performing board of directors. Arma Traders failed to take precautions to prevent its own corporate officers from abusing their powers. Because of its own laxity in its business dealings, Arma Traders is now estopped from denying Tan and Uy's authority to obtain loan from Advance Paper.

We also reject the respondents' claim that Advance Paper, through Haw, connived with Tan and Uy. The records do not contain any evidence to prove that the loan transactions were personal to Tan and Uy. A different conclusion might have been inferred had the cashier's checks been issued in favor of Tan and Uy, and had the postdated checks in favor of Advance Paper been either Tan and/or Uy's, or had the respondents presented convincing evidence to show how Tan and Uy conspired with the petitioners to defraud Arma Traders.84 We note that the respondents initially intended to present Sharow Ong, the secretary of Tan and Uy, to testify on how Advance Paper connived with Tan and Uy. As mentioned, the respondents failed to present her on the witness stand.

4. Trust Fund Doctrine

- Ong Yong, et al. vs. David S. Tiu, et al., G.R. No. 144476 & G.R. No. 144629, April 8, 2003

ONG YONG, JUANITA TAN ONG, WILSON T. ONG, ANNA L. ONG, WILLIAM T. ONG, WILLIE T. ONG, and JULIE ONG ALONZO, Petitioners–versus- DAVID S. TIU, CELY Y. TIU, MOLY YU GAW, BELEN SEE YU, D. TERENCE Y. TIU, JOHN YU, LOURDES C. TIU, INTRALAND RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT CORP., MASAGANA TELAMART, INC., REGISTER OF DEEDS OF PASAY CITY, and the SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, Respondents.
G.R. No. 144476, SPECIAL SECOND DIVISION, April 8, 2003, CORONA, J.

The Trust Fund Doctrine, first enunciated by this Court in the 1923 case of Philippine Trust Co. vs. Rivera, provides that subscriptions to the capital stock of a corporation constitute a fund to which the creditors have a right to look for the satisfaction of their claims.

In the instant case, the rescission of the Pre-Subscription Agreement will effectively result in the unauthorized distribution of the capital assets and property of the corporation, thereby violating the Trust Fund Doctrine and the Corporation Code, since rescission of a subscription agreement is not one of the instances when distribution of capital assets and property of the corporation is allowed.

FACTS

In 1994, the construction of the Masagana Citimall in Pasay City was threatened with stoppage and incompletion when its owner, the First Landlink Asia Development Corporation (FLADC), which was owned by David S. Tiu, Cely Y. Tiu, Moly Yu Gow, Belen See Yu, D. Terence Y. Tiu, John Yu and Lourdes C. Tiu (the Tius), encountered dire financial difficulties. It was heavily indebted to the Philippine National Bank (PNB) for P190 million. To stave off foreclosure of the mortgage on the two lots where the mall was being built, the Tius invited Ong Yong, Juanita Tan Ong, Wilson T. Ong, Anna L. Ong, William T. Ong and Julia Ong Alonzo (the Ongs), to invest in FLADC. Under the Pre-Subscription Agreement they entered into, the Ongs and the Tius agreed to maintain equal shareholdings in FLADC: the Ongs were to subscribe to 1,000,000 shares at a par value of P100.00 each while the Tius were to subscribe to an additional 549,800 shares at P100.00 each in addition to their already existing subscription of 450,200 shares. Furthermore, they agreed that the Tius were entitled to nominate the Vice-President and the Treasurer plus 5 directors while the Ongs were entitled to nominate the President, the Secretary and 6 directors (including the chairman) to the board of directors of FLADC. Moreover, the Ongs were given the right to manage and operate the mall.

Accordingly, the Ongs paid P100 million in cash for their subscription to 1,000,000 shares of stock while the Tius committed to contribute to FLADC a four-storey building and two parcels of land respectively valued at P20 million (for 200,000 shares), P30 million (for 300,000 shares) and P49.8 million (for 49,800 shares) to cover their additional 549,800 stock subscription therein. The Ongs paid in another P70 million 3 to FLADC and P20 million to the Tius over and above their P100 million investment, the total sum of which (P190 million) was used to settle the P190 million mortgage indebtedness of FLADC to PNB

The business harmony between the Ongs and the Tius in FLADC, however, was shortlived because the Tius, on 23 February 1996, rescinded the Pre-Subscription Agreement. The Tius accused the Ongs of (1) refusing to credit to them the FLADC shares covering their real property contributions; (2) preventing David S. Tiu and Cely Y. Tiu from assuming the positions of and performing their duties as Vice-President and Treasurer, respectively, and (3) refusing to give them the office spaces agreed upon. The controversy finally came to a head when the case was commenced by the Tius on 27 February 1996 at the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), seeking confirmation of their rescission of the Pre-Subscription Agreement.

After hearing, the SEC, through then Hearing Officer Rolando G. Andaya, Jr., issued a decision confirming the rescission sought by the Tius. On motion of both parties, the above decision was partially reconsidered but only insofar as the Ongs' P70 million was declared not as a premium on capital stock but an advance (loan) by the Ongs to FLADC and that the imposition of interest on it was correct. Both parties appealed to the SEC en banc which rendered a decision on 11 September 1998, affirming the 19 May 1997 decision of the Hearing Officer. The SEC en banc confirmed the rescission of the Pre-Subscription Agreement but reverted to classifying the P70 million paid by the Ongs as premium on capital and not as a loan or advance to FLADC, hence, not entitled to earn interest. On appeal, the Court of Appeals rendered a decision modifying the SEC order of 11 September 1998.

Their motions for reconsideration having been denied, both parties filed separate petitions for review before the Supreme Court. On 1 February 2002, the Supreme Court promulgated its Decision, affirming the assailed decision of the Court of Appeals but with the modifications that the P20 million loan extended by the Ongs to the Tius shall earn interest at 12% per annum to be computed from the time of judicial demand which is from 23 April 1996; that the P70 million advanced by the Ongs to the FLADC shall earn interest at 10% per annum to be computed from the date of the FLADC Board Resolution which is 19 June 1996; and that the Tius shall be credited with 49,800 shares in FLADC for their property contribution, specifically, the 151 sq. m. parcel of land. The Court affirmed the fact that both the Ongs and the Tius violated their respective obligations under the Pre-Subscription Agreement.

On 15 March 2002, the Tius filed before the Court a Motion for Issuance of a Writ of Execution. Aside from their opposition to the Tius' Motion for Issuance of Writ of Execution, the Ongs filed their own "Motion for Reconsideration; Alternatively, Motion for Modification (of the February 1, 2002 Decision)" on 15 March 2002. Willie Ong filed a separate "Motion for Partial Reconsideration" dated 8 March 2002, pointing out that there was no violation of the Pre-Subscription Agreement on the part of the Ongs, among others. On 29 January 2003, the Special Second Division of this Court held oral arguments on the respective positions of the parties. On 27 February 2003, Dr. Willie Ong and the rest of the movants Ong filed their respective memoranda. On 28 February 2003, the Tius submitted their memorandum.

ISSUES

1. Whether the pre-Subscription Agreement executed by the Ongs is actually a subscription contract. (YES)
2. Whether the rescission of Pre-Subscription Agreement would result in unauthorized liquidation. (YES)

RULINGS

1. FLADC was originally incorporated with an authorized capital stock of 500,000 shares with the Tius owning 450,200 shares representing the paid-up capital. When the Tius invited the Ongs to invest in FLADC as stockholders, an increase of the authorized capital stock became necessary to give each group equal (50-50) shareholdings as agreed upon in the Pre-Subscription Agreement. The authorized capital stock was thus increased from 500,000 shares to 2,000,000 shares with a par value of P100 each, with the Ongs subscribing to 1,000,000 shares and the Tius to 549,800 more shares in addition to their 450,200 shares to complete 1,000,000 shares. Thus, the subject matter of the contract was the 1,000,000 unissued shares of FLADC stock allocated to the Ongs. Since these were unissued shares, the parties' Pre-Subscription Agreement was in fact a subscription contract as defined under Section 60, Title VII of the Corporation Code.

A subscription contract necessarily involves the corporation as one of the contracting parties since the subject matter of the transaction is property owned by the corporation — its shares of stock. Thus, the subscription contract (denominated by the parties as a Pre-Subscription Agreement) whereby the Ongs invested P100 million for 1,000,000 shares of stock was, from the viewpoint of the law, one between the Ongs and FLADC, not between the Ongs and the Tius. Otherwise stated, the Tius did not contract in their personal capacities with the Ongs since they were not selling any of their own shares to them. It was FLADC that did. Considering therefore that the real contracting parties to the subscription agreement were FLADC and the Ongs alone, a civil case for rescission on the ground of breach of contract filed by the Tius in their personal capacities will not prosper. Assuming it had valid reasons to do so, only FLADC (and certainly not the Tius) had the legal personality to file suit rescinding the subscription agreement with the Ongs inasmuch as it was the real party in interest therein. Article 1311 of the Civil Code provides that "contracts take effect only between the parties, their assigns and heirs. . ." Therefore, a party who has not taken part in the transaction cannot sue or be sued for performance or for cancellation thereof, unless he shows that he has a real interest affected thereby.

2. The Trust Fund Doctrine, first enunciated by this Court in the 1923 case of Philippine Trust Co. vs. Rivera, provides that subscriptions to the capital stock of a corporation constitute a fund to which the creditors have a right to look for the satisfaction of their claims. This doctrine is the underlying principle in the procedure for the distribution of capital assets, embodied in the Corporation Code, which allows the distribution of corporate capital only in three instances: (1) amendment of the Articles of Incorporation to reduce the authorized capital stock, (2) purchase of redeemable shares by the corporation, regardless of the existence of unrestricted retained earnings, and (3) dissolution and eventual liquidation of the corporation. Furthermore, the doctrine is articulated in Section 41 on the power of a corporation to acquire its own shares and in Section 122 on the prohibition against the distribution of corporate assets and property unless the stringent requirements therefor are complied with.

The distribution of corporate assets and property cannot be made to depend on the whims and caprices of the stockholders, officers or directors of the corporation, or even, for that matter, on the earnest desire of the court a quo "to prevent further squabbles and future litigations" unless the indispensable conditions and procedures for the protection of corporate creditors are followed. Otherwise, the "corporate peace" laudably hoped for by the court will remain nothing but a dream because this time, it will be the creditors' turn to engage in "squabbles and litigations" should the court order an unlawful distribution in blatant disregard of the Trust Fund Doctrine.

In the instant case, the rescission of the Pre-Subscription Agreement will effectively result in the unauthorized distribution of the capital assets and property of the corporation, thereby violating the Trust Fund Doctrine and the Corporation Code, since rescission of a subscription agreement is not one of the instances when distribution of capital assets and property of the corporation is allowed.

Contrary to the Tius' allegation, rescission will, in the final analysis, result in the premature liquidation of the corporation without the benefit of prior dissolution in accordance with Sections 117, 118, 119 and 120 of the Corporation Code. The Tius maintain that rescinding the subscription contract is not synonymous to corporate liquidation because all rescission will entail would be the simple restoration of the status quo ante and a return to the two groups of their cash and property contributions. We wish it were that simple. Very noticeable is the fact that the Tius do not explain why rescission in the instant case will not effectively result in liquidation. The Tius merely refer in cavalier fashion to the end-result of rescission (which incidentally is 100% favorable to them) but turn a blind eye to its unfair, inequitable and disastrous effect on the corporation, its creditors and the Ongs.

In their Memorandum dated February 28, 2003, the Tius claim that rescission of the agreement will not result in an unauthorized liquidation of the corporation because their case is actually a petition to decrease capital stock pursuant to Section 38 of the Corporation Code. Section 122 of the law provides that "(e)xcept by decrease of capital stock, no corporation shall distribute any of its assets or property except upon lawful dissolution and after payment of all its debts and liabilities." The Tius claim that their case for rescission, being a petition to decrease capital stock, does not violate the liquidation procedures under our laws. All that needs to be done, according to them, is for this Court to order (1) FLADC to file with the SEC a petition to issue a certificate of decrease of capital stock and (2) the SEC to approve said decrease. This new argument has no merit.

The Tius' case for rescission cannot validly be deemed a petition to decrease capital stock because such action never complied with the formal requirements for decrease of capital stock under Section 33 of the Corporation Code. No majority vote of the board of directors was ever taken. Neither was there any stockholders meeting at which the approval of stockholders owning at least two-thirds of the outstanding capital stock was secured. There was no revised treasurer's affidavit and no proof that said decrease will not prejudice the creditors' rights. On the contrary, all their pleadings contained were alleged acts of violations by the Ongs to justify an order of rescission.

- Ryuichi Yamamoto vs. Nishino Leather Industries, Inc. and Ikuo Nishino, G.R. No. 150283, April 16, 2008

RYUICHI YAMAMOTO, Petitioner–versus- INDUSTRIES, INC. and IKUO NISHINO*, Respondents.*
G.R. No. 150283, SECOND DIVISION, April 16, 2008, CARPIO MORALES, J.

It is settled that the property of a corporation is not the property of its stockholders or members. Under the trust fund doctrine, the capital stock, property, and other assets of a corporation are regarded as equity in trust for the payment of corporate creditors which are preferred over the stockholders in the distribution of corporate assets. The distribution of corporate assets and property cannot be made to depend on the whims and caprices of the stockholders, officers, or directors of the corporation unless the indispensable conditions and procedures for the protection of corporate creditors are followed.

The machineries and equipment, which comprised Yamamoto's investment in NLII, thus remained part of the capital property of the corporation.

FACTS

In 1983, petitioner, Ryuichi Yamamoto (Yamamoto), a Japanese national, organized under Philippine laws Wako Enterprises Manila, Incorporated (WAKO), a corporation engaged principally in leather tanning, now known as Nishino Leather Industries, Inc. (NLII), one of herein respondents. In 1987, Yamamoto and the other respondent, Ikuo Nishino (Nishino), also a Japanese national, forged a Memorandum of Agreement under which they agreed to enter into a joint venture wherein Nishino would acquire such number of shares of stock equivalent to 70% of the authorized capital stock of WAKO. Eventually, Nishino and his brother Yoshinobu Nishino (Yoshinobu) acquired more than 70% of the authorized capital stock of WAKO, reducing Yamamoto's investment therein to, by his claim, 10%, less than 10% according to Nishino. The corporate name of WAKO was later changed to, as reflected earlier, its current name NLII. Negotiations subsequently ensued in light of a planned takeover of NLII by Nishino who would buy-out the shares of stock of Yamamoto. In the course of the negotiations, Yoshinobu and Nishinos counsel Atty. Emmanuel G. Doce (Atty. Doce) advised Yamamoto by letter dated October 30, 1991, the pertinent portions of which follow:

"Hereunder is a simple memorandum of the subject matters discussed with me by Mr. Yoshinobu Nishino yesterday, October 29th, based on the letter of Mr. Ikuo Nishino from Japan, and which I am now transmitting to you. Machinery and Equipment:

The following machinery/equipment have been contributed by you to the company:
Splitting machine - 1 unit
Samming machine - 1 unit
Forklift - 1 unit
Drums - 4 units
Toggling machine - 2 units

Regarding the above machines, you may take them out with you (for your own use and sale) if you want, provided, the value of such machines is deducted from your and Wakos capital contributions, which will be paid to you.

On the basis of such letter, Yamamoto attempted to recover the machineries and equipment which were, by Yamamoto's admission, part of his investment in the corporation, but he was frustrated by respondents, drawing Yamamoto to file on January 15, 1992 before the Regional Trial Court (RTC) of Makati a complaint against them for replevin.

RTC of Makati issued a writ of replevin after Yamamoto filed a bond. In their Answer with Counterclaim, respondents claimed that the machineries and equipment subject of replevin form part of Yamamoto's capital contributions in consideration of his equity in NLII and should thus be treated as corporate property; and that the above-said letter of Atty. Doce to Yamamoto was merely a proposal, conditioned on Yamamoto's sell-out to Nishino of his entire equity, which proposal was yet to be authorized by the stockholders and Board of Directors of NLII. RTC ruled in favor of Yamamoto and declared him as the rightful owner and possessor of the machineries and made the writ of replevin permanent.

On appeal, the Court of Appeals held in favor of herein respondents and accordingly reversed the RTC decision and dismissed the complaint. In so holding, the appellate court found that the machineries and equipment claimed by Yamamoto are corporate property of NLII and may not thus be retrieved without the authority of the NLII Board of Directors; and that petitioners argument that Nishino and Yamamoto cannot hide behind the shield of corporate fiction does not lie, nor does petitioners invocation of the doctrine of promissory estoppel.

ISSUE

Whether based on the letter of Nishino's counsel, Yamamoto may retrieve the machineries and equipment, which admittedly was part of his investment, bound the corporation. (NO)

RULING

Indeed, without a Board Resolution authorizing respondent Nishino to act for and in behalf of the corporation, he cannot bind the latter. Under the Corporation Law, unless otherwise provided, corporate powers are exercised by the Board of Directors. Contrary to the allegation of Yamamoto, the company is not a mere alter ego of Ikou and Yoshinubo Nishino. While the veil of separate corporate personality may be pierced when the corporation is merely an adjunct, a business conduit, or alter ego of a person, the mere ownership by a single stockholder of even all or nearly all of the capital stocks of a corporation is not by itself a sufficient ground to disregard the separate corporate personality.

Yamamoto argues, in another vein, that promissory estoppel lies against respondents, thus:
Under the doctrine of promissory estoppel, estoppel may arise from the making of a promise, even though without consideration, if it was intended that the promise should be relied upon and in fact it was relied upon, and if a refusal to enforce it would be virtually to sanction the perpetration of fraud or would result in other injustice. It bears noting, however, that the aforementioned paragraph 12 of the letter is followed by a request for Yamamoto to give his comments on all the above, soonest. What was thus proffered to Yamamoto was not a promise, but a mere offer, subject to his acceptance. Without acceptance, a mere offer produces no obligation. Thus, under Article 1181 of the Civil Code,

[i]n conditional obligations, the acquisition of rights, as well as the extinguishment or loss of those already acquired, shall depend upon the happening of the event which constitutes the condition. In the case at bar, there is no showing of compliance with the condition for allowing Yamamoto to take the machineries and equipment, namely, his agreement to the deduction of their value from his capital contribution due him in the buy-out of his interests in NLII. Yamamoto's allegation that he agreed to the condition remained just that, no proof thereof having been presented.

The machineries and equipment, which comprised Yamamoto's investment in NLII, thus remained part of the capital property of the corporation. It is settled that the property of a corporation is not the property of its stockholders or members. Under the trust fund doctrine, the capital stock, property, and other assets of a corporation are regarded as equity in trust for the payment of corporate creditors which are preferred over the stockholders in the distribution of corporate assets. The distribution of corporate assets and property cannot be made to depend on the whims and caprices of the stockholders, officers, or directors of the corporation unless the indispensable conditions and procedures for the protection of corporate creditors are followed.

- DONNINA C. HALLEY v. PRINTWELL, INC., G.R. No. 157549, May 30, 2011, J. Bersamin

- SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION (SEC) AND INSURANCE COMMISSION (IC) v. COLLEGE ASSURANCE PLAN PHILIPPINES, INC., G.R. No. 202052, THIRD DIVISON, March 07, 2018, BERSAMIN, J.

G. Board of Directors and Trustees

2. Doctrine of Centralized Management

- Bitong vs. Court of Appeals, 292 SCRA 503 (1998)

NORA A. BITONG, petitioner, vs. COURT OF APPEALS (FIFTH DIVISION), EUGENIA D. APOSTOL, JOSE A. APOSTOL, MR. & MS. PUBLISHING CO., LETTY J. MAGSANOC, AND ADORACION G. NUYDA, respondents.
NORA A. BITONG, petitioner, vs. COURT OF APPEALS (FIFTH DIVISION) and EDGARDO B. ESPIRITU, respondents.
G.R. No. 123553, (CA-G.R. No. 33291), FIRST DIVISION, July 13, 1998, BELLOSILLO,J.

For a valid transfer of stocks, the requirements are as follows: (a) There must be delivery of the stock certificate; (b) The certificate must be endorsed by the owner or his attorney-in-fact or other persons legally authorized to make the transfer; and, (c) to be valid against third parties, the transfer must be recorded in the books of the corporation. At most, in the instant case, petitioner has satisfied only the third requirement. Compliance with the first two requisites has not been clearly and sufficiently shown. The basis of a stockholder's suit is always one in equity. However, it cannot prosper without first complying with the legal requisites for its institution. The most important of these is the bona fide ownership by a stockholder of a stock in his own right at the time of the transaction complained of which invests him with standing to institute a derivative action for the benefit of the corporation.

FACTS

These twin cases originated from a derivative suit [1] filed by petitioner Nora A. Bitong before the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC hereafter) allegedly for the benefit of private respondent Mr. & Ms. Publishing Co., Inc. (Mr. & Ms. hereafter), among others, to hold respondent spouses Eugenia D. Apostol and Jose A. Apostol liable for fraud, misrepresentation, disloyalty, evident bad faith, conflict of interest and mismanagement in directing the affairs of Mr. & Ms. to the damage and prejudice of Mr. & Ms. and its stockholders, including petitioner.

Petitioner Bitong allegedly acting for the benefit of Mr. & Ms. Co. filed a derivative suit before the SEC against respondent spouses Apostol, who were officers in said corporation, to hold them liable for fraud and mismanagement in directing its affairs. Respondent spouses moved to dismiss on the ground that petitioner had no legal standing to bring the suit as she was merely a holder-in-trust of shares of JAKA Investments which continued to be the true stockholder of Mr. & Ms. Petitioner contends that she was a holder of proper stock certificates and that the transfer was recorded. She further contends that even in the absence of the actual certificate, mere recording will suffice for her to exercise all stockholder rights, including the right to file a derivative suit in the name of the corporation. The SEC Hearing Panel dismissed the suit. On appeal, the SEC En Banc found for petitioner. CA reversed the SEC En Banc decision.

ISSUE

Whether or not petitioner is the true holder of stock certificates to be able institute a derivative suit.

RULING:

NO. Sec. 63 of The Corporation Code expressly provides —

Sec. 63. Certificate of stock and transfer of shares. — The capital stock of stock corporations shall be divided into shares for which certificates signed by the president or vice president, countersigned by the secretary or assistant secretary, and sealed with the seal of the corporation shall be issued in accordance with the by-laws. Shares of stock so issued are personal property and may be transferred by delivery of the certificate or certificates indorsed by the owner or his attorney-in-fact or other person legally authorized to make the transfer. No transfer however shall be valid except as between the parties until the transfer is recorded in the books of the corporation showing the names of the parties to the transaction, the date of the transfer, the number of the certificate or certificates and the number of shares transferred . . . .

This provision above quoted envisions a formal certificate of stock which can be issued only upon compliance with certain requisites. First, the certificates must be signed by the president or vice-president, countersigned by the secretary or assistant secretary, and sealed with the seal of the corporation. A mere typewritten statement advising a stockholder of the extent of his ownership in a corporation without qualification and/or authentication cannot be considered as a formal certificate of stock. Second, delivery of the certificate is an essential element of its issuance. Hence, there is no issuance of a stock certificate where it is never detached from the stock books although blanks therein are properly filled up if the person whose name is inserted therein has no control over the books of the company. Third, the par value, as to par value shares, or the full subscription as to no par value shares, must first be fully paid. Fourth, the original certificate must be surrendered where the person requesting the issuance of a certificate is a transferee from a stockholder.

The certificate of stock itself once issued is a continuing affirmation or representation that the stock described therein is valid and genuine and is at least prima facie evidence that it was legally issued in the absence of evidence to the contrary. However, this presumption may be rebutted. Aside from petitioner's own admissions, several corporate documents disclose that the true party-in-interest is not petitioner but JAKA. It should be emphasized that JAKA executed, a deed of sale over 1,000 Mr. & Ms. shares in favor of respondent Eugenio D. Apostol. On the same day, respondent Apostol signed a declaration of trust stating that she was the registered owner of 1,000 Mr. & Ms. shares covered by a Certificate of Stock. And, there is nothing in the records which shows that JAKA had revoked the trust it reposed on respondent Eugenia D. Apostol. Neither was there any evidence that the principal had requested her to assign and transfer the shares of stock to petitioner. In fine, the records are unclear on how petitioner allegedly acquired the shares of stock of JAKA.

Thus, for a valid transfer of stocks, the requirements are as follows: (a) There must be delivery of the stock certificate; (b) The certificate must be endorsed by the owner or his attorney-in-fact or other persons legally authorized to make the transfer; and, (c) to be valid against third parties, the transfer must be recorded in the books of the corporation. At most, in the instant case, petitioner has satisfied only the third requirement. Compliance with the first two requisites has not been clearly and sufficiently shown.

Considering that the requirements provided under Sec. 63 of The Corporation Code should be mandatorily complied with, the rule on presumption of regularity cannot apply. The regularity and validity of the transfer must be proved. As it is, even the credibility of the stock and transfer book and the entries thereon relied upon by petitioner to show compliance with the third requisite to prove that she was a stockholder since 1983 is highly doubtful.

The basis of a stockholder's suit is always one in equity. However, it cannot prosper without first complying with the legal requisites for its institution. The most important of these is the bona fide ownership by a stockholder of a stock in his own right at the time of the transaction complained of which invests him with standing to institute a derivative action for the benefit of the corporation.

- Citibank, N.A. vs. Chua, 220 SCRA 75 (1993)

CITIBANK, N.A., Petitioner, -versus- HON. SEGUNDINO G. CHUA, SANTIAGO M. KAPUNAN and LUIS L. VICTOR, ASSOCIATE JUSTICES OF THE HON. COURT OF APPEALS, THIRD DIVISION, MANILA, HON. LEONARDO B. CANARES, Judge of Regional, Trial Court of Cebu, Branch 10, and SPOUSES CRESENCIO AND ZENAIDA VELEZ, Respondents

G.R. No. 102300, SECOND DIVISION, March 17, 1993, CAMPOS JR., J.

It is clear that corporate powers may be directly conferred upon corporate officers or agents by statute, the articles of incorporation, the by-laws or by resolution or other act of the board of directors. In addition, an officer who is not a director may also appoint other agents when so authorized by the by-laws or by the board of directors. Such are referred to as express powers. There are also powers incidental to express powers conferred. It is a fundamental principle in the law of agency that every delegation of authority, whether general or special, carries with it, unless the contrary be expressed, implied authority to do all of those acts, naturally and ordinarily done in such cases, which are reasonably necessary and proper to be done in order to carry into effect the main authority conferred.

Since the by-laws are a source of authority for corporate officers and agents of the corporation, a resolution of the Board of Directors of Citibank appointing an attorney in fact to represent and bind it during the pre-trial conference of the case at bar is not necessary because its by-laws allow its officers, to execute a power of attorney to a designated bank officer, William W. Ferguson in this case, clothing him with authority to direct and manage corporate affairs.

FACTS:

Private respondents alleged in their complaint that the petitioner bank extended to them credit lines sufficiently secured with real estate and chattel mortgages on equipment. They claim that petitioner offered them special additional accommodation of Five Million Pesos (P5,000,000.00).

For the failure of petitioner bank to comply with this restructuring agreement private respondents sued for specific performance and damages. Petitioner bank submitted its answer to the complaint filed by private respondents.

On the date of the pre-trial conference, counsel for petitioner bank appeared, presenting a special power of attorney executed by Citibank officer Florencia Tarriela in favor of petitioner bank's counsel, the J.P. Garcia & Associates, to represent and bind petitioner bank at the pre-trial conference of the case at bar.

Inspite of this special power of attorney, counsel for private respondents orally moved to declare petitioner bank as in default on the ground that the special power of attorney was not executed by the Board of Directors of Citibank. Petitioner bank was then required to file a written opposition to this oral motion to declare it as in default.

In its opposition, petitioner bank attached another special power of attorney made by William W. Ferguson, Vice President and highest ranking officer of Citibank, Philippines, constituting and appointing the J.P. Garcia & Associates to represent and bind the BANK at the pre-trial conference and/or trial of the case of "Cresencio Velez, et al. vs. Citibank, N.A.". 4 In an Order dated April 23, 1990, respondent judge denied private respondents' oral motion to declare petitioner bank as in default and set the continuation of the pre-trial conference for May 2, 1990.

On the scheduled pre-trial conference, private respondents reiterated, by way of asking for reconsideration, their oral motion to declare petitioner bank as in default for its failure to appear through an authorized agent and that the documents presented are not in accordance with the requirements of the law.

Respondent judge issued an order declaring petitioner bank as in default. This order, received by petitioner bank cited the following as reason for the declaration of default:

"Defendant-bank, although a foreign corporation, is bound by Philippine laws when doing and conducting business in the Philippines (Sec. 129, B.P. Blg. 68), and its corporate powers could only be exercised by its Board of Directors (Sec. 23, B.P. Blg. 68). The exercise by the Board of Directors of such power could only be valid if it bears the approval of the majority of the Board (Sec. 25, par. 2, Corporation Code). The records does not show the requisite document. The alleged authority (Special Power of Attorney, Annex "A") executed by Mr. William W. Ferguson in favor of the alleged Citibank employees, assuming the same to be a delegable authority, to represent the defendant in the pre-trial conference, made no mention of J.P. Garcia & Associates as one of the employees of the defendant.

It stands to reason therefore, that the defendant-bank has no proper representation during the pre-trial conference. CA affirmed.

Petitioner bank contends that no board resolution was necessary for its legal counsel, Atty. Julius Z. Neri, or Citibank employees to act as its attorney-in-fact in the case at bar because petitioner bank's by-laws grant to its Executing Officer and Secretary Pro-Tem the power to delegate to a Citibank officer, in this case William W. Ferguson, the authority to represent and defend the bank and its interests.

Furthermore, it contends that the Court of Appeals erred in holding that the by-laws of petitioner bank cannot be given effect because it did not have the imprimatur of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) as required by Section 46 of the Corporation Code of the Philippines.

ISSUES:

(1) Whether a resolution of the board of directors of a corporation is always necessary for granting authority to an agent to represent the corporation in court cases (NO)
(2) Whether by-laws of the petitioner foreign corporation which has previously been granted a license to do business in the Philippines, are effective in this jurisdiction (YES)

RULING:

(1)
In the corporate hierarchy, there are three levels of control: (1) the board of directors, which is responsible for corporate policies and the general management of the business affairs of the corporation; (2) the officers, who in theory execute the policies laid down by the board, but in practice often have wide latitude in determining the course of business operations; and (3) the stockholders who have the residual power over fundamental corporate changes, like amendments of the articles of incorporation. However, just as a natural person may authorize another to do certain acts in his behalf, so may the board of directors of a corporation validly delegate some of its functions to individual officers or agents appointed by it.

Thus, although as a general rule, all corporate powers are to be exercised by the board of directors, exceptions are made where the Code provides otherwise.

Section 25 of said Code provides that the directors of the corporation shall elect its corporate officers, and further provides as follows:

> "SEC. 25. Corporate officers; quorum. — . . . The directors or trustees and officers to be elected shall perform the duties enjoined on them by law and by the by-laws of the corporation . . ."

Furthermore, Section 47 of the same Code enumerates what may be contained in the by-laws, among which is a provision for the "qualifications, duties and compensation of directors or trustees, officers and employees"

Taking all the above provisions of law together, it is clear that corporate powers may be directly conferred upon corporate officers or agents by statute, the articles of incorporation, the by-laws or by resolution or other act of the board of directors. In addition, an officer who is not a director may also appoint other agents when so authorized by the by-laws or by the board of directors. Such are referred to as express powers. There are also powers incidental to express powers conferred. It is a fundamental principle in the law of agency that every delegation of authority, whether general or special, carries with it, unless the contrary be expressed, implied authority to do all of those acts, naturally and ordinarily done in such cases, which are reasonably necessary and proper to be done in order to carry into effect the main authority conferred.

Since the by-laws are a source of authority for corporate officers and agents of the corporation, a resolution of the Board of Directors of Citibank appointing an attorney in fact to represent and bind it during the pre-trial conference of the case at bar is not necessary because its by-laws allow its officers, the Executing Officer and the Secretary Pro-Tem, to execute a power of attorney to a designated bank officer, William W. Ferguson in this case, clothing him with authority to direct and manage corporate affairs. The relevant provision in the general power of attorney granted to him are as follows:

"A. That the Executing Officer and the Secretary Pro-Tem are of full age, competent to act in the premises, to me personally known, and that they are authorized to execute this instrument by virtue of the powers granted to them pursuant to the By-Laws of the Bank and the laws of the United States of America, and that the Executing Officer said that he, on the one hand, hereby revokes and cancels any instrument of power of attorney previously executed on behalf of the Bank for use in the PHILIPPINES, in favor of WILLIAM W. FERGUSON (hereinafter referred to as the "Attorney-in-fact"), of legal age, a Banker, and now residing in the PHILIPPINES, and that he (the Executing Officer), on the other hand, does hereby authorize and empower the Attorney-in-fact, acting in the name or on behalf of the Bank, or any of its Branches, or any interest it or they may have or represent, said revocation and authorization to be effective as of this date as follows:

xxx xxx xxx

XVII. To represent and defend the Bank and its interest before any and all judges and courts, of all classes and jurisdictions, in any action, suit or proceeding in which the Bank may be a party or may be interested in administrative, civil, criminal, contentious or contentious-administrative matters, and in all kinds of lawsuits, recourses or proceedings of any kind or nature, with complete and absolute representation of the Bank, whether as plaintiff or defendant, or as an interested party for any reason whatsoever . . .

xxx xxx xxx

XXI. To substitute or delegate this Power of Attorney in whole or in part in favor of such one or more employees of the Bank, as he may deem advisable, but without divesting himself of any of the powers granted to him by this Power of Attorney; and to grant and execute in favor of any one or more such employees, powers of attorney containing all or such authorizations, as he may deem advisable. . . "

Since paragraph XXI above specifically allows Ferguson to delegate his powers in whole or in part, there can be no doubt that the special power of attorney in favor, first, of J.P. Garcia & Associates and later, of the bank's employees, constitutes a valid delegation of Ferguson's express power (under paragraph XVII above) to represent petitioner bank in the pre-trial conference in the lower court.

(2)
The Court of Appeals relied on Section 46 of the Corporation Code to support its conclusion that the by-laws in question are without effect because they were not approved by the SEC. Said section reads as follows:

"SEC. 46. Adoption of by-laws. — Every corporation formed under this Code must, within one (1) month after receipt of official notice of the issuance of its certificate of incorporation by the Securities and Exchange Commission, adopt a code of by-laws for its government not inconsistent with this Code. For the adoption of by-laws by the corporation, the affirmative vote of the stockholders representing at least a majority of the outstanding capital stock, or of at least a majority of the members in the case of non-stock corporations, shall be necessary. The by-laws shall be signed by the stockholders or members voting for them and shall be kept in the principal office of the corporation, subject to the inspection of the stockholders or members during office hours; and a copy thereof, duly certified to by a majority of the directors or trustees and countersigned by the secretary of the corporation, shall be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission which shall be attached to the original articles of incorporation.

Notwithstanding the provisions of the preceding paragraph, by-laws may be adopted and filed prior to incorporation; in such case, such by-laws shall be approved and signed by all the incorporators and submitted to the Securities and Exchange Commission, together with the articles of incorporation.

In all cases, by-laws shall be effective only upon the issuance by the Securities and Exchange Commission of a certification that the by-laws are not inconsistent with this Code."

A careful reading of the above provision would show that a corporation can submit its by-laws, prior to incorporation, or within one month after receipt of official notice of the issuance of its certificate of incorporation by the SEC. When the third paragraph of the above provision mentions "in all cases", it can only refer to these two options; i.e., whether adopted prior to incorporation or within one month after incorporation, the by-laws shall be effective only upon the approval of the SEC. But even more important, said provision starts with the phrase "Every corporation formed under this Code", which can only refer to corporations incorporated in the Philippines. Hence, Section 46, in so far as it refers to the effectivity of corporate by-laws, applies only to domestic corporations and not to foreign corporations.

On the other hand, Section 125 of the same Code requires that a foreign corporation applying for a license to transact business in the Philippines must submit, among other documents, to the SEC, a copy of its articles of incorporation and by-laws, certified in accordance with law. Unless these documents are submitted, the application cannot be acted upon by the SEC. In the following section, the Code specifies when the SEC can grant the license applied for. Section 126 provides in part:

"SEC. 126. Issuance of a license. — If the Securities and Exchange Commission is satisfied that the applicant has complied with all the requirements of this Code and other special laws, rules and regulations, the Commission shall issue a license to the applicant to transact business in the Philippines for the purpose or purposes specified in such license . . ."

Since the SEC will grant a license only when the foreign corporation has complied with all the requirements of law, it follows that when it decides to issue such license, it is satisfied that the applicant's by-laws, among the other documents, meet the legal requirements. This, in effect, is an approval of the foreign corporations by-laws. It may not have been made in express terms, still it is clearly an approval. Therefore, petitioner bank's by-laws, though originating from a foreign jurisdiction, are valid and effective in the Philippines.

In pursuance of the authority granted to him by petitioner bank's by-laws, its Executing Officer appointed William W. Ferguson, a resident of the Philippines, as its Attorney-in-Fact empowering the latter, among other things, to represent petitioner bank in court cases. In turn, William W. Ferguson executed a power of attorney in favor of J.P. Garcia & Associates (petitioner bank's counsel) to represent petitioner bank in the pre-trial conference before the lower court. This act of delegation is explicity authorized by paragraph XXI of his own appointment, which we have previously cited.

- Colegio Medico-Farmaceutico De Filipinas, Inc. v. Lim, G.R. No. 212034, [July 2, 2018]

COLEGIO MEDICO-FARMACEUTICO DE FILIPINAS, INC. V. LIM
G.R. No. 212034, FIRST DIVISION, July 2, 2018, Del Castillo, J.

The authority to act for and to bind a corporation may be presumed from acts of recognition in other instances, wherein the power was in fact exercised without any objection from its board or shareholders.

In filing a suit, jurisprudence has allowed the president of a corporation to sign the verification and the certification of non-forum shopping even without a board resolution as said officer is presumed to have sufficient knowledge to swear to the truth of the allegations stated in the complaint or petition.

FACTS:

Petitioner Colegio Medico Farmaceutico de Filipinas, Inc. entered into a Contract of Lease with respondent Lily Lim, then President of St. John Berchman School of Manila Foundation (St. John) for the latter's use of the building of the petitioner. When the lease period agreed upon expired, petitioner, represented by its then President Del Castillo, sent another contract of lease to the respondent but the same was never returned to the petitioner despite several follow-ups. Consequently, petitioner informed the respondent of the decision of the Board not to renew the Contract of Lease. On March 5, 2008, Del Castillo wrote a letter to respondent demanding the payment of her back rentals and utility bills with request to vacate the subject property but respondent refused to comply with the demand, prompting petitioner to file a Complaint for Ejectment with Damages.

The MeTC ruled in favor of the respondent and dismissed the Complaint for lack of a valid demand letter, the same being a jurisdictional requirement. On appeal, RTC reversed the MeTC's decision and ruled that the issuance of the demand letter was done by Del Castillo in the usual course of business and that the issuance of the same was ratified by the petitioner when it passed the Board Resolution authorizing Del Castillo to file a case against the respondent. When the case reached CA, it rendered a decision in favor of the respondent and opined that petitioner's failure to attach a copy of the Board Resolution.

ISSUES:

a) Whether or not a valid demand was made.
b) Whether or not the failure of petitioner to attach a copy of the Board Resolution to the Complaint was a fatal defect.

RULING:

a) Yes. Being a juridical entity, a corporation may act through its board of directors, which exercises almost all corporate powers, lays down all corporate business policies and is responsible for the efficiency of management, as provided in Section 23 of the Corporation Code. However, just as a natural person may authorize another to do certain acts for and on his behalf, the board of directors may validly delegate some of its functions and powers to officers, committees or agents. Hence, the authority to act for and to bind a corporation may be presumed from acts of recognition in other instances, wherein the power was in fact exercised without any objection from its board or shareholders.

In this case, petitioner had previously allowed its president to enter into the First Contract with private respondent without a board resolution expressly authorizing him; thus, it had clothed its president with apparent authority to execute the subject contract.

b) No. In filing a suit, jurisprudence has allowed the president of a corporation to sign the verification and the certification of non-forum shopping even without a board resolution as said officer is presumed to have sufficient knowledge to swear to the truth of the allegations stated in the complaint or petition. In view of this, the Complaint is not dismissible on the mere failure of petitioner to present a copy of the Board Resolution. With or without the said Board Resolution, Del Castillo, as the President of petitioner, was authorized to sign the verification and the certification of non-forum shopping

2. Business Judgment Rule

- Sales vs. Securities and Exchange Commission, 169 SCRA 109 (1989)

JULIO E. T. SALES AND GEORGE V. AGONIAS, IN THEIR OWN BEHALF, AND IN BEHALF OF SIPALAY MINING EXPLORATION CORPORATION, AS MINORITY STOCKHOLDERS THEREOF, AND SIPALAY MINING EXPLORATION CORPORATION VERSUS SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, STATE INVESTMENT HOUSE REPRESENTED BY ITS PRESIDENT ANSELMO TRINIDAD; ANSELMO TRINIDAD CO., INC., REPRESENTED BY ITS PRESIDENT ANSELMO TRINIDAD; AND VULCAN INDUSTRIAL AND MINING CORP., REPRESENTED BY ITS PRESIDENTWALTERN W. BROWN, MANUEL C. DIAZ, AND AUGUSTO B. SUNICO,

G.R. NO. L-54330, JANUARY 13, 1989, J. CORTEZ

The Court finds that the order of the SEC creating the committee is fully supported by P.D. No. 902-A that the Commission shall have absolute jurisdiction, supervision and control over all corporations, partnerships or associations, who are the grantees of primary franchise and/or a license or permit issued by the government to operate in the Philippines (1) controversies arising out of intra-corporate or partnership relations, between and among stockholders members, or associates; between any or all of them and the corporation, partnership or association of which they are stockholders members or associates, respectively; and between such corporation, partnership or association and the state insofar as it concerns their individual franchise or right to exist as such entity and (2) Controversies in the election or appointments of directors, trustees, officers or managers of such corporations, partnerships or associations.

FACTS:

State Investment House, Inc.. entered into a sales agreement with Sipalay Mining whereby the latter sold to the former 200,000,000 common shares of its capital stock in the amount of P2,600,000.00. The sales agreement between Sipalay Mining and State Investment contained terms and conditions. One of which is that the stockbroker shall not sell more than 1,000,000 shares per buyer. Subsequently, the restriction on the sale of the shares was modified, allowing sale in blocks of 5,000,000 shares per buyer.

Thereafter, State Investment sold the 200,000,000 shares to Anselmo Trinidad & Co., Inc. Then, some two and a half years later, ATCO in turn sold 198,500,000 of the shares to respondent VULCAN. Sipalay Mining was requested by ATCO to transfer the 198,500,000 shares to the name of VULCAN. By resolution of the Board of Directors of Sipalay Mining, its President was directed to sign the certificate of stock that would effect the transfer Eight days prior to the scheduled annual stockholders' meeting of Sipalay Mining, petitioners filed before the SEC a petition to nullify the sale of the shares to VULCAN, with a prayer for the issuance of a writ of preliminary injunction to enjoin VULCAN from voting the shares. SEC temporarily restrained VULCAN from voting its 198,500,000 shares at the 1979 annual stockholders' meeting.

On March 1980, a Notice of Call was published, calling for the payment of (20%) of unpaid subscriptions in Sipalay Mining on or before April 15, 1980. VULCAN immediately petitioned the SEC to issue a writ of injunction. SEC issued a TRO suspending the effects and implementation of the call.

SEC issued the first of the questioned orders, denying the application for the issuance of the writ of preliminary injunction, ordered the Board of Directors and officers of the corporation are directed to call and hold said regular meeting and a Committee composed of one representative of the Securities and Exchange Commission, as Chairman, and one representatives each from the respondents and the petitioners, as members, is hereby formed to supervise and control the conduct of the proceedings and perform the functions of the Corporate Secretary.

When SEC lifted its TRO dated April 1980, it issued the second questioned order cancelling the stockholders' meeting set by Sipalay Mining Exploration Corporation for July 18, 1980 and the Committee created under the Order dated June 13, 1980 be constituted. Hence, the petition

ISSUE

Whether or not SEC acted arbitrarily and with grave abuse of discretion, tantamount to lack of jurisdiction, when it ordered the creation of the committee composed of the SEC representative, as Chairman, and one representative each from petitioners and private respondents, as members, to supervise and control the conduct of the proceedings and perform the functions of the Corporate Secretary, in relation to the regular annual stockholders' meeting of Sipalay Mining

RULING

NO. The Court finds that the order of the SEC creating the committee is fully supported by P.D. No. 902-A that the Commission shall have absolute jurisdiction, supervision and control over all corporations, partnerships or associations, who are the grantees of primary franchise and/or a license or permit issued by the government to operate in the Philippines (1) controversies arising out of intra-corporate or partnership relations, between and among stockholders members, or associates; between any or all of them and the corporation, partnership or association of which they are stockholders members or associates, respectively; and between such corporation, partnership or association and the state insofar as it concerns their individual franchise or right to exist as such entity and (2) Controversies in the election or appointments of directors, trustees, officers or managers of such corporations, partnerships or associations.

As correctly pointed out by the Solicitor General, the case before the SEC involves a controversy regarding the election of directors of a corporation. It is apparent from the foregoing that a controversy in the election of directors of Sipalay Mining came about because it was petitioners themselves who had asked the Commission not to allow the disputed 198,500,000 shares to be voted on at the July 18, 1979 annual stockholders' meeting of the corporation. Since said 198,500,000 shares of stock were not allowed to vote due to the restraining order of the Commission, petitioners were able to elect candidates from their group. It is this election of members of the board of directors on July 18, 1979, which is being questioned by respondent Vulcan in its answer in SEC Case No. 1751 wherein it prays that the stockholders' meeting on the aforementioned date be declared null and void. The controversy regarding the election of directors in Sipalay Mining was, thus, a natural consequence of the relief sought by petitioners themselves that the shares of stocks of Vulcan aforementioned be barred from voting.

Respondent Commission had to address itself to the controversy by issuing its questioned order dated June 13, 1980, directing the holding of the annual stockholders' meeting of Sipalay Mining for the year 1980 as mandated in its by-laws, and creating a committee to supervise and control the conduct of the proceedings to insure an orderly stockholders meeting and forestall possible controversy in the sending of notices, processing and validation of proxies and closing of the stock and transfer book. Certainly, the Commission cannot be faulted, much less can it be said that it exceeded its jurisdiction, for having taken all proper measures to insure that an orderly meeting and election are held in Sipalay Mining in the light of the issues raised in SEC Case No. 1751 pending before the Commission.

Under Section 5 of P.D. No. 902-A, the SEC had original and exclusive jurisdiction over the controversy. It was "in order to effectively exercise such jurisdiction", to borrow the language of P.D. No. 902-A, that the SEC ordered the creation of the committee, in the exercise of its broad powers of control and supervision over corporations and its more specific power to compel the officers of a corporation to call meetings of stockholders under its supervision.

The Court finds the functions delegated to the committee to be in accordance with the SEC's mandate. The powers delegated to the committee were all confined to the holding of the stockholders' meeting and the conduct of the election of directors in connection This displays the circumspect and cautious manner in which the SEC exercised its broad powers under P.D. No. 902-A.

The Court, therefore, finds no basis to sustain petitioners' contention that the SEC acted arbitrarily and gravely abused its discretion when it ordered the creation of a committee to supervise the stockholders' meeting and election of directors

- Filipinas Port Services, Inc., represented by stockholders, Eliodoro C. Cruz and Mindanao Terminal and Brokerage Services, Inc. vs. Victoriano S. Go, et al., G.R. No. 161886, March 16, 2007

FILIPINAS PORT SERVICES, INC., represented by stockholders, ELIODORO C. CRUZ and MINDANAO TERMINAL AND BROKERAGE SERVICES, INC., Petitioners, vs. VICTORIANO S. GO, ARSENIO LOPEZ CHUA, EDGAR C. TRINIDAD, HERMENEGILDO M. TRINIDAD, JESUS SYBICO, MARY JEAN D. CO, HENRY CHUA, JOSELITO S. JAYME, ERNESTO S. JAYME, and ELIEZER B. DE JESUS, Respondents.
G.R. No. 161886, FIRST DIVISION, March 16, 2007, GARCIA, J.

The raison d'etre behind the conferment of corporate powers on the board of directors is not lost on the Court. Indeed, the concentration in the board of the powers of control of corporate business and of appointment of corporate officers and managers is necessary for efficiency in any large organization. Stockholders are too numerous, scattered and unfamiliar with the business of a corporation to conduct its business directly. And so the plan of corporate organization is for the stockholders to choose the directors who shall control and supervise the conduct of corporate business.

FACTS

Eliodoro C. Cruz (Cruz) was president of Filipinas Port Services, Inc. (Filport) since 1968. He lost his bid for re-election in 1991. A year thereafter, Cruz wrote a letter to the corporation's Board of Directors questioning the creation of six (6) positions and the election of certain members of the board thereto.

It would seem that Cruz was unhappy with the Board's action or actions on the matter, for a year later he filed a petition with the (SEC), joined by (MinTerBro) as co-petitioner, what he calls a "derivative suit" supposedly in representation of Filport and its stockholders. It is Cruz's contention that the creation of an executive committee is not provided for in the bylaws and the increase in the emoluments of several members of the board is greatly disproportionate to the volume and character of work of said directors. Further, he questions the re-creation of the positions of Assistant Vice President for corporate planning, operations, finance and administration and additional positions where those holding said offices are not doing any work but earning compensation. These acts of mismanagement according to Cruz are detrimental to the corporation and its stockholders and so the board must account for the amounts incurred in creating these positions and made to pay damages.

The derivative suit hibernated with the SEC for a long period of time. With the enactment of R.A. No. 8799, the case was first turned over to the RTC of Manila, sitting as a corporate court. Upon motion of the parties, it was transferred to RTC Davao. Though the RTC found that Filport's Board of Directors had the power to create positions not provided for in the by-laws and the increases in salaries are reasonable, nevertheless it ordered the directors holding the positions of Assistant Vice President for Corporate Planning, Special Assistant to the President and Special Assistant to the Board Chairman to refund to the corporation the salaries they have received as such officers "considering that Filipinas Port Services is not a big corporation requiring multiple executive positions" and that said positions "were just created for accommodation."

Upon appeal to the Court of Appeals (CA), the RTC decision was reversed and set aside and thus the so called derivative suit was dismissed.

ISSUE

Whether the creation of an executive committee and other offices in the corporation with corresponding remunerations are within the powers of the Board of Directors?

RULING

The governing body of a corporation is its board of directors. Section 23 of the Corporation Code explicitly provides that unless otherwise provided therein, the corporate powers of all corporations formed under the Code shall be exercised, all business conducted and all property of the corporation shall be controlled and held by a board of directors. Thus, with the exception only of some powers expressly granted by law to stockholders, the board of directors has the sole authority to determine policies, enter into contracts, and conduct the ordinary business of the corporation within the scope of its charter.

The raison d'etre behind the conferment of corporate powers on the board of directors is not lost on the Court. Indeed, the concentration in the board of the powers of control of corporate business and of appointment of corporate officers and managers is necessary for efficiency in any large organization. Stockholders are too numerous, scattered and unfamiliar with the business of a corporation to conduct its business directly. And so the plan of corporate organization is for the stockholders to choose the directors who shall control and supervise the conduct of corporate business.

In the present case, the board's creation of the positions of Assistant Vice Presidents for Corporate Planning, Operations, Finance and Administration, and those of the Special Assistants to the President and the Board Chairman, was in accordance with the regular business operations of Filport as it is authorized to do so by the corporation's by-laws, pursuant to the Corporation Code. Likewise, the fixing of the corresponding remuneration for the positions in question is provided for in the same by-laws of the corporation, viz:

xxx The Board of Directors shall fix the compensation of the officers and agents of the corporation.

Unfortunately, the bylaws of the corporation are silent as to the creation by its board of directors of an executive committee. Under Section 3515 of the Corporation Code, the creation of an executive committee must be provided for in the bylaws of the corporation. Notwithstanding the silence of Filport's bylaws on the matter, we cannot rule that the creation of the executive committee by the board of directors is illegal or unlawful. One reason is the absence of a showing as to the true nature and functions of said executive committee considering that the "executive committee," referred to in Section 35 of the Corporation Code which is as powerful as the board of directors and in effect acting for the board itself, should be distinguished from other committees which are within the competency of the board to create at anytime and whose actions require ratification and confirmation by the board. Another reason is that, ratiocinated by both the two (2) courts below, the Board of Directors has the power to create positions not provided for in Filport's bylaws since the board is the corporation's governing body, clearly upholding the power of its board to exercise its prerogatives in managing the business affairs of the corporation.

- Matling Industrial and Commercial Corporation, et al. vs. Ricardo R. Coros, G.R. No. 157802, October 13, 2010

MATLING INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL CORPORATION, RICHARD K. SPENCER, CATHERINE SPENCER, AND ALEX MANCILLA VERSUS RICARDO R. COROS

G.R. NO. 157802, OCTOBER 13, 2010, J. BERSAMIN

This interpretation is the correct application of Section 25 of the Corporation Code, which plainly states that the corporate officers are the President, Secretary, Treasurer and such other officers as may be provided for in the By-Laws. Accordingly, the corporate officers in the context of PD No. 902-A are exclusively those who are given that character either by the Corporation Code or by the corporation's By-Laws.

FACTS

After his dismissal by Matling as its Vice President for Finance and Administration, the respondent filed on August 10, 2000 a complaint for illegal suspension and illegal dismissal against Matling and some of its corporate officers (petitioners) in the NLRC.

The petitioners moved to dismiss the complaint, raising the ground, among others, that the complaint pertained to the jurisdiction of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) due to the controversy being intra-corporate inasmuch as the respondent was a member of Matlings Board of Directors aside from being its Vice-President for Finance and Administration prior to his termination.

The respondent opposed the petitioners motion to dismiss, insisting that his status as a member of Matlings Board of Directors was doubtful, considering that he had not been formally elected as such; that he did not own a single share of stock in Matling, considering that he had been made to sign in blank an undated indorsement of the certificate of stock he had been given in 1992; that Matling had taken back and retained the certificate of stock in its custody; and that even assuming that he had been a Director of Matling, he had been removed as the Vice President for Finance and Administration, not as a Director, a fact that the notice of his termination dated April 10, 2000 showed. On October 16, 2000, the LA granted the petitioners motion to dismiss, ruling that the respondent was a corporate officer because he was occupying the position of Vice President for Finance and Administration and at the same time was a Member of the Board of Directors of Matling; and that, consequently, his removal was a corporate act of Matling and the controversy resulting from such removal was under the jurisdiction of the SEC, pursuant to Section 5, paragraph (c) of Presidential Decree No. 902. The NLRC set aside the dismissal case. On appeal to the CA, the case was also dismissed.

ISSUE

Whether the respondent was a corporate officer of Matling

RULING

No. Section 25 of the Corporation Code provides:
Section 25. Corporate officers, quorum.--Immediately after their election, the directors of a corporation must formally organize by the election of a president, who shall be a director, a treasurer who may or may not be a director, a secretary who shall be a resident and citizen of the Philippines, and such other officers as may be provided for in the by-laws. Any two (2) or more positions may be held concurrently by the same person, except that no one shall act as president and secretary or as president and treasurer at the same time.

The directors or trustees and officers to be elected shall perform the duties enjoined on them by law and the by-laws of the corporation. Unless the articles of incorporation or the by-laws provide for a greater majority, a majority of the number of directors or trustees as fixed in the articles of incorporation shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of corporate business, and every decision of at least a majority of the directors or trustees present at a meeting at which there is a quorum shall be valid as a corporate act, except for the election of officers which shall require the vote of a majority of all the members of the board.

Directors or trustees cannot attend or vote by proxy at board meetings. Conformably with Section 25, a position must be expressly mentioned in the By-Laws in order to be considered as a corporate office. Thus, the creation of an office pursuant to or under a By-Law enabling provision is not enough to make a position a corporate office. Guerrea v. Lezama, the first ruling on the matter, held that the only officers of a corporation were those given that character either by the Corporation Code or by the By-Laws; the rest of the corporate officers could be considered only as employees or subordinate officials. Thus, it was held in Easycall Communications Phils., Inc. v. King: An "office" is created by the charter of the corporation and the officer is elected by the directors or stockholders. On the other hand, an employee occupies no office and generally is employed not by the action of the directors or stockholders but by the managing officer of the corporation who also determines the compensation to be paid to such employee.

In this case, respondent was appointed vice president for nationwide expansion by Malonzo, petitioner''s general manager, not by the board of directors of petitioner. It was also Malonzo who determined the compensation package of respondent. Thus, respondent was an employee, not a "corporate officer." The CA was therefore correct in ruling that jurisdiction over the case was properly with the NLRC, not the SEC (now the RTC).

This interpretation is the correct application of Section 25 of the Corporation Code, which plainly states that the corporate officers are the President, Secretary, Treasurer and such other officers as may be provided for in the By-Laws. Accordingly, the corporate officers in the context of PD No. 902-A are exclusively those who are given that character either by the Corporation Code or by the corporation's By-Laws.

A different interpretation can easily leave the way open for the Board of Directors to circumvent the constitutionally guaranteed security of tenure of the employee by the expedient inclusion in the By-Laws of an enabling clause on the creation of just any corporate officer position. It is relevant to state in this connection that the SEC, the primary agency administering the Corporation Code, adopted a similar interpretation of Section 25 of the Corporation Code in its Opinion dated November 25, 1993,21 to wit:

Thus, pursuant to the above provision (Section 25 of the Corporation Code), whoever are the corporate officers enumerated in the by-laws are the exclusive Officers of the corporation and the Board has no power to create other Offices without amending first the corporate By-laws. However, the Board may create appointive positions other than the positions of corporate Officers, but the persons occupying such positions are not considered as corporate officers within the meaning of Section 25 of the Corporation Code and are not empowered to exercise the functions of the corporate Officers, except those functions lawfully delegated to them. Their functions and duties are to be determined by the Board of Directors/Trustees.

Moreover, the Board of Directors of Matling could not validly delegate the power to create a corporate office to the President, in light of Section 25 of the Corporation Code requiring the Board of Directors itself to elect the corporate officers. Verily, the power to elect the corporate officers was a discretionary power that the law exclusively vested in the Board of Directors, and could not be delegated to subordinate officers or agents. The office of Vice President for Finance and Administration created by Matling's President pursuant to By Law No. V was an ordinary, not a corporate, office.

To emphasize, the power to create new offices and the power to appoint the officers to occupy them vested by By-Law No. V merely allowed Matling's President to create non-corporate offices to be occupied by ordinary employees of Matling. Such powers were incidental to the President's duties as the executive head of Matling to assist him in the daily operations of the business. The petitioners' reliance on Tabang, supra, is misplaced. The statement in Tabang, to the effect that offices not expressly mentioned in the By-Laws but were created pursuant to a By-Law enabling provision were also considered corporate offices, was plainly obiter dictum due to the position subject of the controversy being mentioned in the By-Laws. Thus, the Court held therein that the position was a corporate office, and that the determination of the rights and liabilities arising from the ouster from the position was an intra-corporate controversy within the SEC's jurisdiction.

In Nacpil v. Intercontinental Broadcasting Corporation,23 which may be the more appropriate ruling, the position subject of the controversy was not expressly mentioned in the By-Laws, but was created pursuant to a By-Law enabling provision authorizing the Board of Directors to create other offices that the Board of Directors might see fit to create. The Court held there that the position was a corporate office, relying on the obiter dictum in Tabang.

Considering that the observations earlier made herein show that the soundness of their dicta is not unassailable, Tabang and Nacpil should no longer be controlling

3. Tenure, Qualifications and Disqualifications of Directors or Trustees

- GRACE CHRISTIAN HIGH SCHOOL, Petitioners –versus- COURT OF APPEALS, GRACE VILLAGE ASSOCIATION, INC., ALEJANDRO G. BELTRAN, and ERNESTO L. GO, *Respondents G.R. No. 108905, SECOND DIVISION, October 23, 1997, MENDOZA,J.

The provisions of the former and present corporation law leave no room for doubt as to their meaning: the board of directors of corporations must be elected from among the stockholders or members. Since the provision in question is contrary to law, the fact that for fifteen years it has not been questioned or challenged but, on the contrary, appears to have been implemented by the members of the association cannot forestall a later challenge to its validity. Neither can it attain validity through acquiescence because it is contrary to law.

FACTS:

Petitioner Grace Christian High School is an educational institution at the Grace Village in Quezon City. Private respondent Grace Village Association, Inc., on the other hand, is an organization of lot and/or building owners, lessees and residents at Grace Village, while private respondents Alejandro G. Beltran and Ernesto L. Go were its president and chairman of the committee on election, respectively, in 1990, when this suit was brought. As adopted in 1968, the by-laws of the association provided in Article IV, as follows: The annual meeting of the members of the Association shall be held on the first Sunday of January in each calendar year at the principal office of the Association at 2:00 P.M. where they shall elect by plurality vote and by secret balloting, the Board of Directors, composed of eleven (11) members to serve for one (1) year until their successors are duly elected and have qualified. It appears, that on December 20, 1975, a committee of the board of directors prepared a draft of an amendment to the by-laws, reading as follows:

"The Annual Meeting of the members of the Association shall be held on the second Thursday of January of each year. Each Charter or Associate Member of the Association is entitled to vote. He shall be entitled to as many votes as he has acquired thru his monthly membership fees only computed on a ratio of TEN (P10.00) PESOS for one vote. The Charter and Associate Members shall elect the Directors of the Association. The candidates receiving the first fourteen (14) highest number of votes shall be declared and proclaimed elected until their successors are elected and qualified. GRACE CHRISTIAN HIGH SCHOOL representative is a permanent Director of the ASSOCIATION."

This draft was never presented to the general membership for approval. Nevertheless, from 1975 - 1990, petitioner was given a permanent seat in the board of directors of the association. However, in 1990, the association's committee on election in a letter informed James Tan, principal of the school, that "it was the sentiment that all directors should be elected by members of the association" because "to make a person or entity a permanent Director would deprive the right of voters to vote for fifteen (15) members of the Board," and "it is undemocratic for a person or entity to hold office in perpetuity." Thereafter, notices were sent to the members of the association that the provision on election of directors of the 1968 by-laws would be observed. As the association denied its request, the school brought suit for mandamus in the Home Insurance and Guaranty Corporation to compel the board of directors of the association to recognize its right to a permanent seat in the board.

SEC replied in the query by the association that the practice of allowing unelected members in the board was contrary to the existing by-laws of the association and to Section 92 of the Corporation Code. Petitioner maintained that the "amended by-laws" is valid and binding and that the association was estopped from questioning the by-laws.

The school brought suit for mandamus in the Home Insurance and Guaranty Corporation which the hearing officer of HIGC dismissed petitioner's action holding that the 1975 by-laws was a mere proposal and was declared null and void by the board of directors in a meeting held in 1990. Also, it rejected the claim that the petitioner's acquired a vested right to a permanent seat in the board of directors. The appeals board of the HIGC affirmed the decision. Petitioner appealed the case to the CA which also affirmed the decision of HIGC holding that there was no valid amendment because of failure to comply with the affirmative vote of the majority of the members.

ISSUE:

Whether or not the petitioners have a right to sit in the board of directors of respondent association as a permanent member thereof. (NO)

RULING:

The proposed amendment to the by-laws was never approved by the majority of the members of the association as required by these provisions of the law and by-laws. More so, it is actually Section 28 and 29 of the Corporation Law which require members of the board of directors of corporations to be elected. The present Corporation Code (B.P. Blg. 68), which took effect on May 1, 1980, similarly provides:

§23. The Board of Directors or Trustees. — Unless otherwise provided in this Code, the corporate powers of all corporations formed under this Code shall be exercised, all business conducted and all property of such corporations controlled and held by the board of directors or trustees to be electedfrom among the holders of stocks, or where there is no stock, from among the members of the corporation, who shall hold office for one (1) year and until their successors are elected and qualified.

These provisions of the former and present corporation law leave no room for doubt as to their meaning: the board of directors of corporations must be elected from among the stockholders or members.

Since the provision in question is contrary to law, the fact that for fifteen years it has not been questioned or challenged but, on the contrary, appears to have been implemented by the members of the association cannot forestall a later challenge to its validity. Neither can it attain validity through acquiescence because, if it is contrary to law, it is beyond the power of the members of the association to waive its invalidity. For that matter the members of the association may have formally adopted the provision in question, but their action would be of no avail because no provision of the by-laws can be adopted if it is contrary to law.

WHEREFORE, the decision of the Court of Appeals is AFFIRMED.

RAMON C. LEE AND ANTONIO DM. LACDAO, Petitioners –versus- THE HON. COURT OF APPEALS, SACOBA MANUFACTURING CORP., PABLO GONZALES, JR. AND THOMAS GONZALES, Respondents

G.R. No. 93695, THIRD DIVISION February 4, 1992, GUTIERREZ, JR.,J.

Under the 1980 Corporation Code, in order to be eligible as a director, what is material is the legal title to, not beneficial ownership of, the stock as appearing on the books of the corporation. Thus, Lee and Lacdao, by virtue of VTA disposed of all their shares through assignment and delivery in favor of the DBP, as trustee. Consequently, Lee and Lacdao ceased to own at least one share standing in their names on the books of ALFA as required under Section 23 of the 1980 Corporation Code. They also ceased to have anything to do with the management of the enterprise. The petitioners ceased to be directors.

FACTS

A complaint for a sum of money was filed by the International Corporate Bank, Inc. against Sacoba Manufacturing Corporation (Sacoba), Pablo Gonzales and Thomas Gonzales (the Gonzalezes) who, in turn, filed a third-party complaint against Alfa Integrated Textile Mills (ALFA) and Ramon Lee (Lee) and Antonio Lacdao (Lacdao). Lee and Lacdao sent a letter to the RTC, claiming the summons for ALFA was erroneously served upon them considering that the management of ALFA had been transferred to the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP), through a Voting Trust Agreement (VTA). The RTC issued an order requiring the issuance of an alias summons upon ALFA through the DBP. In a manifestation, DBP claimed that it was not authorized to receive summons on behalf of ALFA since the DBP had not taken over the company which has a separate and distinct corporate personality and existence. Sacoba and the Gonzalezes filed a Manifestation and Motion for the Declaration of Proper Service of Summons on ALFA through Lee and Lacdao, the president and vice-president, which the trial court granted. In a Motion for Reconsideration, Lee and Lacdao maintain that with the execution of the VTA between them and the other stockholders of ALFA, as one party, and the DBP, as the other party, the former assigned and transferred all their shares in ALFA to DBP, as trustee. They argue that by virtue to of the VTA, Lee and Lacdao, can no longer be considered directors of ALFA. They ceased to be president and vice-president of ALFA. Sacoba and the Gonzalezes insist that the VTA between ALFA and the DBP had all the more safeguarded Lee and Lacdao's continuance as officers and directors of ALFA inasmuch as the general object of voting trust is to insure permanency of the tenure of the directors of a corporation.

Initially, The RTC upheld the validity of the service of summons on ALFA through the Lee and Lacdao. However, upon filing of a second motion for reconsideration by Lee and Lacdao, the RTC reversed itself and declared that service upon Lee and Lacdao, who were no longer corporate officers of ALFA, cannot be considered as proper service of summons on ALFA. The CA reversed the RTC Order. Hence, the present petition.

ISSUES

1. Whether the change in the stockholder's status (only holding an equitable title) deprives such stockholder of the right to qualify as a director. (YES)
2. Whether there was proper service of summons on ALFA through Lee and Lacdao. (NO)

RULING

1. YES. The execution of a VTA may create a dichotomy between the equitable or beneficial of the corporate shares of a stockholders, on the one hand, and the legal title thereto on the other hand. Under the 1906 Corporation Code, the eligibility of a director cannot be adversely affected by the simple act of such director being a party to a VTA inasmuch as he remains owner (although beneficial or equitable only) of the shares subject of the VTA pursuant to which a transfer of the stockholder's shares in favor of the trustee is required. No disqualification arises by virtue of the phrase "in his own right" provided under the 1906 Corporation Code. With the omission of the phrase "in his own right" in the 1980 Corporation Code, the election of trustees and other persons who are not beneficial owners of the shares registered in their names on the books of the corporation becomes formally legalized. Hence, this is a clear indication that, under the 1980 Corporation Code, in order to be eligible as a director, what is material is the legal title to, not beneficial ownership of, the stock as appearing on the books of the corporation.

Thus, Lee and Lacdao, by virtue of VTA disposed of all their shares through assignment and delivery in favor of the DBP, as trustee. Consequently, Lee and Lacdao ceased to own at least one share standing in their names on the books of ALFA as required under Section 23 of the 1980 Corporation Code. They also ceased to have anything to do with the management of the enterprise. The petitioners ceased to be directors. Hence, the transfer of the Lee and Lacdao's shares to the DBP created vacancies in their respective positions as directors of ALFA. Considering that the VTA between ALFA and the DBP transferred legal ownership of the stock covered by the agreement to the DBP as trustee, the latter became the stockholder of record with respect to the said shares of stocks. In the absence of a showing that the DBP had caused to be transferred in their names one share of stock for the purpose of qualifying as directors of ALFA, Lee and Lacdao can no longer be deemed to have retained their status as officers of ALFA which was the case before the execution of the subject VTA. There appears to be no dispute from the records that DBP has taken over full control and management of the firm.

2. NO. Under the Rules of Court, if the defendant is a corporation organized under the laws of the Philippines or a partnership duly registered, service may be made on the president, manager, secretary, cashier, agent or any of its directors. Lee and Lacdao do not fall under any of the enumerated officers. The service of summons upon ALFA, through Lee and Lacdao is not valid.

WHEREFORE, premises considered, the petition is hereby GRANTED. The appealed decision dated March 19, 1990 and the Court of Appeals' resolution of May 10, 1990 are SET ASIDE and the Orders dated April 25, 1989 and October 17, 1989 issued by the Regional Trial Court of Makati, Branch 58 are REINSTATED.

4. Elections

PAUL LEE TAN, ANDREW LIUSON, ESTHER WONG, STEPHEN CO, JAMES TAN, JUDITH TAN, ERNESTO TANCHI JR., EDWIN NGO, VIRGINIA KHOO, SABINO PADILLA JR., EDUARDO P. LIZARES and GRACE CHRISTIAN HIGH SCHOOL, Petitioners –versus- PAUL SYCIP AND MERRITTO LIM, Respondents

G.R. No. 153468, FIRST DIVISION, August 17, 2006, PANGANIBAN,CJ.

For stock corporations, the "quorum" referred to in Section 52 of the Corporation Code is based on the number of outstanding voting stocks. For nonstock corporations, only those who are actual, living members with voting rights shall be counted in determining the existence of a quorum during members' meetings. Dead members shall not be counted.

Applying Section 91 to the present case, we hold that dead members who are dropped from the membership roster in the manner and for the cause provided for in the By-Laws of GCHS are not to be counted in determining the requisite vote in corporate matters or the requisite quorum for the annual members' meeting. With 11 remaining members, the quorum in the present case should be 6. Therefore, there being a quorum, the annual members' meeting, conducted with six members present, was valid

FACTS

Petitioner Grace Christian High School (GCHS) is a nonstock, non-profit educational corporation with fifteen (15) regular members, who also constitute the board of trustees. During the annual members' meeting held on April 6, 1998, there were only eleven (11) living member-trustees, as four (4) had already died. Out of the eleven, seven (7) attended the meeting through their respective proxies. The meeting was convened and chaired by Atty. Sabino Padilla Jr. over the objection of Atty. Antonio C. Pacis, who argued that there was no quorum. In the meeting, Petitioners Ernesto Tanchi, Edwin Ngo, Virginia Khoo, and Judith Tan were voted to replace the four deceased member-trustees.

When the controversy reached the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), petitioners maintained that the deceased member-trustees should not be counted in the computation of the quorum because, upon their death, members automatically lost all their rights (including the right to vote) and interests in the corporation.

SEC Hearing Officer Malthie G. Militar declared the April 6, 1998 meeting null and void for lack of quorum. She held that the basis for determining the quorum in a meeting of members should be their number as specified in the articles of incorporation, not simply the number of living members. She explained that the qualifying phrase "entitled to vote" in Section 24 of the Corporation Code, which provided the basis for determining a quorum for the election of directors or trustees, should be read together with Section 89.

The hearing officer also opined that Article III (2) of the By-Laws of GCHS, insofar as it prescribed the mode of filling vacancies in the board of trustees, must be interpreted in conjunction with Section 29 of the Corporation Code. The SEC en banc denied the appeal of petitioners and affirmed the Decision of the hearing officer in toto. It found to be untenable their contention that the word "members," as used in Section 52 of the Corporation Code, referred only to the living members of a nonstock corporation.

As earlier stated, the CA dismissed the appeal of petitioners, because the Verification and Certification of Non-Forum Shopping had been signed only by Atty. Sabino Padilla Jr. No Special Power of Attorney had been attached to show his authority to sign for the rest of the petitioners.

ISSUE

Whether dead members should still be counted in the determination of the quorum, for purposes of conducting the annual members' meeting. (NO)

RULING

The quorum in a members' meeting is to be reckoned as the actual number of members of the corporation, the next question to resolve is what happens in the event of the death of one of them.
In stock corporations, shareholders may generally transfer their shares. Thus, on the death of a shareholder, the executor or administrator duly appointed by the Court is vested with the legal title to the stock and entitled to vote it. Until a settlement and division of the estate is effected, the stocks of the decedent are held by the administrator or executor.

On the other hand, membership in and all rights arising from a nonstock corporation are personal and non-transferable, unless the articles of incorporation or the bylaws of the corporation provide otherwise. In other words, the determination of whether or not "dead members" are entitled to exercise their voting rights (through their executor or administrator), depends on those articles of incorporation or bylaws.

Under the By-Laws of GCHS, membership in the corporation shall, among others, be terminated by the death of the member. Section 91 of the Corporation Code further provides that termination extinguishes all the rights of a member of the corporation, unless otherwise provided in the articles of incorporation or the bylaws.

Applying Section 91 to the present case, we hold that dead members who are dropped from the membership roster in the manner and for the cause provided for in the By-Laws of GCHS are not to be counted in determining the requisite vote in corporate matters or the requisite quorum for the annual members' meeting. With 11 remaining members, the quorum in the present case should be 6. Therefore, there being a quorum, the annual members' meeting, conducted with six members present, was valid.

As regards the filling of vacancies in the board of trustees, Section 29 of the Corporation Code provides:

"SECTION 29. Vacancies in the office of director or trustee. -- Any vacancy occurring in the board of directors or trustees other than by removal by the stockholders or members or by expiration of term, may be filled by the vote of at least a majority of the remaining directors or trustees, if still constituting a quorum; otherwise, said vacancies must be filled by the stockholders in a regular or special meeting called for that purpose. A director or trustee so elected to fill a vacancy shall be elected only for the unexpired term of his predecessor in office."

Undoubtedly, trustees may fill vacancies in the board, provided that those remaining still constitute a quorum. The phrase "may be filled" in Section 29 shows that the filling of vacancies in the board by the remaining directors or trustees constituting a quorum is merely permissive, not mandatory. Corporations, therefore, may choose how vacancies in their respective boards may be filled up -- either by the remaining directors constituting a quorum, or by the stockholders or members in a regular or special meeting called for the purpose.

The By-Laws of GCHS prescribed the specific mode of filling up existing vacancies in its board of directors; that is, by a majority vote of the remaining members of the board.

While a majority of the remaining corporate members were present, however, the "election" of the four trustees cannot be legally upheld for the obvious reason that it was held in an annual meeting of the members, not of the board of trustees. We are not unmindful of the fact that the members of GCHS themselves also constitute the trustees, but we cannot ignore the GCHS bylaw provision, which specifically prescribes that vacancies in the board must be filled up by the remaining trustees. In other words, these remaining member-trustees must sit as a board in order to validly elect the new ones.

Indeed, there is a well-defined distinction between a corporate act to be done by the board and that by the constituent members of the corporation. The board of trustees must act, not individually or separately, but as a body in a lawful meeting. On the other hand, in their annual meeting, the members may be represented by their respective proxies, as in the contested annual members' meeting of GCHS.

ESTATE OF DR. JUVENCIO P. ORTAÑEZ, REPRESENTED BY DIVINA ORTAÑEZ-ENDERES, LIGAYA NOVICIO, AND CESAR ORTAÑEZ, Petitioners –versus- JOSE C. LEE, BENJAMIN C. LEE, CARMENCITA TAN, ANGEL ONG, MA. PAZ CASAL-LEE, JOHN OLIVER PASCUAL, CONRADO CRUZ, JR., BRENDA ORTAÑEZ, AND JULIE ANN PARADO AND JOHN DOES, Respondents.
G.R. No. 184251, THIRD DIVISION, March 09, 2016, PEREZ, J.

The SC ruled that in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the presumption is that the respondents were duly elected as directors/officers of Philinterlife during the aforesaid annual stockholders' meeting.

FACTS

On 6 July 1956, Dr. Ortañez organized and founded the Philippine International Life Insurance Company, Inc. (Philinterlife). At the time of its incorporation, Dr. Ortañez owned ninety percent (90%) of the subscribed capital stock of Philinterlife.

Upon his death on 21 July 1980, Dr. Ortañez left behind an estate consisting of, among others, 2,029 shares of stock in Philinterlife, then representing at least 50.725% of the outstanding capital stock of Philinterlife which was at 4,000 shares valued at P4,000,000.00.

On 30 March 2006, petitioners filed a Complaint for Election Contest before the RTC of Quezon City. The complaint challenged the lawfulness and validity of the meeting and election conducted by the group of Jose C. Lee (respondents) et. al. on 15 March 2006. During the assailed meeting, Jose C. Lee (Lee) et. al. were elected as members of the Board of Directors of Philinterlife.

Petitioners claimed that before the contested election, they formally informed the respondents that without the participation of the Estate, no quorum would be constituted in the scheduled annual stockholders' meeting. Petitioners averred that in spite of their formal announcement and notice that they were not participating in the session, the respondents continued, in bad faith, with the illegal meeting. Further, respondents allegedly elected themselves as directors of Philinterlife and proceeded to elect their own set of officers.

Petitioners, who insisted that they represented at least 51% of the outstanding capital stock of 5,000 shares of Philinterlife, conducted on the same day and in the same venue but in a different room, their own annual stockholders' meeting and proceeded to elect their own set of directors. According to the petitioners, the sale of the shares of the estate to the respondents through the Filipino Loan Assistance Group (FLAG), as well as the increases in the authorized capital stock of the corporation, was declared null and void by the court, which decision was affirmed by no longer than the Supreme Court. They further submitted that the exercise of pre-emptive right of the Estate to acquire 51% of the additional 1,000 paid up shares of stock, raising the total outstanding capital stock to 5,000 shares, was recognized by the RTC of Quezon City.

Respondents, for their part, categorically denied the material allegations of the complaint and raised the defense that the stockholders' meeting they conducted on 15 March 2006 was valid as it was allegedly attended by stockholders representing 98.76% of the 50,000 shares representing the authorized and issued capital stock of Philinterlife.

The RTC ruled in favor of the respondents on the ground that the petitioners failed to present the required preponderance of evidence to substantiate their claim that they were the owners of at least 51% of the outstanding capital stock of Philinterlife. The ruling of the RTC was affirmed by the CA; hence, this petition.

ISSUE

Whether the respondents were validly elected as directors of Philinterlife. (YES)

Held

Yes. The Court agreed with the lower courts that the petitioners failed to present credible and convincing evidence that Philinterlife's outstanding capital stock during the 15 March 2006 annual stockholders' meeting was 5,000 and that they own more than 2,550 shares or 51% thereof. The unrebutted presumption is that respondents, were duly elected as directors-officers of Philinterlife. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, the presumption is that the respondents were duly elected as directors/officers of Philinterlife during the aforesaid annual stockholders' meeting. Petitioners cannot, in the instant election contest case, question the increases in the capital stocks of the corporation.

a. Cumulative Voting/Straight Voting

- SEC-OGC Opinion No. 14-10, Re: Cumulative Voting in Condominium Corporation, June 2, 2014

b. Quorum

- JESUS V. LANUZA, MAGADYA REYES, BAYANI REYES AND ARIEL REYES, Petitioners –versus- COURT OF APPEALS, SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, DOLORES ONRUBIA, ELENITA NOLASCO, JUAN O. NOLASCO III, ESTATE OF FAUSTINA M. ONRUBIA, PHILIPPINE MERCHANT MARINE SCHOOL, INC.,Respondents* G.R. No. 131394, SECOND DIVISION, March 28, 2005, TINGA, J.

According to Sec. 52 of the Corp Code, "a quorum shall consist of the stockholders representing a majority of the outstanding capital stock." As such, quorum is based on the totality of the shares which have been subscribed and issued, whether it be founders' shares or common shares. To base the computation of quorum solely on the obviously deficient, if not inaccurate stock and transfer book, and completely disregarding the issued and outstanding shares as indicated in the articles of incorporation would work injustice to the owners and/or successors in interest of the said shares.

The stock and transfer book of PMMSI cannot be used as the sole basis for determining the quorum as it does not reflect the totality of shares which have been subscribed, more so when the articles of incorporation show a significantly larger amount of shares issued and outstanding as compared to that listed in the stock and transfer book.

FACTS

In 1952, the Philippine Merchant Marine School, Inc. (PMMSI) was incorporated, with seven hundred (700) founders' shares and seventy-six (76) common shares as its initial capital stock subscription reflected in the articles of incorporation. However, private respondents and their predecessors who were in control of PMMSI registered the company's stock and transfer book for the first time in 1978, recording thirty-three (33) common shares as the only issued and outstanding shares of PMMSI. Sometime in 1979, a special stockholders' meeting was called and held on the basis of what was considered as a quorum of twenty-seven (27) common shares, representing more than two-thirds (2/3) of the common shares issued and outstanding.

In 1982, the heirs of one of the original incorporators, Juan Acayan, filed a petition with the (SEC) for the registration of their property rights over one hundred (120) founders' shares and twelve (12) common shares owned by their father. The SEC hearing officer held that the heirs of Acayan were entitled to the claimed shares and called for a special stockholders' meeting to elect a new set of officers. The SEC En Banc affirmed the decision. As a result, the shares of Acayan were recorded in the stock and transfer book.

On 06 May 1992, a special stockholders' meeting was held to elect a new set of directors. Private respondents thereafter filed a petition with the SEC questioning the validity of the 06 May 1992 stockholders' meeting, alleging that the quorum for the said meeting should not be based on the 165 issued and outstanding shares as per the stock and transfer book, but on the initial subscribed capital stock of seven hundred seventy-six (776) shares, as reflected in the 1952 Articles of Incorporation. The petition was dismissed. Appeal was made to the SEC En Banc, which granted said appeal, holding that the shares of the deceased incorporators should be duly represented by their respective administrators or heirs concerned. The SEC directed the parties to call for a stockholders meeting on the basis of the stockholdings reflected in the articles of incorporation for the purpose of electing a new set of officers for the corporation.

Petitioners, who are PMMSI stockholders, filed a petition for review with the Court of Appeals.Rebecca Acayan, Jayne O. Abuid, Willie O. Abuid and Renato Cervantes, stockholders and directors of PMMSI, earlier filed another petition for review of the same SEC En Banc's orders. The petitions were thereafter consolidated. The consolidated petitions essentially raised the following issues, viz: (a) whether the basis the outstanding capital stock and accordingly also for determining the quorum at stockholders' meetings it should be the 1978 stock and transfer book or if it should be the 1952 articles of incorporation; and (b) whether the Court of Appeals "gravely erred in applying the Espejo Decision to the benefit of respondents.The "Espejo Decision" is the decision of the SEC en banc which ordered the recording of the shares of Jose Acayan in the stock and transfer book.

The Court of Appeals held that for purposes of transacting business, the quorum should be based on the outstanding capital stock as found in the articles of incorporation. As to the second issue, the Court of Appeals held that the ruling in the Acayan case would ipso facto benefit the private respondents, since to require a separate judicial declaration to recognize the shares of the original incorporators would entail unnecessary delay and expense. Besides, the Court of Appeals added, the incorporators have already proved their stockholdings through the provisions of the articles of incorporation.

In the instant petition, petitioners claim that the 1992 stockholders' meeting was valid and legal. They submit that reliance on the 1952 articles of incorporation for determining the quorum negates the existence and validity of the stock and transfer book which private respondents themselves prepared. In addition, they posit that private respondents cannot avail of the benefits secured by the heirs of Acayan, as private respondents must show and prove entitlement to the founders and common shares in a separate and independent action/proceeding.

In private respondents' Memorandum[11] dated 08 March 2000, they point out that the instant petition raises the same facts and issues as those raised in G.R. No. 131315[12], which was denied by the First Division of this Court on 18 January 1999 for failure to show that the Court of Appeals committed any reversible error. They add that as a logical consequence, the instant petition should be dismissed on the ground of res judicata. Furthermore, private respondents claim that in view of the applicability of the rule on res judicata, petitioners' counsel should be cited for contempt for violating the rule against forum-shopping.

For their part, petitioners claim that the principle of res judicata does not apply to the instant case. They argue that the instant petition is separate and distinct from G.R. No. 131315, there being no identity of parties, and more importantly, the parties in the two petitions have their own distinct rights and interests in relation to the subject matter in litigation. For the same reasons, they claim that counsel for petitioners cannot be found guilty of forum-shopping.

In their Manifestation and Motion[15] dated 22 September 2004, private respondents moved for the dismissal of the instant petition in view of the dismissal of G.R. No. 131315. Attached to the said manifestation is a copy of the Entry of Judgment[issued by the First Division dated 01 December 1999.

The petition must be denied, not on res judicata, but on the ground that like the petition in G.R. No. 131315 it fails to impute reversible error to the challenged Court of Appeals' Decision. The petition in this case involves the same facts and substantially the same issues and arguments as those in G.R. No. 131315 which the First Division has long denied with finality. The First Division found the petition before it inadequate in failing to raise any reversible error on the part of the Court of Appeals. We reach a similar conclusion as regards the present petition.

ISSUE

Whether or not the basis of quorum for a stockholders' meeting is the outstanding capital stock as indicated in the articles of incorporation or that contained in the company's stock and transfer book

RULING

Articles of Incorporation- defines the charter of the corporation and the contractual relationships between the State and the corporation, the stockholders and the State, and between the corporation and its stockholders.The contents are binding, not only on the corporation, but also on its shareholders.

Stock and transfer book- book which records the names and addresses of all stockholders arranged alphabetically, the installments paid and unpaid on all stock for which subscription has been made, and the date of payment thereof; a statement of every alienation, sale or transfer of stock made, the date thereof and by and to whom made; and such other entries as may be prescribed by law. It is necessary as a measure of precaution, expediency and convenience since it provides the only certain and accurate method of establishing the various corporate acts and transactions and of showing the ownership of stock and like matters. It is not public record, and thus is not exclusive evidence of the matters and things which ordinarily are or should be written therein In this case, the articles of incorporation indicate that at the time of incorporation, the incorporators were bona fide stockholders of 700 founders' shares and 76 common shares. Hence, at that time, the corporation had 776 issued and outstanding shares.

According to Sec. 52 of the Corp Code, "a quorum shall consist of the stockholders representing a majority of the outstanding capital stock." As such, quorum is based on the totality of the shares which have been subscribed and issued, whether it be founders' shares or common shares. To base the computation of quorum solely on the obviously deficient, if not inaccurate stock and transfer book, and completely disregarding the issued and outstanding shares as indicated in the articles of incorporation would work injustice to the owners and/or successors in interest of the said shares.

The stock and transfer book of PMMSI cannot be used as the sole basis for determining the quorum as it does not reflect the totality of shares which have been subscribed, more so when the articles of incorporation show a significantly larger amount of shares issued and outstanding as compared to that listed in the stock and transfer book.

One who is actually a stockholder cannot be denied his right to vote by the corporation merely because the corporate officers failed to keep its records accurately. A corporation's records are not the only evidence of the ownership of stock in a corporation. It is no less than the articles of incorporation that declare the incorporators to have in their name the founders and several common shares. Thus, to disregard the contents of the articles of incorporation would be to pretend that the basic document which legally triggered the creation of the corporation does not exist and accordingly to allow great injustice to be caused to the incorporators and their heirs.

WHEREFORE, the petition is DENIED and the assailed Decision is AFFIRMED. Costs against petitioners

5. Removal

NECTARINA S. RANIEL and MA. VICTORIA R. PAG-ONG, Petitioners
-versus- PAUL JOCHICO, JOHN STEFFENS and SURYA VIRIYA, Respondents
G.R. No. 153413, THIRD DIVISION, March 1, 2007, AUSTRIA-MARTINEZ,J.

Only stockholders or members have the power to remove the directors or trustees elected by them, as laid down in Section 28 of the Corporation Code. In this case, petitioner Raniel was removed as a corporate officer through the resolution of Nephro's Board of Directors adopted in a special meeting. Petitioners' removal was a valid exercise of the powers of Nephro's Board of Directors.

FACTS

Petitioners, together with respondents Paul Jochico (Jochico), John Steffens and Surya Viriya, were incorporators and directors of Nephro, with Raniel acting as Corporate Secretary and Administrator. The conflict started when petitioners questioned respondents' plan to enter into a joint venture with the Butuan Doctors' Hospital and College, Inc. sometime in December 1997. Because of this, petitioners claim that respondents tried to compel them to waive and assign their shares with Nephro but they refused. Thereafter, Raniel sought an indefinite leave of absence due to stress, but this was denied by Jochico, as Nephro President. Raniel, nevertheless, did not report for work, causing Jochico to demand an explanation from her why she should not be removed as Administrator and Corporate Secretary. Raniel replied, expressing her sentiments over the disapproval of her request for leave and respondents' decision with regard to the Butuan venture.

On January 30, 1998, Jochico issued a Notice of Special Board Meeting on February 2, 1998. Despite receipt of the notice, petitioners did not attend the board meeting. In said meeting, the Board passed several resolutions ratifying the disapproval of Raniel's request for leave, dismissing her as Administrator of Nephro, declaring the position of Corporate Secretary vacant, appointing Otelio Jochico as the new Corporate Secretary and authorizing the call of a Special Stockholders' Meeting on February 16, 1998 for the purpose of the removal of petitioners as directors of Nephro.

Otelio Jochico issued the corresponding notices for the Special Stockholders' Meeting to be held on February 16, 1998 which were received by petitioners on February 2, 1998. Again, they did not attend the meeting. The stockholders who were present removed the petitioners as directors of Nephro. Thus, petitioners filed SEC Case No. 02-98-5902.
the SEC rendered its Decision holding that the corporation acting thru its Board of Directors can validly remove its corporate officers, particularly complainant Nectarina S. Raniel as corporate secretary, treasurer and administrator of the Dialysis Clinic.

Dissatisfied, petitioners filed a petition for review with the CA.

On April 30, 2002, the CA rendered the assailed Decision which AFFIRMED the SEC's decision with the MODIFICATION that the renewal of petitioners as directors of Nephro is declared valid.

Respondents filed a Manifestation and Motion to Correct Typographical Error, stating that the term "renewal" as provided in the CA Decision should be "removal."Petitioners, on the other hand, filed the present petition for review on certiorari.

ISSUE

Whether Pag-ong's and Raniel's removal as directors and officer of Nephro were valid. (YES)

RULING

A corporation exercises its powers through its board of directors and/or its duly authorized officers and agents, except in instances where the Corporation Code requires stockholders' approval for certain specific acts.

Based on Section 23 of the Corporation Code which provides:

SEC. 23. The Board of Directors or Trustees. Unless otherwise provided in this Code, the corporate powers of all corporations formed under this Code shall be exercised, all business conducted and all property of such corporations controlled and held by the board of directors or trustees x x x.

a corporation's board of directors is understood to be that body which (1) exercises all powers provided for under the Corporation Code; (2) conducts all business of the corporation; and (3) controls and holds all property of the corporation. Its members have been characterized as trustees or directors clothed with a fiduciary character. Moreover, the directors may appoint officers and agents and as incident to this power of appointment, they may discharge those appointed.

In this case, petitioner Raniel was removed as a corporate officer through the resolution of Nephro's Board of Directors adopted in a special meeting on February 2, 1998. As correctly ruled by the SEC, petitioners' removal was a valid exercise of the powers of Nephro's Board of Directors, viz.:

"Raniel's letter of January 26, 1998 speaks for itself. Her request for an indefinite leave, immediately effective yet without prior notice, reveals a disregard of the critical responsibilities pertaining to the sensitive positions she held in the corporation. Prior to her hasty departure, Raniel did not make a proper turn-over of her duties and had to be expressly requested to hand over documents and records, including keys to the office and the cabinets.

Since Raniel occupied all three positions in Nephro, it is not difficult to foresee the disruption that her immediate and indefinite absence can inflict on the operations of the company. By leaving abruptly, Raniel abandoned the positions she is now trying to reclaim. Raniel's actuation has been sufficiently proven to warrant loss of the Board's confidence.

The SEC also correctly concluded that petitioner Raniel was removed as an officer of Nephro in compliance with established procedure, thus:

The resolutions of the Board dismissing complainant Raniel from her various positions in Nephro are valid. Notwithstanding the absence of complainants from the meeting, a quorum was validly constituted.

Based on its articles of incorporation, Nephro has five directors – two of the positions were occupied by complainants and the remaining three are held by respondents. This being the case, the presence of all three respondents in the Special Meeting of the Board on February 2, 1998 established a quorum for the conduct of business. The unanimous resolutions carried by the Board during such meeting are therefore valid and binding against complainants.

It bears emphasis that Raniel was given sufficient opportunity to be heard. Jochico's letters of January 26, 1998 and January 27, 1998, albeit adversarial, recognized her right to explain herself and gave her the chance to do so. In fact, Raniel did respond to Jochico's letter on January 28, 1998 and took the occasion to voice her opinions about Jochico's alleged "practice of using others for your own benefit, without cost." .Moreover, the Special Meeting of the Board could have been the appropriate venue for Raniel to air her side. Had Raniel decided to grace the meeting with her presence, she could have explained herself before the board and tried to convince them to allow her to keep her posts."
Petitioners Raniel and Pag-ong's removal as members of Nephro's Board of Directors was likewise valid.

Only stockholders or members have the power to remove the directors or trustees elected by them, as laid down in Section 28 of the Corporation Code, which provides in part:

SEC. 28. Removal of directors or trustees. -- Any director or trustee of a corporation may be removed from office by a vote of the stockholders holding or representing at least two-thirds (2/3) of the outstanding capital stock, or if the corporation be a non-stock corporation, by a vote of at least two-thirds (2/3) of the members entitled to vote: Provided, that such removal shall take place either at a regular meeting of the corporation or at a special meeting called for the purpose, and in either case, after previous notice to stockholders or members of the corporation of the intention to propose such removal at the meeting. A special meeting of the stockholders or members of a corporation for the purpose of removal of directors or trustees or any of them, must be called by the secretary on order of the president or on the written demand of the stockholders representing or holding at least a majority of the outstanding capital stock, or if it be a non-stock corporation, on the written demand of a majority of the members entitled to vote. x x x Notice of the time and place of such meeting, as well as of the intention to propose such removal, must be given by publication or by written notice as prescribed in this Code. x x x Removal may be with or without cause: *Provided, T*hat removal without cause may not be used to deprive minority stockholders or members of the right of representation to which they may be entitled under Section 24 of this Code.

Petitioners do not dispute that the stockholders' meeting was held in accordance with Nephro's By-Laws. The ownership of Nephro's outstanding capital stock is distributed as follows: Jochico - 200 shares; Steffens - 100 shares; Viriya - 100 shares; Raniel - 75 shares; and Pag-ong - 25 shares, or a total of 500 shares. A two-thirds vote of Nephro's outstanding capital stock would be 333.33 shares, and during the Stockholders' Special Meeting held on February 16, 1998, 400 shares voted for petitioners' removal. Said number of votes is more than enough to oust petitioners from their respective positions as members of the board, with or without cause.

6. Filling of Vacancies

VALLE VERDE COUNTRY CLUB, INC., ERNESTO VILLALUNA, RAY GAMBOA, AMADO M. SANTIAGO, JR., FORTUNATO DEE, AUGUSTO SUNICO, VICTOR SALTA, FRANCISCO ORTIGAS III, ERIC ROXAS, in their capacities as members of the Board of Directors of Valle Verde Country Club, Inc., and JOSE RAMIREZ, Petitioners -versus- VICTOR AFRICA, Respondent
G.R. No. 151969, SSECOND DIVISION, September 4, 2009, BRION, J.

The holdover period that time from the lapse of one year from a members election to the Board and until his successors election and qualification is not part of the directors original term of office, nor is it a new term; the holdover period, however, constitutes part of his tenure. Corollary, when an incumbent member of the board of directors continues to serve in a holdover capacity, it implies that the office has a fixed term, which has expired, and the incumbent is holding the succeeding term. After the lapse of one year from his election as member of the VVCC Board in 1996, Makalintals term of office is deemed to have already expired. That he continued to serve in the VVCC Board in a holdover capacity cannot be considered as extending his term.

FACTS

On February 27, 1996, during the Annual Stockholders Meeting of petitioner Valle Verde Country Club, Inc. (VVCC), the following were elected as members of the VVCC Board of Directors: Ernesto Villaluna, Jaime C. Dinglasan (Dinglasan), Eduardo Makalintal (Makalintal), Francisco Ortigas III, Victor Salta, Amado M. Santiago, Jr., Fortunato Dee, Augusto Sunico, and Ray Gamboa. In the years 1997, 1998, 1999, 2000, and 2001, however, the requisite quorum for the holding of the stockholders meeting could not be obtained. Consequently, the above-named directors continued to serve in the VVCC Board in a hold-over capacity.

On September 1, 1998, Dinglasan resigned from his position as member of the VVCC Board. In a meeting held on October 6, 1998, the remaining directors, still constituting a quorum of VVCCs nine-member board, elected Eric Roxas (Roxas) to fill in the vacancy created by the resignation of Dinglasan. A year later, or on November 10, 1998, Makalintal also resigned as member of the VVCC Board. He was replaced by Jose Ramirez (Ramirez), who was elected by the remaining members of the VVCC Board on March 6, 2001.

Respondent Africa (Africa), a member of VVCC, questioned the election of Roxas and Ramirez as members of the VVCC Board with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) and the Regional Trial Court (RTC), respectively. Africa alleged that the election of Roxas was contrary to Section 29, in relation to Section 23, of the Corporation Code of the Philippines. Africa claimed that a year after Makalintals election as member of the VVCC Board in 1996, his [Makalintals] term as well as those of the other members of the VVCC Board should be considered to have already expired. Thus, according to Africa, the resulting vacancy should have been filled by the stockholders in a regular or special meeting called for that purpose, and not by the remaining members of the VVCC Board, as was done in this case. Africa additionally contends that for the members to exercise the authority to fill in vacancies in the board of directors, Section 29 requires, among others, that there should be an unexpired term during which the successor-member shall serve. Since Makalintals term had already expired with the lapse of the one-year term provided in Section 23, there is no more unexpired term during which Ramirez could serve.

Through a partial decision promulgated on January 23, 2002, the RTC ruled in favor of Africa and declared the election of Ramirez, as Makalintals replacement, to the VVCC Board as null and void. Incidentally, the SEC issued a similar ruling on June 3, 2003, nullifying the election of Roxas as member of the VVCC Board, vice hold-over director Dinglasan. While VVCC manifested its intent to appeal from the SECs ruling, no petition was actually filed with the Court of Appeals; thus, the appellate court considered the case closed and terminated and the SECs ruling final and executory.

ISSUE

Whether or not the remaining directors of a corporations Board, still constituting a quorum, can elect another director to fill in a vacancy caused by the resignation of a hold-over director?

RULING

No. The word term has acquired a definite meaning in jurisprudence. In several cases, we have defined term as the time during which the officer may claim to hold the office as of right, and fixes the interval after which the several incumbents shall succeed one another. The term of office is not affected by the holdover. The term is fixed by statute and it does not change simply because the office may have become vacant, nor because the incumbent holds over in office beyond the end of the term due to the fact that a successor has not been elected and has failed to qualify. Term is distinguished from tenure in that an officers tenure represents the term during which the incumbent actually holds office. The tenure may be shorter (or, in case of holdover, longer) than the term for reasons within or beyond the power of the incumbent. Based on the above discussion, when Section 23 of the Corporation Code declares that the board of directors shall hold office for one (1) year until their successors are elected and qualified, we construe the provision to mean that the term of the members of the board of directors shall be only for one year; their term expires one year after election to the office.

The holdover period that time from the lapse of one year from a members election to the Board and until his successors election and qualification is not part of the directors original term of office, nor is it a new term; the holdover period, however, constitutes part of his tenure. Corollary, when an incumbent member of the board of directors continues to serve in a holdover capacity, it implies that the office has a fixed term, which has expired, and the incumbent is holding the succeeding term. After the lapse of one year from his election as member of the VVCC Board in 1996, Makalintals term of office is deemed to have already expired. That he continued to serve in the VVCC Board in a holdover capacity cannot be considered as extending his term. To be precise, Makalintals term of office began in 1996 and expired in 1997, but, by virtue of the holdover doctrine in Section 23 of the Corporation Code, he continued to hold office until his resignation on November 10, 1998. This holdover period, however, is not to be considered as part of his term, which, as declared, had already expired. With the expiration of Makalintals term of office, a vacancy resulted which, by the terms of Section 29 of the Corporation Code, must be filled by the stockholders of VVCC in a regular or special meeting called for the purpose. To assume as VVCC does that the vacancy is caused by Makalintals resignation in 1998, not by the expiration of his term in 1997, is both illogical and unreasonable. His resignation as a holdover director did not change the nature of the vacancy; the vacancy due to the expiration of Makalintals term had been created long before his resignation.

WHEREFORE, we DENY the petitioners petition for review on certiorari, and AFFIRM the partial decision of the Regional Trial Court.

JOSE A. BERNAS, CECILE H. CHENG, VICTOR AFRICA, JESUS B. MARAMARA, JOSE T. FRONDOSO, IGNACIO T. MACROHON, JR., AND PAULINO T. LIM, ACTING IN THEIR CAP A CITY AS INDIVIDUAL DIRECTORS OF MAKATI SPORTS CLUB, INC., AND ON BEHALF OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF MAKATI SPORTS CLUB, Petitioners -versus- JOVENCIO F. CINCO, VICENTE R. AYLLON, RICARDO G. LIBREA, SAMUEL L. ESGUERRA, ROLANDO P. DELA CUESTA, RUBEN L. TORRES, ALEX Y. PARDO, MA. CRISTINA SIM, ROGER T. AGUILING, JOSE B. QUIMSON, CELESTINO L. ANG, ELISEO V. VILLAMOR, FELIPE L. GOZON, CLAUDIO B. ALTURA, ROGELIO G. VILLAROSA, MANUEL R. SANTIAGO, BENJAMIN A. CARANDANG, REGINA DE LEON-HERLIHY, CARLOS Y. RAMOS, JR., ALEJANDRO Z. BARIN, EFRENILO M. CAYANGA AND JOHN DOES, Respondents.
G.R. No. 163356, FIRST DIVISION, July 21, 2015, PEREZ, J.

A corporation's board of directors is understood to be that body which (1) exercises all powers provided for under the Corporation Code; (2) conducts all business of the corporation; and (3) controls and holds all the property of the corporation. Its members have been characterized as trustees or directors clothed with fiduciary character. It is ineluctably clear that the fiduciary relation is between the stockholders and the board of directors and who are vested with the power to manage the affairs of the corporation. The ordinary trust relationship of directors of a corporation and stockholders is not a matter of statutory or technical law. It springs from the fact that directors have the control and guidance of corporate affairs and property and hence of the property interests of the stockholders.

FACTS

Makati Sports Club (MSC) is a domestic corporation duly organized and existing under Philippine laws for the primary purpose of establishing, maintaining, and providing social, cultural, recreational and athletic activities among its members.

Alarmed with the rumored anomalies in handling the corporate funds, the MSC Oversight Committee (MSCOC), composed of the past presidents of the club, demanded from the Bernas Group, who were then incumbent officers of the corporation, to resign from their respective positions to pave the way for the election of new set of officers. Resonating this clamor were the stockholders of the corporation representing at least 100 shares who sought the assistance of the MSCOC to call for a special stockholders meeting for the purpose of removing the sitting officers and electing new ones. Pursuant to such request, the MSCOC called a Special Stockholders' Meeting and sent out notices to all stockholders and members stating therein the time, place and purpose of the meeting. For failure of the Bernas Group to secure an injunction before the Securities Commission (SEC), the meeting proceeded wherein Jose A. Bernas, Cecile H. Cheng, Victor Africa, Jesus Maramara, Jose T. Frondoso, Ignacio T. Macrohon, Jr. and Paulino T. Lim were removed from office and, in their place and stead, Jovencio F. Cinco, Ricardo G. Librea, Alex Y. Pardo, Roger T. Aguiling, Rogelio G. Villarosa, Armando David, Norberto Maronilla, Regina de Leon---‐Herlihy and Claudio B. Altura, were elected. Aggrieved by the turn of events, the Bernas Group initiated an action before the Securities Investigation and Clearing Department (SICD) of the SEC docketed as SEC Case No. 5840 seeking for the nullification of the December 1997 Special Stockholders Meeting on the ground that it was improperly called. Citing Section 28 of the Corporation Code, the Bernas Group argued that the authority to call a meeting lies with the Corporate Secretary and not with the MSCOC which functions merely as an oversight body and is not vested with the power to call corporate meetings. For their part, the Cinco Group insisted that the 17 December 1997 Special Stockholders' Meeting is sanctioned by the Corporation Code and the MSC by---‐laws. In justifying the call effected by the MSCOC, they reasoned that Section 25 of the MSC by---‐laws merely authorized the Corporate Secretary to issue notices of meetings and nowhere does it state that such authority solely belongs to him.

Prior to the resolution of SEC Case No. 5840, an Annual Stockholders' Meeting was held on 20 April 1998 pursuant to Section 8 of the MSC bylaws. During the said meeting, which was attended by 1,017 stockholders representing 2/3 of the outstanding shares, the majority resolved to approve, confirm and ratify, among others, the calling and holding of 17 December 1997 Special Stockholders' Meeting, the acts and resolutions adopted therein including the removal of Bernas Group from the Board and the election of their replacements. The conduct of the 17 December 1997 Special Stockholders' Meeting was likewise ratified by the stockholders during the 2000 Annual Stockholders' Meeting which was held on 17 April 2000.

On 9 May 2000, the SICD rendered a Decision 17 in SEC Case No. 12---‐97---‐5840 finding, among others, that the 17 December 1997 Special Stockholders' Meeting and the Annual Stockholders' Meeting conducted on 20 April 1998 and 19 April 1999 are invalid. The SICD likewise nullified the expulsion of Bernas from the corporation and the sale of his share at the public auction:

(a) The supposed Special Stockholders' Meeting of December 17, 1997 was prematurely or invalidly called by the [the Cinco Group]. It therefore failed to produce any legal effects
(b) The April 20, 1998 meeting was not attended by a sufficient number of valid proxies. No quorum could have been present at the said meeting. No corporate business could have been validly completed and/or transacted during the said meeting. Further, it was not called by the validly elected Corporate Secretary Victor Africa nor presided over by the validly elected president Jose A. Bernas.

On appeal, the SEC En Banc, in its 12 December 2000 Decision reversed the findings of the SICD and validated the holding of the 17 December 1997 Special Stockholders' Meeting as well as the Annual Stockholders' Meeting held on 20 April 1998 and 19 April 1999. On 28 April 2003, the Court of Appeals rendered a Decision declaring the 17 December 1997 Special Stockholders' Meeting invalid for being improperly called but affirmed the actions taken during the Annual Stockholders' Meeting held on 20 April 1998, 19 April 1999 and 17 April 2000.

ISSUE

Was the meeting indeed invalid? (NO)

HELD

No. The Corporation Code laid down the rules on the removal of the Directors of the corporation by providing, inter alia, the persons authorized to call the meeting and the number of votes required for the purpose of removal in Sec. 28 of the Corporation Code. Corollarily, the pertinent provisions of MSC by---‐laws which govern the manner of calling and sending of notices of the annual stockholders' meeting and the special stockholders' meeting provide:

SEC. 8. Annual Meetings. — The annual meeting of stockholders shall be held at the Clubhouse on the third Monday of April of every year unless such day be a holiday in which case the annual meeting shall be held on the next succeeding business day

SEC. 10. Special Meetings. — Special meetings of stockholders shall be held at the Clubhouse when called by the President or by the Board of Directors or upon written request of the stockholders representing not less than one hundred (100) shares.

SEC. 25. Secretary. — The Secretary shall keep the stock and transfer book and the corporate seal, which he shall stamp on all documents requiring such seal, fill and sign together with the President, all the certificates of stocks issued, give or caused to be given all notices required by law of these By---‐ laws as well as notices of all meeting of the Board and of the stockholders; shall certify as to quorum at meetings; shall approve and sign all correspondence pertaining to the Office of the Secretary.

Textually, only the President and the Board of Directors are authorized by the by---‐laws to call a special meeting. In cases where the person authorized to call a meeting refuses, fails or neglects to call a meeting, then the stockholders representing at least 100 shares, upon written request, may file a petition to call a special stockholder's meeting. In the instant case, there is no dispute that the 17 December 1997 Special Stockholders' Meeting was called neither by the President nor by the Board of Directors but by the MSCOC. While the MSCOC, as its name suggests, is created for the purpose of overseeing the affairs of the corporation, nowhere in the by---‐laws does it state that it is authorized to exercise corporate powers, such as the power to call a special meeting, solely vested by law and the MSC by---‐laws on the President or the Board of Directors. A corporation's board of directors is understood to be that body which (1) exercises all powers provided for under the Corporation Code; (2) conducts all business of the corporation; and (3) controls and holds all the property of the corporation. Its members have been characterized as trustees or directors clothed with fiduciary character. It is ineluctably clear that the fiduciary relation is between the stockholders and the board of directors and who are vested with the power to manage the affairs of the corporation. The ordinary trust relationship of directors of a corporation and stockholders is not a matter of statutory or technical law. It springs from the fact that directors have the control and guidance of corporate affairs and property and hence of the property interests of the stockholders.

Relative to the powers of the Board of Directors, nowhere in the Corporation Code or in the MSC by---laws can it be gathered that the Oversight Committee is authorized to step in wherever there is breach of fiduciary duty and call a special meeting for the purpose of removing the existing officers and electing their replacements even if such call was made upon the request of shareholders. Needless to say, the MSCOC is neither empowered by law nor the MSC by---laws to call a meeting and the subsequent ratification made by the stockholders did not cure the substantive infirmity, the defect having set in at the time the void act was done. The defect goes into the very authority of the persons who made the call for the meeting. It is apt to recall that illegal acts of a corporation which contemplate the doing of an act which is contrary to law, morals or public order, or contravenes some rules of public policy or public duty, are, like similar transactions between individuals, void. They cannot serve as basis for a court action, nor acquire validity by performance, ratification or estoppel. Consequently, such Special Stockholders' Meeting called by the Oversight Committee cannot have any legal effect. The removal of the Bernas Group, as well as the election of the Cinco Group, effected by the assembly in that improperly called meeting is void, and since the Cinco Group has no legal right to sit in the board, their subsequent acts of expelling Bernas from the club and the selling of his shares at the public auction, are likewise invalid. The Cinco Group cannot invoke the application of de facto officership doctrine to justify the actions taken after the invalid election since the operation of the principle is limited to third persons who were originally not part of the corporation but became such by reason of voting of government---sequestered shares.

The case would have been different if the petitioning stockholders went directly to the SEC and sought its assistance to call a special stockholders' meeting citing the previous refusal of the Corporate Secretary to call a meeting. Where there is an officer authorized to call a meeting and that officer refuses, fails, or neglects to call a meeting, the SEC can assume jurisdiction and issue an order to the petitioning stockholder to call a meeting pursuant to its regulatory and administrative powers to implement the Corporation Code. Given the broad administrative and regulatory powers of the SEC outlined under Section 50 of the Corporation Code and Section 6 of Presidential Decree (PD) No. 902---A, the Cinco Group cannot claim that if was left without recourse after the Corporate Secretary previously refused to heed its demand to call a special stockholders' meeting. If it be true that the Corporate Secretary refused to call a meeting despite fervent demand from the MSCOC, the remedy of the stockholders would have been to file a petition to the SEC to direct him to call a meeting by giving proper notice required under the Code

7. Compensation

WESTERN INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY, INC., HOMERO L. VILLASIS, DIMAS ENRIQUEZ, PRESTON F. VILLASIS & REGINALD F. VILLASIS, Petitioner
-versus- RICARDO T. SALAS, SALVADOR T. SALAS, SOLEDAD SALAS-TUBILLEJA, ANTONIO S. SALAS, RICHARD S. SALAS & HON. JUDGE PORFIRIO PARIAN, Respondents G.R. No. 113032, FIRST DIVISION, August 21, 1997, HERMOSISIMA, Jr., J.

Directors or trustees, as the case may be, are not entitled to salary or other compensation when they perform nothing more than the usual and ordinary duties of their office. The prohibition with respect to granting compensation to corporate directors/trustees as such under Section 30 is not violated in this case and does not likewise find application in this case since the compensation is being given to private respondents in their capacity as officers of WIT and not as board members

FACTS

Private respondents, belonging to the same family, are the majority and controlling members of the Board of Trustees of Western Institute of Technology, Inc. (WIT), a stock corporation engaged in the operation, among others, of an educational institution. While the petitioners are the minority stockholders of WIT. Sometime in June, in the principal office of WIT at La Paz, Iloilo City, a Special Board Meeting was held. In attendance were other members of the Board including one of the petitioners Reginald Villasis. Prior to the Special Board Meeting, copies of notice which providesfor the date and purpose of the meeting were distributed to all Board Members. In the said meeting,the Board of Trustees passed a resolution granting monthly compensation to the private respondents as corporate officers retroactive June 1, 1985.

Petitioners filed an affidavit-complaint against private respondents before the Office of the City Prosecutor of Iloilo and as a result of which two (2) separate criminal information, one for falsification of a public document and the other for estafa, were filed. The charge for falsification of public document was anchored on the private respondents' submission of WIT's income statement for the fiscal year 1985-1986 with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) reflecting therein the disbursement of corporate funds for the compensation of private respondents based on Resolution No. 4, series of 1986, making it appear that the same was passed by the board on March 30, 1986, when in truth, the same was actually passed on June 1, 1986, a date not covered by the corporation's fiscal year 1985-1986. Thereafter, trial for the two criminal cases, docketed as Criminal Cases Nos. 37097 and 37098, was consolidated. After a full-blown hearing, Judge Porfirio Parian handed down a verdict of acquittal on both counts without imposing any civil liability against the accused therein. Petitioners filed a Motion for Reconsideration of the civil aspect of the RTC Decision which was, however, denied. Petitioners would like to hold private respondents civilly liable despite their acquittal in Criminal and alleged the illegal issuance by private respondents of Resolution No. 48, series of 1986 ordering the disbursement of corporate funds representing retroactive compensation and for the subsequent collective salaries They maintain that the grant of compensation to private respondents is proscribed under Section 30 of the Corporation Code thus obliging the private respondents to return the amounts they received with interest. Motion for Intervention was filed by WIT disowning its inclusion in the petition and submitting that Atty. Tranquilino R. Gale, counsel for the other petitioners, had no authority whatsoever to represent the corporation in filing the petition. It also prayed for the dismissal of the petition for being utterly without merit. The Motion for Intervention was granted.

ISSUES

1. Whether or not the grant of compensation to Salas, et. al. is proscribed under Section 30 of the Corporation Code. (NO)
2. Whether or not the instant case is a derivative suit. (NO)

RULING

1. No. the grant of compensation to the private respondents is not proscribed under Section 30 of the Corporation Code. Directors or trustees, as the case may be, are not entitled to salary or other compensation when they perform nothing more than the usual and ordinary duties of their office. This rule is founded upon a presumption that directors/trustees render service gratuitously, and that the return upon their shares adequately furnishes the motives for service, without compensation. Under section 30, there are only two (2) ways by which members of the board can be granted compensation apart from reasonable per diems: (1) when there is a provision in the by-laws fixing their compensation; and (2) when the stockholders representing a majority of the outstanding capital stock at a regular or special stockholders' meeting agree to give it to them. The prohibition with respect to granting compensation to corporate directors/trustees as such under Section 30 is not violated in this case and does not likewise find application in this case since the compensation is being given to private respondents in their capacity as officers of WIT and not as board members.

2. No, the case is not a derivative suit but is merely an appeal on the civil aspect of criminal cases filed with the RTC of Iloilo for estafa and falsification of public document. A derivative suit is an action brought by minority shareholders in the name of the corporation to redress wrongs committed against it, for which the directors refuse to sue. It is a remedy designed by equity and has been the principal defense of the minority shareholders against abuses by the majority. Among the basic requirements for a derivative suit to prosper is that the minority shareholder who is suing for and on behalf of the corporation must allege in his complaint before the proper forum that he is suing on a derivative cause of action on behalf of the corporation and all other shareholders similarly situated who wish to join. Such is necessary to vest jurisdiction upon the tribunal in with the rule that it is the allegations in the complaint that vests jurisdiction upon the court or quasi-judicial body concerned over the subject matter and nature of the action. Such requirement was not complied with by the petitioners in their complaint which merely states that "this is a petition for review on certiorari on pure questions of law to set aside a portion of the RTC decision in Criminal Cases since the trial court's judgment of acquittal failed to impose any civil liability against the private respondents". By no amount of equity considerations, if at all deserved, can a mere appeal on the civil aspect of a criminal case be treated as a derivative suit.

WHEREFORE, the instant petition is hereby DENIED with costs against petitioners.

8. Fiduciary Duties and Liability Rules

BENGUET ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE, INC., Petitioner –versus- NATIONAL RELATIONS COMMISSION, PETER COSALAN and BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF BENGUET ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE, INC, Respondent

GR No. 89070, THIRD DIVISION, May 18,1992, FELICIANO, J.

The applicable general rule is clear enough. The Board members and officers of a corporation who purport to act for and in behalf of the corporation, keep within the lawful scope of their authority in so acting, and act in good faith, do not become liable, whether civilly or otherwise, for the consequences of their acts, Those acts, when they are such a nature and are done under such circumstances, are properly attributed to the corporation alone and no personal liability is incurred by such officers and Board members.

FACTS

Private respondent Peter Cosalan was the General Manager of Petitioner Benguet Electric Cooperative, Inc. ("Beneco"), having been elected as such by the Board of Directors of Beneco, with the approval of the National Electrification Administrator, Mr. Pedro Dumol.

Respondent Cosalan received Audit Memorandum No. 1 issued by the Commission on Audit ("COA"). This Memorandum noted that cash advances received by officers and employees of petitioner Beneco in the amount of P129,618.48 had been virtually written off in the books of Beneco. In the Audit Memorandum, the COA directed petitioner Beneco to secure the approval of the National Electrification Administration ("NEA") before writing off or condoning those cash advances, and recommended the adoption of remedial measures.

COA issued another Memorandum — Audit Memorandum No. 2 –– addressed to respondent Peter Cosalan, inviting attention to the fact that the audit of per diems and allowances received by officials and members of the Board of Directors of Beneco showed substantial inconsistencies with the directives of the NEA. The Audit Memorandum once again directed the taking of immediate action in conformity with existing NEA regulations.

Petitioner Beneco received the COA Audit Report on the financial status and operations of Beneco. This Audit Report noted and enumerated irregularities in the utilization of funds amounting to P37 Million released by NEA to Beneco, and recommended that appropriate remedial action be taken.

Having been made aware of the serious financial condition of Beneco and what appeared to be mismanagement, respondent Cosalan initiated implementation of the remedial measures recommended by the COA. The respondent members of the Board of Beneco reacted by adopting a series of resolutions. These Board Resolutions abolished the housing allowance of respondent Cosalan; reduced his salary and his representation and commutable allowances; directed him to hold in abeyance all pending personnel disciplinary actions; and struck his name out as a principal signatory to transactions of petitioner Beneco.

The respondent Beneco Board members adopted another series of resolutions which resulted in the ouster of respondent Cosalan as General Manager of Beneco and his exclusion from performance of his regular duties as such, as well as the withholding of his salary and allowances.

Respondent Cosalan nevertheless continued to work as General Manager of Beneco, in the belief that he could be suspended or removed only by duly authorized officials of NEA, in accordance with provisions of P.D. No, 269, as amended by P.D. No. 1645 (the statute creating the NEA, providing for its capitalization, powers and functions and organization), the loan agreement between NEA and petitioner Beneco . Accordingly, respondent Cosalan requested petitioner Beneco to release the compensation due him. Beneco, acting through respondent Board members, denied the written request of respondent Cosalan.

Respondent Cosalan then filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Commission ("NLRC") against respondent members of the Beneco Board, challenging the legality of the Board resolutions which ordered his suspension and termination from the service and demanding payment of his salaries and allowances. Cosalan amended his complaint to implead petitioner Beneco and respondent Board members, the latter in their respective dual capacities as Directors and as private individuals.

the Labor Arbiter rendered a decision (a) confirming Cosalan's reinstatement; (b) ordering payment to Cosalan of his backwages and allowances by petitioner Beneco and respondent Board members, jointly and severally, for a period of three (3) years without deduction or qualification, amounting to P344,000.00; and (3) ordering the individual Board members to pay, jointly and severally, to Cosalan moral damages of P50,000.00 plus attorney's fees of ten percent (10%) of the wages and allowances awarded him.

Respondent Board members appealed to the NLRC,

Public respondent NLRC modified the award rendered by the Labor Arbiter by declaring that petitioner Beneco alone, and not respondent Board members, was liable for respondent Cosalan's backwages and allowances, and by ruling that there was no legal basis for the award of moral damages and attorney's fees made by the Labor Arbiter.

ISSUE

W/N the NLRC had acted with grave abuse of discretion amounting to lack of jurisdiction in holding petitioner alone liable for payment of the backwages and allowances due to Cosalan and releasing respondent Board members from liability therefor. (YES)

RULING

The applicable general rule is clear enough. The Board members and officers of a corporation who purport to act for and in behalf of the corporation, keep within the lawful scope of their authority in so acting, and act in good faith, do not become liable, whether civilly or otherwise, for the consequences of their acts, Those acts, when they are such a nature and are done under such circumstances, are properly attributed to the corporation alone and no personal liability is incurred by such officers and Board members.

The major difficulty with the conclusion reached by the NLRC is that the NLRC clearly overlooked or disregarded the circumstances under which respondent Board members had in fact acted in the instant case. As noted earlier, the respondent Board members responded to the efforts of Cosalan to take seriously and implement the Audit Memoranda issued by the COA explicitly addressed to the petitioner Beneco, first by stripping Cosalan of the privileges and perquisites attached to his position as General Manager, then by suspending indefinitely and finally dismissing Cosalan from such position. As also noted earlier, respondent Board members offered no suggestion at all of any just or lawful cause that could sustain the suspension and dismissal of Cosalan. They obviously wanted to get rid of Cosalan and so acted, in the words of the NLRC itself, "with indecent haste" in removing him from his position and denying him substantive and procedural due process. Thus, the record showed strong indications that respondent Board members had illegally suspended and dismissed Cosalan precisely because he was trying to remedy the financial irregularities and violations of NEA regulations which the COA had brought to the attention of Beneco. The conclusion reached by the NLRC that "the records do not disclose that the individual Board members were motivated by malice or bad faith" flew in the face of the evidence of record. At the very least, a strong presumption had arisen, which it was incumbent upon respondent Board members to disprove, that they had acted in reprisal against respondent Cosalan and in an effort to suppress knowledge about and remedial measures against the financial irregularities the COA Audits had unearthed. That burden respondent Board members did not discharge.

The Solicitor General has urged that respondent Board members may be held liable for damages under the foregoing circumstance under Section 31 of the Corporation Code which reads as follows:

Sec. 31. *Liability of directors, trustees or officer*s. — Directors or trustees who willfully and knowingly vote for or assent to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or who are guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation or acquire any personal or pecuniary interest in conflict with their duty as such directors or trustees shall be jointly liable and severally for all damages resulting therefrom suffered by the corporation, its stockholders or members and other persons.

We agree with the Solicitor General, that respondent Board members were guilty of "gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation" in enacting the series of resolutions noted earlier indefinitely suspending and dismissing respondent Cosalan from the position of General Manager of Beneco. Respondent Board members, in doing so, acted belong the scope of their authority as such Board members. The dismissal of an officer or employee in bad faith, without lawful cause and without procedural due process, is an act that is contra legem. It cannot be supposed that members of boards of directors derive any authority to violate the express mandates of law or the clear legal rights of their officers and employees by simply purporting to act for the corporation they control.

We believe and so hold, further, that not only are Beneco and respondent Board members properly held solidarily liable for the awards made by the Labor Arbiter, but also that petitioner Beneco which was controlled by and which could act only through respondent Board members, has a right to be reimbursed for any amounts that Beneco may be compelled to pay to respondent Cosalan. Such right of reimbursement is essential if the innocent members of Beneco are not to be penalized for the acts of respondent Board members which were both done in bad faith and ultra vires. The liability-generating acts here are the personal and individual acts of respondent Board members, and are not properly attributed to Beneco itself.

CEBU COUNTRY CLUB, INC., SABINO R. DAPAT, RUBEN D. ALMENDRAS, JULIUS Z. NERI, DOUGLAS L. LUYM, CESAR T. LIBI, RAMONTITO* E. GARCIA and JOSE B. SALA, Petitioners -versus- RICARDO F. ELIZAGAQUE, Respondent

GR No. 160273, FIRST DIVISION, January 18, 2008, SANDOVAL-GUTIERREZ, J.

Obviously, the CCCI Board of Directors, under its Articles of Incorporation, has the right to approve or disapprove an application for proprietary membership. But such right should not be exercised arbitrarily. In rejecting respondent's application for proprietary membership, we find that petitioners violated the rules governing human relations, the basic principles to be observed for the rightful relationship between human beings and for the stability of social order.

FACTS

Cebu Country Club, Inc. (CCCI), petitioner, is a domestic corporation operating as a non-profit and non-stock private membership club, having its principal place of business in Banilad, Cebu City. Petitioners herein are members of its Board of Directors

Sometime in 1987, San Miguel Corporation, a special company proprietary member of CCCI, designated respondent Ricardo F. Elizagaque, its Senior Vice President and Operations Manager for the Visayas and Mindanao, as a special non-proprietary member. The designation was thereafter approved by the CCCI's Board of Directors.

In 1996, respondent filed with CCCI an application for proprietary membership. The application was indorsed by CCCI's two (2) proprietary members, namely: Edmundo T. Misa and Silvano Ludo.
As the price of a proprietary share was around the ₱5 million range, Benito Unchuan, then president of CCCI, offered to sell respondent a share for only ₱3.5 million. Respondent, however, purchased the share of a certain Dr. Butalid for only ₱3 million. Consequently, on September 6, 1996, CCCI issued Proprietary Ownership Certificate No. 1446 to respondent.

During the meetings dated April 4, 1997 and May 30, 1997 of the CCCI Board of Directors, action on respondent's application for proprietary membership was deferred. In another Board meeting held on July 30, 1997, respondent's application was voted upon. Subsequently, or on August 1, 1997, respondent received a letter from Julius Z. Neri, CCCI's corporate secretary, informing him that the Board disapproved his application for proprietary membership.

On August 6, 1997, Edmundo T. Misa, on behalf of respondent, wrote CCCI a letter of reconsideration. As CCCI did not answer, respondent, on October 7, 1997, wrote another letter of reconsideration. Still, CCCI kept silent. On November 5, 1997, respondent again sent CCCI a letter inquiring whether any member of the Board objected to his application. Again, CCCI did not reply.

Consequently, on December 23, 1998, respondent filed with the Regional Trial Court (RTC), Branch 71, Pasig City a complaint for damages against petitioners.

ISSUE

Whether in disapproving respondent's application for proprietary membership with CCCI, petitioners are liable to respondent for damages, and if so, whether their liability is joint and several. (YES)

RULING
Obviously, the CCCI Board of Directors, under its Articles of Incorporation, has the right to approve or disapprove an application for proprietary membership. But such right should not be exercised arbitrarily. Articles 19 and 21 of the Civil Code on the Chapter on Human Relations provide restrictions, thus:

> Article 19. Every person must, in the exercise of his rights and in the performance of his duties, act with justice, give everyone his due, and observe honesty and good faith.
> Article 21. Any person who willfully causes loss or injury to another in a manner that is contrary to morals, good customs or public policy shall compensate the latter for the damage.

In rejecting respondent's application for proprietary membership, we find that petitioners violated the rules governing human relations, the basic principles to be observed for the rightful relationship between human beings and for the stability of social order. The trial court and the Court of Appeals aptly held that petitioners committed fraud and evident bad faith in disapproving respondent's applications. This is contrary to morals, good custom or public policy. Hence, petitioners are liable for damages pursuant to Article 19 in relation to Article 21 of the same Code.

It bears stressing that the amendment to Section 3(c) of CCCI's Amended By-Laws requiring the unanimous vote of the directors present at a special or regular meeting was not printed on the application form respondent filled and submitted to CCCI. What was printed thereon was the original provision of Section 3(c) which was silent on the required number of votes needed for admission of an applicant as a proprietary member.

Petitioners explained that the amendment was not printed on the application form due to economic reasons. We find this excuse flimsy and unconvincing. Such amendment, aside from being extremely significant, was introduced way back in 1978 or almost twenty (20) years before respondent filed his application. We cannot fathom why such a prestigious and exclusive golf country club, like the CCCI, whose members are all affluent, did not have enough money to cause the printing of an updated application form.

It is thus clear that respondent was left groping in the dark wondering why his application was disapproved. He was not even informed that a unanimous vote of the Board members was required. When he sent a letter for reconsideration and an inquiry whether there was an objection to his application, petitioners apparently ignored him. Certainly, respondent did not deserve this kind of treatment. Having been designated by San Miguel Corporation as a special non-proprietary member of CCCI, he should have been treated by petitioners with courtesy and civility. At the very least, they should have informed him why his application was disapproved.

The exercise of a right, though legal by itself, must nonetheless be in accordance with the proper norm. When the right is exercised arbitrarily, unjustly or excessively and results in damage to another, a legal wrong is committed for which the wrongdoer must be held responsible. It bears reiterating that the trial court and the Court of Appeals held that petitioners' disapproval of respondent's application is characterized by bad faith.

As to petitioners' reliance on the principle of damnum absque injuria or damage without injury, suffice it to state that the same is misplaced. In Amonoy v. Gutierrez, we held that this principle does not apply when there is an abuse of a person's right, as in this case.

Lastly, petitioners' argument that they could not be held jointly and severally liable for damages because only one (1) voted for the disapproval of respondent's application lacks merit.
Section 31 of the Corporation Code provides:

> SEC. 31. Liability of directors, trustees or officers. — Directors or trustees who willfully and knowingly vote for or assent to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or who are guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation or acquire any personal or pecuniary interest in conflict with their duty as such directors, or trustees shall be liable jointly and severally for all damages resulting therefrom suffered by the corporation, its stockholders or members and other persons.

HEIRS OF FE TAN UY, REPRESENTED BY HER HEIR, MAULING UY LIM, Petitioner -versus- INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGE BANK, Respondent

G.R. No. 166282 & 83, THIRD DIVISION, February 13, 2013, MENDOZA, J.

At most, Uy could have been charged with negligence in the performance of her duties as treasurer of Hammer by allowing the company to contract a loan despite its precarious financial position. The shortcomings of Uy are not sufficient to justify the piercing of the corporate veil which requires that the negligence of the officer must be so gross that it could amount to bad faith and must be established by clear and convincing evidence.

FACTS

On several occasions, International Exchange Bank (iBank), granted loans to Hammer Garments Corporation (Hammer), covered by promissory notes and deeds of assignment. These were made pursuant to the Letter-Agreement between iBank and Hammer, represented by its President and General Manager, (Chua) a.k.a. Manuel Chua Uy Po Tiong, granting Hammer a P 25 Million-Peso Omnibus Line. The loans were secured by a P 9 Million-Peso Real Estate Mortgage executed by Goldkey Development Corporation (Goldkey) over several of its properties and a P 25 Million-Peso Surety Agreement7 signed by Chua and his wife, Fe Tan Uy (Uy), Hammer had an outstanding obligation of ₱25,420,177.62 to iBank. Hammer defaulted in the payment of its loans, prompting iBank to foreclose on Goldkey's third-party Real Estate Mortgage. The mortgaged properties were sold for P 12 million during the foreclosure sale, leaving an unpaid balance of P 13,420,177.62. For failure of Hammer to pay the deficiency, iBank filed a Complaint for sum of money against Hammer, Chua, Uy, and Goldkey before the Regional Trial Court, Makati City Despite service of summons, Chua and Hammer did not file their respective answers and were declared in default. In her separate answer, Uy claimed that she was not liable to iBank because she never executed a surety agreement in favor of iBank. Goldkey, on the other hand, also denies liability, averring that it acted only as a third-party mortgagor and that it was a corporation separate and distinct from Hammer.

Meanwhile, iBank applied for the issuance of a writ of preliminary attachment which was granted by the RTC. The Notice of Levy on Attachment of Real Properties covering the properties under the name of Goldkey, was sent by the sheriff to the Registry of Deeds of Quezon City. The RTC, ruled in favor of iBank. It came to the conclusion, however, that Goldkey and Hammer were one and the same entity for the following reasons: (1) both were family corporations of Chua and Uy, with Chua as the President and Chief Operating Officer; (2) both corporations shared the same office and transacted business from the same place, (3) the assets of Hammer and Goldkey were co-mingled; and (4) when Chua absconded, both Hammer and Goldkey ceased to operate. As such, the piercing of the veil of corporate fiction was warranted. Uy, as an officer and stockholder of Hammer and Goldkey, was found liable to iBank together with Chua, Hammer and Goldkey for the deficiency of ₱13,420,177.62.

Aggrieved, the heirs of Uy and Goldkey (petitioners) elevated the case to the CA. CA promulgated its decision affirming the findings of the RTC. The CA found that iBank was not negligent in evaluating the financial stability of Hammer. According to the appellate court, iBank was induced to grant the loan because petitioners, with intent to defraud the bank, submitted a falsified Financial Report for 1996 which incorrectly declared the assets and cashflow of Hammer. Because petitioners acted maliciously and in bad faith and used the corporate fiction to defraud iBank, they should be treated as one and the same as Hammer.

ISSUES

1. Whether or not Uy can be held liable to iBank for the loan obligation of Hammer as an officer and stockholder of the said corporation. (NO)
2. Whether or not Goldkey can be held liable for the obligation of Hammer for being a mere alter ego of the latter.

RULING

1. Uy is not liable; The piercing of the veil of corporate fiction is not justified. Before a director or officer of a corporation can be held personally liable for corporate obligations, however, the following requisites must concur: (1) the complainant must allege in the complaint that the director or officer assented to patently unlawful acts of the corporation, or that the officer was guilty of gross negligence or bad faith; and (2) the complainant must clearly and convincingly prove such unlawful acts, negligence or bad faith.

In this case, petitioners are correct to argue that it was not alleged, much less proven, that Uy committed an act as an officer of Hammer that would permit the piercing of the corporate veil. A reading of the complaint reveals that with regard to Uy, iBank did not demand that she be held liable for the obligations of Hammer because she was a corporate officer who committed bad faith or gross negligence in the performance of her duties such that the lifting of the corporate mask would be merited. What the complaint simply stated is that she, together with her errant husband Chua, acted as surety of Hammer, as evidenced by her signature on the Surety Agreement which was later found by the RTC to have been forged.

Considering that the only basis for holding Uy liable for the payment of the loan was proven to be a falsified document, there was no sufficient justification for the RTC to have ruled that Uy should be held jointly and severally liable to iBank for the unpaid loan of Hammer. The Court cannot give credence to the simplistic declaration of the RTC that liability would attach directly to Uy for the sole reason that she was an officer and stockholder of Hammer.

At most, Uy could have been charged with negligence in the performance of her duties as treasurer of Hammer by allowing the company to contract a loan despite its precarious financial position. Furthermore, if it was true, as petitioners claim, that she no longer performed the functions of a treasurer, then she should have formally resigned as treasurer to isolate herself from any liability that could result from her being an officer of the corporation. Nonetheless, these shortcomings of Uy are not sufficient to justify the piercing of the corporate veil which requires that the negligence of the officer must be so gross that it could amount to bad faith and must be established by clear and convincing evidence. Hence, any application of the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil should be done with caution. A court should be mindful of the milieu where it is to be applied. The wrongdoing must be clearly and convincingly established; it cannot be presumed. Otherwise, an injustice that was never unintended may result from an erroneous application.

2. Goldkey is a mere alter ego of Hammer

To the Court's mind, Goldkey's argument, that iBank is barred from pursuing Goldkey for the satisfaction of the unpaid obligation of Hammer because it had already limited its liability to the real estate mortgage, is completely absurd. Goldkey needs to be reminded that it is being sued not as a consequence of the real estate mortgage, but rather, because it acted as an alter ego of Hammer.

Accordingly, they must be treated as one and the same entity, making Goldkey accountable for the debts of Hammer.

Under a variation of the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction, when two business enterprises are owned, conducted and controlled by the same parties, both law and equity will, when necessary to protect the rights of third parties, disregard the legal fiction that two corporations are distinct entities and treat them as identical or one and the same.

These factors are unquestionably present in the case of Goldkey and Hammer:

1. Stock ownership by one or common ownership of both corporations; - Both corporations are family corporations of defendants Manuel Chua and his wife Fe Tan Uy.
2. Identity of directors and officers; - Hammer Garments and Goldkey share the same office and practically transact their business from the same place.
3. The manner of keeping corporate books and records, - Defendant Manuel Chua is the President and Chief Operating Officer of both corporations. All business transactions of Goldkey and Hammer are done at the instance of defendant Manuel Chua who is authorized to do so by the corporations.
4. Methods of conducting the business - The assets of Goldkey and Hammer are co-mingled. The real properties of Goldkey are mortgaged to secure Hammer's obligation with creditor banks.
5. When defendant Manuel Chua "disappeared", the defendant Goldkey ceased to operate despite the claim that the other "officers" and stockholders are still around and may be able to continue the business of Goldkey, if it were different or distinct from Hammer which suffered financial set back.42 Goldkey was merely an adjunct of Hammer and, as such, the legal fiction that it has a separate personality from that of Hammer should be brushed aside as they are, undeniably, one and the same.

WHEREFORE, the petition is PARTLY GRANTED. The August 16, 2004 Decision and the December 2, 2004 Resolution of the Court of Appeals in CA-G.R. CV No. 69817, are hereby MODIFIED. Fe Tan Uy is released from any liability arising from the debts incurred by Hammer from iBank. Hammer Garments Corporation, Manuel Chua Uy Po Tiong and Goldkey Development Corporation are jointly and severally liable to pay International Exchange Bank the sum of ₱13,420,177.62 representing the unpaid loan obligation of Hammer as of December 12, 1997 plus interest. No costs.

ANTONIO C. CARAG, Petitioner -versus- NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS COMMISSION, ISABEL G. PANGANIBAN-ORTIGUERRA, as Executive Labor Arbiter, NAFLU, and MARIVELES APPAREL CORPORATION LABOR UNION, Respondents

G.R. No. 147590, EN BANC, April 2, 2007, CARPIO, J.

Section 31 of the Corporation Code lays down the exceptions to the rule, as follows: Liability of directors, trustees or officers. - Directors or trustees who wilfully and knowingly vote for or assent to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or who are guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation or acquire any personal or pecuniary interest in conflict with their duty as such directors or trustees shall be liable jointly and severally for all damages resulting therefrom suffered by the corporation, its stockholders or members and other persons. Section 31 makes a director personally liable for corporate debts if he wilfully and knowingly votes for or assents to patently unlawful acts of the corporation.

FACTS

National Federation of Labor Unions (NAFLU) and Mariveles Apparel Corporation Labor Union (MACLU) (collectively, complainants), on behalf of all of MAC's rank and file employees, filed a complaint against MAC for illegal dismissal brought about by its illegal closure of business. Upon receipt of the records of the case, Arbiter Ortiguerra summoned the parties to explore options for possible settlement. The non-appearance of respondents prompted Arbiter Ortiguerra to declare the case submitted for resolution "based on the extant pleadings." United Coconut Planters Bank vs. Planters Products, Inc., Janet Layson and Gregory Grey, G.R. No. 179015, June 13, 2012

In their position paper dated 3 January 1994, complainants moved to implead Carag and David, as follows:

In the present case, it is unfortunate for respondents that the records and evidence clearly demonstrate that the individual complainants are entitled to the reliefs prayed for in their complaint. However, any favorable judgment the Honorable Labor Arbiter may render in favor of herein complainants will go to naught should the Office fails to appreciate the glaring fact that the respondents corporation is no longer existing as it suddenly stopped business operation since 8 July 1993. Under this given circumstance, the complainants have no option left but to implead Atty. ANTONIO CARAG, in his official capacity as Chairman of the Board along with MR. ARMANDO DAVID as President. Both are also owners of the respondent corporation .This inclusion of individual respondents as party respondents in the present case is to guarantee the satisfaction of any judgment award on the basis of Article 212(c) of the Philippine Labor Code. Where the employer-corporation, AS IN THE PRESENT CASE, is no longer existing and unable to satisfy the judgment in favor of the employee, the officer should be held liable for acting on behalf of the corporation.

If no definite proof exists as to who is the responsible officer, the president of the corporation who can be deemed to be its chief operation officer shall be presumed to be the responsible officer. In Republic Act 602, for example, criminal responsibility is with the "manager" or in his default, the person acting as such.

Without any further proceedings, Arbiter Ortiguerra rendered her Decision dated 17 June 1994 granting the motion to implead Carag and David. In the same Decision, Arbiter Ortiguerra declared Carag and David solidarily liable with MAC to complainants.

LA: respondents jointly and severally guilty of illegal closure. MAC, Carag, and David, through Atty. Pastores, filed their Memorandum before the NLRC on 26 August 1994. Carag, through a separate counsel, filed an appeal dated 30 August 1994 before the NLRC. Carag reiterated the arguments in respondents' position paper filed before Arbiter Ortiguerra, stating that:

2.1 While Atty. Antonio C. Carag is the Chairman of the Board of MAC and Mr. Armando David is the President, they are not the owners of MAC; 2.2 MAC is owned by a consortium of banks, as stockholders, and Atty. Antonio C. Carag and Mr. Armando David are only minority stockholders of the corporation, owning only qualifying shares; 2.3 MAC is not a family -owned corporation, that in case of a close [sic] corporation, piercing the corporate veil its possible to hold the stockholders liable for the corporation's liabilities; 2.4 MAC is a corporation with a distinct and separate personality from that of the stockholders; piercing the corporate veil to hold the stockholders liable for corporate liabilities is only true for close corporations (family corporations); this is not the prevailing situation in MAC; 2.5 Atty. Antonio Carag and Mr. Armando David are professional managers and the extension of shares to them is just qualifying shares to enable them to occupy subject position.

Respondents filed separate petitions for certiorari before this Court under Rule 65 of the 1964 Rules of Court. Carag filed his petition, docketed as G.R. No. 118820, on 13 February 1995. In the meantime, we granted MAC's prayer for the issuance of a temporary restraining order to enjoin the NLRC from enforcing Arbiter Ortiguerra's Decision. On 31 May 1995, we granted complainants' motion for consolidation of G.R. No. 118820 with G.R. No. 118839 (MAC v. NLRC, et al.) and G.R. No. 118880 (David v. Arbiter Ortiguerra, et al.). On 12 July 1999, after all the parties had filed their memoranda, we referred the consolidated cases to the appellate court in accordance with our decision in St. Martin Funeral Home v. NLRC.

Respondents filed separate petitions before the appellate court. CA: appellate court held that the absence of a formal hearing before the Labor Arbiter is not a cause for Carag and David to impute grave abuse of discretion. The appellate court found that Carag and David, as the most ranking officers of MAC, had a direct hand at the time in the illegal dismissal of MAC's employees. The failure of Carag and David to observe the notice requirement in closing the company shows malice and bad faith, which justifies their solidary liability with MAC. The appellate court also found that the circumstances of the present case do not warrant a reduction of the appeal bond.

ISSUE

Whether or not Carag and David are personally liable for over ₱50 million of the corporation's liability, merely as board chairman and President? (NO)

RULING

Carag cannot be held personally liable for the separation pay owed by MAC to complainants based alone on Article 212(e) of the Labor Code. Article 212(e) does not state that corporate officers are personally liable for the unpaid salaries or separation pay of employees of the corporation. The liability of corporate officers for corporate debts remains governed by Section 31 of the Corporation Code.

Section 31 of the Corporation Code lays down the exceptions to the rule, as follows: Liability of directors, trustees or officers. Directors or trustees who wilfully and knowingly vote for or assent to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or who are guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation or acquire any personal or pecuniary interest in conflict with their duty as such directors or trustees shall be liable jointly and severally for all damages resulting therefrom suffered by the corporation, its stockholders or members and other persons. Section 31 makes a director personally liable for corporate debts if he wilfully and knowingly votes for or assents to patently unlawful acts of the corporation.

Section 31 also makes a director personally liable if he is guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation. Complainants did not allege in their complaint that Carag wilfully and knowingly voted for or assented to any patently unlawful act of MAC. Complainants did not present any evidence showing that Carag wilfully and knowingly voted for or assented to any patently unlawful act of MAC. Neither did Arbiter Ortiguerra make any finding to this effect in her Decision.

Complainants did not also allege that Carag is guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of MAC. Complainants did not present any evidence showing that Carag is guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of MAC. Neither did Arbiter Ortiguerra make any finding to this effect in her Decision. Arbiter Ortiguerra stated in her Decision that: In instances where corporate officers dismissed employees in bad faith or wantonly violate labor standard laws or when the company had already ceased operations and there is no way by which a judgment in favor of employees could be satisfied, corporate officers can be held jointly and severally liable with the company.

After stating what she believed is the law on the matter, Arbiter Ortiguerra stopped there and did not make any finding that Carag is guilty of bad faith or of wanton violation of labor standard laws. Arbiter Ortiguerra did not specify what act of bad faith Carag committed, or what particular labor standard laws he violated.

To hold a director personally liable for debts of the corporation, and thus pierce the veil of corporate fiction, the bad faith or wrongdoing of the director must be established clearly and convincingly. Bad faith is never presumed. Bad faith does not connote bad judgment or negligence. Bad faith imports a dishonest purpose. Bad faith means breach of a known duty through some ill motive or interest. Bad faith partakes of the nature of fraud.

In Businessday Information Systems and Services, Inc. v. NLRC, we held: A corporate officer is not personally liable for the money claims of discharged corporate employees unless he acted with evident malice and bad faith in terminating their employment. Neither does bad faith arise automatically just because a corporation fails to comply with the notice requirement of labor laws on company closure or dismissal of employees. The failure to give notice is not an unlawful act because the law does not define such failure as unlawful. Such failure to give notice is a violation of procedural due process but does not amount to an unlawful or criminal act. Such procedural defect is called illegal dismissal because it fails to comply with mandatory procedural requirements, but it is not illegal in the sense that it constitutes an unlawful or criminal act.

For a wrongdoing to make a director personally liable for debts of the corporation, the wrongdoing approved or assented to by the director must be a patently unlawful act. Mere failure to comply with the notice requirement of labor laws on company closure or dismissal of employees does not amount to a patently unlawful act. Patently unlawful acts are those declared unlawful by law which imposes penalties for commission of such unlawful acts. There must be a law declaring the act unlawful and penalizing the act.

In this case, Article 283 of the Labor Code, requiring a one-month prior notice to employees and the Department of Labor and Employment before any permanent closure of a company, does not state that non-compliance with the notice is an unlawful act punishable under the Code. There is no provision in any other Article of the Labor Code declaring failure to give such notice an unlawful act and providing for its penalty.

Complainants did not allege or prove, and Arbiter Ortiguerra did not make any finding, that Carag approved or assented to any patently unlawful act to which the law attaches a penalty for its commission. On this score alone, Carag cannot be held personally liable for the separation pay of complainants.

This leaves us with Arbiter Ortiguerra's assertion that "when the company had already ceased operations and there is no way by which a judgment in favor of employees could be satisfied, corporate officers can be held jointly and severally liable with the company." This assertion echoes the complainants' claim that Carag is personally liable for MAC's debts to complainants "on the basis of Article 212(e) of the Labor Code, as amended," which says: 'Employer' includes any person acting in the interest of an employer, directly or indirectly. The term shall not include any labor organization or any of its officers or agents except when acting as employer.

Indeed, complainants seek to hold Carag personally liable for the debts of MAC based solely on Article 212(e) of the Labor Code. This is the specific legal ground cited by complainants, and used by Arbiter Ortiguerra, in holding Carag personally liable for the debts of MAC. We have already ruled in McLeod v. NLRC and Spouses Santos v. NLRC that Article 212(e) of the Labor Code, by itself, does not make a corporate officer personally liable for the debts of the corporation. The governing law on personal liability of directors for debts of the corporation is still Section 31 of the Corporation Code. Thus, we explained in McLeod:

Personal liability of corporate directors, trustees or officers attaches only when (1) they assent to a patently unlawful act of the corporation, or when they are guilty of bad faith or gross negligence in directing its affairs, or when there is a conflict of interest resulting in damages to the corporation, its stockholders or other persons; (2) they consent to the issuance of watered down stocks or when, having knowledge of such issuance, do not forthwith file with the corporate secretary their written objection; (3) they agree to hold themselves personally and solidarily liable with the corporation; or (4) they are made by specific provision of law personally answerable for their corporate action. A review of the above exceptional cases would readily disclose the attendance of facts and circumstances that could rightly sanction personal liability on the part of the company officer. In A.C. Ransom, the corporate entity was a family corporation and execution against it could not be implemented because of the disposition posthaste of its leviable assets evidently in order to evade its just and due obligations. The doctrine of "piercing the veil of corporate fiction" was thus clearly appropriate. Chua likewise involved another family corporation, and this time the conflict was between two brothers occupying the highest ranking positions in the company. There were incontrovertible facts which pointed to extreme personal animosity that resulted, evidently in bad faith, in the easing out from the company of one of the brothers by the other.

Thus, the rule is still that the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil applies only when the corporate fiction is used to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, protect fraud, or defend crime. In the absence of malice, bad faith, or a specific provision of law making a corporate officer liable, such corporate officer cannot be made personally liable for corporate liabilities. Neither Article 212[e] nor Article 273 (now 272) of the Labor Code expressly makes any corporate officer personally liable for the debts of the corporation.

Thus, it was error for Arbiter Ortiguerra, the NLRC, and the Court of Appeals to hold Carag personally liable for the separation pay owed by MAC to complainants based alone on Article 212(e) of the Labor Code. Article 212(e) does not state that corporate officers are personally liable for the unpaid salaries or separation pay of employees of the corporation. The liability of corporate officers for corporate debts remains governed by Section 31 of the Corporation Code.

MERCY VDA. DE ROXAS, represented by ARLENE C. ROXAS-CRUZ, in her capacity as substitute appellant-petitioner, Petitioner -versus- OUR LADY'S FOUNDATION, INC., Respondent
G.R. No. 182378, FIRST DIVION, March 6, 2013, SERENO, CJ.

A corporation is a juridical entity with a legal personality separate and distinct from those acting for and on its behalf and, in general, of the people comprising it. The obligations incurred by the corporation, acting through its officers, are its sole liabilities.

To hold corporate officers personally liable alone for the debts of the corporation and thus pierce the veil of corporate fiction, it is required that the bad faith of the officer be established clearly and convincingly. A court should be mindful of the milieu where piercing of the veil should be applied. It must be certain that the corporate fiction was misused to such an extent that injustice, fraud, or crime was committed against another, in disregard of rights.

FACTS

Salve Dealca Latosa filed before the RTC a Complaint for the recovery of ownership of a portion of her residential land located at Our Lady's Village, Bibincahan, Sorsogon, Sorsogon. According to her, Atty. Henry Amado Roxas (Roxas), represented by petitioner herein, encroached on a quarter of her property by arbitrarily extending his concrete fence beyond the correct limits. In his Answer, Roxas imputed the blame to respondent Our Lady's Village Foundation, Inc., now Our Lady's Foundation, Inc. (OLFI). He then filed a Third-Party Complaint against respondent which was admitted by the trial court.

The trial court ruled in favor of Latosa. It found that Roxas occupied a total of 112 square meters of Latosa's lots, and that, in turn, OLFI trimmed his property by 92 square meters. Subsequently, Roxas appealed to the CA, which later denied the appeal. Since the Decision had become final, the RTC issued a Writ of Execution to implement the ruling ordering OLFI to reimburse Roxas for the value of the 92-square-meter property plus legal interest at a rate of P1800 per square meter to be reckoned from the time the amount was paid to the third-party defendant.

To collect the aforementioned amount, Notices of Garnishment were then issued by the sheriff to the managers of the Development Bank of the Philippines and the United Coconut Planters Bank for them to garnish the account of Bishop Robert Arcilla-Maullon (Arcilla-Maullon), OLFI's general manager. Refusing to pay Roxas, OLFI filed a Rule 65 Petition before the CA. The CA nullified the Notices of Garnishment. It noted that since the general manager of OLFI was not impleaded in the proceedings, he could not be held personally liable for the obligation of the corporation. Hence this petition.

ISSUE

Whether or not the issuance of Notices of Garnishment against the bank accounts of Arcilla-Maullon as OLFI's general manager justifiable.

RULING

The Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the Court of Appeals. The appellate court appreciated that in the main case for the recovery of ownership before the court of origin, only OLFI was named as respondent corporation, and that its general manager was never impleaded in the proceedings a quo.

Given this finding, the Court held that since OLFI's general manager was not a party to the case, the CA correctly ruled that Arcilla-Maullon cannot be held personally liable for the obligation of the corporation. The Court relied in the case of Santos vs. NLRC where the doctrine of separate personality was discussed.

To hold the general manager of OLFI liable, petitioner claims that it is a mere business conduit of Arcilla-Maullon, hence, the corporation does not maintain a bank account separate and distinct from the bank accounts of its members. In support of this claim, petitioner submits that because OLFI did not rebut the attack on its legal personality, as alleged in petitioner's Opposition and Comments on the Motion to Quash Notice/Writ of Garnishment respondent effectively admitted by its silence that it was a mere dummy corporation.

The argument did not persuade the Court, for any piercing of the corporate veil has to be done with caution. Save for its rhetoric, petitioner failed to adduce any evidence that would prove OLFI's status as a dummy corporation.

A court should be mindful of the milieu where piercing of the veil should be applied. It must be certain that the corporate fiction was misused to such an extent that injustice, fraud, or crime was committed against another, in disregard of rights. The wrongdoing must be clearly and convincingly established; it cannot be presumed. Otherwise, an injustice that was never unintended may result from an erroneous application.

To hold Arcilla-Maullon personally liable alone for the debts of the corporation and thus pierce the veil of corporate fiction, it is required that the bad faith of the officer be established clearly and convincingly. Petitioner, however, has failed to include any submission pertaining to any wrongdoing of the general manager. Necessarily, it would be unjust to hold the latter personally liable.
Therefore, the execution of a corporate judgment debt against the general manager of the corporation has no basis.

ROLANDO DS.TORRES, Petitioner -versus-RURAL BANK OF SAN JUAN, INC., ANDRES CANO CHUA, JOBEL GO CHUA, JESUS CANO CHUA, MEINRADO DALISAY, JOSE MANALANSAN III, OFELIA GINA BE and NATY ASTRERO, Respondents

G.R. No. 184520, FIRST DIVISION, March 13, 2013, REYES, J.

A corporation has its own legal personality separate and distinct from those of its stockholders, directors or officers. Hence, absent any evidence that they have exceeded their authority, corporate officers are not personally liable for their official acts. Corporate directors and officers may be held solidarily liable with the corporation for the termination of employment only if done with malice or in bad faith.
Further, the law mandates that before validity can be accorded to a dismissal premised on loss of trust and confidence, two requisites must concur, viz: (1) the employee concerned must be holding a position of trust; and (2) the loss of trust must be based on willful breach of trust founded on clearly established facts.

FACTS

The petitioner was initially hired by RBSJI as Personnel and Marketing Manager in 1991 wherein after a six month probationary period, he was given a permanent status. In June 1996, the petitioner was offered the position of Vice-President for RBSJI's newly created department to which he accepted. The petitioner was temporarily assigned as the manager of RBSJI's N. Domingo branch in view of the resignation of Jacinto Figueroa (Jacinto). On September 27, 1996, Jacinto requested the petitioner to sign a standard employment clearance pertaining to his accountabilities with RBSJI. At first he declined but to pacify Jacinto, the petitioner bargained to issue a clearance but only for Jacinto's paid cash advances and salary loan.

About seven months later, respondent Jesus issued a memorandum to the petitioner requiring him to explain why no administrative action should be imposed on him for his unauthorized issuance of a clearance to Jacinto whose accountabilities were yet to be audited. Jacinto was later found to have unliquidated cash advances and was responsible for a questionable transaction involving P11 million for which RBSJI is being sued. The memorandum stressed that the clearance petitioner issued effectively barred RBSJI from running after Jacinto.

The petitioner submitted his explanation clarifying that the clearance was limited only to Jacinto's paid cash advances and salary loan based on the receipts presented by Lily Aguilar (Lily), the cashier of N. Domingo branch. He emphasized that he had no foreknowledge nor was he forewarned of Jacinto's unliquidated cash advances and questionable transactions and that the clearance did not extend to those matters.

RBSJI's Board of Directors adopted a Resolution terminating the petitioner from. Feeling aggrieved, the petitioner filed the herein complaint for illegal dismissal. The petitioner averred that the supposed loss of trust and confidence on him was a sham as it is in fact the calculated result of the respondents' dubious plot to conveniently oust him from RBSJI. The LA and the NLRC ruled in favor of petitioner. However the CA reversed it. Hence, this petition.

ISSUES

(1) Whether or not the petitioner was dismissed for just cause
(2) Whether or not the individual respondents as corporate officers should be held solidarily liable

RULING

The petition is granted.

The respondents failed to prove that the petitioner was dismissed for a just cause. The law mandates that before validity can be accorded to a dismissal premised on loss of trust and confidence, two requisites must concur, viz: (1) the employee concerned must be holding a position of trust; and (2) the loss of trust must be based on willful breach of trust founded on clearly established facts. The presence of the first requisite is certain since the petitioner was part of the upper echelons of RBSJI's management from whom greater fidelity to trust is expected. At the time when he committed the act which allegedly led to the loss of RBSJI's trust and confidence in him, he was the Acting Manager of N. Domingo branch. Anent the second requisite, the Court finds that the respondents failed to meet their burden of proving that the petitioner's dismissal was for a just cause. As correctly argued by the petitioner, the onus of submitting a copy of the clearance allegedly exonerating Jacinto from all his accountabilities fell on the respondents. It was the single and absolute evidence of the petitioner's act that purportedly kindled the respondents' loss of trust. Without it, the respondents' allegation of loss of trust and confidence has no leg to stand on and must thus be rejected. Moreover, one can reasonably expect that a copy of the clearance, an essential personnel document, is with the respondents. Their failure to present it and the lack of explanation for such failure or the document's unavailability props up the presumption that its contents are unfavorable to the respondents' assertions. Further, RBSJI also failed to substantiate its claim that the petitioner's act estopped them from pursuing Jacinto for his standing obligations. There is no proof that RBSJI attempted or at least considered to demand from Jacinto the payment of his unpaid cash advances. Neither was RBSJI able to show that it filed a civil or criminal suit against Jacinto to make him responsible for the alleged fraud. There is thus no factual basis for RBSJI's allegation that it incurred damages or was financially prejudiced by the clearance issued by the petitioner. More importantly, the complained act of the petitioner did not evince intentional breach of the respondents' trust and confidence. Neither was the petitioner grossly negligent or unjustified in pursuing the course of action he took.

However as to the solidary liability of individual respondents as corporate officers, it must be recalled. Corporate directors and officers may be held solidarily liable with the corporation for the termination of employment only if done with malice or in bad faith. As discussed above, the acts imputed to the respondents do not support a finding of bad faith. In addition, the lack of a valid cause for the dismissal of an employee does not ipso facto mean that the corporate officers acted with malice or bad faith. There must be an independent proof of malice or bad faith, which is absent in the case at bar

POLYMER RUBBER CORPORATION and JOSEPH ANG, Petitioners
-versus- BAYOLO SALAMUDING, Respondent
G.R. No. 185160, FIRST DIVISION, July 24, 2013, REYES, J.

To hold a director or officer personally liable for corporate obligations, two requisites must concur: (1) it must be alleged in the complaint that the director or officer assented to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or that the officer was guilty of gross negligence or bad faith; and (2) there must be proof that the officer acted in bad faith.

FACTS

Bayolo Salamuding (Salamuding), Mariano Gulanan and Rodolfo Raif (referred to as the complainants) were employees of petitioner Polymer Rubber Corporation (Polymer), who were dismissed after allegedly committing certain irregularities against Polymer. The three employees filed a complaint against Polymer and Ang (petitioners) for unfair labor practice and illegal dismissal with prayer for reinstatement and payment of back wages, attorney's fees, moral and exemplary damages.

The Labor Arbiter (LA) rendered a decision, dismissing the complaint for unfair labor practice but directing the respondent to reinstate complainants and pay them labor standard benefits. As a consequence of such decision, a writ of execution was issued. The petitioners appealed to the NLRC but the latter affirmed the LA's decision with modification. The case was subsequently elevated to the Supreme Court (SC) on a petition for certiorari which affirmed the NLRC.

On September 30, 1993, Polymer ceased its operations. However, upon a motion the LA issued a writ of execution based on the SC resolution. Since the writ of execution was returned unsatisfied, another alias writ of execution was issued. Since the alias writ was also not implemented, the LA issued a 5th Alias Writ of Execution and in the implementation of this alias writ of execution the shares of stocks of Ang at USA Resources Corporation were levied.

The petitioners moved to quash the 5th alias writ of execution, and to lift the notice of garnishment alleging that Ang should not be held jointly and severally liable with Polymer since it was only the latter which was held liable in the decision of the LA, NLRC and the Supreme Court. The LA granted the motion but the NLRC and CA reversed.

ISSUE

Whether or not Ang as an officer of the corporation (Polymers) can be held personally liable to pay the liability of the corporation

RULING

The petition is meritorious.

A corporation, as a juridical entity, may act only through its directors, officers and employees. Obligations incurred as a result of the directors' and officers' acts as corporate agents, are not their personal liability but the direct responsibility of the corporation they represent. As a rule, they are only solidarily liable with the corporation for the illegal termination of services of employees if they acted with malice or bad faith.

To hold a director or officer personally liable for corporate obligations, two requisites must concur: (1) it must be alleged in the complaint that the director or officer assented to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or that the officer was guilty of gross negligence or bad faith; and (2) there must be proof that the officer acted in bad faith.

In the instant case, the CA imputed bad faith on the part of the petitioners when Polymer ceased its operations the day after the promulgation of the SC resolution in 1993 which was allegedly meant to evade liability. The CA found it necessary to pierce the corporate fiction and pointed at Ang as the responsible person to pay for Salamuding's money claims. Except for this assertion, there is nothing in the records that show that Ang was responsible for the acts complained of. At any rate, the Court finds that it will require a great stretch of imagination to conclude that a corporation would cease its operations if only to evade the payment of the adjudged monetary awards in favor of three (3) of its employees.

Further, the dispositive portion of the LA Decision dated November 21, 1990 which Salamuding attempts to enforce does not mention that Ang is jointly and severally liable with Polymer. Ang is merely one of the incorporators of Polymer and to single him out and require him to personally answer for the liabilities of Polymer is without basis. In the absence of a finding that he acted with malice or bad faith, it was error for the CA to hold him responsible.

To hold Ang personally liable at this stage is quite unfair. The judgment of the LA, as affirmed by the NLRC and later by the SC had already long become final and executory. It has been held that a final and executory judgment can no longer be altered. The judgment may no longer be modified in any respect, even if the modification is meant to correct what is perceived to be an erroneous conclusion of fact or law, and regardless of whether the modification is attempted to be made by the court rendering it or by the highest Court of the land. Since the alias writ of execution did not conform, is different from and thus went beyond or varied the tenor of the judgment which gave it life, it is a nullity. To maintain otherwise would be to ignore the constitutional provision against depriving a person of his property without due process of law.

ELIZABETH M. GAGUI, Petitioner –versus- SIMEON DEJEROAND TEODORO PERMEJO, Respondents

G.R. No. 196036, FIRST DIVISION, October 23, 2013, SERENO, CJ.

Although joint and solidary liability for money claims and damages against a corporation attaches to its corporate directors and officers under R.A. 8042, it is not automatic. To make them jointly and solidarily liable, there must be a finding that they were remiss in directing the affairs of the corporation, resulting in the conduct of illegal activities. Absent any findings regarding the same, the corporate directors and officers cannot be held liable for the obligation of the corporation against the judgment debtor.

Furthermore, an order impleading a corporate officer for the purpose of execution is tantamount to modifying a decision that had long become final and executory. Holding a corporate officer liable despite not being ordained as such by the decision contravenes with the doctrine on immutability of judgments and is, therefore, null and void for lack of jurisdiction, including the entire proceedings held for that purpose.

FACTS

Respondents Dejero and Permejo filed separate Complaints for illegal dismissal, non-payment of salaries and overtime pay, refund of transportation expenses, damages and attorney's fees against PRO Agency Manila, Inc. and Abdul Rahman Al Mahwes.

After due proceedings, on 7 May 1997, the Labor Arbiter rendered decision orderingPRO Agency Manila, Inc. and Abdul Rahman Al Mahwes to jointly and severally pay complainants. Pursuant to this Decision, a Writ of Execution was issued. When the writ was returned unsatisfied, an Alias Writ of Execution was issued, but was also returned unsatisfied. Subsequently, respondents filed a Motion to Implead Pro Agency Manila's Corporate Officers and Directors as Judgment Debtors.

Later on, the Labor Arbiter issued an Order granting the motion to implead. As a result, Merlita Lapuz and Elizabeth Gagui were held liable to pay the complainants jointly and solidarily. A 2nd Alias Writ of Execution was issued, which resulted in the garnishment of petitioner's bank deposit. However, since the judgment remained unsatisfied, respondents sought the issuance of a 3rd alias writ of execution, which was granted by the Labor Arbiter. This resulted in the levying of two parcels of lot owned by the petitioner.

Subsequently, the petitioner filed a Motion to Quash 3rd Alias Writ of Execution and a Supplemental Motion to Quash Alias Writ of Execution. In these motions, petitioner alleged that apart from not being made aware that she was impleaded as one of the parties to the case, the dispositive portion of the 1997 Decision did not hold her liable in any form whatsoever. More importantly, impleading her for the purpose of execution was tantamount to modifying a decision that had long become final and executory.

On June 26, 2006, the Executive Labor Arbiter denied the petitioner's motions. Aggrieved, petitioner appealed to the NLRC, which later on rendered a decision denying the appeal for lack of merit. Upon appellate review, the CA affirmed the NLRC Decision and stated that there was "no need for the petitioner to be impleaded because by express provision of the law, she is made solidarily liable with Pro Agency Manila, Inc., for any and all money claims filed by private respondents. The CA further said that the same is not a case in which the liability of the corporate officer must be established because an allegation of malice must be proven. The general rule is that corporate officers, directors and stockholders are not liable, except when they are made liable for their corporate act by a specific provision of law, such as R.A. 8042.

The petitioner filed two Motions for Reconsideration, but both were denied. Hence, the petition for review.

ISSUES

1) Whether or not the corporate officers and directors may be held liable jointly and severally liable with the corporation in accordance with Section 10 of R.A. 8042, despite not having been impleaded in the Complaint and named in the Decision.
2) Whether or not impleading and holding a corporate officer or director for the purpose of execution, despite not being ordained as such by the decision, is proper.

RULING

Petition Granted.

1) In Sto. Tomas v. Salac, the Court had the opportunity to pass upon the constitutionality of this provision. The Court have thus maintained:

The key issue that Gumabay, et al. present is whether or not the 2nd paragraph of Section 10, R.A. 8042, which holds the corporate directors, officers, and partners of recruitment and placement agencies jointly and solidarily liable for money claims and damages that may be adjudged against the latter agencies, is unconstitutional.

x x x x

But the Court has already held, pending adjudication of this case, that the liability of corporate directors and officers is not automatic. To make them jointly and solidarily liable with their company, there must be a finding that they were remiss in directing the affairs of that company, such as sponsoring or tolerating the conduct of illegal activities. In the case of Becmen and White Falcon, while there is evidence that these companies were at fault in not investigating the cause of Jasmin's death, there is no mention of any evidence in the case against them that intervenors Gumabay, et al., Becmen's corporate officers and directors, were personally involved in their company's particular actions or omissions in Jasmin's case.

Hence, for petitioner to be found jointly and solidarily liable, there must be a separate finding that she was remiss in directing the affairs of the agency, resulting in the illegal dismissal of respondents. Examination of the records would reveal that there was no finding of neglect on the part of the petitioner in directing the affairs of the agency. In fact, respondents made no mention of any instance when petitioner allegedly failed to manage the agency in accordance with law, thereby contributing to their illegal dismissal.

2) The petitioner is correct in saying that impleading her for the purpose of execution is tantamount to modifying a decision that had long become final and executory. The fallo of the 1997 Decision by the NLRC only held "respondents Pro Agency Manila Inc., and Abdul Rahman Al Mahwes to jointly and severally pay complainants x x x." By holding her liable despite not being ordained as such by the decision, both the CA and NLRC violated the doctrine on immutability of judgments.

Once a decision or order becomes final and executory, it is removed from the power or jurisdiction of the court which rendered it to further alter or amend it. It thereby becomes immutable and unalterable and any amendment or alteration which substantially affects a final and executory judgment is null and void for lack of jurisdiction, including the entire proceedings held for that purpose.

While labor laws should be construed liberally in favor of labor, we must be able to balance this with the equally important right of petitioner to due process. Because the 1997 Decision of Labor Arbiter was not appealed, it became final and executory and was therefore removed from his jurisdiction. Modifying the tenor of the judgment via a motion impleading petitioner and filed only in 2002 runs contrary to settled jurisprudence, rendering such action a nullity.

PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION ON GOOD GOVERNMENT, Petitioner –versus- HON. MA. MERCEDITAS GUTIERREZ, IN HER CAPACITY AS OMBUDSMAN, RENATO D. TAYAG, ISMAEL REINOSO, JUAN TRIVINO, JUAN PONCE ENRILE, MARIO ORTIZ, GENEROSO TANSECO, FAUSTINO SY CHANGCO, VICENTE ABAD SANTOS, EUSEBIO VILLATUYA, MANUEL MORALES, JOSE ROÑO, TROADIO T. QUIAZON, RUBEN ANCHETA, FERNANDO MARAMAG, JR., GERONIMO VELASCO, EDGARDO L. TORDESILLAS, JAIME C. LAYA, GERARDO P. SICAT, ARTURO R. TANCO, JR., PLACIDO L. MAPA, JR., PANFILO DOMINGO, VICTORINO L. OJEDA, TEODORO DE VERA, ALEJANDRO LUKBAN, JR., ROMEO TAN, LUIS RECATO, BENITO S. DYCHIAO, ELPIDIO M. BORJA, Respondents

G.R. No. 189800, SECOND DIVISION, July 9, 2018, REYES, Jr., J.

As a general rule, a corporation has a separate and distinct personality from those who represent it. Its officers are solidarily liable only when exceptional circumstances exist, such as cases enumerated in Section 31 of the Corporation Code.

FACTS

Bicolandia Sugar Development Corporation (BISUDECO) is a domestic corporation engaged in the business of sugarcane milling. Its incorporators were the private respondents. In 1971, BISUDECO filed a loan request with Philippine National Bank (PNB) for the issuance of a stand-by letter of credit.

In 1987, PNB's rights, titles and interests were transferred to the Philippine Government through a Deed of Transfer, including the account of BISUDECO. In 1994, after study and investigation, the Presidential Ad Hoc Fact Finding Committee (Committee), in reference to Memorandum No. 61, found that the loan accounts of BISUDECO were behest loans due to the following characteristics: a) the accounts were under collateralized; and b) the borrower corporation was undercapitalized. It was discovered that BISUDECO was extended by PNB undue and unwarranted accommodations from 1977 to 1985 thus PCGG filed a complaint with the Ombudsman against private respondents in their capacities as members of PNB's Board) for violation of Anti-Graft and Corrupt Practices Act (R.A. No. 3019).

ISSUE

Whether or not private respondents are personally liable for the grant of the subject loans.

RULING

No. A careful perusal of the records reveals that the only basis of PCGG for imputing liability on private respondents is the fact that the latter were members of PNB's Board of Directors at the time the loan transactions were entered into. While it is true that a finding of probable cause does not require a finding of guilt nor absolute certainty, PCGG cannot merely rely on the private respondents' membership in the Board to hold the latter liable for the acts complained of. In the case of Kara-an v. Office of the Ombudsman, the Court ruled that approval of a loan during incumbency as director does not automatically establish probable cause absent a showing of personal participation in any irregularity as regards approval of the loan.

As a general rule, a corporation has a separate and distinct personality from those who represent it. Its officers are solidarily liable only when exceptional circumstances exist, such as cases enumerated in Section 31 of the Corporation Code which states:

Sec. 31. Liability of Directors, Trustees or Officers. — Directors or trustees who willfully and knowingly vote for or assent to patently unlawful acts of the corporation or who are guilty of gross negligence or bad faith in directing the affairs of the corporation or acquire any personal or pecuniary interest in conflict with their duty as such directors or trustees shall be liable jointly and severally for all damages resulting therefrom suffered by the corporation, its stockholders or members and other persons.

From the foregoing it can be deduced that personal liability will only attach to a director or officer if they are guilty of any of the following: (1) willfully or knowingly vote or assent to patently unlawful acts of the corporation; (2) gross negligence; or (3) bad faith. PCGG failed to allege in the complaint and in the present petition the particular acts of private respondents which constitutes a violation of Sections 3(e) and (g) of R.A. No. 3019. It is not sufficient for PCGG to merely provide a list of names of the PNB Board members for the years covering the subject loans absent proof of the latter's individual participation in the approval thereof. Even in its Resolution, dated June 23, 2006, the Ombudsman likewise observed that the affiant seemed to have no personal knowledge of the allegations in the complaint.

---

9. Responsibility for Crimes and Damages

EDWARD C. ONG, Petitioner –versus- THE COURT OF APPEALS AND THE PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINES, Respondents

G.R. No. 119858, FIRST DIVISION, April 29, 2003, CARPIO, J.

When petitioner signed the trust receipts, he claimed he was representing ARMAGRI. The corporation obviously acts only through its human agents and it is the conduct of such agents which the law must deter. The existence of the corporate entity does not shield from prosecution the agent who knowingly and intentionally commits a crime at the instance of a corporation. 2) As for the civil liability arising from the criminal offense, the question is whether as the signatory for ARMAGRI, petitioner is personally liable pursuant to the provision of Section 13 of the Trust Receipts Law.

It is clear that if the violation or offense is committed by a corporation, partnership, association or other juridical entities, the penalty shall be imposed upon the directors, officers, employees or other officials or persons responsible for the offense.

FACTS

Petitioner, representing ARMAGRI International Corporation ("ARMAGRI"), applied for a letter of credit for P2,532,500.00 with SOLIDBANK Corporation ("Bank") to finance the purchase of differential assemblies from Metropole Industrial Sales.

Petitioner, representing ARMAGRI, executed a trust receipt acknowledging receipt from the Bank of the goods valued at P2,532,500.00. Petitioner and Benito Ong, representing ARMAGRI, applied for another letter of credit for P2,050,000.00 to finance the purchase of merchandise from Fertiphil Corporation. The Bank approved the application and paid to Fertiphil Corporation the amount of P2,050,000.00. Petitioner, signing for ARMAGRI, executed another trust receipt in favor of the Bank acknowledging receipt of the merchandise.

Both trust receipts contained the same stipulations. Under the trust receipts, ARMAGRI undertook to account for the goods held in trust for the Bank, or if the goods are sold, to turn over the proceeds to the Bank. ARMAGRI also undertook the obligation to keep the proceeds in the form of money, bills or receivables as the separate property of the Bank or to return the goods upon demand by the Bank, if not sold. In addition, petitioner executed the following additional undertaking stamped on the dorsal portion of both trust receipts:

I/We jointly and severally agreed to any increase or decrease in the interest rate which may occur after July 1, 1981, when the Central Bank floated the interest rates, and to pay additionally the penalty of 1% per month until the amount/s or installment/s due and unpaid under the trust receipt on the reverse side hereof is/are fully paid. Petitioner signed alone the foregoing additional undertaking in the Trust Receipt for P2,253,500.00, while both petitioner and Benito Ong signed the additional undertaking in the Trust Receipt for P2,050,000.00. When the trust receipts became due and demandable, ARMAGRI failed to pay or deliver the goods to the Bank despite several demand letters. Consequently, the unpaid account under the first trust receipt amounted to P1,527,180.66, while the unpaid account under the second trust receipt amounted to P1,449,395.71.

Petitioner and Benito Ong were charged with two counts of estafa under separate Informations. Petitioner and Benito Ong, through counsel, manifested in open court that they were waiving their right to present evidence. The trial court then considered the case submitted for decision.

RTC held Edward Ong guilty of Estafa while Benito was acquitted and ordered Benito Ong to pay, jointly and severally with Edward C. Ong, the private complainant the legal interest and the penalty of 1% per month due and accruing on the unpaid amount of P1,449,395.71, still owing to the private offended under the trust receipt, computed from July 15, 1991, until the said unpaid obligation is fully paid. Petitioner appealed his conviction to the Court of Appeals. CA affirmed the trial court's decision in toto. Petitioner filed a motion for reconsideration but the same was denied.

The Court of Appeals held that although petitioner is neither a director nor an officer of ARMAGRI, he certainly comes within the term "employees or other x x x persons therein responsible for the offense" in Section 13 of the Trust Receipts Law. The Court of Appeals explained as follows: It is not disputed that appellant transacted with the Solid Bank on behalf of ARMAGRI. This is because the Corporation cannot by itself transact business or sign documents it being an artificial person. It has to accomplish these through its agents. A corporation has a personality distinct and separate from those acting on its behalf. In the fulfillment of its purpose, the corporation by necessity has to employ persons to act on its behalf.

Being a mere artificial person, the law (Section 13, P.D. 115) recognizes the impossibility of imposing the penalty of imprisonment on the corporation itself. For this reason, it is the officers or employees or other persons whom the law holds responsible.

Court of Appeals ruled that what made petitioner liable was his failure to account to the entruster Bank what he undertook to perform under the trust receipts. Court of Appeals also ruled that the prosecution need not prove that petitioner is occupying a position in ARMAGRI in the nature of an officer or similar position to hold him the "person(s) therein responsible for the offense." The Court of Appeals held that petitioner's admission that his participation was merely incidental still makes him fall within the purview of the law as one of the corporation's "employees or other officials or persons therein responsible for the offense." Incidental or not, petitioner was then acting on behalf of ARMAGRI, carrying out the corporation's decision when he signed the trust receipts. The Court of Appeals further ruled that the prosecution need not prove that petitioner personally received and misappropriated the goods subject of the trust receipts. Evidence of misappropriation is not required under the Trust Receipts Law. To establish the crime of estafa, it is sufficient to show failure by the entrustee to turn over the goods or the proceeds of the sale of the goods covered by a trust receipt.

ISSUE:

Whether or not Court of Appeals erred in ruling that, by the mere circumstance that petitioner acted as agent and signed for the entrustee corporation, petitioner was necessarily the one responsible for the offense. (NO)

RULING:

NO. We hold that petitioner is a person responsible for violation of the Trust Receipts Law.

1) Section 13 of the Trust Receipts Law which provides: If the violation is committed by a corporation, partnership, association or other juridical entities, the penalty provided for in this Decree shall be imposed upon the directors, officers, employees or other officials or persons therein responsible for the offense, without prejudice to the civil liabilities arising from the offense. The Trust Receipts Law is violated whenever the entrustee fails to: (1) turn over the proceeds of the sale of the goods, or (2) return the goods covered by the trust receipts if the goods are not sold.

The mere failure to account or return gives rise to the crime which is malum prohibitum. There is no requirement to prove intent to defraud. The Trust Receipts Law recognizes the impossibility of imposing the penalty of imprisonment on a corporation. Hence, if the entrustee is a corporation, the law makes the officers or employees or other persons responsible for the offense liable to suffer the penalty of imprisonment. The reason is obvious: corporations, partnerships, associations and other juridical entities cannot be put to jail. Hence, the criminal liability falls on the human agent responsible for the violation of the Trust Receipts Law.

It is a well-settled doctrine long before the enactment of the Trust Receipts Law, that the failure to account, upon demand, for funds or property held in trust is evidence of conversion or misappropriation. Under the law, mere failure by the entrustee to account for the goods received in trust constitutes estafa. The Trust Receipts Law punishes dishonesty and abuse of confidence in the handling of money or goods to the prejudice of public order.The mere failure to deliver the proceeds of the sale or the goods if not sold constitutes a criminal offense that causes prejudice not only to the creditor, but also to the public interest. Evidently, the Bank suffered prejudice for neither money nor the goods were turned over to the Bank.

In the instant case, petitioner signed the two trust receipts on behalf of ARMAGRI as the latter could only act through its agents. When petitioner signed the trust receipts, he acknowledged receipt of the goods covered by the trust receipts. In addition, petitioner was fully aware of the terms and conditions stated in the trust receipts, including the obligation to turn over the proceeds of the sale or return the goods to the Bank.

When petitioner signed the trust receipts, he claimed he was representing ARMAGRI. The corporation obviously acts only through its human agents and it is the conduct of such agents which the law must deter. The existence of the corporate entity does not shield from prosecution the agent who knowingly and intentionally commits a crime at the instance of a corporation. 2) As for the civil liability arising from the criminal offense, the question is whether as the signatory for ARMAGRI, petitioner is personally liable pursuant to the provision of Section 13 of the Trust Receipts Law.

It is clear that if the violation or offense is committed by a corporation, partnership, association or other juridical entities, the penalty shall be imposed upon the directors, officers, employees or other officials or persons responsible for the offense. The penalty referred to is imprisonment, the duration of which would depend on the amount of the fraud as provided for in Article 315 of the Revised Penal Code. The reason for this is obvious: corporation, partnership, association or other juridical entities cannot be put in jail. However, it is these entities which are made liable for the civil liabilities arising from the criminal offense. This is the import of the clause 'without prejudice to the civil liabilities arising from the criminal offense'.

In Prudential Bank, the Court ruled that the person signing the trust receipt for the corporation is not solidarily liable with the entrustee-corporation for the civil liability arising from the criminal offense. He may, however, be personally liable if he bound himself to pay the debt of the corporation under a separate contract of surety or guaranty.

In the instant case, petitioner did not sign in his personal capacity the solidary guarantee clause found on the dorsal portion of the trust receipts. Petitioner placed his signature after the typewritten words "ARMCO INDUSTRIAL CORPORATION" found at the end of the solidary guarantee clause. Evidently, petitioner did not undertake to guaranty personally the payment of the principal and interest of ARMAGRI's debt under the two trust receipts. In contrast, petitioner signed the stamped additional undertaking without any indication he was signing for ARMAGRI. Petitioner merely placed his signature after the additional undertaking. Clearly, what petitioner signed in his personal capacity was the stamped additional undertaking to pay a monthly penalty of 1% of the total obligation in case of ARMAGRI's default. In the additional undertaking, petitioner bound himself to pay "jointly and severally" a monthly penalty of 1% in case of ARMAGRI's default. Thus, petitioner is liable to the Bank for the stipulated monthly penalty of 1% on the outstanding amount of each trust receipt. The penalty shall be computed from 15 July 1991, when petitioner received the demand letter, until the debt is fully paid.

ALFREDO CHING, Petitioner
-versus- THE SECRETARY OF JUSTICE, ASST. CITY PROSECUTOR ECILYN BURGOS-VILLAVERT, JUDGE EDGARDO SUDIAM of the Regional Trial Court, Manila, Branch 52; RIZAL COMMERCIAL BANKING CORP. and THE PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINES, Respondents
GR. No. 164317, FIRST DIVISION, February 6, 2006, CALLEJO, Sr., J.

Since a corporation CANNOT be proceeded against criminally because it CANNOT commit crime in which personal violence or malicious intent is required, criminal action is limited to the corporate agents guilty of an act amounting to a crime and never against the corporation itself.

Execution by Ching of receipts is enough to indict him as the official responsible for violation of PD 115.

FACTS

Sept-Oct 1980: PBMI, through Ching, Senior VP of Philippine Blooming Mills, Inc. (PBMI), applied with the Rizal Commercial Banking Corporation (RCBC) for the issuance of commercial letters of credit to finance its importation of assorted goods.

RCBC approved the application, and irrevocable letters of credit were issued in favor of Ching. The goods were purchased and delivered in trust to PBMI. Ching signed 13 trust receipts as surety, acknowledging delivery of the goods. Under the receipts, Ching agreed to hold the goods in trust for RCBC, with authority to sell but not by way of conditional sale, pledge or otherwise. In case such goods were sold, to turn over the proceeds thereof as soon as received, to apply against the relative acceptances and payment of other indebtedness to respondent bank. In case the goods remained unsold within the specified period, the goods were to be returned to RCBC without any need of demand.

Goods, manufactured products or proceeds thereof, whether in the form of money or bills, receivables, or accounts separate and capable of identification - RCBC's property

When the trust receipts matured, Ching failed to return the goods to RCBC, or to return their value amounting toP6,940,280.66 despite demands. RCBC filed a criminal complaint for estafa against petitioner in the Office of the City Prosecutor of Manila.

December 8, 1995: no probable cause to charge petitioner with violating P.D. No. 115, as petitioner's liability was only civil, not criminal, having signed the trust receipts as surety. RCBC appealed the resolution to the Department of Justice (DOJ) via petition for review. On July 13, 1999: reversed the assailed resolution of the City Prosecutor. Execution of said receipts is enough to indict the Ching as the official responsible for violation of P.D. No. 115. April 22, 2004: CA dismissed the petition for lack of merit and on procedural grounds. Ching filed a petition for certiorari, prohibition and mandamus with the CA.

ISSUE

W/N Ching should be held criminally liable. (YES)

HELD

YES. DENIED for lack of merit. There is no dispute that it was the Ching executed the 13 trust receipts. The law points to him as the official responsible for the offense.

Since a corporation CANNOT be proceeded against criminally because it CANNOT commit crime in which personal violence or malicious intent is required, criminal action is limited to the corporate agents guilty of an act amounting to a crime and never against the corporation itself.

Execution by Ching of receipts is enough to indict him as the official responsible for violation of PD 115. RCBC is estopped to still contend that PD 115 covers only goods which are ultimately destined for sale and not goods, like those imported by PBM, for use in manufacture. Moreover, PD 115 explicitly allows the prosecution of corporate officers 'without prejudice to the civil liabilities arising from the criminal offense' thus, the civil liability imposed on respondent in RCBC vs. Court of Appeals case is clearly separate and distinct from his criminal liability under PD 115.

Ching's being a Senior Vice-President of the Philippine Blooming Mills does not exculpate him from any liability. The crime defined in P.D. No. 115 is malum prohibitum but is classified as estafa under paragraph 1(b), Article 315 of the Revised Penal Code, or estafa with abuse of confidence. It may be committed by a corporation or other juridical entity or by natural persons. However, the penalty for the crime is imprisonment for the periods provided in said Article 315.

The law specifically makes the officers, employees or other officers or persons responsible for the offense, without prejudice to the civil liabilities of such corporation and/or board of directors, officers, or other officials or employees responsible for the offense. Rationale: officers or employees are vested with the authority and responsibility to devise means necessary to ensure compliance with the law and, if they fail to do so, are held criminally accountable; thus, they have a responsible share in the violations of the law. If the crime is committed by a corporation or other juridical entity, the directors, officers, employees or other officers thereof responsible for the offense shall be charged and penalized for the crime, precisely because of the nature of the crime and the penalty therefor. A corporation cannot be arrested and imprisoned; hence, cannot be penalized for a crime punishable by imprisonment. However, a corporation may be charged and prosecuted for a crime if the imposable penalty is fine. Even if the statute prescribes both fine and imprisonment as penalty, a corporation may be prosecuted and, if found guilty, may be fined.

When a criminal statute designates an act of a corporation or a crime and prescribes punishment therefor, it creates a criminal offense which, otherwise, would not exist and such can be committed only by the corporation. But when a penal statute does not expressly apply to corporations, it does not create an offense for which a corporation may be punished. On the other hand, if the State, by statute, defines a crime that may be committed by a corporation but prescribes the penalty therefor to be suffered by the officers, directors, or employees of such corporation or other persons responsible for the offense, only such individuals will suffer such penalty. Corporate officers or employees, through whose act, default or omission the corporation commits a crime, are themselves individually guilty of the crime. The principle applies whether or not the crime requires the consciousness of wrongdoing. It applies to those corporate agents who themselves commit the crime and to those, who, by virtue of their managerial positions or other similar relation to the corporation, could be deemed responsible for its commission, if by virtue of their relationship to the corporation, they had the power to prevent the act. Benefit is not an operative fact.

FEDERATED LPG DEALERS ASSOCIATION, Petitioner, -versus- MA. CRISTINA L. DEL ROSARIO, CELSO E. ESCOBIDO U, SHIELA M. ESCOBIDO, and RESTY P. CAPILI, Respondents.
G.R. No. 202639, November 9, 2016, SECOND DIVISION, DEL CASTILLO, J.

In the case of Ty v. NBI Supervising Agent De Jemil, the Court ruled that a member of the Board of Directors of a corporation, cannot, by mere reason of such membership, be held liable for the corporation's probable violation of BP 33.

FACTS

Respondent Antonio is the General Manager of ACCS Ideal Gas Corporation (ACCS) while the other respondents are members of the Board of Directors.

Atty. Adarlo wrote the CIDG-AFCCD informing the latter that ACCS, which allegedly has been refilling branded LPG cylinders in its refilling plant, has no authority to refill per certifications from gas companies owning the branded LPG cylinders.

Having reasonable grounds to believe that ACCS was in violation of BP 33, P/Supt. Esguerra filed with the Regional Trial Court (RTC) of Manila applications for search warrant against the officers of ACCS. This resulted in the seizure of an electric motor, a hose with filling head, scales, v-belt, vapor compressor, booklets of various receipts, and 73 LPG cylinders of various brands and sizes, four of which were filled, i.e., two Superkalan 3.7 kg. LPG cylinders, one Shellane 11 kg. LPG cylinder, and one Totalgaz 11 kg. cylinder. Inspection and evaluation of the said filled LPG cylinders showed that they were underfilled by 0.5 kg. to 0.9 kg.

Complaint-Affidavits were filed before the Department of Justice (DOJ) against Antonio and respondents for illegal trading of petroleum products and for underfilling of LPG cylinders under Section 2(a) and 2(c), respectively, of BP 33, as amended. Secretary of Justice approved the finding of probable cause albeit only against Antonio. P/Supt. Esguerra and petitioner elevated the matter to the CA through a certiorari petition. They contended that the Secretary of Justice acted with grave abuse of discretion amounting to lack of or in excess of jurisdiction in affirming the dropping of other respondents from the complaints. CA, however, sustatined the Secretary of Justice.

ISSUE

Can respondents, as members of the Board of Directors of ACCS, be criminally prosecuted for the latter's alleged violation/s of BP 33 as amended?

RULING

Respondents cannot be prosecuted for ACCS' alleged violations of BP 33. They were thus correctly dropped as respondents in the complaints.

The CA ratiocinated that by the election or designation of Antonio as General Manager of ACCS, the daily business operations of the corporation were vested in his hands and had ceased to be the responsibility of respondents as members of the Board of Directors. Respondents, therefore, were not officers charged with the management of the business affairs who could be held liable pursuant to paragraph 3, Section 4 of BP 33, as amended, which states that:

When the offender is a corporation, partnership, or other juridical person, the president, the general manager, managing partner, or such other officer charged with the management of the business affairs thereof, or employee responsible for the violation shall be criminally liable. xxx

In the case of Ty v. NBI Supervising Agent De Jemil, the Court ruled that a member of the Board of Directors of a corporation, cannot, by mere reason of such membership, be held liable for the corporation's probable violation of BP 33. If one is not the President, General Manager or Managing Partner, it is imperative that it first be shown that he/she falls under the catch-all ''such other officer charged with the management of the business affairs," before he/she can be prosecuted. However, it must be stressed, that the matter of being an officer charged with the management of the business affairs is a factual issue which must be alleged and supposed by evidence. Here, there is no dispute that neither of the respondents was the President, General Manager, or Managing Partner of ACCS. Hence, it becomes incumbent upon petitioner to show that respondents were officers charged with the management of the business affairs. However, the Complaint-Affidavit attached to the records merely states that respondents were members of the Board of Directors based on the AOI of ACCS. There is no allegation whatsoever that they were in-charge of the management of the corporation's business affairs.

At any rate, the Court has gone through the By-Laws of ACCS and found nothing therein which would suggest that respondents were directly involved in the day-to-day operations of the corporation. The By-laws contains a general statement that the corporate powers of ACCS shall be exercised, all business conducted, and all property of the corporation controlled and held by the Board of Directors. Notably, however, the bylaws likewise significantly vests the Board with specific powers that were generally concerned with policy making from which it can reasonably be deduced that the Board only concerns itself in the business affairs by setting administrative and operational policies.

Clearly, therefore, it is only Antonio, who undisputedly was the General Manager - a position among those expressly mentioned as criminally liable under paragraph 4, Section 3 of BP 33, as amended - can be prosecuted for ACCS' perceived violations of the said law. Respondents who were mere members of the Board of Directors and not shown to be charged with the management of the business affairs were thus correctly dropped as respondents in the complaints.

A transfer of corporate property to the corporation's President as compensation for his "outstanding service" cannot be considered valid if it does not comply with Section 32 of the Corporation Code. Here, we note that Javonillo, as a director, signed the Board Resolutions confirming the transfer of the corporate properties to himself, and to Armentano (the Corporate Secretary). The transfer is not valid even if there was a Resolution by the general membership of ALRAI confirming the transfer. First, Section 32 requires that the contract should be ratified by a vote representing at least two-thirds of the members in a meeting called for the purpose. Records of this case do not show whether the Resolution was indeed voted by the required percentage of membership. In fact, respondents take exception to the credibility of the signatures of the persons who voted in the Resolution. Second, there is also no showing that there was full disclosure of the adverse interest of the directors involved when the Resolution was approved. Third, Section 32 requires that the contract be fair and reasonable under the circumstances. As previously discussed, we find that the transfer of the corporate properties to the individual petitioners is not fair and reasonable for (1) want of (proof of) legitimate corporate purpose because there was no basis by which it could have been determined whether the transfer of properties to Javonillo and Armentano was reasonable under the circumstances at that time and for (2) the breach of the fiduciary nature of the positions held by Javonillo and Armentano. Lacking any of these (full disclosure and a showing that the contract is fair and reasonable), ratification by the two-thirds vote would be of no avail.

10. Inside Information

11. Contracts

a. By Self-Dealing Directors with the Corporation

b. Between Corporations with Interlocking Directors

DEVELOPMENT BANK OF THE PHILIPPINES, Petitioner –versus- HONORABLE COURT OF APPEALS AND REMINGTON INDUSTRIAL SALES CORPORATION, Respondents
G.R. No. 126200, FIRST DIVISION, August 16, 2001, KAPUNAN, J.

We do not find any fraud on the part of Marinduque Mining and its transferees to warrant the piercing of the corporate veil. It bears stressing that PNB and DBP are mandated to foreclose on the mortgage when the past due account had incurred arrearages of more than 20% of the total outstanding obligation. Thus, PNB and DBP did not only have a right, but the duty under said law, to foreclose upon the subject properties. The banks had no choice but to obey the statutory command.

FACTS

Marinduque Mining-Industrial Corporation (Marinduque Mining), a corporation engaged in the manufacture of pure and refined nickel, nickel and cobalt in mixed sulfides; copper ore/concentrates, cement and pyrite conc., obtained from the Philippine National Bank (PNB) various loan accommodations. To secure the loans, Marinduque Mining executed on October 9, 1978 a Deed of Real Estate Mortgage and Chattel Mortgage in favor of PNB.

Marinduque Mining executed in favor of PNB and the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP) a second Mortgage Trust Agreement. In said agreement, Marinduque Mining mortgaged to PNB and DBP all its real properties located at Surigao del Norte, Sipalay, Negros Occidental, and Antipolo, Rizal, including the improvements thereon. The mortgage also covered all of Marinduque Mining's chattels, as well as assets of whatever kind, nature and description which Marinduque Mining may subsequently acquire in substitution or replenishment or in addition to the properties covered by the previous Deed of Real and Chattel Mortgage.

Marinduque Mining executed in favor of PNB and DBP an Amendment to Mortgage Trust Agreement by virtue of which Marinduque Mining mortgaged in favor of PNB and DBP all other real and personal properties and other real rights subsequently acquired by Marinduque Mining. For failure of Marinduque Mining to settle its loan obligations, PNB and DBP instituted sometime on July and August 1984 extrajudicial foreclosure proceedings over the mortgaged properties. PNB and DBP emerged and were declared the highest bidders over the foreclosed real properties, buildings, mining claims, leasehold rights together with the improvements thereon as well as machineries [sic] and equipments of MMIC. Likewise, thru [sic] a Deed of Transfer dated June 6, 1984, PNB and DBP assigned and transferred in favor of Maricalum Mining Corp. all its rights, interest and participation over the foreclosed properties of MMIC at Sipalay, Negros Occidental.

On February 27, 1987, PNB and DBP, pursuant to Proclamation No. 50 as amended, again assigned,transferred and conveyed to the National Government thru [sic] the Asset Privatization Trust (APT)all its existing rights and interest over the assets of MMIC, earlier assigned to Nonoc Mining andIndustrial Corporation, Maricalum Mining Corporation and Island Cement Corporation. In the meantime, between July 16, 1982 to October 4, 1983, Marinduque Mining purchased and caused to be delivered construction materials and other merchandise from Remington Industrial Sales Corporation (Remington) worth P921,755.95. The purchases remained unpaid as of August 1, 1984 when Remington filed a complaint for a sum of money and damages against Marinduque Mining for the value of the unpaid construction materials and other merchandise purchased by Marinduque Mining, as well as interest, attorney's fees and the costs of suit.

Remington's original complaint was amended to include PNB and DBP as co-defendants in view of the foreclosure by the latter of the real and chattel mortgages on the real and personal properties, chattels, mining claims, machinery, equipment and other assets of Marinduque Mining. Remington filed a second amended complaint to include as additional defendant, the Nonoc Mining and Industrial Corporation (Nonoc Mining). Nonoc Mining is the assignee of all real and personal properties, chattels, machinery, equipment and all other assets of Marinduque Mining at its Nonoc Nickel Factory in Surigao del Norte.

Remington filed a third amended complaint including the Maricalum Mining Corporation (Maricalum Mining) and Island Cement Corporation (Island Cement) as co-defendants. Remington asserted that Marinduque Mining, PNB, DBP, Nonoc Mining, Maricalum Mining and Island Cement must be treated in law as one and the same entity by disregarding the veil of corporate fiction.

It alleged that Co-defendants NMIC, Maricalum and Island Cement which are newly created entities are practically owned wholly by defendants PNB and DBP, and managed by their officers, aside from the fact that the aforesaid co-defendants NMIC, Maricalum and Island Cement were organized in such a hurry and in such suspicious circumstances by co-defendants PNB and DBP after the supposed extrajudicial foreclosure of MMIC's assets as to make their supposed projects assets, machineries and equipment which were originally owned by co-defendant MMIC beyond the reach of creditors of the latter.

Remington filed a motion for leave to file a fourth amended complaint impleading the Asset Privatization Trust (APT) as co-defendant.

The Regional Trial Court (RTC) rendered a decision in favor of Remington. Upon appeal by PNB, DBP, Nonoc Mining, Maricalum Mining, Island Cement and APT, the Court of Appeals, in its Decision dated October 6, 1995, affirmed the decision of the RTC. Petitioner filed a Motion for Reconsideration, which was denied in the Resolution dated August 29, 1996.

Hence, this petition, DBP maintaining that Remington has no cause of action against it or PNB, nor against their transferees, Nonoc Mining, Island Cement, Maricalum Mining, and the APT. On the other hand, private respondent Remington submits that the transfer of the properties was made in fraud of creditors. The presence of fraud, according to Remington, warrants the piercing of the corporate veil such that Marinduque Mining and its transferees could be considered as one and the same corporation. The transferees, therefore, are also liable for the value of Marinduque Mining's purchases.

ISSUE

Whether or not the doctrine of piercing the veil of corporate fiction shall apply in this case. (NO)

RULING

NO. In this case, however, we do not find any fraud on the part of Marinduque Mining and its transferees to warrant the piercing of the corporate veil. It bears stressing that PNB and DBP are mandated to foreclose on the mortgage when the past due account had incurred arrearages of more than 20% of the total outstanding obligation. Thus, PNB and DBP did not only have a right, but the duty under said law, to foreclose upon the subject properties. The banks had no choice but to obey the statutory command.

The Court of Appeals made reference to two principles in corporation law. The first pertains to transactions between corporations with interlocking directors resulting in the prejudice to one of the corporations. This rule does not apply in this case, however, since the corporation allegedly prejudiced (Remington) is a third party, not one of the corporations with interlocking directors (Marinduque Mining and DBP).

The second principle invoked by respondent court involves "directors x x x who are creditors" which is also inapplicable herein. Here, the creditor of Marinduque Mining is DBP, not the directors of Marinduque Mining.

Neither do we discern any bad faith on the part of DBP by its creation of Nonoc Mining, Maricalum and Island Cement. As Remington itself concedes, DBP is not authorized by its charter to engage in the mining business. The creation of the three corporations was necessary to manage and operate the assets acquired in the foreclosure sale lest they deteriorate from non-use and lose their value. In the absence of any entity willing to purchase these assets from the bank, what else would it do with these properties in the meantime? Sound business practice required that they be utilized for the purposes for which they were intended.

Remington also asserted in its third amended complaint that the use of Nonoc Mining, Maricalum and Island Cement of the premises of Marinduque Mining and the hiring of the latter's officers and personnel also constitute badges of bad faith.

Assuming that the premises of Marinduque Mining were not among those acquired by DBP in the foreclosure sale, convenience and practicality dictated that the corporations so created occupy the premises where these assets were found instead of relocating them. No doubt, many of these assets are heavy equipment and it may have been impossible to move them. The same reasons of convenience and practicality, not to mention efficiency, justified the hiring by Nonoc Mining, Maricalum and Island Cement of Marinduque Mining's personnel to manage and operate the properties and to maintain the continuity of the mining operations.

The Court of Appeals also held that there exists in Remington's favor a "lien" on the unpaid purchases of Marinduque Mining, and as transferee of these purchases, DBP should be held liable for the value thereof.

In the absence of liquidation proceedings, however, the claim of Remington cannot be enforced against DBP.

Article 2241 of the Civil Code provides:

ARTICLE 2241. With reference to specific movable property of the debtor, the following claims or liens shall be preferred:

3) Claims for the unpaid price of movables sold, on said movables, so long as they are in the possession of the debtor, up to the value of the same; and if the movable has been resold by the debtor and the price is still unpaid, the lien may be enforced on the price; this right is not lost by the immobilization of the thing by destination, provided it has not lost its form, substance and identity, neither is the right lost by the sale of the thing together with other property for a lump sum, when the price thereof can be determined proportionally;

(4) Credits guaranteed with a pledge so long as the things pledged are in the hands of the creditor, or those guaranteed by a chattel mortgage, upon the things pledged or mortgaged, up to the value thereof;

In the Barretto case, it was upheld that: It is thus apparent that the full application of Articles 2249 and 2242 demands that there must be first some proceeding where the claims of all the preferred creditors may be bindingly adjudicated, such as insolvency, the settlement of decedent's estate under Rule 87 of the Rules of Court, or other liquidation proceedings of similar import. The ruling therein should apply equally in this case where specific movable property is involved. As the extrajudicial foreclosure instituted by PNB and DBP is not the liquidation proceeding contemplated by the Civil Code, Remington cannot claim its pro rata share from DBP.

12. Executive Committee

FILIPINAS PORT SERVICES, INC., represented by stockholders, ELIODORO C. CRUZ and MINDANAO TERMINAL AND BROKERAGE SERVICES, INC., Petitioners -versus- VICTORIANO S. GO, ARSENIO LOPEZ CHUA, EDGAR C. TRINIDAD, HERMENEGILDO M. TRINIDAD, JESUS SYBICO, MARY JEAN D. CO, HENRY CHUA, JOSELITO S. JAYME, ERNESTO S. JAYME, and ELIEZER B. DE JESUS, Respondents

G.R. No. 161886, FIRST DIVISION, March 16, 2007, GARCIA, J.

Under Section 3515 of the Corporation Code, the creation of an executive committee must be provided for in the bylaws of the corporation. Notwithstanding the silence of Filport's bylaws on the matter, we cannot rule that the creation of the executive committee by the board of directors is illegal or unlawful. One reason is the absence of a showing as to the true nature and functions of said executive committee considering that the "executive committee," referred to in Section 35 of the Corporation Code which is as powerful as the board of directors and in effect acting for the board itself, should be distinguished from other committees which are within the competency of the board to create at anytime and whose actions require ratification and confirmation by the board.

FACTS

Eliodoro C. Cruz (Cruz) was president of Filipinas Port Services, Inc. (Filport) since 1968. He lost his bid for re-election in 1991. A year thereafter, Cruz wrote a letter to the corporation's Board of Directors questioning the creation of six (6) positions and the election of certain members of the board thereto. It would seem that Cruz was unhappy with the Board's action or actions on the matter, for a year later he filed a petition with the (SEC), joined by (MinTerBro) as co-petitioner, what he calls a "derivative suit‟ supposedly in representation of Filport and its stockholders. It is Cruz's contention that the creation of an executive committee is not provided for in the bylaws and the increase in the emoluments of several members of the board is greatly disproportionate to the volume and character of work of said directors. Further, he questions the re-creation of the positions of Assistant Vice President for corporate planning, operations, finance and administration and additional positions where those holding said offices are not doing any work but earning compensation. These acts of mismanagement according to Cruz are detrimental to the corporation and its stockholders and so the board must account for the amounts incurred in creating these positions and made to pay damages.

The derivative suit hibernated with the SEC for a long period of time. With the enactment of R.A. No. 8799, the case was first turned over to the RTC of Manila, sitting as a corporate court. Upon motion of the parties, it was transferred to RTC Davao. Though the RTC found that Filport's Board of Directors had the power to create positions not provided for in the by-laws and the increases in salaries are reasonable, nevertheless it ordered the directors holding the positions of Assistant Vice President for Corporate Planning, Special Assistant to the President and Special Assistant to the Board Chairman to refund to the corporation the salaries they have received as such officers "considering that Filipinas Port Services is not a big corporation requiring multiple executive positions" and that said positions "were just created for accommodation." Upon appeal to the Court of Appeals (CA), the RTC decision was reversed and set aside and thus the so called derivative suit was dismissed.

ISSUE

Whether the creation of an executive committee and other offices in the corporation with corresponding remunerations are within the powers of the Board of Directors?

RULING

The governing body of a corporation is its board of directors. Section 23 of the Corporation Code explicitly provides that unless otherwise provided therein, the corporate powers of all corporations formed under the Code shall be exercised, all business conducted and all property of the corporation shall be controlled and held by a board of directors. Thus, with the exception only of some powers expressly granted by law to stockholders, the board of directors has the sole authority to determine policies, enter into contracts, and conduct the ordinary business of the corporation within the scope of its charter.

The raison d'etre behind the conferment of corporate powers on the board of directors is not lost on the Court. Indeed, the concentration in the board of the powers of control of corporate business and of appointment of corporate officers and managers is necessary for efficiency in any large organization. Stockholders are too numerous, scattered and unfamiliar with the business of a corporation to conduct its business directly. And so the plan of corporate organization is for the stockholders to choose the directors who shall control and supervise the conduct of corporate business.

In the present case, the board's creation of the positions of Assistant Vice Presidents for Corporate Planning, Operations, Finance and Administration, and those of the Special Assistants to the President and the Board Chairman, was in accordance with the regular business operations of Filport as it is authorized to do so by the corporation's by-laws, pursuant to the Corporation Code. Likewise, the fixing of the corresponding remuneration for the positions in question is provided for in the same by-laws of the corporation, viz: xxx The Board of Directors shall fix the compensation of the officers and agents of the corporation.

Unfortunately, the bylaws of the corporation are silent as to the creation by its board of directors of an executive committee. Under Section 3515 of the Corporation Code, the creation of an executive committee must be provided for in the bylaws of the corporation. Notwithstanding the silence of Filport's bylaws on the matter, we cannot rule that the creation of the executive committee by the board of directors is illegal or unlawful. One reason is the absence of a showing as to the true nature and functions of said executive committee considering that the "executive committee," referred to in Section 35 of the Corporation Code which is as powerful as the board of directors and in effect acting for the board itself, should be distinguished from other committees which are within the competency of the board to create at anytime and whose actions require ratification and confirmation by the board. Another reason is that, ratiocinated by both the two (2) courts below, the Board of Directors has the power to create positions not provided for in Filport's bylaws since the board is the corporation's governing body, clearly upholding the power of its board to exercise its prerogatives in managing the business affairs of the corporation.

13. Meetings

PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINES, Petitioner -versus- HERMENEGILDO DUMLAO y CASTILIANO and EMILIO LA'O y GONZALES, Respondents
G.R. No. 168918, THIRD DIVISION, March 2, 2009, CHICO-NAZARIO, J.

The non-signing by the majority of the members of the GSIS Board of Trustees of the said minutes does not necessarily mean that the supposed resolution was not approved by the board. The signing of the minutes by all the members of the board is not required. There is no provision in the 1980 Corporation Code requiring that the minutes of the meeting should be signed by all the members of the board.

FACTS

The accused Hermenegildo C. Dumlao, Aber Canlas, Jacobo C. Clave, Roman A. Cruz, Jr., and Fabian C. Ver, being then the members of the Board of Trustees of the Government Service Insurance System

(GSIS) entered into a contract of lease-purchase with Emilio G. La'o (La'o), selling a GSIS-acquired property consisting of three parcels of land with a 5-storey building known as the Government Counsel Centre for the sum of ₱2,000,000.00 with a down payment of ₱200,000.00 with the balance payable in fifteen years at 12% interest per annum compounded yearly, with a yearly amortization of ₱264,278.37 including principal and interest. It also granted La'o the right to sublease the ground floor for his own account during the period of lease, from which he collected yearly rentals in excess of the yearly amortization. An Information was filed against the accused, alleging that the contract is manifestly and grossly disadvantageous to the government, which is in violation of Section 3(g) of RA 3019.

After pre-trial, Dumlao filed a motion to quash, claiming that the facts charged do not constitute an offense. He argued that the allegedly approved Board Resolution was not in fact approved by the GSIS Board of Trustees. Since the signatures of Ver, Cruz, Canlas and Clave did not appear in the minutes of the meeting held on April 23, 1982, he said it was safe to conclude that these people did not participate in the alleged approval of the Lease-Purchase Agreement. He maintained that there was no quorum of the board to approve the supposed resolution authorizing the sale of the GSIS property. There can be no resolution approving the Lease-Purchase Agreement. The unapproved resolution, he added, proved his innocence.

Sandiganbayan granted the motion. The minutes of the meeting held on April 23, 1982 of the Board of Trustees of GSIS shows that the Board failed to approve the Lease-Purchase Agreement in question. As stipulated upon by both parties out of the seven (7) members of GSIS Board of Trustees only three (3) members signed the minutes, the others did not. In order to validly pass a resolution at least a majority of four (4) members of the Board of Trustees must sign and approve the same. The Resolution was not validly passed by the Board of Trustees of GSIS since it was only signed by three (3) members of the Board. Thus, it never had the force and effect of a valid resolution and did not in effect approve the Lease and Purchase Agreement subject matter hereof. Therefore, the prosecution has no cause of action against Dumlao.

In a petition for certiorari under Rule 45, People of the Philippines, represented by the Office of the Ombudsman, thru the Office of the Special Prosecutor, argues it was denied its right to due process when the Sandiganbayan dismissed the case against Dumlao after pre-trial and before it could present its witnesses and formally offer its exhibits. The Sandiganbayan deprived it of the opportunity to prove its case – that the Resolution dated April 23, 1982 was passed by the GSIS Board of Trustees and that the Lease-Purchase Agreement was grossly and manifestly disadvantageous to the government.

ISSUE

Whether signatures not appearing in the minutes of the meeting mean that persons pertaining to such signatures did not participate in the alleged approval of the Lease-Purchase Agreement.

RULING

NO. The non-signing by the majority of the members of the GSIS Board of Trustees of the said minutes does not necessarily mean that the supposed resolution was not approved by the board. The signing of the minutes by all the members of the board is not required. There is no provision in the 1980

Corporation Code requiring that the minutes of the meeting should be signed by all the members of the board.

A resolution is distinct and different from the minutes of the meeting. A board resolution is a formal action by a corporate board of directors or other corporate body authorizing a particular act, transaction, or appointment. It is ordinarily special and limited in its operation, applying usually to some single specific act or affair of the corporation; or to some specific person, situation or occasion. On the other hand, minutes are a brief statement not only of what transpired at a meeting, usually of stockholders/members or directors/trustees, but also at a meeting of an executive committee. The minutes are usually kept in a book specially designed for that purpose, but they may also be kept in the form of memoranda or in any other manner in which they can be identified as minutes of a meeting.

The proper custodian of the books, minutes and official records of a corporation is usually the corporate secretary. Being the custodian of corporate records, the corporate secretary has the duty to record and prepare the minutes of the meeting. The signature of the corporate secretary gives the minutes of the meeting probative value and credibility. In this case, Antonio Eduardo B. Nachura, Deputy Corporate Secretary, recorded, prepared and certified the correctness of the minutes of the meeting of April 23, 1982; and the same was confirmed by Leonilo M. Ocampo, Chairman of the GSIS Board of Trustees. Said minutes contained the statement that the board approved the sale of the properties, subject matter of this case, to La'o. Having been made by a public officer, the minutes carry the presumption of regularity in the performance of his functions and duties. Moreover, the entries contained in the minutes are prima facie evidence of what actually took place during the meeting.

The Sandiganbayan considered the ground invoked by Dumlao (that the facts charged do not constitute an offense) and, in effect, dismissed the case because of insufficiency of evidence, which is not one of the grounds of a Motion to Quash. In so doing, it violated the prosecution's right to due process. It should have given the prosecution the opportunity to fully present its case and to establish reasonable doubt on the alleged approval by the GSIS Board of Trustees of the leasepurchase of the GSIS properties.

LOPEZ REALTY, INC. and ASUNCION LOPEZ-GONZALES, Petitioners
-versus- SPOUSES REYNALDO TANJANGCO and MARIA LUISA ARGUELLES-TANJANGCO, Respondents
G.R. No. 154291, THIRD DIVISION, November 12, 2014, REYES, J.

The petitioner assails the validity of sale of shares of stocks to the respondents claiming that there was no compliance with the requirement of prior notice to the Board of Directors when the Board Resolution authorizing the sale to the respondent spouses were promulgated. The Supreme Court ruled that the general rule is that a corporation, through its board of directors, should act in the manner and within the formalities, if any, prescribed by its charter or by the general law. However, the actions taken in such a meeting by the directors or trustees may be ratified expressly or impliedly.

FACTS

The petitioner Lopez Realty, Inc. issued a Board Resolution authorizing Arturo, a member of the Board of Directors of the corporation, to negotiate with the Tanjanco spouses for the sale of the ½ shares of LRI (Lopez Realty Corporation). Because of this, Arturo and the spouses executed a Deed of Sale for the shares for a consideration of Php3.6M. However, Asuncion, another Board of Director of the said corporation, submitted a letter requesting the Board to defer any transaction with Tanjanco as she was not apprised and given notice of the said transaction. Despite this, the execution of the Deed of Absolute Sale between Arturo and spouses Tanjanco proceeded. Asuncion then filed a complaint for the Annulment of the Deed of Sale with a prayer for a writ of preliminary injuction in the Regional Trial Court. Asuncion alleges that she was neither notified nor apprised of the on-going sale of the shares of LRI.

The Regional Trial Court granted the prayer of Asuncion and declared the subject deed null and void for failure to comply with the strict procedural requirements. The RTC ruled that for a Board Resolution authorizing the sale of share to be valid, it is necessary that notice must be sent to the Board of Directors at least one day prior to the said board meeting. However, on appeal, the Court of Appeals reversed and set aside the decision of the RTC. Hence, the current petition.

ISSUE

Whether or not the sale of the shares of stock of LRI to respondent spouses Tanjanco are valid pursuant to the Board Resolution promulgated by LRI despite lack of notice to Asuncion, one of its Board of Directors.

RULING

The sale of the shares of stock of LRI to the respondent spouses Tanjanco is deemed valid because the Board Resolution from which it is derived is also valid despite the lack of the required prior notice to its Board of Directors. The Supreme Court reinstated the decision of the RTC and affirmed the decision of the Court of Appeals.

Section 53 of the Corporation Code provides for the following:

SEC. 53. Regular and special meetings of directors or trustees.—Regular meetings of the board of directors or trustees of every corporation shall be held monthly, unless the by-laws provide otherwise.

Special meetings of the board of directors or trustees may be held at any time upon call of the president or as provided in the by-laws.

Meetings of directors or trustees of corporations may be held anywhere in or outside of the Philippines, unless the by-laws provide otherwise. Notice of regular or special meetings stating the date, time and place of the meeting must be sent to every director or trustee at least one (1) day prior to the scheduled meeting, unless otherwise provided by the by-laws. A director or trustee may waive this requirement, either expressly or impliedly.

The general rule is that a corporation, through its board of directors, should act in the manner and within the formalities, if any, prescribed by its charter or by the general law. Thus, directors must act as a body in a meeting called pursuant to the law or the corporation's bylaws, otherwise, any action taken therein may be questioned by any objecting director or shareholder.

However, the actions taken in such a meeting by the directors or trustees may be ratified expressly or impliedly. "Ratification means that the principal voluntarily adopts, confirms and gives sanction to some unauthorized act of its agent on its behalf. It is this voluntary choice, knowingly made, which amounts to a ratification of what was theretofore unauthorized and becomes the authorized act of the party so making the ratification. The substance of the doctrine is confirmation after conduct, amounting to a substitute for a prior authority. Ratification can be made either expressly or impliedly. Implied ratification may take various forms — like silence or acquiescence, acts showing approval or adoption of the act, or acceptance and retention of benefits flowing therefrom."

In the present case, the ratification was expressed through the July 30, 1982 Board Resolution. Asuncion claims that the July 30, 1982 Board Resolution did not ratify the Board Resolution dated August 17, 1981 for lack of the required number of votes because Juanito is not entitled to vote while Leo voted "no" to the ratification of the sale even if the minutes stated otherwise.

a. Quorum

ROSITA PEÑA, Petitioner –versus- THE COURT OF APPEALS, SPOUSES RISING T. YAP AND CATALINA YAP, PAMPANGA BUS CO., INC., JESUS DOMINGO, JOAQUIN BRIONES, SALVADOR BERNARDEZ, MARCELINO ENRIQUEZ AND EDGARDO A. ZABAT, Respondents
G.R. No. 91478, FIRST DIVISION, February 7, 1991, GANCAYCO, J.

Apparently, only three (3) out of five (5) members of the board of directors of respondent PAMBUSCO convened on November 19, 1974 by virtue of a prior notice of a special meeting. There was no quorum to validly transact business since, under Section 4 of the amended by-laws, at least four (4) members must be present to constitute a quorum in a special meeting of the board of directors of respondent PAMBUSCO

FACTS

Pampanga Bus Co. or PAMBUSCO is the original owners of the subject lots. It mortgaged the same to the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP) This mortgage was foreclosed. In the foreclosure sale, the said properties were awarded to Rosita Peña as highest bidder. A certificate of sale was issued in her favor by the sheriff. Thereafter, the certificate of sale was registered.

Later on, the board of directors of PAMBUSCO, through three (3) out of its five (5) directors, resolved to assign its right of redemption over the aforesaid lots and authorized one of its members, Atty. Joaquin Briones "to execute and sign a Deed of Assignment for and in behalf of PAMBUSCO in favor of any interested party . . ."

Consequently, Briones executed a Deed of Assignment of PAMBUSCO's redemption right over the subject lots in favor of Marcelino Enriquez. The latter then redeemed the said properties and a certificate of redemption was issued in his favour.

A day after the aforesaid certificate was issued, Enriquez executed a deed of absolute sale of the subject properties in favor of plaintiffs-appellants, the spouses Rising T. Yap and Catalina Lugue. However, Peña wrote the Sheriff notifying him that the redemption was not valid as it was made under a void deed of assignment. She then requested the recall of the said redemption and a restraint on any registration or transaction regarding the lots in question.

Plaintiffs-appellants, the spouses Rising T. Yap and Catalina Lugue filed a complaint for recovery of possession against defendants Rosita Peña and Washington Distillery Thereafter, the defendants with prior leave of court filed a third-party complaint third-party defendants PAMBUSCO, Jesus Domingo, Joaquin Briones, Salvador Bernardez (as members of the Board of Directors of PAMBUSCO), Marcelino Enriquez, and Deputy Sheriff Edgardo Zabat of Pampanga. All these third-party defendants, however, were declared as in default for failure to file their answer, except Edgardo Zabat who did file his answer but failed to appear at the pre-trial. After trial, a decision was rendered by the court dismissing the complaint filed by the plaintiffs against the defendants and declaring as null and void the resolution of the Board of Directors of PAMBUSCO approved on November 19, 1974 assigning the PAMBUSCO's right of redemption concerning the parcels involved herein on appeal the decision is reversed. Defendant-appellee Peña is hereby ordered to vacate the lands in question and pay the plaintiffs-appellants the accrued rentals.

ISSUE

Whether or not the court of appeals erred in holding that the resolution ofrespondent, assigning its right of redemption is not void or at the very least legally defective?

RULING

The by-laws of a corporation are its own private laws which substantially have the same effect as the laws of the corporation. They are in effect, written, into the charter. In this sense they become part of the fundamental law of the corporation with which the corporation and its directors and officers must comply.

Apparently, only three (3) out of five (5) members of the board of directors of respondent PAMBUSCO convened on November 19, 1974 by virtue of a prior notice of a special meeting. There was no quorum to validly transact business since, under Section 4 of the amended by-laws, at least four (4) members must be present to constitute a quorum in a special meeting of the board of directors of respondent PAMBUSCO.

Moreover, the records show that respondent PAMBUSCO ceased to operate as of November 15, 1949 as evidenced by a letter of the SEC to said corporation dated April 17, 1980.13 Being a dormant corporation for several years, it was highly irregular, if not anomalous, for a group of three (3) individuals representing themselves to be the directors of respondent PAMBUSCO to pass a resolution disposing of the only remaining asset of the corporation in favor of a former corporate officer. As a matter of fact, the three (3) alleged directors who attended the special meeting on November 19, 1974 were not listed as directors of respondent PAMBUSCO in the latest general information sheet of respondent PAMBUSCO filed with the SEC dated 18 March 1951.14 Similarly, the latest list of stockholders of respondent PAMBUSCO on file with the SEC does not show that the said alleged directors were among the stockholders of respondent PAMBUSCO.

It is also undisputed that at the time of the passage of the questioned resolution, respondent PAMBUSCO was insolvent and its only remaining asset was its right of redemption over the subject properties. Since the disposition of said redemption right of respondent PAMBUSCO by virtue of the questioned resolution was not approved by the required number of stockholders under the law, the said resolution, as well as the subsequent assignment executed on March 8, 1975 assigning to respondent Enriquez the said right of redemption, should be struck down as null and void.

CAROLINA QUE VILLONGCO, ANA MARIA QUE TAN, ANGELICA QUE GONZALES, ELAINE VICTORIA QUE TAN and EDISON WILLIAMS QUE TAN, Petitioners –versus- CECILIA QUE YABUT, EUMIR CARLO QUE CAMARA and MA. CORAZON QUE GARCIA, Respondents
GR No. 225024, February 5, 2018, FIRST DIVISION, TIJAM, J.

Section 63 of the Corporation Code states that "No transfer, however, shall be valid, except as between the parties, until the transfer is recorded in the books of the corporation showing the names of the parties to the transaction, the date of the transfer, the number of the certificate or certificates and the number of shares transferred."

In this case, there is no evidence that the 3,140 shares of the late Geronima were recorded in the stocks and transfer book of Phil-Ville. Thus, insofar as Phil-Ville is concerned, the 3,140 shares of the late Geronima allegedly transferred to several persons is non-existent. Therefore, the transferees of the said shares cannot exercise the rights granted unto stockholders of a corporation, including the right to vote and to be voted upon.

To constitute a quorum, the presence of 100,001 shares of stocks in Phil-Ville is necessary. Here, only 98,430 was represented during the stockholders meeting. As such, the proceedings during the meeting is void.

FACTS

Phil-Ville Development and Housing Corporation (Phil-Ville) is a family corporation founded by Geronima Gallego Que (Geronima) that is engaged in the real estate business. The authorized capital stock of Phil-Ville is Twenty Million Pesos (P20,000,000) divided into Two Hundred Thousand (200,000) shares with a par value of One Hundred Pesos (P100.00) per share.

During her lifetime, Geronima owned 3,140 shares of stock while the remaining 196,860 shares were equally distributed among Geronima's six children, namely: Carolina Que Villongco, Ana Maria Que Tan, Angelica Que Gonzales, Cecilia Que Yabut, Ma. Corazon Que Garcia, and Maria Luisa Que Camara, as follows:

Carolina	32, 810 shares
Ana Maria	32,810
Angelica	32,810
Cecilia	32,810
Ma. Corazon	32,810
Maria Luisa	32,810, her shares were transferred to her children upon death

Geronima died in 2007. Cecilia, as attorney in fact of Geronima, purportedly executed a deed of absolute sale of the 3,140 shares.

Accordingly, the distribution of Geronima's shares to her grandchildren in accordance with the Sale of Shares of Stocks was reflected in the General Information Sheets filed by Phil-Ville in 2010 and 2011, x x x

In 2013, Cecilia, Eumir Carlo (child of Maria Luisa) and Ma. Corazon, herein after referred as Cecilia et. al wrote a letter to Ana Maria, Corporate Secretary of Phil-Ville, to send out notices for the holding of the annual stockholders' meeting. However, before Ana Maria could reply thereto, several letters were sent to Phil-Ville's stockholders containing a document captioned "Notice of Annual Stockholders' Meeting" signed by Cecilia and Ma. Corazon as directors.

Thereafter, Carolina, Ana Maria, and Angelica, comprising the majority of the Board of Directors of Phil-Ville held an emergency meeting and made a decision, by concensus, to postpone the annual stockholders' meeting of Phil-Ville until the issue of the distribution of the 3,140 shares of stocks in the name of certain stockholders is settled. Despite the postponement, however, Cecilia et al. proceeded with the scheduled annual stockholder's meeting participated only by a few stockholders.

In the said meeting, they elected the new members of the Board of Directors and officers of Phil-Ville namely: Cecilia, Ma. Corazon and Eumir, as Chairman/Vice President/Treasurer, President/General Manager, and Secretary, respectively.

ISSUE

Whether or not the meeting and the consequent election of officers and directors is void for lack of quorum.

RULING

Section 52 of the Corporation Code states that:

> Section 52. Quorum in meetings. — Unless otherwise provided for in this Code or in the by-laws, a quorum shall consist of the stockholders representing a majority of the outstanding capital stock or a majority of the members in the case of non-stock corporations.

While Section 137 of the same Code defines "outstanding capital stock," thus:

> Section 137. Outstanding capital stock defined. — The term "outstanding capital stock," as used in this Code, means the total shares of stock issued under binding subscription agreements to subscribers or stockholders, whether or not fully or partially paid, except treasury shares.

The right to vote is inherent in and incidental to the ownership of corporate stocks. It is settled that unissued stocks may not be voted or considered in determining whether a quorum is present in a stockholders' meeting. Only stocks actually issued and outstanding may be voted. Thus, for stock corporations, the quorum is based on the number of outstanding voting stocks. In this case, the presence of 100,001 shares of stocks in Phil-Ville is necessary.

The records of the case reveal that only 98,430 shares of stocks were present during the January 25, 2014 stockholders meeting at Max's Restaurant, therefore, no quorum had been established. There is no evidence that the 3,140 shares which allegedly had been transferred to the intended transferees recorded in the stocks and transfer book of Phil-Ville.

Section 63 of the Corporation Code states:

> "No transfer, however, shall be valid, except as between the parties, until the transfer is recorded in the books of the corporation showing the names of the parties to the transaction, the date of the transfer, the number of the certificate or certificates and the number of shares transferred."

The contention of Cecilia Que, et al., that they should not be faulted for their failure to present the stock and transfer book because the same is in the possession of the corporate secretary, Ana Maria Que Tan, who has an interest adverse from them, is devoid of merit. It is basic that a stockholder has the right to inspect the books of the corporation, and if the stockholder is refused by an officer of the corporation to inspect or examine the books of the corporation, the stockholder is not without any remedy. The Corporation Code grants the stockholder a remedy — to file a case in accordance with Section 144.

In this case, there is no evidence that the 3,140 shares of the late Geronima were recorded in the stocks and transfer book of Phil-Ville. Thus, insofar as Phil-Ville is concerned, the 3,140 shares of the late Geronima allegedly transferred to several persons is non-existent. Therefore, the transferees of the said shares cannot exercise the rights granted unto stockholders of a corporation, including the right to vote and to be voted upon.

H. Stockholders and Members

1. Rights of a Stockholder and Members

a. Doctrine of Equality of Shares

COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE, Petitioner -versus- THE COURT OF APPEALS, COURT OF TAX APPEALS and A. SORIANO CORP., Respondents
G.R. No. 108576, FIRST DIVISION, January 20, 1999, MARTINEZ, J.

A stock dividend representing the transfer of surplus to capital account shall not be subject to tax.
In this case, the exchange of shares, without more, produces no realized income to the subscriber. There is only a modification of the subscriber's rights and privileges — which is not a flow of wealth for tax purposes. The issue of taxable dividend may arise only once a subscriber disposes of his entire interest and not when there is still maintenance of proprietary interest.

FACTS

Sometime in the 1930s, Don Andres Soriano, a citizen and resident of the United States, formed the corporation "A. Soriano Y Cia", predecessor of ANSCOR, with a P1,000,000.00 capitalization divided into 10,000 common shares at a par value of P100/share. ANSCOR is wholly owned and controlled by the family of Don Andres, who are all non-resident aliens.

On December 30, 1964 Don Andres died. As of that date, the records revealed that he has a total shareholdings of 185,154 shares — 50,495 of which are original issues and the balance of 134.659 shares as stock dividend declarations. Correspondingly, one-half of that shareholdings or 92,577 [14] shares were transferred to his wife, Doña Carmen Soriano, as her conjugal share. The other half formed part of his estate.
On December 28, 1967, Doña Carmen requested a ruling from the United States Internal Revenue Service (IRS), inquiring if an exchange of common with preferred shares may be considered as a tax avoidance scheme under Section 367 of the 1954 U.S. Revenue Act.

In a letter-reply dated February 1968, the IRS opined that the exchange is only a recapitalization scheme and not tax avoidance. Consequently, on March 31, 1968 Doña Carmen exchanged her whole 138,864 common shares for 138,860 of the newly reclassified preferred shares. The estate of Don Andres in turn, exchanged 11,140 of its common shares, for the remaining 11,140 preferred shares, thus reducing its (the estate) common shares to 127,727.

On June 30, 1968, pursuant to a Board Resolution, ANSCOR redeemed 28,000 common shares from the Don Andres' estate. By November 1968, the Board further increased ANSCOR's capital stock to P75M divided into 150,000 preferred shares and 600,000 common shares. About a year later, ANSCOR again redeemed 80,000 common shares from the Don Andres' estate, further reducing the latter's common shareholdings to 19,727. As stated in the Board Resolutions, ANSCOR's business purpose for both redemptions of stocks is to partially retire said stocks as treasury shares in order to reduce the company's foreign exchange remittances in case cash dividends are declared.

In 1973, after examining ANSCOR's books of account and records, Revenue examiners issued a report proposing that ANSCOR be assessed for deficiency withholding tax-at-source, pursuant to Sections 53 and 54 of the 1939 Revenue Code, for the year 1968 and the second quarter of 1969 based on the transactions of exchange 31 and redemption of stocks. [31] The Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) made the corresponding assessments despite the claim of ANSCOR that it availed of the tax amnesty under Presidential Decree (P.D.) 23 which were amended by P.D.'s 67 and 157. However, petitioner ruled that the invoked decrees do not cover Sections 53 and 54 in relation to Article 83(b) of the 1939 Revenue Act under which ANSCOR was assessed. ANSCOR's subsequent protest on the assessments was denied in 1983 by petitioner.

Subsequently, ANSCOR filed a petition for review with the CTA assailing the tax assessments on the redemptions and exchange of stocks. In its decision, the Tax Court reversed petitioner's ruling, after finding sufficient evidence to overcome the prima facie correctness of the questioned assessments. In a petition for review the CA as mentioned, affirmed the ruling of the CTA.

Petitioner contends that the exchange transaction a tantamount to "cancellation" under Section 83(b) making the proceeds thereof taxable. It also argues that the Section applies to stock dividends which is the bulk of stocks that ANSCOR redeemed. Further, petitioner claims that under the "net effect test," the estate of Don Andres gained from the redemption. Accordingly, it was the duty of ANSCOR to withhold the tax-at-source arising from the two transactions, pursuant to Section 53 and 54 of the 1939 Revenue Act.

ANSCOR, however, avers that it has no duty to withhold any tax either from the Don Andres estate or from Doña Carmen based on the two transactions, because the same were done for legitimate business purposes which are (a) to reduce its foreign exchange remittances in the event the company would declare cash dividends, and to (b) subsequently "filipinized" ownership of ANSCOR, as allegedly, envisioned by Don Andres. It likewise invoked the amnesty provisions of P.D. 67.

ISSUE

Whether ANSCOR's redemption of stocks from its stockholder as well as the exchange of common with preferred shares can be considered as "essentially equivalent to the distribution of taxable dividend" making the proceeds thereof taxable under the provisions of the above-quoted law.

RULING

TAX ON STOCK DIVIDENDS

General Rule

Sec. 83(b) of the 1939 NIRC was taken from the Section 115(g)(1) of the U.S. Revenue Code of 1928. It laid down the general rule known as the proportionate test wherein stock dividends once issued form part of the capital and, thus, subject to income tax. Specifically, the general rule states that:

A stock dividend representing the transfer of surplus to capital account shall not be subject to tax. Having been derived from a foreign law, resort to the jurisprudence of its origin may shed light. Under the US Revenue Code, this provision originally referred to "stock dividends" only, without any exception. Stock dividends, strictly speaking, represent capital and do not constitute income to its recipient. So that the mere issuance thereof is not yet subject to income tax as they are nothing but an "enrichment through increase in value of capital investment." As capital, the stock dividends postpone the realization of profits because the "fund represented by the new stock has been transferred from surplus to capital and no longer available for actual distribution." Income in tax law is "an amount of money coming to a person within a specified time, whether as payment for services, interest, or profit from investment." It means cash or its equivalent. It is gain derived and severed from capital, from labor or from both combined — so that to tax a stock dividend would be to tax a capital increase rather than the income. In a loose sense, stock dividends issued by the corporation, are considered unrealized gain, and cannot be subjected to income tax until that gain has been realized. Before the realization, stock dividends are nothing but a representation of an interest in the corporate properties. As capital, it is not yet subject to income tax. It should be noted that capital and income are different. Capital is wealth or fund; whereas income is profit or gain or the flow of wealth. The determining factor for the imposition of income tax is whether any gain or profit was derived from a transaction.

The Exception

> However, if a corporation cancels or redeems stock issued as a dividend at such time and in such manner as to make the distribution and cancellation or redemption, in whole or in part, essentially equivalent to the distribution of a taxable dividend, the amount so distributed in redemption or cancellation of the stock shall be considered > as taxable income to the extent it represents a distribution of earnings or profits accumulated after March first, nineteen hundred and thirteen.

The exception was designed to prevent the issuance and cancellation or redemption of stock dividends, which is fundamentally not taxable, from being made use of as a device for the actual distribution of cash dividends, which is taxable.

> Although redemption and cancellation are generally considered capital transactions, as such. they are not subject to tax. However, it does not necessarily mean that a shareholder may not realize a taxable gain from such transactions.

The test of taxability under the exempting clause of Section 83(b) is, whether income was realized through the redemption of stock dividends. The redemption converts into money the stock dividends which become a realized profit or gain and consequently, the stockholder's separate property. Profits derived from the capital invested cannot escape income tax. As realized income, the proceeds of the redeemed stock dividends can be reached by income taxation regardless of the existence of any business purpose for the redemption. Otherwise, to rule that the said proceeds are exempt from income tax when the redemption is supported by legitimate business reasons would defeat the very purpose of imposing tax on income. Such argument would open the door for income earners not to pay tax so long as the person from whom the income was derived has legitimate business reasons. In other words, the payment of tax under the exempting clause of Section 83(b) would be made to depend not on the income of the taxpayer, but on the business purposes of a third party (the corporation herein) from whom the income was earned. This is absurd, illogical and impractical considering that the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) would be pestered with instances in determining the legitimacy of business reasons that every income earner may interposed. It is not administratively feasible and cannot therefore be allowed.

After considering the manner and the circumstances by which the issuance and redemption of stock dividends were made, there is no other conclusion but that the proceeds thereof are essentially considered equivalent to a distribution of taxable dividends. As "taxable dividend" under Section 83(b), it is part of the "entire income" subject to tax under Section 22 in relation to Section 21 of the 1939 Code. Moreover, under Section 29(a) of said Code, dividends are included in "gross income". As income, it is subject to income tax which is required to be withheld at source. The 1997 Tax Code may have altered the situation but it does not change this disposition.

EXCHANGE OF COMMON WITH PREFERRED SHARES

Exchange is an act of taking or giving one thing for another involving reciprocal transfer and is generally considered as a taxable transaction. The exchange of common stocks with preferred stocks, or preferred for common or a combination of either for both, may not produce a recognized gain or loss, so long as the provisions of Section 83(b) is not applicable. This is true in a trade between two (2) persons as well as a trade between a stockholder and a corporation. In general, this trade must be parts of merger, transfer to controlled corporation, corporate acquisitions or corporate reorganizations. No taxable gain or loss may be recognized on exchange of property, stock or securities related to reorganizations.

Both the Tax Court and the Court of Appeals found that ANSCOR reclassified its shares into common and preferred, and that parts of the common shares of the Don Andres estate and all of Doña Carmen's shares were exchanged for the whole 150.000 preferred shares. Thereafter, both the Don Andres estate and Doña Carmen remained as corporate subscribers except that their subscriptions now include preferred shares. There was no change in their proportional interest after the exchange. There was no cash flow. Both stocks had the same par value. Under the facts herein, any difference in their market value would be immaterial at the time of exchange because no income is yet realized — it was a mere corporate paper transaction. It would have been different, if the exchange transaction resulted into a flow of wealth, in which case income tax may be imposed.

Reclassification of shares does not always bring any substantial alteration in the subscriber's proportional interest. But the exchange is different — there would be a shifting of the balance of stock features, like priority in dividend declarations or absence of voting rights. Yet neither the reclassification nor exchange per se, yields realize income for tax purposes. A common stock represents the residual ownership interest in the corporation. It is a basic class of stock ordinarily and usually issued without extraordinary rights or privileges and entitles the shareholder to a pro rata division of profits. Preferred stocks are those which entitle the shareholder to some priority on dividends and asset distribution.

Both shares are part of the corporation's capital stock. Both stockholders are no different from ordinary investors who take on the same investment risks. Preferred and common shareholders participate in the same venture, willing to share in the profits and losses of the enterprise. Moreover, under the doctrine of equality of shares — all stocks issued by the corporation are presumed equal with the same privileges and liabilities, provided that the Articles of Incorporation is silent on such differences.

In this case, the exchange of shares, without more, produces no realized income to the subscriber. There is only a modification of the subscriber's rights and privileges — which is not a flow of wealth for tax purposes. The issue of taxable dividend may arise only once a subscriber disposes of his entire interest and not when there is still maintenance of proprietary interest.

2. Participation in Management

a. Proxy

GOVERNMENT SERVICE, INSURANCE SYSTEM, Petitioner
-versus- THE HON. COURT OF APPEALS, (8TH DIVISION), ANTHONY V. ROSETE, MANUEL M. LOPEZ, FELIPE B. ALFONSO, JESUS F. FRANCISCO, CHRISTIAN S. MONSOD, ELPIDIO L. IBAÑEZ, and FRANCIS GILES PUNO, Respondents
G.R. No. 183905, SECOND DIVISION, April 16, 2009, TINGA, J.

The fact that the jurisdiction of the regular courts under Section 5(c) is confined to the voting on election of officers, and not on all matters which may be voted upon by stockholders, elucidates that the power of the SEC to regulate proxies remains extant and could very well be exercised when stockholders vote on matters other than the election of directors.

FACTS

The annual stockholders' meeting (annual meeting) of the Manila Electric Company (Meralco) was scheduled on 27 May 2008. In connection with the annual meeting, proxies were required to be submitted on or before 17 May 2008, and the proxy validation was slated for five days later, or 22 May.

In view of the resignation of Camilo Quiason, the position of corporate secretary of Meralco became vacant. On 15 May 2008, the board of directors of Meralco designated Jose Vitug to act as corporate secretary for the annual meeting. However, when the proxy validation began on 22 May, the proceedings were presided over by respondent Anthony Rosete (Rosete), assistant corporate secretary and in-house chief legal counsel of Meralco. Private respondents nonetheless argue that Rosete was the acting corporate secretary of Meralco. Petitioner Government Service Insurance System (GSIS), a major shareholder in Meralco, was distressed over the proxy validation proceedings, and the resulting certification of proxies in favor of the Meralco management.

On 23 May 2008, GSIS filed a complaint with the Regional Trial Court (RTC) of Pasay City, docketed as R-PSY-08-05777-C4 seeking the declaration of certain proxies as invalid. Three days later, on 26 May, GSIS filed a Notice with the RTC manifesting the dismissal of the complaint. On the same day, GSIS filed an Urgent Petition13 with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) seeking to restrain Rosete from "recognizing, counting and tabulating, directly or indirectly, notionally or actually or in whatever way, form, manner or means, or otherwise honoring the shares covered by" the proxies in favor of respondents Manuel Lopez, Felipe Alfonso, Jesus Francisco, Oscar Lopez, Christian Monsod, Elpidio Ibañez, Francisco Giles-Puno "or any officer representing MERALCO Management," and to annul and declare invalid said proxies. GSIS also prayed for the issuance of a Cease and Desist Order (CDO) to restrain the use of said proxies during the annual meeting scheduled for the following day. A CDO to that effect signed by SEC Commissioner Jesus Martinez was issued on 26 May 2008, the same day the complaint was filed. During the annual meeting held on the following day, Rosete announced that the meeting would push through, expressing the opinion that the CDO is null and void.

Many developments involving the Court of Appeals' handling of CA-G.R. SP No. 103692 and the conduct of several of its individual justices are recounted in our Resolution dated 9 September 2008 in A.M. No. 08-8-11-CA (Re: Letter Of Presiding Justice Conrado M. Vasquez, Jr. On CA-G.R. SP No. 103692).26 On 23 July 2008, the Court of Appeals Eighth Division promulgated a decision in the case: The May 26, 2008 complaint filed by GSIS in the SEC is hereby barred from being considered.

The two remaining cases before us are docketed as G.R. No. 183905 and 184275. G.R. No. 183905 pertains to a petition for certiorari and prohibition filed by GSIS, against the Court of Appeals, and respondents Rosete, Lopez, Alfonso, Francisco, Monsod, Ibañez and Puno, all of whom serve in different corporate capacities with Meralco or First Philippines Holdings Corporation, a major stockholder of Meralco and an affiliate of the Lopez Group of Companies. This petition seeks of the Court to declare the 23 July 2008 decision of the Court of Appeals null and void, affirm the SEC's jurisdiction over the petition filed before it by GSIS, and pronounce that the CDO and the SCO orders are valid. This petition was filed in behalf of GSIS by the "GSIS Law Office;" it was signed by the Chief Legal Counsel and Assistant Legal Counsel of GSIS, and three self-identified "Attorney[s]," presumably holding lawyer positions in GSIS. The OSG also filed the other petition, docketed as G.R. No. 184275. It identifies as its petitioners the SEC, Commissioner Martinez in his capacity as OIC of the SEC, and Hubert Guevarra in his capacity as Director of the Compliance and Enforcement Department of the SEC – the same petitioners in the aborted petition for review initially docketed as G.R. No. 183933. Unlike what was adverted to in the motion for extension filed by the same petitioners in G.R. No. 183933, the petition in G.R. No. 184275 is one for certiorari under Rule 65 as indicated on page 3 thereof, and not a petition for review. Interestingly, save for the first page which leaves the docket number blank, all 86 pages of this petition for certiorari carry a header wrongly identifying the pleading as the non-existent petition for review under G.R. No. 183933. This petition seeks the "reversal" of the assailed decision of the Court of Appeals, the recognition of the jurisdiction of the SEC over the petition of GSIS, and the affirmation of the CDO and SCO.

On 23 May 2008, GSIS filed a complaint with the Regional Trial Court (RTC) of Pasay City, docketed as R-PSY-08-05777-C4 seeking the declaration of certain proxies as invalid. Three days later, on 26 May, GSIS filed a Notice with the RTC manifesting the dismissal of the complaint. On the same day, GSIS filed an Urgent Petition with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) seeking to restrain Rosete from "recognizing, counting and tabulating, directly or indirectly, notionally or actually or in whatever way, form, manner or means, or otherwise honoring the shares covered by" the proxies in favor of respondents.

ISSUES

1. Whether the petitioner abused his discretion in nullifying the deeds of sale and in proceeding with the expropriation proceeding, that question is eclipsed by the concern of whether Judge Pedro T. Santiago may file this petition at all.
2. Whether private respondents are correct that the petition filed by the SEC in G.R. No. 184275 should be expunged
3. Whether the SEC has jurisdiction over the petition filed by GSIS. To recall, SEC has sought to enjoin the use and annul the validation, of the proxies issued in favor of several of the private respondents, particularly in connection with the annual meeting.

RULING

The May 26, 2008 complaint filed by GSIS in the SEC is hereby barred from being considered, out of equitable considerations, as an election contest in the RTC, because the prescriptive period of 15 days from the May 27, 2008 Meralco election to file an election contest in the RTC had already run its course, pursuant to Sec. 3, Rule 6 of the interim Rules of Procedure Governing Intra-Corporate Controversies under R.A. No. 8799, due to deliberate act of GSIS in filing a complaint in the SEC instead of the RTC.

With respect to the second issue, petitioners are not real parties-in-interest to the dispute and thus bereft of capacity to file the petition. By way of simple illustration, to argue otherwise is to say that the trial court judge, the National Labor Relations Commission, or any quasi-judicial agency has the right to seek the review of an appellate court decision reversing any of their rulings. That prospect, as any serious student of remedial law knows, is zero.

The Court, through the Resolution of the Third Division dated 2 September 2008, had resolved to treat the petition in G.R. No. 184275 as a petition for review on certiorari, but withheld giving due course to it. Under Section 1 of Rule 45, which governs appeals by certiorari, the right to file the appeal is restricted to "a party," meaning that only the real parties-in-interest who litigated the petition for certiorari before the Court of Appeals are entitled to appeal the same under Rule 45. The SEC and its two officers may have been designated as respondents in the petition for certiorari filed with the Court of Appeals, but under Section 5 of Rule 65 they are not entitled to be classified as real parties-in-interest. Under the provision, the judge, court, quasi-judicial agency, tribunal, corporation, board, officer or person to whom grave abuse of discretion is imputed (the SEC and its two officers in this case) are denominated only as public respondents. Rule 65 does recognize that the SEC and its officers should have been designated as public respondents in the petition for certiorari filed with the Court of Appeals. Yet their involvement in the instant petition is not as original party-litigants, but as the quasi-judicial agency and officers exercising the adjudicative functions over the dispute between the two contending factions within Meralco. From the onset, neither the SEC nor Martinez or Guevarra has been considered as a real party-in-interest.

Under Section 20.1, the solicitation of proxies must be in accordance with rules and regulations issued by the SEC, such as AIRR-SRC Rule 4. And by virtue of Section 53.1, the SEC has the discretion "to make such investigations as it deems necessary to determine whether any person has violated" any rule issued by it, such as AIRR-SRC Rule 4. The investigatory power of the SEC established by Section 53.1 is central to its regulatory authority, most crucial to the public interest especially as it may pertain to corporations with publicly traded shares. For that reason, we are not keen on pursuing private respondents' insistence that the GSIS complaint be viewed as rooted in an intra-corporate controversy solely within the jurisdiction of the trial courts to decide. It is possible that an intra-corporate controversy may animate a disgruntled shareholder to complain to the SEC a corporation's violations of SEC rules and regulations, but that motive alone should not be sufficient to deprive the SEC of its investigatory and regulatory powers, especially so since such powers are exercisable on a motu proprio basis.

At the same time, Meralco raises the substantial point that nothing in the SRC empowers the SEC to annul or invalidate improper proxies issued in contravention of Section 20. It cites that the penalties defined by the SEC itself for violation of Section 20 or AIRR-SRC Rule 20 are limited to a reprimand/warning for the first offense, and pecuniary fines for succeeding offenses. Indeed, if the SEC does not have the power to invalidate proxies solicited in violation of its promulgated rules, serious questions may be raised whether it has the power to adjudicate claims of violation in the first place, since the relief it may extend does not directly redress the cause of action of the complainant seeking the exclusion of the proxies.

As promulgated then, the provision would confer on the SEC the power to adjudicate controversies relating not only to proxy solicitation, but also to proxy validation. Should the proposition hold true up to the present, the position of GSIS would have merit, especially since Section 6 of Presidential Decree No. 902-A was not expressly repealed or abrogated by the SRC.

Yet a closer reading of the provision indicates that such power of the SEC then was incidental or ancillary to the "exercise of such jurisdiction." Note that Section 6 is immediately preceded by Section 5, which originally conferred on the SEC "original and exclusive jurisdiction to hear and decide cases" involving "controversies in the election or appointments of directors, trustees, officers or managers of such corporations, partnerships or associations."

The cases referred to in Section 5 were transferred from the jurisdiction of the SEC to the regular courts with the passage of the SRC, specifically Section 5.2. Thus, the SEC's power to pass upon the validity of proxies in relation to election controversies has effectively been withdrawn, tied as it is to its abrogated jurisdictional powers. Based on the foregoing, it is evident that the linchpin in deciding the question is whether or not the cause of action of GSIS before the SEC is intimately tied to an election controversy, as defined under Section 5(c) of Presidential Decree No. 902-A. To answer that, we need to properly ascertain the scope of the power of trial courts to resolve controversies in corporate elections.

The conferment of original and exclusive jurisdiction on the regular courts over such controversies in the election of corporate directors must be seen as intended to confine to one body the adjudication of all related claims and controversy arising from the election of such directors. For that reason, the aforequoted Section 2, Rule 6 of the Interim Rules broadly defines the term "election contest" as encompassing all plausible incidents arising from the election of corporate directors, including: (1) any controversy or dispute involving title or claim to any elective office in a stock or nonstock corporation, (2) the validation of proxies, (3) the manner and validity of elections and (4) the qualifications of candidates, including the proclamation of winners. If all matters anteceding the holding of such election which affect its manner and conduct, such as the proxy solicitation process, are deemed within the original and exclusive jurisdiction of the SEC, then the prospect of overlapping and competing jurisdictions between that body and the regular courts becomes frighteningly real. From the language of Section 5(c) of Presidential Decree No. 902-A, it is indubitable that controversies as to the qualification of voting shares, or the validity of votes cast in favor of a candidate for election to the board of directors are properly cognizable and adjudicable by the regular courts exercising original and exclusive jurisdiction over election cases. Questions relating to the proper solicitation of proxies used in such election are indisputably related to such issues, yet if the position of GSIS were to be upheld, they would be resolved by the SEC and not the regular courts, even if they fall within "controversies in the election" of directors.

Unlike either Section 20.1 or Section 53.1, which merely alludes to the rule-making or investigatory power of the SEC, Section 5 of Pres. Decree No. 902-A sets forth a definitive rule on jurisdiction, expressly granting as it does "original and exclusive jurisdiction" first to the SEC, and now to the regular courts. The fact that the jurisdiction of the regular courts under Section 5(c) is confined to the voting on election of officers, and not on all matters which may be voted upon by stockholders, elucidates that the power of the SEC to regulate proxies remains extant and could very well be exercised when stockholders vote on matters other than the election of directors.

That the proxy challenge raised by GSIS relates to the election of the directors of Meralco is undisputed. The controversy was engendered by the looming annual meeting, during which the stockholders of Meralco were to elect the directors of the corporation. The lack of jurisdiction of the SEC over the subject matter of GSIS's petition necessarily invalidates the CDO and SDO issued by that body. However, especially with respect to the CDO, there is need for this Court to squarely rule on the question pertaining to its validity, if only for jurisprudential value and for the guidance of the SEC.

To recount the facts surrounding the issuance of the CDO, GSIS filed its petition with the SEC on 26 May 2008. The CDO, six (6) pages in all with three (3) pages devoted to the tenability of granting the injunctive relief, was issued on the very same day, 26 May 2008, without notice or hearing. The CDO bore the signature of Commissioner Jesus Martinez, identified therein as "Officer-in-Charge," and nobody else's.

b. Voting Trust

RAMON C. LEE and ANTONIO DM. LACDAO, Petitioners -versus- THE HON. COURT OF APPEALS, SACOBA MANUFACTURING CORP., PABLO GONZALES, JR. and THOMAS GONZALES, Respondents

GR No. 93695, THRID DIVISION, February 4, 1992, GUTIERREZ, Jr., J.

Under the 1980 Corporation Code, in order to be eligible as a director, what is material is the legal title to, not beneficial ownership of, the stock as appearing on the books of the corporation.

Thus, Lee and Lacdao, by virtue of VTA disposed of all their shares through assignment and delivery in favor of the DBP, as trustee. Consequently, Lee and Lacdao ceased to own at least one share standing in their names on the books of ALFA as required under Section 23 of the 1980 Corporation Code. They also ceased to have anything to do with the management of the enterprise. The petitioners ceased to be directors. Hence, the transfer of the Lee and Lacdao's shares to the DBP created vacancies in their respective positions as directors of ALFA.

FACTS

A complaint for a sum of money was filed by the International Corporate Bank, Inc. against Sacoba Manufacturing Corporation (Sacoba), Pablo Gonzales and Thomas Gonzales (the Gonzalezes) who, in turn, filed a third-party complaint against Alfa Integrated Textile Mills (ALFA) and Ramon Lee (Lee) and Antonio Lacdao (Lacdao). Lee and Lacdao sent a letter to the RTC, claiming the summons for ALFA was erroneously served upon them considering that the management of ALFA had been transferred to the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP), through a Voting Trust Agreement (VTA). The RTC issued an order requiring the issuance of an alias summons upon ALFA through the DBP. In a manifestation, DBP claimed that it was not authorized to receive summons on behalf of ALFA since the DBP had not taken over the company which has a separate and distinct corporate personality and existence. Sacoba and the Gonzalezes filed a Manifestation and Motion for the Declaration of Proper Service of Summons on ALFA through Lee and Lacdao, the president and vice-president, which the trial court granted.

In a Motion for Reconsideration, Lee and Lacdao maintain that with the execution of the VTA between them and the other stockholders of ALFA, as one party, and the DBP, as the other party, the former assigned and transferred all their shares in ALFA to DBP, as trustee. They argue that by virtue to of the VTA, Lee and Lacdao, can no longer be considered directors of ALFA. They ceased to be president and vice-president of ALFA. Sacoba and the Gonzalezes insist that the VTA between ALFA and the DBP had all the more safeguarded Lee and Lacdao's continuance as officers and directors of ALFA inasmuch as the general object of voting trust is to insure permanency of the tenure of the directors of a corporation.

Initially, The RTC upheld the validity of the service of summons on ALFA through the Lee and Lacdao. However, upon filing of a second motion for reconsideration by Lee and Lacdao, the RTC reversed itself and declared that service upon Lee and Lacdao, who were no longer corporate officers of ALFA, cannot be considered as proper service of summons on ALFA. The CA reversed the RTC Order. Hence, the present petition.

ISSUE

1. Whether the change in the stockholder's status (only holding an equitable title) deprives such stockholder of the right to qualify as a director.

2. Whether there was proper service of summons on ALFA through Lee and Lacdao.

RULING

1. YES. The execution of a VTA may create a dichotomy between the equitable or beneficial ownership of the corporate shares of a stockholders, on the one hand, and the legal title thereto on the other hand. Under the 1906 Corporation Code, the eligibility of a director cannot be adversely affected by the simple act of such director being a party to a VTA inasmuch as he remains owner (although beneficial or equitable only) of the shares subject of the VTA pursuant to which a transfer of the stockholder's shares in favor of the trustee is required. No disqualification arises by virtue of the phrase "in his own right" provided under the 1906 Corporation Code. With the omission of the phrase "in his own right" in the 1980 Corporation Code, the election of trustees and other persons who are not beneficial owners of the shares registered in their names on the books of the corporation becomes formally legalized. Hence, this is a clear indication that, under the 1980 Corporation Code, in order to be eligible as a director, what is material is the legal title to, not beneficial ownership of, the stock as appearing on the books of the corporation.

Thus, Lee and Lacdao, by virtue of VTA disposed of all their shares through assignment and delivery in favor of the DBP, as trustee. Consequently, Lee and Lacdao ceased to own at least one share standing in their names on the books of ALFA as required under Section 23 of the 1980 Corporation Code. They also ceased to have anything to do with the management of the enterprise. The petitioners ceased to be directors. Hence, the transfer of the Lee and Lacdao's shares to the DBP created vacancies in their respective positions as directors of ALFA. Considering that the VTA between ALFA and the DBP transferred legal ownership of the stock covered by the agreement to the DBP as trustee, the latter became the stockholder of record with respect to the said shares of stocks. In the absence of a showing that the DBP had caused to be transferred in their names one share of stock for the purpose of qualifying as directors of ALFA, Lee and Lacdao can no longer be deemed to have retained their status as officers of ALFA which was the case before the execution of the subject VTA. There appears to be no dispute from the records that DBP has taken over full control and management of the firm.

2. NO. Under the Rules of Court, if the defendant is a corporation organized under the laws of the Philippines or a partnership duly registered, service may be made on the president, manager, secretary, cashier, agent or any of its directors. Lee and Lacdao do not fall under any of the enumerated officers. The service of summons upon ALFA, through Lee and Lacdao is not valid.

3. Proprietary Rights

a. Right of Appraisal

PHILIP TURNER and ELNORA TURNER, Petitioners -versus- LORENZO SHIPPING CORPORATION, Respondent

GR No. 157479, THIRD DIVISION, November 24, 2010, BERSAMIN, J.

A stockholder who dissents from certain corporate actions has the right to demand payment of the fair value of his or her shares. This right, known as the right of appraisal, is expressly recognized in Section 81 of the Corporation Code.

The right of appraisal may be exercised when there is a fundamental change in the charter or articles of incorporation substantially prejudicing the rights of the stockholders. It does not vest unless objectionable corporate action is taken. It serves the purpose of enabling the dissenting stockholder to have his interests purchased and to retire from the corporation.

Notwithstanding, no payment shall be made to any dissenting stockholder unless the corporation has unrestricted retained earnings in its books to cover the payment. In case the corporation has no available unrestricted retained earnings in its books, Section 83 of the Corporation Code provides that if the dissenting stockholder is not paid the value of his shares within 30 days after the award, his voting and dividend rights shall immediately be restored.

FACTS

This case concerns the right of dissenting stockholders to demand payment of the value of their shareholdings.

The petitioners held 1,010,000 shares of stock of the respondent, a domestic corporation engaged primarily in cargo shipping activities. In June 1999, the respondent decided to amend its articles of incorporation to remove the stockholders' pre-emptive rights to newly issued shares of stock. Feeling that the corporate move would be prejudicial to their interest as stockholders, the petitioners voted against the amendment and demanded payment of their shares at the rate of ₱2.276/share based on the book value of the shares, or a total of ₱2,298,760.00.

The respondent found the fair value of the shares demanded by the petitioners unacceptable. It insisted that the market value on the date before the action to remove the pre-emptive right was taken should be the value, or ₱0.41/share (or a total of ₱414,100.00), considering that its shares were listed in the Philippine Stock Exchange, and that the payment could be made only if the respondent had unrestricted retained earnings in its books to cover the value of the shares, which was not thecase.

The disagreement on the valuation of the shares led the parties to constitute an appraisal committee pursuant to Section 82 of the Corporation Code. On October 27, 2000, the appraisal committee reported its valuation of ₱2.54/share, for an aggregate value of ₱2,565,400.00 for the petitioners. Subsequently, the petitioners demanded payment based on the valuation of the appraisal committee, plus 2%/month penalty from the date of their original demand for payment, as well as the reimbursement of the amounts advanced as professional fees to the appraisers.

In its letter to the petitioners dated January 2, 2001, the respondent refused the petitioners' demand, explaining that pursuant to the Corporation Code, the dissenting stockholders exercising their appraisal rights could be paid only when the corporation had unrestricted retained earnings to cover the fair value of the shares, but that it had no retained earnings at the time of the petitioners' demand, as borne out by its Financial Statements for Fiscal Year 1999 showing a deficit of ₱72,973,114.00 as of December 31, 1999.

In the stockholders' suit to recover the value of their shareholdings from the corporation, the Regional Trial Court (RTC) upheld the dissenting stockholders, herein petitioners, and ordered the corporation, herein respondent, to pay. Execution was partially carried out against the respondent. On the respondent's petition for certiorari, however, the Court of Appeals (CA) corrected the RTC and dismissed the petitioners' suit on the ground that their cause of action for collection had not yet accrued due to the lack of unrestricted retained earnings in the books of the respondent.

The petitioners now come to the Court for a review on certiorari of the CA's decision

ISSUES

1. Whether the dissenting stockholders (petitioners) can recover the value of their shareholdings despite inexistence of URE at the time of demand. (NO)

RULING

1. Stockholder's Right of Appraisal, In General

A stockholder who dissents from certain corporate actions has the right to demand payment of the fair value of his or her shares. This right, known as the right of appraisal, is expressly recognized in Section 81 of the Corporation Code.

The right of appraisal may be exercised when there is a fundamental change in the charter or articles of incorporation substantially prejudicing the rights of the stockholders. It does not vest unless objectionable corporate action is taken. It serves the purpose of enabling the dissenting stockholder to have his interests purchased and to retire from the corporation.

Notwithstanding, no payment shall be made to any dissenting stockholder unless the corporation has unrestricted retained earnings in its books to cover the payment. In case the corporation has no available unrestricted retained earnings in its books, Section 83 of the Corporation Code provides that if the dissenting stockholder is not paid the value of his shares within 30 days after the award, his voting and dividend rights shall immediately be restored.

The trust fund doctrine backstops the requirement of unrestricted retained earnings to fund the payment of the shares of stocks of the withdrawing stockholders. Under the doctrine, the capital stock, property, and other assets of a corporation are regarded as equity in trust for the payment of corporate creditors, who are preferred in the distribution of corporate assets. The creditors of a corporation have the right to assume that the board of directors will not use the assets of the corporation to purchase its own stock for as long as the corporation has outstanding debts and liabilities. There can be no distribution of assets among the stockholders without first paying corporate debts. Thus, any disposition of corporate funds and assets to the prejudice of creditors is null and void.

B. Petitioners' cause of action was premature

That the respondent had indisputably no unrestricted retained earnings in its books at the time the petitioners commenced the action for collection and damages (Civil Case No. 01-086) proved that the respondent's legal obligation to pay the value of the petitioners' shares did not yet arise. The RTC concluded that the respondent's obligation to pay had accrued by its having the unrestricted retained earnings after the making of the demand by the petitioners. It based its conclusion on the fact that the Corporation Code did not provide that the unrestricted retained earnings must already exist at the time of the demand. The RTC's construal of the Corporation Code was unsustainable, because it did not take into account the petitioners' lack of a cause of action against the respondent. In order to give rise to any obligation to pay on the part of the respondent, the petitioners should first make a valid demand that the respondent refused to pay despite having unrestricted retained earnings. Otherwise, the respondent could not be said to be guilty of any actionable omission that could sustain their action to collect.

Neither did the subsequent existence of unrestricted retained earnings of the respondent which is more than sufficient to cure the petitioner's claim cure the lack of cause of action. The petitioners' right of action could only spring from an existing cause of action. Verily, a premature invocation of the court's intervention renders the complaint without a cause of action and dismissible on such ground. In short, Civil Case No. 01-086, being a groundless suit, should be dismissed.

b. Right to Inspect

JOHN GOKONGWEI, JR., Petitioner -versus- SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, ANDRES M. SORIANO, JOSE M. SORIANO, ENRIQUE ZOBEL, ANTONIO ROXAS, EMETERIO BUNAO, WALTHRODE B. CONDE, MIGUEL ORTIGAS, ANTONIO PRIETO, SAN MIGUEL CORPORATION, EMIGDIO TANJUATCO, SR., and EDUARDO R. VISAYA, Respondents GR. No. L-45911, EN BANC, April 11, 1979, ANTONIO, J.

In the absence of any legal prohibition or overriding public policy, wide latitude may be accorded to the corporation in adopting measures to protect legitimate corporation interests. Thus, "where the reasonableness of a by-law is a mere matter of judgment, and upon which reasonable minds must necessarily differ, a court would not be warranted in substituting its judgment instead of the judgment of those who are authorized to make by-laws and who have expressed their authority.

FACTS

On October 22, 1976, Gokongwei, as stockholder of San Miguel Corporation, filed with the SEC a petition for "declaration of nullity of amended by-laws, cancellation of certificate of filing of amended by- laws, injunction and damages with prayer for a preliminary injunction" against the majority of the members of the Board of Directors and San Miguel Corporation as an unwilling petitioner.

Gokongwei alleged that respondents amended its bylaws unlawfully. Prior to the questioned amendment, petitioner had all the qualifications to be a director of respondent corporation, and that in amending the by-laws, respondents purposely provided for petitioner's disqualification and deprived him of his vested right as afore-mentioned hence the amended by-laws are null and void. It was alleged that corporations have no inherent power to disqualify a stockholder from being elected as a director and, therefore, the questioned act is ultra vires and void; that the Board has the prerogative of determining whether they are engaged in competitive or antagonistic business; that the Board may consider such factors as business and family relationship, is unreasonable and oppressive and, therefore, void; and that the portion of the amended by-laws which requires that "all nominations for election of directors ... shall be submitted in writing to the Board of Directors at least five (5) working days before the date of the Annual Meeting" is likewise unreasonable and oppressive. It was, therefore, prayed that the amended by-laws be declared null and void and the certificate of filing thereof be cancelled, and that individual respondents be made to pay damages, in specified amounts, to petitioner.

Respondents filed their opposition to the petition, stating that petitioner who is president and controlling shareholder of Robina and CFC was rejected by the stockholders in his bid to secure a seat in the Board of Directors on the basic issue that petitioner was engaged in a competitive business and his securing a seat would have subjected respondent corporation to grave disadvantages; that "petitioner nevertheless vowed to secure a seat in the Board of Directors at the next annual meeting; that thereafter the Board of Directors amended the by-laws as afore-stated. Petitioner filed with SEC a Manifestation stating that he intended to run for the position of director of respondent corporation Respondents filed a Manifestation disqualifying and precluding petitioner from being a candidate for director unless he could submit evidence on that he does not come within the disqualifications specified in the amendment to the by-laws.

By reason thereof, petitioner filed a manifestation and motion to resolve pending incidents in the case and to issue a writ of injunction, alleging that private respondents were seeking to nullify and render ineffectual the exercise of jurisdiction by the SEC, to petitioner's irreparable damage and prejudice, Allegedly despite a subsequent Manifestation to prod respondent Commission to act, petitioner was not heard prior to the date of the stockholders' meeting. Petitioner alleges that there appears a deliberate and concerted inability on the part of the SEC to act hence petitioner came to this Court.

Respondent SEC, Andres M. Soriano, Jr. and Jose M. Soriano filed their comment, alleging that the petition is without merit for the following reasons: (1) the interest he represents are engaged in business competitive and antagonistic to that of respondent San Miguel Corporation, it appearing that the owns and controls a greater portion of his SMC stock thru the Universal Robina Corporation and the Consolidated Foods Corporation, which corporations are engaged in business directly and substantially competing with the allied businesses of respondent SMC and of corporations in which SMC has substantial investments. (2) that the amended by law were adopted to preserve and protect respondent SMC from the clear and present danger that business competitors, if allowed to become directors, will illegally and unfairly utilize their direct access to its business secrets and plans for their own private gain to the irreparable prejudice of respondent SMC, and, ultimately, its stockholders. Further, it is asserted that membership of a competitor in the Board of Directors is a blatant disregard of no less that the Constitution and pertinent laws against combinations in restraint of trade; (3) that by laws are valid and binding since a corporation has the inherent right and duty to preserve and protect itself by excluding competitors and antogonistic parties, under the law of selfpreservation, and it should be allowed a wide latitude in the selection of means to preserve itself.

ISSUE

Whether or not the amended by-laws of SMC of disqualifying a competitor from nomination or election to the Board of Directors of SMC are valid and reasonable.

RULING

YES. In this jurisdiction, under section 21 of the Corporation Law, a corporation may prescribe in its by-laws "the qualifications, duties and compensation of directors, officers and employees ... " This must necessarily refer to a qualification in addition to that specified by section 30 of the Corporation

Law, which provides that "every director must own in his right at least one share of the capital stock of the stock corporation of which he is a director ... " In Government v. El Hogar, the Court sustained the validity of a provision in the corporate by-law requiring that persons elected to the Board of Directors must be holders of shares of the paid up value of P5,000.00, which shall be held as security for their action, on the ground that section 21 of the Corporation Law expressly gives the power to the corporation to provide in its by-laws for the qualifications of directors and is "highly prudent and in conformity with good practice. "

NO VESTED RIGHT OF STOCKHOLDER TO BE ELECTED DIRECTOR Any person "who buys stock in a corporation does so with the knowledge that its affairs are dominated by a majority of the stockholders and that he impliedly contracts that the will of the majority shall govern in all matters within the limits of the act of incorporation and lawfully enacted by-laws and not forbidden by law." To this extent, therefore, the stockholder may be considered to have "parted with his personal right or privilege to regulate the disposition of his property which he has invested in the capital stock of the corporation, and surrendered it to the will of the majority of his fellow incorporators. It cannot therefore be justly said that the contract, express or implied, between the corporation and the stockholders is infringed by any act of the former which is authorized by a majority.

A DIRECTOR STANDS IN A FIDUCIARY RELATION TO THE CORPORATION AND ITS SHAREHOLDERS Although in the strict and technical sense, directors of a private corporation are not regarded as trustees, there cannot be any doubt that their character is that of a fiduciary insofar as the corporation and the stockholders as a body are concerned. As agents entrusted with the management of the corporation for the collective benefit of the stockholders, "they occupy a fiduciary relation, and in this sense the relation is one of trust." The doctrine of "corporate opportunity" is precisely a recognition by the courts that the fiduciary standards could not be upheld where the fiduciary was acting for two entities with competing interests. This doctrine rests fundamentally on the unfairness, in particular circumstances, of an officer or director taking advantage of an opportunity for his own personal profit when the interest of the corporation justly calls for protection. It is not denied that a member of the Board of Directors of the San Miguel Corporation has access to sensitive and highly confidential information, such as: (a) marketing strategies and pricing structure; (b) budget for expansion and diversification; (c) research and development; and (d) sources of funding, availability of personnel, proposals of mergers or tie-ups with other firms. It is obviously to prevent the creation of an opportunity for an officer or director of San Miguel Corporation, who is also the officer or owner of a competing corporation, from taking advantage of the information which he acquires as director to promote his individual or corporate interests to the prejudice of San Miguel Corporation and its stockholders, that the questioned amendment of the by-laws was made.

Indeed, access by a competitor to confidential information regarding marketing strategies and pricing policies of San Miguel Corporation would subject the latter to a competitive disadvantage and unjustly enrich the competitor, for advance knowledge by the competitor of the strategies for the development of existing or new markets of existing or new products could enable said competitor to utilize such knowledge to his advantage. There is another important consideration in determining whether or not the amended by-laws are reasonable. The Constitution and the law prohibit combinations in restraint of trade or unfair competition. Thus, section 2 of Article XIV of the Constitution provides: "The State shall regulate or prohibit private monopolies when the public interest so requires. No combinations in restraint of trade or unfair competition shall be snowed."

A "monopoly" embraces any combination the tendency of which is to prevent competition in the broad and general sense, or to control prices to the detriment of the public. The material consideration in determining its existence is not that prices are raised and competition actually excluded, but that power exists to raise prices or exclude competition when desired. From the foregoing definitions, it is apparent that the contentions of petitioner are not in accord with reality. The election of petitioner to the Board of respondent Corporation can bring about an illegal situation. Obviously, if a competitor has access to the pricing policy and cost conditions of the products of San Miguel Corporation, the essence of competition in a free market for the purpose of serving the lowest priced goods to the consuming public would be frustrated, The competitor could so manipulate the prices of his products or vary its marketing strategies by region or by brand in order to get the most out of the consumers. Where the two competing firms control a substantial segment of the market this could lead to collusion and combination in restraint of trade. As respondent SMC aptly observes, knowledge by CFC-Robina of SMC's costs in various industries and regions in the country win enable the former to practice price discrimination. CFC-Robina can segment the entire consuming population by geographical areas or income groups and change varying prices in order to maximize profits from every market segment. CFC-Robina could determine the most profitable volume at which it could produce for every product line in which it competes with SMC. Access to SMC pricing policy by CFC-Robina would in effect destroy free competition and deprive the consuming public of opportunity to buy goods of the highest possible quality at the lowest prices.

Neither are we persuaded by the claim that the by-law was intended to prevent the candidacy of petitioner for election to the Board. If the by-law were to be applied in the case of one stockholder but waived in the case of another, then it could be reasonably claimed that the by-law was being applied in a discriminatory manner. However, the by law, by its terms, applies to all stockholders. The equal protection clause of the Constitution requires only that the by-law operate equally upon all persons of a class. Besides, before petitioner can be declared ineligible to run for director, there must be hearing and evidence must be submitted to bring his case within the ambit of the disqualification. Sound principles of public policy and management, therefore, support the view that a by-law which disqualifies a competition from election to the Board of Directors of another corporation is valid and reasonable.

In the absence of any legal prohibition or overriding public policy, wide latitude may be accorded to the corporation in adopting measures to protect legitimate corporation interests. Thus, "where the reasonableness of a by-law is a mere matter of judgment, and upon which reasonable minds must necessarily differ, a court would not be warranted in substituting its judgment instead of the judgment of those who are authorized to make by-laws and who have expressed their authority.

RAMON A. GONZALES, Petitioner -versus- THE PHILIPPINE NATIONAL BANK, Respondent
G.R. No. L-33320, FIRST DIVISION, May 30, 1983, VASQUEZ, J.

The unqualified provision on the right of inspection previously contained in Section 51, Act No. 1459 no longer holds true. The argument of the petitioner that the right granted to him under Section 51 of the former Corporation Law should not be dependent on the propriety of his motive or purpose in asking for the inspection of the books of the respondent bank loses whatever validity it might have had before the amendment of the law

FACTS

The petitioner instituted several cases questioning different transactions entered into by the Bark with other parties. First among them is Civil Case No. 69345 filed by petitioner as a taxpayer versus Sec. Antonio Raquiza of Public Works and Communications, the Commissioner of Public Highways, the Bank, Continental Ore Phil., Inc., Continental Ore, Huber Corporation, Allis Chalmers and General Motors Corporation. In the course of the hearing of said case, the personality of herein petitioner to sue the bank and question the letters of credit it has extended for the importation by the Republic of the Philippines of public works equipment intended for the massive development program of the President was raised. In view thereof, he expressed and made known his intention to acquire one share of stock from Congressman Justiniano Montano which was transferred in his name in the books of the Bank

Subsequent to his acquisition of one share of stock of the Bank, petitioner, in his dual capacity as a taxpayer and stockholder, filed the following cases involving the bank or the members of its Board of Directors to wit:

l. Civil Case No. 71044 vs the Board of Directors of the Bank; the National Investment and Development Corp., Marubeni Iida Co., Ltd., and Agro-Inc. Dev. Co. or Saravia;
2. Civil Case No. 72936 vs Roberto Benedicto and other Directors of the Bank, Passi (Iloilo) Sugar Central, Inc., Calinog-Lambunao Sugar Mill Integrated Farming, Inc., Talog sugar Milling Co., Inc., Safary Central, Inc., and Batangas Sugar Central Inc.;
3. Civil Case No. 76427 vs Alfredo Montelibano and the Directors of both the PNB and DBP;

However, petitioner addressed a letter to the President of the Bank, requesting submission to look into the records of its transactions covering the purchase of a sugar central by the Southern Negros Development Corp. to be financed by Japanese suppliers and financiers; its financing of the Cebu-Mactan Bridge to be constructed by V.C. Ponce, Inc. and the construction of the Passi Sugar Mills in Iloilo. The Asst. Vice-President and Legal Counsel of the Bank answered petitioner's letter denying his request for being not germane to his interest as a one-share stockholder and for the cloud of doubt as to his real intention and purpose in acquiring said share. In view of the Bank's refusal, the petitioner instituted an action.

The court a quo denied the prayer of the petitioner that he be allowed to examine and inspect the books and records of the respondent bank regarding the transactions mentioned on the grounds that the right of a stockholder to inspect the record of the business transactions of a corporation granted under Section 51 of the former Corporation Law (Act No. 1459, as amended) is not absolute, but is limited to purposes reasonably related to the interest of the stockholder, must be asked for in good faith for a specific and honest purpose and not gratify curiosity or for speculative or vicious purposes; that such examination would violate the confidentiality of the records of the respondent bank as provided in Section 16 of its charter, Republic Act No. 1300, as amended; and that the petitioner has not exhausted his administrative remedies.

ISSUE

Whether the alleged improper motive of the petitioner in asking for an examination of the books and records of the respondent bank disqualifies him to exercise the right of a stockholder to such inspection.

RULING

Yes. Under Section 51 of Act No. 1459, as amended "... the record of all business transactions of the corporation and the minutes of any meeting shall be open to the inspection of any director, member or stockholder of the corporation at reasonable hours."

Petitioner maintains that the provision does not justify the qualification made by the lower court that the inspection of corporate records may be denied on the ground that it is intended for an improper motive or purpose, the law having granted such right to a stockholder in clear and unconditional terms. He further argues that, assuming that a proper motive or purpose for the desired examination is necessary for its exercise, there is nothing improper in his purpose for asking for the examination and inspection herein involved.

Petitioner may no longer insist on his interpretation of Section 51 of Act No. 1459, as amended, regarding the right of a stockholder to inspect and examine the books and records of a corporation. The former Corporation Law (Act No. 1459, as amended) has been replaced by Batas Pambansa Blg. 68, otherwise known as the "Corporation Code of the Philippines." The right of inspection granted to a stockholder under Section 51 of Act No. 1459 has been retained, but with some modifications. The second and third paragraphs of Section 74 of Batas Pambansa Blg. 68 provide the following: "The records of all business transactions of the corporation and the minutes of any meeting shall be open to inspection by any director, trustee, stockholder or member of the corporation at reasonable hours on business days and he may demand, in writing, for a copy of excerpts from said records or minutes, at his expense.

Any officer or agent of the corporation who shall refuse to allow any director, trustee, stockholder or member of the corporation to examine and copy excerpts from its records or minutes, in accordance with the provisions of this Code, shall be liable to such director, trustee, stockholder or member for damages, and in addition, shall be guilty of an offense which shall be punishable under Section 144 of this Code: Provided, That if such refusal is made pursuant to a resolution or order of the board of directors or trustees, the liability under this section for such action shall be imposed upon the directors or trustees who voted for such refusal; and Provided, further, That it shall be a defense to any action under this section that the person demanding to examine and copy excerpts from the corporation's records and minutes has improperly used any information secured through any prior examination of the records or minutes of such corporation or of any other corporation, or was not acting in good faith or for a legitimate purpose in making his demand

Among the changes introduced in the new Code with respect to the right of inspection granted to a stockholder are the following the records must be kept at the principal office of the corporation; the inspection must be made on business days; the stockholder may demand a copy of the excerpts of the records or minutes; and the refusal to allow such inspection shall subject the erring officer or agent of the corporation to civil and criminal liabilities.

However, while seemingly enlarging the right of inspection, the new Code has prescribed limitations to the same. It is now expressly required as a condition for such examination that the one requesting it must not have been guilty of using improperly any information through a prior examination, and that the person asking for such examination must be "acting in good faith and for a legitimate purpose in making his demand."

The unqualified provision on the right of inspection previously contained in Section 51, Act No. 1459 no longer holds true. The argument of the petitioner that the right granted to him under Section 51 of the former Corporation Law should not be dependent on the propriety of his motive or purpose in asking for the inspection of the books of the respondent bank loses whatever validity it might have had before the amendment of the law. If there is any doubt in the correctness of the ruling of the trial court that the right of inspection granted under Section 51 of the old Corporation Law must be dependent on a showing of proper motive on the part of the stockholder demanding the same, it is now dissipated by the clear language of the pertinent provision contained in Section 74 of Batas Pambansa Blg. 68.

Although the petitioner has claimed that he has justifiable motives in seeking the inspection of the books of the respondent bank, he has not set forth the reasons and the purposes for which he desires such inspection, except to satisfy himself as to the truth of published reports regarding certain transactions entered into by the respondent bank and to inquire into their validity. The circumstances under which he acquired one share of stock in the respondent bank purposely to exercise the right of inspection do not argue in favor of his good faith and proper motivation. Admittedly he sought to be a stockholder in order to pry into transactions entered into by the respondent bank even before he became a stockholder. His obvious purpose was to arm himself with materials which he can use against the respondent bank for acts done by the latter when the petitioner was a total stranger to the same. He could have been impelled by a laudable sense of civic consciousness, but it could not be said that his purpose is germane to his interest as a stockholder.

We also find merit in the contention of the respondent bank that the inspection sought to be exercised by the petitioner would be violative of the provisions of its charter. (Republic Act No. 1300, as amended.) Sections 15, 16 and 30 of the said charter provide respectively as follows:

Sec. 15. Inspection by Department of Supervision and Examination of the Central Bank. — The National Bank shall be subject to inspection by the Department of Supervision and Examination of the Central Bank'

Sec. 16. Confidential information. —The Superintendent of Banks and the Auditor General, or other officers designated by law to inspect or investigate the condition of the National Bank, shall not reveal to any person other than the President of the Philippines, the Secretary of Finance, and the Board of Directors the details of the inspection or investigation, nor shall they give any information relative to the funds in its custody, its current accounts or deposits belonging to private individuals, corporations, or any other entity, except by order of a Court of competent jurisdiction,'

Sec. 30. Penalties for violation of the provisions of this Act.— Any director, officer, employee, or agent of the Bank, who violates or permits the violation of any of the provisions of this Act, or any person aiding or abetting the violations of any of the provisions of this Act, shall be punished by a fine not to exceed ten thousand pesos or by imprisonment of not more than five years, or both such fine and imprisonment.

The PNB is not an ordinary corporation. Having a charter of its own, it is not governed, as a rule, by the Corporation Code of the Philippines. Section 4 of the said Code provides:

SEC. 4. Corporations created by special laws or charters. — Corporations created by special laws or charters shall be governed primarily by the provisions of the special law or charter creating them or applicable to them. supplemented by the provisions of this Code, insofar as they are applicable.

The provision of Section 74 of Batas Pambansa Blg. 68 of the new Corporation Code with respect to the right of a stockholder to demand an inspection or examination of the books of the corporation may not be reconciled with the provisions of the charter of the respondent bank. It is not correct to claim, therefore, that the right of inspection under Section 74 of the new Corporation Code may apply in a supplementary capacity to the charter of the respondent bank.

REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES (PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION ON GOOD GOVERNMENT), Petitioner -versus- SANDIGANBAYAN, BIENVENIDO R. TANTOCO, JR. and DOMINADOR R. SANTIAGO, Respondents
G.R. No. 90478, EN BANC, November 21, 1991, NARVASA, J.

In the absence of evidence, the PCGG cannot unilaterally deny a stockholder from exercising his statutory right of inspection based on an unsupported and naked assertion that private respondent's motive is improper or merely for curiosity or on the ground that the stockholder is not in friendly terms with the corporation's officers.

FACTS

In GR No. 88809: On December 26, 1988, private respondent-stockholder requested the San Miguel Corporation (SMC) and its corporate secretary the production, inspection, examination/verification and/or photocopying of the SMC corporate records to inform him of the decisions, policies, acts and performance of the management of the SMC under the PCGG-Board.

Since the shares of private respondent in the SMC have been sequestered by the PCGG, the former (SMC) sought advice from the latter on the effect of such sequestration. Subsequently, private respondent was informed by the SMC that all requests for the examination, inspection and photocopying of its corporate records should be coursed through the PCGG.

The facts set forth in G.R. No. 88809 are substantially similar in G.R. No. 88858 except that in the latter case, private respondent as stockholder of record seeks authority to inspect and examine the corporate records of United Coconut Planters Bank.
The request of private respondent for the inspection/examination of SMC's corporate records was denied by the PCGG As regards the corporate records of UCPB, private respondent was likewise advised to course his request through the PCGG.

Thereafter, private respondent filed two separate petitions for prohibition and mandamus before the Sandiganbayan seeking to enforce his stockholder's right to inspect the corporate records of SMC and the UCPB.

Subsequently, respondent Sandiganbayan rendered the assailed resolutions allowing respondent Eduardo Cojuangco, Jr., to inspect the corporate records of United Coconut Planters Bank and San Miguel Corporation.

As regards the right of inspection, it is the submission of petitioner that the request of respondent Cojuangco, Jr., for the examination of the corporate records of SMC and UCPB may be validly refused pending judicial determination of respondent's sequestered shares, i.e., whether the same are ill-gotten or not. It is further argued that respondent's purpose in examining the corporate records of SMC and the UCPB is merely to satisfy his curiosity regarding the performance of said corporations

ISSUE

W/N the PCGG may validly refuse private respondent's right to inspection; Does sequestration automatically deprive a stockholder of his right of inspection?

RULING

We rule in the negative.

The right of a stockholder to inspect and or examine the records of a corporation is explicitly provided in Section 74 of the Corporation Code, the pertinent portion of which reads:

"SEC. 74. Books to be kept; stock transfer agent. —

"x x x"

The records of all business transactions of the corporation and the minutes of any meeting shall be open to the inspection of any director, trustee, stockholder or member of the corporation at reasonable hours on business days and he may demand, in writing, for a copy of excerpts from said records or minutes, at his expense."

Petitioners argue, however, that the Corporation Code has to give way to, as having been amended by, Executive Orders Nos. 1, 2, 14 and related issuances as well as the pronouncement laid down by this Court in Bataan Shipyard and Engineering Corporation v. Presidential Commission on Good Government on the effects of sequestration.

There is mischief in this argument. We have examined the extent of Executive Orders Nos. 1, 2 and 14 on sequestration as well as the BASECO case relied upon by petitioner. Nevertheless, the Court finds nothing therein to indicate that the Corporation Code has been deemed amended, much less an implied modification of a stockholder's right to inspection as guaranteed by Sec. 74 thereof. Moreover, what is clear in the case of BASECO, supra, is the following:

"One thing is certain, and should be stated at the outset the PCGG cannot exercise acts of dominion over property sequestered, frozen or provisionally taken over. As already earlier stressed with no little insistence, the act of sequestration; freezing or provisional takeover of property does not import or bring about a divestment of title over said property; does not make the PCGG the owner thereof. In relation to the property sequestered, frozen or provisionally taken over, the PCGG is a conservator, not an owner

The PCGG does not become, ipso facto, the owner of the shares just because the same have been sequestered; nor does it become the stockholder of record by virtue of such sequestration.

Just recently, We ruled that the PCGG cannot vote the sequestered shares of respondent Cojuangco, Jr., in San Miguel. If the PCGG cannot vote the sequestered shares of private respondent, with much more reason it cannot restrain or prevent private respondent, as stockholder from inspecting the corporate records of the SMC and the UCPB at reasonable hours on business days. The law grants respondent/stockholder such authority.

Petitioner, in seeking to bar private respondent from exercising his statutory right of inspection, lays emphasis on the argument that respondent's express purpose is to "supervise" PCGG's management, if not to gratify his curiosity regarding the performance of the SMC and the UCPB.

Again, the argument is devoid of merit. Records indicate that private respondent is the ostensible owner of a substantial number of shares and is a stockholder of record in SMC and UCPB. * Being a stockholder beyond doubt, there is therefore no reason why private respondent may not exercise his statutory right of inspection in accordance with Sec. 74 of the Corporation Code, the only express limitation being that the right of inspection should be exercised at reasonable hours on business days; 2) the person demanding to examine and copy excerpts from the corporation's records and minutes has not improperly used any information secured through any previous examination of the records of such corporation; and 3) the demand is made in good faith or for a legitimate purpose. The latter two limitations, however, must be set up as a defense by the corporation if it is to merit judicial cognizance. As such, and in the absence of evidence, the PCGG cannot unilaterally deny a stockholder from exercising his statutory right of inspection based on an unsupported and naked assertion that private respondent's motive is improper or merely for curiosity or on the ground that the stockholder is not in friendly terms with the corporation's officers.

While it may be true that the right of inspection granted by Sec. 74 of the Corporation Code is not absolute, as when the stockholder is not acting in good faith and for a legitimate purpose; or when the demand is purely speculative or merely to satisfy curiosity, the same may not be said in the case of private Respondent. This is because: ". . . the impropriety of purpose such as will defeat enforcement must be set up (by) the corporation defensively if the Court is to take cognizance of it as a qualification. In other words, the specific provisions take from the stockholder the burden of showing impropriety of purpose or motive.'" (Gokongwei, Jr., v. Securities and Exchange Commission, supra; citing State v. Monida & Yellowstone Stage Co., 110 Minn. 193, 124 NW 791; State v. Cities Service Co., 114 A 463.)

In the case at bar, petitioner failed to discharge the burden of proof to show that private respondent's action in seeking examination of the corporate records was moved by unlawful or ill-motivated designs which could appropriately call for a judicial protection against the exercise of such right. Save for its unsubstantiated allegations, petitioner could offer no proof, nay, not even a scintilla of evidence that respondent Cojuangco, Jr., was motivated by bad faith; that the demand was for an illegitimate purpose or that the demand was impelled by speculation or idle curiosity. Surely, respondent's substantial shareholdings in the SMC and UCPB cannot be an object of mere curiosity.

VICTOR AFRICA, Petitioner -versus- PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION ON GOOD GOVERNMENT, JOSE LAURETA, MELQUIADES GUTIERREZ, EDUARDO M. VILLANUEVA, EDUARDO DE LOS ANGELES and ROMAN MABANTA, JR., Respondents GR No. 83831, EN BANC, January 9, 1992, REGALADO, J.

FACTS

Shortly after the PCGG sequestered ETPI on March 14, 1986, the sequestration order was partially lifted in May, 1986 when 40% of the shares of stock (Class "B") owned by Cable and Wireless, Ltd. were freed from the effects of sequestration. The remaining 60% of the shares (Class "A"), however, remained under sequestration. Thereafter, on July 22, 1987, the PCGG filed with the Sandiganbayan the aforesaid Civil Case No. 0009.

Subsequently, during the annual stockholders meeting convened on January 29, 1988 pursuant to a PCGG Resolution dated January 28, 1988 which called for the resumption of the stockholders meeting originally scheduled on January 4, 1988, Eduardo M. Villanueva, as PCGG nominee, Roman Mabanta, Jr. and Eduardo de los Angeles as nominees of the foreign investors, Cable and Wireless Ltd., and Jose L. Africa (who was absent) were elected as members of the board of directors.

An organizational meeting was later held where Eduardo Villanueva was elected as president and general manager, while Ramon Desuasido, Almario Velasco and Ranulfo Payos were elected as acting corporate secretary, acting treasurer, and acting assistant corporate secretary, respectively.

The nomination and election of PCGG nominees/designees to the ETPI Board of Directors, as well as the election of its new officers, triggered a chain of contentious proceedings before the Sandiganbayan and this Court between the members of the ETPI Board and its stockholders, on the one hand, and the PCGG's nominees/designees elected ETPI Board, on the other hand, in the cases hereinunder discussed.

G.R. No. 83831
Victor Africa, who claims to be an employee of ETPI holding the positions of vice-president, general counsel (on official leave without pay), corporate secretary and special assistant to the chairman (and president), filed directly with this Court a petition for injunction seeking to enjoin the PCGG and its nominees/designees to the board of directors and the newly-installed officers of ETPI from implementing their alleged illegal, invalid and immoral act of ousting him from his offices and positions at the ETPI pending the determination of whether they have validly, legally and morally assumed their supposed positions and offices as "directors" and/or "officers" of ETPI.
He contends that the reasons advanced by the PCGG-sponsored board of directors for ousting him from his offices (redundancy, need to conserve company funds and loss of confidence) are flimsy, whimsical and arbitrary, evidencing not only the PCGG-sponsored board's discriminatory and oppressive attitude towards him but, more importantly, its clear intent to harass him into refraining from questioning before several tribunals all the invalid, illegal and immoral acts of said PCGG-sponsored board which have caused and are still causing ETPI damages because they constitute dissipation of assets.

G.R. Nos. 85597 and 85621
Jose L. Africa, Manuel Nieto and Rafael Valdez, allegedly the registered stockholders of ETPI, instituted on September 6, 1988 before the Sandiganbayan Civil Case No. 0048, [4] a complaint for injunction and damages with prayer for a temporary restraining order seeking to enjoin Eduardo M. Villanueva from acting as "Director, President and/or General Manager" of ETPI and from exercising the powers and functions of said positions, as well as to stop the PCGG from directly or indirectly interfering with the management of ETPI. They contend that the assumption of Villanueva to said positions was effected without due process of law through the PCGG using and voting the sequestered shares without legal justification.

G.R. No. 85594
The same plaintiffs in Civil Case No. 0048, now in their capacity as erstwhile members of the Board of Directors of ETPI, instituted before the Sandiganbayan on September 23, 1988 Civil Case No. 0050, another action for injunction and damages with prayer for a writ of preliminary injunction and/or temporary restraining order.

In their complaint, plaintiffs questioned the acts and orders of the PCGG leading to the election of therein defendants Melquiades Gutierrez, Mark Javier, Ranulfo P. Payos, Jose P. Roxas and Almario Velasco, and Cable and Wireless representatives Roman Mabanta, Jr. and Eduardo de los Angeles to the ETPI Board of Directors. Claiming to be the duly elected members of the ETPI Board of Directors during the January 4, 1988 special stockholders meeting, plaintiffs prayed that defendants be removed from their ETPI positions, and that an injunction be issued perpetually restraining the PCGG from electing, designating and supporting the defendants in their ETPI roles.

Recapping, therefore, from the foregoing narration it appears that the injunction suits filed and docketed as Civil Cases Nos. 0048 and 0050 in the Sandiganbayan and the petition for injunction filed directly with this Court as G.R. No. 83831 are substantially identical in the reliefs sought therein, that is, to nullify the acts and orders of the PCGG which led to the nomination and election of the new members of the board of directors and officers of the ETPI and to enjoin said directors and officers from exercising the powers and functions of said positions.

RULING
The law and jurisprudence on the jurisdiction of the Sandiganbayan over cases for the recovery of "ill-gotten wealth" are now settled. In PCGG vs. Hon. Emmanuel G. Peña, etc., et al., this Court held:

> . . . Under Section 2 of the President's Executive Order No. 14 issued on May 7, 1986, all cases of the Commission regarding "the Funds, Moneys, Assets, and Properties Illegally Acquired or Misappropriated by Former President Ferdinand Marcos, Mrs. Imelda Romualdez Marcos, their Close Relatives, Subordinates, Business Associates, Dummies, Agents, or Nominees" whether civil or criminal, are lodged within the "exclusive and original jurisdiction of the Sandiganbayan" and all incidents arising from, incidental to, or related to, such cases necessarily fall likewise under the Sandiganbayan's exclusive and original jurisdiction, subject to review on certiorari exclusively by the Supreme Court.

The aforequoted ruling was reiterated in PCGG vs. Hon. Aquino, Jr., etc., et al. and Marcelo Fiberglass Corporation vs. PCGG. In six (6) subsequent cases the Court pointed out that:

> . . . (the) exclusive jurisdiction conferred on the Sandiganbayan would evidently extend not only to the principal causes of action, i.e., the recovery of alleged ill-gotten wealth, but also to "all incidents arising from, incidental to, or related to, such cases," such as the dispute over the sale of shares, the propriety of the issuance of ancillary writs or provisional remedies relative thereto, the sequestration thereof, which may not be made the subject of separate actions or proceedings in another forum.

A careful examination of the records of these cases reveals that the complaints instituted by Jose L. Africa, et al. in Civil Cases Nos. 0048 and 0050 before the Sandiganbayan are in the nature of special and original civil actions for injunction directed against the defendants therein and specially seeking to restrain them from representing and acting as officers and members of the Board of Directors of ETPI and to prevent the PCGG from exercising acts of ownership and/or management over ETPI.

Moreover, in claiming as illegal the acts or orders of the PCGG issued in pursuance of the exercise of its powers and functions under Executive Orders Nos. 1, 2 and 14, which resulted in the installation of defendants to the Board of Directors of ETPI and to their corporate offices, plaintiffs Jose L. Africa, et al. merely sought to preserve the status quo, that is, the last actual, peaceable, uncontested status which preceded the pending controversy. The *status quo*to the plaintiffs was the fact of their election to the Board of Directors of ETPI during the special stockholders meeting on January 4, 1988 allegedly pursuant to a valid call, notice and assembly in accordance with law.

The issue of jurisdiction of the Sandiganbayan over original special civil actions involving the powers and functions of the PCGG has been raised in and resolved by this Court. In the consolidated cases of PCGG vs. Hon. Aquino, Jr., etc., et al. and Marcelo Fiberglass Corporation vs. PCGG, supra, therein private respondent Marcelo Fiberglass Corporation contested the jurisdiction of the Sandiganbayan over special civil actions claiming that Section 2 of Executive Order No. 14 vested the Sandiganbayan with Jurisdiction over civil and criminal cases filed by the PCGG but not over special civil actions filed by private parties; that Section 2 did not limit the filing of special civil actions by private persons exclusively with the Sandiganbayan; and that Presidential Decree No. 1606 which created the Sandiganbayan did not vest such court with jurisdiction over special civil actions such as those involved therein and as enumerated in Section 4 of Presidential Decree No. 1606.

The Court rejected such contention, declaring that the attempt to remove special civil actions from the Sandiganbayan's exclusive jurisdiction is of no avail if they similarly involve the powers and functions of the PCGG. The Court reiterated the pronouncement in PCGG vs. Peña, etc., et al., supra, that the Sandiganbayan has exclusive and original jurisdiction in civil or criminal cases involving ill-gotten wealth under Executive Order No. 14, as well as incidents arising from, incidental or related to such cases, subject to review on certiorari exclusively by the Supreme Court.
Since the injunctive suits filed by Jose L. Africa, et al. before the Sandiganbayan stemmed from incidents arising from, incidental and related to the partial sequestration of ETPI, the directive enunciated in the Peña case that "those who wish to question or challenge the Commission's acts or orders in such cases must seek recourse in the same court, the Sandiganbayan, which is vested with exclusive and original jurisdiction," applies to the instant case.

TERELAY INVESTMENT AND DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, Petitioner –versus- CECILIA TERESITA J. YULO, Respondent
G.R. No. 160924, FIRST DIVISION, August 5, 2015, BERSAMIN, J.

The petitioner's submission that the respondent's "insignificant holding" of only .001% of the petitioner's stockholding did not justify the granting of her application for inspection of the corporate books and records is unwarranted.

The Corporation Code has granted to all stockholders the right to inspect the corporate books and records, and in so doing has not required any specific amount of interest for the exercise of the right to inspect

FACTS

Asserting her right as a stockholder, Cecilia Teresita Yulo wrote a letter addressed to Terelay Investment and Development Corporation (TERELAY) requesting that she be allowed to examine its books and records on September 17, 1999 at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon at the latter's office on the 25th floor, Citibank Tower, Makati City. In its reply-letter, TERELAY denied the request for inspection and instead demanded that she show proof that she was a bona fide stockholder.

Cecilia Yulo again sent another letter clarifying that her request for examination of the corporate records was for the purpose of inquiring into the financial condition of TERELAY and the conduct of its affairs by the principal officers. The following day, Cecilia Yulo received a faxed letter from TERELAY's counsel advising her not to continue with the inspection in order to avoid trouble.

Cecilia Yulo filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), a Petition for Issuance of a Writ of Mandamus with prayer for Damages against TERELAY.

On March 22, 2002, the RTC rendered its judgment, ruling that petitioner's application for inspection of corporate records is granted. The CA affirmed the RTC.

ISSUES

1) W/N the law requires substantial shareholding before she can exercise her right of inspection as a stockholder. (No)
2) W/N she has just and sufficient grounds to inspect its corporate records;

RULING

1. The petitioner's submission that the respondent's "insignificant holding" of only .001% of the petitioner's stockholding did not justify the granting of her application for inspection of the corporate books and records is unwarranted.

The Corporation Code has granted to all stockholders the right to inspect the corporate books and records, and in so doing has not required any specific amount of interest for the exercise of the right to inspect. Ubi lex non distinguit nee nos distinguere debemos. When the law has made no distinction, we ought not to recognize any distinction.

2.Neither could the petitioner arbitrarily deny the respondent's right to inspect the corporate books and records on the basis that her inspection would be used for a doubtful or dubious reason. Under Section 74, third paragraph, of the Corporation Code, the only time when the demand to examine and copy the corporation's records and minutes could be refused is when the corporation puts up as a defense to any action that "the person demanding" had "improperly used any information secured through any prior examination of the records or minutes of such corporation or of any other corporation, or was not acting in good faith or for a legitimate purpose in making his demand."

The right of the shareholder to inspect the books and records of the petitioner should not be made subject to the condition of a showing of any particular dispute or of proving any mismanagement or other occasion rendering an examination proper, but if the right is to be denied, the burden of proof is upon the corporation to show that the purpose of the shareholder is improper, by way of defense. According to a recognized commentator:

By early English decisions it was formerly held that there must be something more than bare suspicion of mismanagement or fraud. There must be some particular controversy or question in which the party applying was interested, and inspection would be granted only so far as necessary for that particular occasion. By the general rule in the United States, however, shareholders have a right to inspect the books and papers of the corporation without first showing any particular dispute or proving any mismanagement or other occasion rendering an examination proper. The privilege, however, is not absolute and the corporation may show in defense that the applicant is acting from wrongful motives.

Among the purposes held to justify a demand for inspection are the following: (1) To ascertain the financial condition of the company or the propriety of dividends; (2) the value of the shares of stock for sale or investment; (3) whether there has been mismanagement; (4) in anticipation of shareholders' meetings to obtain a mailing list of shareholders to solicit proxies or influence voting; (5) to obtain information in aid of litigation with the corporation or its officers as to corporate transactions. Among the improper purposes which may justify denial of the right of inspection are: (1) Obtaining of information as to business secrets or to aid a competitor; (2) to secure business "prospects" or investment or advertising lists; (3) to find technical defects in corporate transactions in order to bring "strike suits" for purposes of blackmail or extortion.

In general, however, officers and directors have no legal authority to close the office doors against shareholders for whom they are only agents, and withhold from them the right to inspect the books which furnishes the most effective method of gaining information which the law has provided, on mere doubt or suspicion as to the motives of the shareholder. While there is some conflict of authority, when an inspection by a shareholder is contested, the burden is usually held to be upon the corporation to establish a probability that the applicant is attempting to gain inspection for a purpose not connected with his interests as a shareholder, or that his purpose is otherwise improper. The burden is not upon the petitioner to show the propriety of his examination or that the refusal by the officers or directors was wrongful, except under statutory provisions.

Accordingly, Cecilia Yulo as the right to be fully informed of TERELAY's corporate condition and the manner its affairs are being managed. It is well-settled that the ownership of shares of stock gives stockholders the right under the law to be protected from possible mismanagement by its officers. This right is predicated upon selfpreservation. In any case, TERELAY did not adduce sufficient proof that Cecilia Yulo was in bad faith or had an ulterior motive in demanding her right under the law.

ADERITO Z. YUJUICO and BONIFACIO C. SUMBILLA, Petitioners
-versus- CEZAR T. QUIAMBAO and ERIC C. PILAPIL, Respondents.
GR No. 180416, SECOND DIVISION, June 02, 2014, PEREZ, J.

A criminal action based on the violation of a stockholder's right to examine or inspect the corporate records and the stock and transfer hook of a corporation under the second and fourth paragraphs of Section 74 of the Corporation Code can only he maintained against corporate officers or any other persons acting on behalf of such corporation. The complaint and the evidence Quiambao and Sumbilla submitted during preliminary investigation do not establish that Quiambao and Pilapil were acting on behalf of STRADEC. Violations of Section 74 contemplates a situation wherein a corporation, acting thru one of its officers or agents, denies the right of any of its stockholders to inspect the records, minutes and the stock and transfer book of such corporation. Thus, the dismissal is valid.

FACTS

Strategic Alliance Development Corporation is a domestic corporation operating as a business development and investment company. On 1 March 2004, during the annual stockholder's meeting of STRADEC, Aderito Z. Yujuico was elected as president and chairman of the company. Yujuico replaced Cezar T. Quiambao, who had been the president and chairman of STRADEC since 1994. STRADEC appointed petitioner Bonifacio C. Sumbilla as treasurer and one Joselito John G. Blando as corporate secretary. Blando replaced respondent Eric C. Pilapil, the previous corporate secretary of STRADEC. On 12 August 2005, Yujuico and Sumbilla filed a criminal complaint against Quiambao and Pilapil and one Giovanni T. Casanova before the Office of the City Prosecutor of Pasig City. The complaint accuses Quiambao, Pilapil and Casanova of violating Section 74 in relation to Section 144 of the Corporation Code.

That during the stockholders' meeting, Yujuico--as newly elected president and chairman of STRADEC--demanded Quiambao for the turnover of the corporate records of the company, particularly the accounting files, ledgers, journals and other records of the corporation's business. Quiambao refused. After the stockholders' meeting, Quiambao and Casanova caused the removal of the corporate records of STRADEC from the company's offices in Pasig City. Upon his appointment as corporate secretary, Blando likewise demanded Pilapil for the turnover of the stock and transfer book of STRADEC. Pilapil refused. On 25 June 2004, Pilapil proposed to Blando to have the stock and transfer book deposited in a safety deposit box with Equitable Pel Bank. Blando acceded to the proposal and the stock and transfer book was deposited in a safety deposit box with the bank identified. It was agreed that the safety deposit box may only be opened in the presence of both Quiambao and Blando. Quiambao and Pilapil withdrew the stock and transfer book from the safety deposit box and brought it to the offices of the Stradcom Corporation in Quezon City. Quiambao thereafter asked Blando to proceed to the STRADCOM offices. Upon arriving thereat, Quiambao pressured Blando to make certain entries in the stock and transfer books. After making such entries, Blando again demanded that he be given possession of the stock and transfer book. Quiambao refused.

Blando received an order issued by the RTC of Pasig City, which directed him to cancel the entries he made in the stock and transfer book. Blando wrote letters to Quiambao and Pilapil once again demanding for the turnover of the stock and transfer book. Pilapil replied where he appeared to agree to Blando's demand. However, Quiambao still refused to turnover the stock and transfer book to Blando. Blando was once again constrained to agree to a proposal by Pilapil to have the stock and transfer book deposited with the RTC of Pasig City. The said court, however, refused to accept such deposit on the ground that it had no place for safekeeping.

Since Quiambao and Pilapil still refused to turnover the stock and transfer book, Blando again acceded to have the book deposited in a safety deposit box, this time, with the Export and Industry Bank. Yujuico and Sumbilla theorize that the refusal by the Quiambao, Pilapil and Casanova to turnover STRADEC's corporate records and stock and transfer book violates their right, as stockholders, directors and officers of the corporation, to inspect such records and book under Section 74 of the Corporation Code and may be held criminally liable pursuant to Section 144 of the Corporation Code.

The MeTC partially granted the Urgent Omnibus Motion. The MeTC ordered the issuance of a warrant of arrest against Quiambao and Pilapil. The RTC issued a TRO enjoining the MeTC from conducting further proceedings in Criminal Case No. 89724.

The RTC granted Quiambao and Pilapil's certiorari petition and directing the dismissal of Criminal Case No. 89724. According to the RTC, the MeTC committed grave abuse of discretion in issuing a warrant of arrest against Quiambao and Pilapil. The RTC opined that refusing to allow inspection of the stock and transfer book, as opposed to refusing examination of other corporate records, is not punishable as an offense under the Corporation Code. The petitioners moved for reconsideration, but the RTC remained steadfast. Hence, this petition by Yujuico and Sumbilla.

ISSUE

Whether or not the RTC's refusal to allow inspection of the stock and transfer book of a corporation is not a punishable offense under the Corporation Code, such a refusal still amounts to a violation of Section 74 of the Corporation Code, for which Section 144 of the same code prescribes a penalty.

RULING

No, there is no violation of the Corporation, thus, dismissal of the complaint is warranted.

The act of refusing to allow inspection of the stock and transfer book of a corporation, when done in violation of Section 74(4) of the Corporation Code, is punishable as an offense under Section 144 of the same code. In justifying this conclusion, the RTC seemingly relied on the fact that, under Section 74 of the Corporation Code, the application of Section 144 is expressly mentioned only in relation to the act of "refusing to allow any director, trustees, stockholder or member of the corporation to examine and copy excerpts from the corporation's records or minutes" that excludes its stock and transfer book, the same does not mean that the latter section no longer applies to any other possible violations of the former section. It must be emphasized that Section 144 already purports to penalize "violations" of "any provision" of the Corporation Code "not otherwise specifically penalized therein." Hence, we find inconsequential the fact that that Section 74 expressly mentions the application of Section 144 only to a specific act, but not with respect to the other possible violations of the former section.

A criminal action based on the violation of a stockholder's right to examine or inspect the corporate records and the stock and transfer hook of a corporation under the second and fourth paragraphs of Section 74 of the Corporation Code can only he maintained against corporate officers or any other persons acting on behalf of such corporation. The submissions of the Yujuico and Sumbilla during the preliminary investigation clearly suggest that Quiambao and Pilapil are neither in relation to STRADEC. Thus, we sustain the dismissal of Criminal Case No. 89724.

Criminal Case No. 89724 accuses Quiambao and Pilapil of denying Yujuico and Sumbilla's right to examine or inspect the corporate records and the stock and transfer book of STRADEC. It is thus a criminal action that is based on the violation of the second and fourth paragraphs of Section 74 of the Corporation Code. A perusal of the second and fourth paragraphs of Section 74, as well as the first paragraph of the same section, reveal that they are provisions that obligates a corporation: they prescribe what books or records a corporation is required to keep; where the corporation shall keep them; and what are the other obligations of the corporation to its stockholders or members in relation to such books and records. Hence, by parity of reasoning, the second and fourth paragraphs of Section 74, including the first paragraph of the same section, can only be violated by a corporation. It is clear then that a criminal action based on the violation of the second or fourth paragraphs of Section 74 can only be maintained against corporate officers or such other persons that are acting on behalf of the corporation. Violations of Section 74 contemplates a situation wherein a corporation, acting thru one of its officers or agents, denies the right of any of its stockholders to inspect the records, minutes and the stock and transfer book of such corporation.

The problem with the Yujuico and Sumbilla's complaint and the evidence that they submitted during preliminary investigation is that they do not establish that Quiambao and Pilapil were acting on behalf of STRADEC. Quiambao and Sumbilla are not actually invoking their right to inspect the records and the stock and transfer book of STRADEC under the second and fourth paragraphs of Section 74. What they seek to enforce is the proprietary right of STRADEC to be in possession of such records and book. Such right, though certainly legally enforceable by other means, cannot be enforced by a criminal prosecution based on a violation of the second and fourth paragraphs of Section 74.

ALFREDO L. CHUA, TOMAS L. CHUA and MERCEDES P. DIAZ, Petitioners, - versus - PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINES, Respondent
G.R. No. 216146, August 24, 2016, THIRD DIVISION, REYES, J.

Despite the expiration of CTCM's corporate term in 1999, duties as corporate officers still pertained to the petitioners when Joselyn's complaint was filed in 2000. As correctly pointed out by the OSG, Sections 122 and 145 of the Corporation Code explicitly provide for the continuation of the body corporate for three years after dissolution. The rights and remedies against, or liabilities of, the officers shall not be removed or impaired by reason of the dissolution of the corporation. Corollarily then, a stockholder's right to inspect corporate records subsists during the period of liquidation. Hence, Joselyn, as a stockholder, had the right to demand for the inspection of records. Lodged upon the corporation is the corresponding duty to allow the said inspection.

In the case at bar, the petitioners were charged with violations of Section 74, in relation to Section 144, of the Corporation Code, a special law. Accordingly, since Joselyn was deprived of the exercise of an effective right of inspection, offenses had in fact been committed, regardless of the petitioners' intent.

Right of Inspection

If a corporation is dissolved and is undergoing liquidation, does the right to inspect still exist? Yes. The corporation continues to be a body corporate for three (3) years after its dissolution for purposes of prosecuting and defending suits by and against it and for enabling it to settle and close its affairs, culminating in the disposition and distribution of its remaining assets. x x x The termination of the life of a juridical entity does not by itself cause the extinction or diminution of the rights and liabilities of such entity x x x nor those of its owners and creditors. x x x. Further, as correctly pointed out by the OSG, Sections 122 and 145 of the Corporation Code explicitly provide for the continuation of the body corporate for three years after dissolution. The rights and remedies against, or liabilities of, the officers shall not be removed or impaired by reason of the dissolution of the corporation. Corollarily then, a stockholder's right to inspect corporate records subsists during the period of liquidation. Hence, Joselyn, as a stockholder, had the right to demand for the inspection of records. Lodged upon the corporation is the corresponding duty to allow the said inspection.

FACTS

Joselyn was a stockholder of Chua Tee Corporation of Manila. Alfredo was the president and chairman of the board, while Tomas was the corporate secretary and also a member of the board of the same corporation. Mercedes was the accountant/bookkeeper tasked with the physical custody of the corporate records.

In the Complaint-Affidavit filed before the Quezon City Prosecutors' Office, Joselyn alleged that despite written demands, the petitioners conspired in refusing without valid cause the exercise of her right to inspect Chua Tee Corporation of Manila's (CTCM) business transactions records, financial statements and minutes of the meetings of both the board of directors and stockholders. An Information indicting the petitioners for alleged violation of Section 74, in relation to Section 144, of the Corporation Code was filed before the MeTC of Quezon City on July 4, 2001.

The petitioners argue that since CTCM had ceased business operations since May 26, 1999 which is prior to Joselyn's filing of her complaint before the MeTC, there was no longer any duty pertaining to corporate officers to allow a stockholder to inspect the records.

MeTC rendered its Judgment convicting the petitioners as charged, sentencing them to suffer the penalty of 30 days of imprisonment, and directing them to pay the costs of suit. Petitioners appealed to RTC but the same was denied. The petition for review filed to CA was likewise denied.

ISSUE

Whether the conviction for alleged violation of Section 74, in relation to Section 144, of the Corporation Code was proper.

RULING

The Court affirms the conviction but directs the payment of fine, in lieu of the penalty of imprisonment imposed by the courts a quo.

Despite the expiration of CTCM's corporate term in 1999, duties as corporate officers still pertained to the petitioners when Joselyn's complaint was filed in 2000. As correctly pointed out by the OSG, Sections 122 and 145 of the Corporation Code explicitly provide for the continuation of the body corporate for three years after dissolution. The rights and remedies against, or liabilities of, the officers shall not be removed or impaired by reason of the dissolution of the corporation. Corollarily then, a stockholder's right to inspect corporate records subsists during the period of liquidation. Hence, Joselyn, as a stockholder, had the right to demand for the inspection of records. Lodged upon the corporation is the corresponding duty to allow the said inspection.

It is settled that "a re-examination of factual findings is outside the province of a petition for review on certiorari," especially in the instant petition where the MeTC, RTC and CA concurred in convicting the petitioners of the charges against them. Be that as it may, the Court takes exception and notes the following circumstances: (a) during cross-examination, Joselyn admitted that permission was granted for her to see the documents, but she was unable to actually view them as she was represented by her accountant; (b) Joselyn lacked personal knowledge as . to whether or not the petitioners in fact allowed or denied the checking of the records she had requested; (c) the accountant of Joselyn stated that the letter requesting for the examination of CTCM's records was addressed to the Accounting Department, and he and his colleagues did not have personal dealings with the petitioners.

From the foregoing, it is apparent that a complete examination of CTCM's records did not occur resulting to an effective deprivation of Joselyn's right as a stockholder. However, from Joselyn and the accountant's testimonies, it can be inferred that permission to view the records was granted, albeit not fully effected. The petitioners, on their part, explained that they never prevented Joselyn from exercising her right of inspection, but when the latter made her request, Mercedes was too occupied in winding up the affairs of CTCM.

In the case at bar, the petitioners were charged with violations of Section 74, in relation to Section 144, of the Corporation Code, a special law. Accordingly, since Joselyn was deprived of the exercise of an effective right of inspection, offenses had in fact been committed, regardless of the petitioners' intent.

No exceptional grounds exist justifying the reversal of the conviction previously rendered by the MeTC, RTC and CA. However, in lieu of the penalty of 30 days of imprisonment, the Court finds it more just to impose upon each of the petitioners a fine of Ten Thousand Pesos (P10,000.00) considering the reasons below. First. Malicious intent was seemingly wanting. Permission to check the records was granted, albeit not effected. Second. Joselyn had predeceased Alfredo and Tomas, her uncles, who are in their twilight years. Third. Joselyn's mother, Rosario, had executed an Affidavit of Desistance stating that the filing of the complaint before was "merely the result of [a] serious misunderstanding anent the management and operation of [CTCM], which had long ceased to exist as a corporate entity even prior to the alleged commission of the crime in question, rather than by reason of any criminal intent or actuation on the part of the [petitioners]. "

ALEJANDRO D.C. ROQUE, Petitioner –versus- PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINES, Respondent
G.R. No. 211108, THIRD DIVISION, June 7, 2017, TIJAM, J.

The revocation of BMTODA's registration does not automatically strip off Ongjoco of his right to examine pertinent documents and records relating to such association.

FACTS

Barangay Mulawin Tricycle Operators and Drivers Association, Inc. (BMTODA) became a corporation duly registered with the SEC on 1993. Sometime in 2003, Ongjoco, a member of BMTODA, sent a letter requesting copies of the Association's documents pursuant to his right to examine records under Section 74 of the Corporation Code after learning that BMTODA's funds were missing. However, the Secretary denied his request. He also learned that the incumbent officers were holding office for 3 years already, in violation of the one-year period provided for in BMTODA's by-laws. He requested from the President a copy of the list of its members with the corresponding franchise numbers of their respective tricycle fees and the franchise fees paid by each member, but the same was likewise denied. Thus, Ongjoco filed a Complaint against the President and Secretary for violation of Section 74 in relation to Section 144 of the Corporation Code. The President and Secretary argue however that since the letters were received by them when BMTODA's registration was already revoked, BMTODA ceased to exist as a corporation and they cannot be held liable of the same.

ISSUE

Can the President and Secretary be prosecuted under the penal provisions of the Corporation Code?

RULING

YES. Ongjoco, as a member of BMTODA, had a right to examine documents and records pertaining to said association. Ongjoco made a prior demand in writing for copy of pertinent records of BMTODA from the President and Secretary. However, both of them refused to furnish Ongjoco copies of such pertinent records. While it appears that the registration of BMTODA as a corporation with the SEC was revoked on 2003, the letter-request of Ongjoco which was dated while BMTODA's registration was revoked, was actually received by after the revocation was lifted. In any case, the revocation of a corporation's Certificate of Registration does not automatically warrant the extinction of the corporation itself such that its rights and liabilities are likewise altogether extinguished. In the case of Clemente v. Court of Appeals, the Court explained that the termination of the life of a juridical entity does not, by itself, cause the extinction or diminution of the rights and liabilities of such entity nor those of its owners and creditors. Thus, the revocation of BMTODA's registration does not automatically strip off Ongjoco of his right to examine pertinent documents and records relating to such association.

d. Pre-Emptive Right

- SEC Letter-Opinion Dated March 10, 2000

MAJORITY STOCKHOLDERS OF RUBY INDUSTRIAL CORPORATION, Petitioners -versus- MIGUEL LIM, in his personal capacity as Stockholder of Ruby Industrial Corporation and representing the MINORITY STOCKHOLDERS OF RUBY INDUSTRIAL CORPORATION and the MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE OF RUBY INDUSTRIAL CORPORATION, Respondents
GR No. 165887, THIRD DIVISION, June 6, 2011, VILLARAMA, Jr., J.

The validity of issuance of additional shares may be questioned if done in breach of trust by the controlling stockholders.

FACTS

Ruby Industrial Corporation is a domestic corporation engaged in glass manufacturing. Reeling from severe liquidity problems beginning in 1980, Ruby filed on December 13, 1983 a petition for suspension of payments with the SEC which was granted. The SEC Hearing Panel created the management committee (MANCOM) for Ruby, composed of representatives from Ruby's creditors. Subsequently, two rehabilitation plans were submitted to the Securities and Regulations Commission (SEC), the BENHAR/RUBY Rehabilitation Plan of the majority stockholders led by Yu Kim Giang, and the Alternative Plan of the minority stockholders represented by Miguel Lim. However, the implementation of both majority plans has been enjoined. Notwithstanding the injunction order, SEC issued an Order approving the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan and creating a new management committee to oversee its implementation.

The Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan had proposed the calling for subscription of unissued shares through a Board Resolution from the P11.814 million of theP23.7 million Authorized Capital Stock

(ACS) "in order to allow the long overdue program of the REHAB Program." To implement the Revised plan, RUBY's board of directors held a special meeting and took up the capital infusion of P11.814 Million representing the unissued and unsubscribed portion of the present ACS of P23.7 Million. The Board resolved that: The corporation be authorized to issue out of the unissued portion of the authorized capital stocks of the corporation in the form of common stocks 11.8134.00 Million to be subscribed and paid in full by the present stockholders in proportion to their present stockholding in the corporation on staggered basis and that should any of the stockholders fail to exercise their rights to buy the number of shares they are qualified to buy by making the first installment payment of 25% on or before October 13, 1991, then the other stockholders may buy the same and that only when none of the present stockholders are interested in the shares may there be a resort to selling them by public auction. The minority directors claimed they were not notified of said board meeting.

Consequently, Lim moved that the SEC declare as null and void the infusion of additional capital made by the majority stockholders and restore the capital structure of RUBY to its original structure prior to the time injunction was issued. Before the CA, Lim demonstrated the following evidence to rebut the presumption of regularity: (1) it was the board of directors and not the stockholders which conducted the meeting without the approval of the MANCOM; (2) there was no written waivers of the minority stockholders' pre-emptive rights and thus it was irregular to merely notify them of the board of directors' meeting and ask them to exercise their option; (3) there was an existing permanent injunction against any additional capital infusion on the BENHAR/RUBY Plan, while the CA and this Court both rejected the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan; (4) there was no General Information Sheet reports made to the SEC on the alleged capital infusion, as per certification by the SEC.

ISSUE

Whether or not the additional capital infusion is valid.

RULING

NO. The issuance of additional shares was done in breach of trust by the controlling stockholders. Here, the majority sought to impose their will and, through fraudulent means, attempt to siphon off Ruby's valuable assets to the great prejudice of Ruby itself, as well as the minority stockholders and the unsecured creditors.

A stock corporation is expressly granted the power to issue or sell stocks. The power to issue shares of stock in a corporation is lodged in the board of directors and no stockholders' meeting is required to consider it because additional issuances of shares of stock do not need approval of the stockholders. What is only required is the board resolution approving the additional issuance of shares. The corporation shall also file the necessary application with the SEC to exempt these from the registration requirements under the Revised Securities Act (now the Securities Regulation Code).

The SEC remained indifferent to the reliefs sought by the minority stockholders, saying that the issue of the validity of the additional capital infusion was belatedly raised. Even assuming the October 2, 1991 board meeting indeed took place, the SEC did nothing to ascertain whether indeed, as the minority claimed: (1) the minority stockholders were not given notice as required and reasonable time to exercise their pre-emptive rights; and (2) the capital infusion was not for the purpose of rehabilitation but a mere ploy to divest the minority stockholders of their 40.172% shareholding and reduce it to a mere 25.25%.

Pre-emptive right under Sec. 39 of the Corporation Code refers to the right of a stockholder of a stock corporation to subscribe to all issues or disposition of shares of any class, in proportion to their respective shareholdings. The right may be restricted or denied under the articles of incorporation, and subject to certain exceptions and limitations. The stockholder must be given a reasonable time within which to exercise their preemptive rights. Upon the expiration of said period, any stockholder who has not exercised such right will be deemed to have waived it.

The validity of issuance of additional shares may be questioned if done in breach of trust by the controlling stockholders. Thus, even if the pre-emptive right does not exist, either because the issue comes within the exceptions in Section 39 or because it is denied or limited in the articles of incorporation, an issue of shares may still be objectionable if the directors acted in breach of trust and their primary purpose is to perpetuate or shift control of the corporation, or to "freeze out" the minority interest. In this case, the following relevant observations should have signaled greater circumspection on the part of the SEC -- upon the third and last remand to it pursuant to the January 20, 1998 Decision -- to demand transparency and accountability from the majority stockholders, in view of the illegal assignments and objectionable features of the Revised BENHAR/RUBY Plan, as found by the CA and as affirmed by the Supreme Court.

d. Right to Vote

CECILIA CASTILLO, OSCAR DEL ROSARIO, ARTURO S. FLORES, XERXES NAVARRO, MARIA ANTONIA TEMPLO and MEDICAL CENTER PARAÑAQUE, INC., Petitioners
-versus- ANGELES BALINGHASAY, RENATO BERNABE, ALODIA DEL ROSARIO, ROMEO FUNTILA, TERESITA GAYANILO, RUSTICO JIMENEZ, ARACELI JO, ESMERALDA MEDINA, CECILIA MONTALBAN, VIRGILIO OBLEPIAS, CARMENCITA PARRENO, CESAR REYES, REYNALDO SAVET, SERAPIO TACCAD, VICENTE VALDEZ, SALVACION VILLAMORA, and HUMBERTO VILLAREAL, *Respondents
GR. No. 150976, FIRST DIVISION, October 18, 2004, QUISUMBING, J.

One of the rights of a stockholder is the right to participate in the control and management of the corporation that is exercised through his vote. The right to vote is a right inherent in and incidental to the ownership of corporate stock, and as such is a property right. The stockholder cannot be deprived of the right to vote his stock nor may the right be essentially impaired, either by the legislature or by the corporation, without his consent, through amending the charter, or the by-laws

FACTS

MCPI is a domestic corporation. It was organized sometime in September 1977. At the time of its incorporation, Act No. 1459, the old Corporation Law was still in force and effect.

Article VII of MCPI's original Articles of Incorporation provides That the authorized capital stock of the corporation is TWO MILLION (₱2,000,000.00) PESOS, divided into TWO THOUSAND (2,000) SHARES at a par value of ₱100 each share. the ONE THOUSAND SHARES issued to, and subscribed by, the incorporating stockholders shall be classified as Class A shares while the other ONE THOUSAND unissued shares shall be considered as Class B shares. Only holders of Class A shares can have the right to vote and the right to be elected as directors or as corporate officers.

On September 9, 1992, Article VII was amended to provide as follows:

That the authorized capital stock of the corporation is THIRTY TWO MILLION PESOS (P32,000,000.00) divided as follows:

CLASS	NO. OF SHARES	PAR VALUE
"A"	1,000	₱1,000.00
"B"	31,000	1,000.00

Except when otherwise provided by law, only holders of Class "A" shares have the right to vote and the right to be elected as directors or as corporate officers

Petitioners and the respondents are stockholders of MCPI, with the former holding Class "B" shares and the latter owning Class "A" shares.

The shareholders of MCPI held their annual stockholders' meeting and election for directors. During the course of the proceedings, respondent Rustico Jimenez, citing Article VII, as amended, and notwithstanding MCPI's history, declared over the objections of herein petitioners, that no Class "B" shareholder was qualified to run or be voted upon as a director. In the past, MCPI had seen holders of Class "B" shares voted for and serve as members of the corporate board and some Class "B" share owners were in fact nominated for election as board members. Nonetheless, Jimenez went on to announce that the candidates holding Class "A" shares were the winners of all seats in the corporate board. The petitioners protested, claiming that Article VII was null and void for depriving them, as Class "B" shareholders, of their right to vote and to be voted upon, in violation of the Corporation Code (Batas Pambansa Blg. 68), as amended.

Herein petitioners filed a Complaint for Injunction, Accounting and Damages, before the RTC for Annulment of the declaration of directors of the MCPI and for the conduct of an election whereat all stockholders, irrespective of the classification of the shares they hold, should be afforded their right to vote and be voted for.

The RTC ruled that the election held on February 9, 2001 is VALID as the holders of CLASS "B" shares are not entitled to vote and be voted for.

Petitioners assert that Article VII of the Articles of Incorporation of MCPI, which denied them voting rights, is null and void for being contrary to Section 6 of the Corporation Code. They point out that Section 6 prohibits the deprivation of voting rights except as to preferred and redeemable shares only. Hence, under the present law on corporations, all shareholders, regardless of classification, other than holders of preferred or redeemable shares, are entitled to vote and to be elected as corporate directors or officers. Since the Class "B" shareholders are not classified as holders of either preferred or redeemable shares, then it necessarily follows that they are entitled to vote and to be voted for as directors or officers.

The respondents, in turn, maintain that the grant of exclusive voting rights to Class "A" shares is clearly provided in the Articles of Incorporation and is in accord with Section 5[9] of the Corporation

Law (Act No. 1459), which was the prevailing law when MCPI was incorporated in 1977. They likewise submit that as the Articles of Incorporation of MCPI is in the nature of a contract between the corporation and its shareholders and Section 6 of the Corporation Code could not retroactively apply to it without violating the non-impairment clause[10] of the Constitution.

ISSUE

Whether or not holders of Class "B" shares of the MCPI may be deprived of the right to vote and be voted for as directors in MCPI.

RULING

When Article VII of the Articles of Incorporation of MCPI was amended in 1992, the phrase "except when otherwise provided by law" was inserted in the provision governing the grant of voting powers to Class "A" shareholders. This particular amendment is relevant for it speaks of a law providing for exceptions to the exclusive grant of voting rights to Class "A" stockholders. Which law was the amendment referring to? The determination of which law to apply is necessary. There are two laws being cited and relied upon by the parties in this case. In this instance, the law in force at the time of the 1992 amendment was the Corporation Code (B.P. Blg. 68), not the Corporation Law (Act No. 1459), which had been repealed by then.

We find and so hold that the law referred to in the amendment to Article VII refers to the Corporation Code and no other law. At the time of the incorporation of MCPI in 1977, the right of a corporation to classify its shares of stock was sanctioned by Section 5 of Act No. 1459. The law repealing Act No. 1459, B.P. Blg. 68, retained the same grant of right of classification of stock shares to corporations, but with a significant change. Under Section 6 of B.P. Blg. 68, the requirements and restrictions on voting rights were explicitly provided for, such that "no share may be deprived of voting rights except those classified and issued as "preferred" or "redeemable" shares, unless otherwise provided in this Code" and that "there shall always be a class or series of shares which have complete voting rights." Section 6 of the Corporation Code being deemed written into Article VII of the Articles of Incorporation of MCPI, it necessarily follows that unless Class "B" shares of MCPI stocks are clearly categorized to be "preferred" or "redeemable" shares, the holders of said Class "B" shares may not be deprived of their voting rights. Note that there is nothing in the Articles of Incorporation nor an iota of evidence on record to show that Class "B" shares were categorized as either "preferred" or "redeemable" shares. The only possible conclusion is that Class "B" shares fall under neither category and thus, under the law, are allowed to exercise voting rights.

One of the rights of a stockholder is the right to participate in the control and management of the corporation that is exercised through his vote. The right to vote is a right inherent in and incidental to the ownership of corporate stock, and as such is a property right. The stockholder cannot be deprived of the right to vote his stock nor may the right be essentially impaired, either by the legislature or by the corporation, without his consent, through amending the charter, or the by-laws. Neither do we find merit in respondents' position that Section 6 of the Corporation Code cannot apply to MCPI without running afoul of the non-impairment clause of the Bill of Rights. Section 148[12] of the Corporation Code expressly provides that it shall apply to corporations in existence at the time of the effectivity of the Code. Hence, the non-impairment clause is inapplicable in this instance. When Article VII of the Articles of Incorporation of MCPI were amended in 1992, the board of directors and stockholders must have been aware of Section 6 of the Corporation Code and intended that Article

VII be construed in harmony with the Code, which was then already in force and effect. Since Section 6 of the Corporation Code expressly prohibits the deprivation of voting rights, except as to "preferred" and "redeemable" shares, then Article VII of the Articles of Incorporation cannot be construed as granting exclusive voting rights to Class "A" shareholders, to the prejudice of Class "B" shareholders, without running afoul of the letter and spirit of the Corporation Code.

e. Right to Dividends

NIELSON & COMPANY, INC., Plaintiff-appellant -versus- LEPANTO CONSOLIDATED MINING COMPANY, Defendant-appellee
G.R. No. L-21601, EN BANC, December 17, 1966, ZALDIVAR, J.

Stock dividends cannot be issued to a person who is not a stockholder in payment of services rendered.In the case at bar Nielson can not be paid in shares of stock which form part of the stock dividends of Lepanto for services it rendered under the management contract.

FACTS

On January 30, 1937, the parties have entered into an operating agreement wherein Nielson & Co. would operate and manage the mining properties owned by Lepanto Consolidated Mining Co. for a period of five years. Before the lapse of the five year period, the parties have renewed the contract for another five years with modifications made by Lepanto on the management fee.

On its modified contract Nielson will receive (1) 10% of the dividends declared and paid, when and as paid during the period of the contract and at the end of each year, (2) 10% of any depletion reserve that may set up, and (3) 10% of any amount expended during the year out of surplus earnings for capital account.

In January, 1942 operation of the mining properties was disrupted on account of the war. The Japanese forces thereafter occupied the mining properties, operated the mines during the continuance of the war, and who were ousted from the mining properties only in August of 1945.

After the mining properties were liberated from the Japanese forces, Lepanto took possession thereof and embarked in rebuilding and reconstructing the mines and mill. The restoration lasted for nearly three years and the mines have resumed its operation under the exclusive management of Lepanto. Shortly after the mines were liberated from the Japanese invaders in 1945, a disagreement arose between NIELSON and LEPANTO over the status of the operating contract in question which as renewed expired in 1947.

ISSUE

Whether or not Nielson is entitled to his share in the stock dividends.

HELD

Stock dividends cannot be issued to a person who is not a stockholder in payment of services rendered.

Section 16 of the Corporation Law, in part, provides a follows:

No corporation organized under this Act shall create or issue bills, notes or other evidence of debt, for circulation as money, and no corporation shall issue stock or bonds except in exchange for actual cash paid to the corporation or for: (1) property actually received by it at a fair valuation equal to the par or issued value of the stock or bonds so issued; and in case of disagreement as to their value, the same shall be presumed to be the assessed value or the value appearing in invoices or other commercial documents, as the case may be; and the burden or proof that the real present value of the property is greater than the assessed value or value appearing in invoices or other commercial documents, as the case may be, shall be upon the corporation, or for (2) profits earned by it but not distributed among its stockholders or members; Provided, however, That no stock or bond dividend shall be issued without the approval of stockholders representing not less than two-thirds of all stock then outstanding and entitled to vote at a general meeting of the corporation or at a special meeting duly called for the purpose.
In the case at bar Nielson can not be paid in shares of stock which form part of the stock dividends of Lepanto for services it rendered under the management contract. We sustain the contention of Lepanto that the understanding between Lepanto and Nielson was simply to make the cash value of the stock dividends declared as the basis for determining the amount of compensation that should be paid to Nielson, in the proportion of 10% of the cash value of the stock dividends declared. In other words, Nielson must still be paid his 10% fee using as the basis for computation the cash value of the stock dividends declared.

Moreover, from the above-quoted provision of Section 16 of the Corporation Law, the consideration for which shares of stock may be issued are: (1) cash; (2) property; and (3) undistributed profits. Shares of stock are given the special name "stock dividends" only if they are issued in lieu of undistributed profits. If shares of stocks are issued in exchange of cash or property then those shares do not fall under the category of "stock dividends". A corporation may legally issue shares of stock in consideration of services rendered to it by a person not a stockholder, or in payment of its indebtedness. A share of stock issued to pay for services rendered is equivalent to a stock issued in exchange of property, because services is equivalent to property. Likewise a share of stock issued in payment of indebtedness is equivalent to issuing a stock in exchange for cash. But a share of stock thus issued should be part of the original capital stock of the corporation upon its organization, or part of the stocks issued when the increase of the capitalization of a corporation is properly authorized. In other words, it is the shares of stock that are originally issued by the corporation and forming part of the capital that can be exchanged for cash or services rendered, or property; that is, if the corporation has original shares of stock unsold or unsubscribed, either coming from the original capitalization or from the increased capitalization. Those shares of stock may be issued to a person who is not a stockholder, or to a person already a stockholder in exchange for services rendered or for cash or property. But a share of stock coming from stock dividends declared cannot be issued to one who is not a stockholder of a corporation.

A "stock dividend" is any dividend payable in shares of stock of the corporation declaring or authorizing such dividend.

So, a stock dividend is actually two things: (1) a dividend, and (2) the enforced use of the dividend money to purchase additional shares of stock at par.16 When a corporation issues stock dividends, it shows that the corporation's accumulated profits have been capitalized instead of distributed to the stockholders or retained as surplus available for distribution, in money or kind, should opportunity offer. Far from being a realization of profits for the stockholder, it tends rather to postpone said realization, in that the fund represented by the new stock has been transferred from surplus to assets and no longer available for actual distribution. Thus, it is apparent that stock dividends are issued only to stockholders. This is so because only stockholders are entitled to dividends. They are the only ones who have a right to a proportional share in that part of the surplus which is declared as dividends. A stock dividend really adds nothing to the interest of the stockholder; the proportional interest of each stockholder remains the same.18If a stockholder is deprived of his stock dividends – and this happens if the shares of stock forming part of the stock dividends are issued to a non-stockholder — then the proportion of the stockholder's interest changes radically. Stock dividends are civil fruits of the original investment, and to the owners of the shares belong the civil fruits.

NORA A. BITONG, Petitioner –versus- COURT OF APPEALS (FIFTH DIVISION), EUGENIA D. APOSTOL, JOSE A. APOSTOL, MR. & MS. PUBLISHING CO., LETTY J. MAGSANOC, AND ADORACION G. NUYDA, Respondents

GR. No. 123553, FIRST DIVISION, July 13, 1998, BELLOSILLO, J.

The basis of a stockholder's suit is always one in equity. However, it cannot prosper without first complying with the legal requisites for its institution. The most important of these is the bona fide ownership by a stockholder of a stock in his own right at the time of the transaction complained of which invests him with standing to institute a derivative action for the benefit of the corporation.

FACTS

Nora Bitong claimed before the SEC that she had been the Treasurer and a Member of the Board of Directors of private respondent Mr. & Ms. Publishing Co., Inc. (Mr. & Ms.) from the time it was incorporated on 29 October 1976 to 11 April 1989, and was the registered owner of 1,000 shares of stock out of the 4,088 total outstanding shares.

Allegedly acting for the benefit of Mr. & Ms. Co., Bitong filed a derivative suit before the SEC against respondent spouses Eugenia D. Apostol and Jose A. Apostol, who were officers in said corporation, to hold them liable for fraud and mismanagement in directing its affairs.

Respondent spouses moved to dismiss on the ground that petitioner had no legal standing to bring the suit as she was merely a holder---in---trust of shares of JAKA Investments which continued to be the true stockholder of Mr. & Ms.

Petitioner contends that she was a holder of proper stock certificates and that the transfer was recorded. She further contends that even in the absence of the actual certificate, mere recording will suffice for her to exercise all stockholder rights, including the right to file a derivative suit in the name of the corporation. The SEC Hearing Panel dismissed the suit. On appeal, the SEC En Banc found for petitioner. CA reversed the SEC En Banc decision

ISSUE

Whether or not petitioner is the true holder of stock certificates to be able institute a derivative suit.

RULING

NO. Sec 63 of the Corporation Code envisions a formal certificate of stock which can be issued only upon compliance with certain requisites.

First, the certificates must be signed by the president or vice---‑president, countersigned by the secretary or assistant secretary, and sealed with the seal of the corporation. A mere typewritten statement advising a stockholder of the extent of his ownership in a corporation without qualification and/or authentication cannot be considered as a formal certificate of stock. Second, delivery of the certificate is an essential element of its issuance. Hence, there is no issuance of a stock certificate where it is never detached from the stock books although blanks therein are properly filled up if the person whose name is inserted therein has no control over the books of the company. Third, the par value, as to par value shares, or the full subscription as to no par value shares, must first be fully paid. Fourth, the original certificate must be surrendered where the person requesting the issuance of a certificate is a transferee from a stockholder.

The certificate of stock itself once issued is a continuing affirmation or representation that the stock described therein is valid and genuine and is at least prima facie evidence that it was legally issued in the absence of evidence to the contrary. However, this presumption may be rebutted. Aside from petitioner's own admissions, several corporate documents disclose that the true party---‑in---‑interest is not petitioner but JAKA. It should be emphasized that JAKA executed, a deed of sale over 1,000 Mr. & Ms. shares in favor of respondent Eugenio D. Apostol. On the same day, respondent Apostol signed a declaration of trust stating that she was the registered owner of 1,000 Mr. & Ms. shares covered by a Certificate of Stock. And, there is nothing in the records which shows that JAKA had revoked the trust it reposed on respondent Eugenia D. Apostol. Neither was there any evidence that the principal had requested her to assign and transfer the shares of stock to petitioner. In fine, the records are unclear on how petitioner allegedly acquired the shares of stock of JAKA.

Thus, for a valid transfer of stocks, the requirements are as follows: (a) There must be delivery of the stock certificate; (b) The certificate must be endorsed by the owner or his attorney---‑in---‑fact or other persons legally authorized to make the transfer; and, (c) to be valid against third parties, the transfer must be recorded in the books of the corporation. At most, in the instant case, petitioner has satisfied only the third requirement. Compliance with the first two requisites has not been clearly and sufficiently shown.

f. Right of First Refusal

REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES, Petitioner –versus- SANDIGANBAYAN (3RD DIVISION), JOSE L. AFRICA, UNIMOLCO, ROBERTO BENEDICTO, ANDRES AFRICA and SMART COMMUNICATIONS, Respondents

GR. No. 128606, FIRST DIVISION, December 4, 2000, YNARES-SANTIAGO, J.

Where it is shown that a stockholder had actual knowledge of the intended sale within the period prescribed to exercise the right, the notice requirement had been sufficiently met. In the case at bar, PCGG had actual knowledge of UNIMOLCO's offer to sell its shares of stock. In fact, it issued Resolution No. 96-142 enjoining the sale of the said shares of stock to Smart. Petitioner, thus, cannot feign lack of notice.

Parenthetically, PCGG had no more authority to enjoin the sale of UNIMOLCO's 196,000 shares of stock, as it endeavored to do in Resolution No. 96-142. As correctly found by the Sandiganbayan, since the

196,000 shares of stock had already been adjudicated by final judgment to Benedicto and UNIMOLCO, PCGG could no longer exercise power and authority over the same

FACTS

ETPI was one of the corporations sequestered by the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG). Among its stockholders were Roberto S. Benedicto and UNIMOLCO.

Sometime in 1990, PCGG and Benedicto entered into a compromise agreement whereby Benedicto ceded to the government 204,000 shares of stock in ETPI, representing his fifty-one percent (51%) equity therein. The other forty-nine percent (49%), consisting of 196,000 shares of stock, were released from sequestration and adjudicated by final judgment to Benedicto and UNIMOLCO. Furthermore, the government agreed to withdraw the cases filed against Benedicto and free him from further criminal prosecution.

In a written notice received by Melquiades Gutierrez, the President and Chairman of the Board of ETPI, UNIMOLCO offered to sell to ETPI its 196,000 shares of stock therein.

Meanwhile, on motion of petitioner, through the PCGG, the Sandiganbayan issued a Resolution authorizing the entry in the Stock and Transfer Book of ETPI of the transfer of ownership of 204,000 shares of stock to petitioner, to be taken out of the shareholdings of UNIMOLCO. Benedicto filed a "Manifestation and Motion" with the Sandiganbayan, praying that the Resolution dated May 7, 1996 be modified such that the entry of the 204,000 shares of stock of petitioner in ETPI be taken out of the shareholdings of UNIMOLCO and/or Roberto S. Benedicto.

PCGG issued Resolution No. 96-142 enjoining all stockholders of ETPI from selling shares of stock therein without the written conformity of the PCGG.

Subsequently, UNIMOLCO and Smart Communications executed a Deed of Absolute Sale whereby UNIMOLCO sold its 196,000 shares of stock in ETPI to Smart. Prior to the sale, Smart was not a stockholder of ETPI.

Petitioner filed with the Sandiganbayan a "Motion to Cite Defendant Benedicto and the Parties to the Sale of UNIMOLCO Shares in ETPI in Contempt of Court and to Rescind and/or Annul Said Sale." Petitioner alleged that the sale of the 196,000 shares of stock of UNIMOLCO to Smart was in defiance of the Resolution of the Sandiganbayan, which provided that the 204,000 shares of the government shall come from the shareholdings of UNIMOLCO, and it interfered with the proceedings thereon. In support of its prayer for the rescission and annulment of the sale, petitioner argued that the same violated its right of first refusal to purchase shares of stock in ETPI.

The right of first refusal is contained in Article 10 of the Articles of Incorporation of ETPI,

In its Resolution dated December 6, 1996, the Sandiganbayan denied petitioner's motion for contempt and to rescind or annul the sale of the 196,000 ETPI shares of stock to Smart.

Petitioner argues that it received the notice of UNIMOLCO's offer to sell its shares of stock only on August 30, 1996. The written notice, issued by Atty. Bayani K. Tan, ETPI Corporate Secretary, gave the stockholders, including petitioner, until September 26, 1996 within which to exercise their preemptive right. On September 24, 1996, petitioner sent a letter to the Corporate Secretary stating that the government is exercising its right of first refusal and offering payment thereof in the form of compensation or set-off against the assets of respondent Benedicto still due to the Philippine government under the Compromise Agreement.

Respondents UNIMOLCO, Benedicto and Andres L. Africa filed their Comment, 8 arguing that petitioner's offer of payment by way of set-off was invalid, inasmuch as the Articles of Incorporation of ETPI specifically provided that tender of payment should be in cash, certified check or checks drawn on a Philippine bank.

ISSUE

W/N the sandiganbayan erred in not recognizing petitioner pcgg's exercise of its right of first refusal as stockholder, to purchase the 196,000 etpi shares registered in the name of unimolco. (NO)

RULING

The records of the case clearly show that the written notice by UNIMOLCO, the Offeror, of its intention to sell its 196,000 shares of stock was duly received on April 24, 1996 by the President and Chairman of the Board of ETPI. The Sandiganbayan correctly held that this was valid service of the written offer to the corporation, applying by analogy the Rules of Court provisions on service of summons. Petitioner does not dispute that the written notice to the President and Chairman of the Board of ETPI was service to the corporation. It merely argues that after receipt of the offer, ETPI did not act in accordance with the procedure laid down in the Articles of Incorporation.

Petitioner maintains that under the Articles of Incorporation, the Corporate Secretary of ETPI should have given the stockholders written notice of the offer to sell on or before the expiration of the First Period. However, Resolution No. 96-142, adopted by PCGG on June 21, 1996, states among others:

WHEREAS, on 4 June 1996, the PCGG received copy of a letter of 29 May 1996 from Atty. Juan de Ocampo, alleging that he is the Corporate Secretary of ETPI, copy of which is hereto attached, stating that under Article Tenth of the ETPI articles of Incorporation, all stockholders of record have the right of first refusal to purchase pro rata to their holdings in ETPI to expire 20 days (supposed to be 30) from expiry date of ETPI's right of first refusal which was allegedly 24 May 1996, giving the Government up to 18 June 1996 to exercise the right of first refusal to purchase up to 22,148 shares of stock.

From the above, it clearly appears that, by petitioner's own admission and contrary to its belated protestation, the procedure outlined in the Articles of Incorporation relating to the right of first refusal was observed. But petitioner takes exception to Atty. De Ocampo's authority to act as Corporate Secretary of ETPI. In this connection, the Sandiganbayan held:

. . . The question of who are the legitimate directors and officers of ETPI has been elevated to the Supreme Court but has not yet been finally resolved. This should not, however, detract from the fact that PCGG has actually been informed of the intended sale.

We agree with the Sandiganbayan. The purpose of the notice requirement in Article 10 of the ETPI Articles of Incorporation is to give the stockholders knowledge of the intended sale of shares of stock of the corporation, in order that they may exercise their preemptive right. Where it is shown that a stockholder had actual knowledge of the intended sale within the period prescribed to exercise the right, the notice requirement had been sufficiently met. In the case at bar, PCGG had actual knowledge of UNIMOLCO's offer to sell its shares of stock. In fact, it issued Resolution No. 96-142 enjoining the sale of the said shares of stock to Smart. Petitioner, thus, cannot feign lack of notice.

Parenthetically, PCGG had no more authority to enjoin the sale of UNIMOLCO's 196,000 shares of stock, as it endeavored to do in Resolution No. 96-142. As correctly found by the Sandiganbayan, since the 196,000 shares of stock had already been adjudicated by final judgment to Benedicto and UNIMOLCO, PCGG could no longer exercise power and authority over the same.

Therefore, we sustain the Sandiganbayan's ruling that petitioner's right of first refusal was not seasonably exercised.

Even on the assumption that petitioner exercised its right of first refusal on time, it nonetheless failed to follow the requirement in the Articles of Incorporation that payment must be tendered in "cash or certified checks or checks drawn on a Philippine bank or banks." The set-off or compensation it proposed does not fall under any of the recognized modes of payment in the Articles.

Petitioner sought the offsetting of the price of the shares of stock with assets of respondent Benedicto, whom it claimed was indebted to it for certain lands and dividends due to it under their Compromise Agreement. Benedicto was only a stockholder of UNIMOLCO, the Offeror. While he may be the majority stockholder, UNIMOLCO cannot be said to be liable for Benedicto's supposed obligations to petitioner. To be sure, Benedicto and UNIMOLCO are separate and distinct persons. On the basis of this alone, there can be no valid set-off. Petitioner and UNIMOLCO are not principal debtors and creditors of each other.

J.G. SUMMIT HOLDINGS, INC., Petitioner -versus-
COURT OF APPEALS; COMMITTEE ON PRIVATIZATION, its Chairman and Members; ASSET PRIVATIZATION TRUST; and PHILYARDS HOLDINGS, INC., Respondents
GR. No. 124293, SPECIAL FIRST DIVISION, January 31, 2005, PUNO, J.

Public bidding is the accepted method in arriving at a fair and reasonable price and ensures that overpricing, favoritism and other anomalous practices are eliminated or minimized. But the requirement for public bidding does not negate the exercise of the right of first refusal.

FACTS

On January 27, 1977, the National Investment and Development Corporation (NIDC), entered into a Joint Venture Agreement (JVA) with Kawasaki Heavy Industries, Ltd. of Kobe, Japan (KAWASAKI) for the construction, operation and management of the Subic National Shipyard, Inc. (SNS) which subsequently became the Philippine Shipyard and Engineering Corporation (PHILSECO). One of its salient features is the grant to the parties of the right of first refusal should either of them decide to sell, assign or transfer its interest in the joint venture.

NIDC transferred all its rights, title and interest in PHILSECO to the National Government pursuant to Administrative Order No. 14. There after a trust agreement was entered into between the National Government and the Asset Privatization Trust (APT) wherein the latter was named the trustee of the National Governments share in PHILSECO.

In the interest of the national economy and the government, the Committee on Privatization (COP) and APT deemed it best to sell the National Governments share in PHILSECO to private entities. After a series of negotiations between the APT and KAWASAKI, they agreed that the latter's right of first refusal under the JVA be exchanged for the right to top by five percent (5%) the highest bid for the said shares.

At the public bidding on the said date, petitioner J.G. Summit Holdings, Inc. (JGSMI) was declared the highest bidder, the COP approved the sale on December 3, 1993 subject to the right of Kawasaki Heavy Industries, Inc./[PHILYARDS] Holdings, Inc. right to top JGSMI's bid by 5% as specified in the bidding rules."

On December 29, 1993, petitioner informed APT that it was protesting the offer of PHI to top its bid on the grounds that: among others, xxx (b) only KAWASAKI could exercise the right to top; (c) giving the same option to top to PHI constituted unwarranted benefit to a third party; (d) no right of first refusal can be exercised in a public bidding or auction sale; xxx

ISSUE

Whether or not the existence of KAWASAKIs right to top destroys the essence of competitive bidding so as to say that the bidders did not have an opportunity for competition. (NO)

RULING

In the instant case, the sale of the Government shares in PHILSECO was publicly known. All interested bidders were welcomed. The basis for comparing the bids were laid down. All bids were accepted sealed and were opened and read in the presence of the COAs official representative and before all interested bidders.

The essence of competition in public bidding is that the bidders are placed on equal footing. This means that all qualified bidders have an equal chance of winning the auction through their bids. In the case at bar, all of the bidders were exposed to the same risk and were subjected to the same condition, i.e., the existence of KAWASAKIs right to top. Under the ASBR, the Government expressly reserved the right to reject any or all bids, and manifested its intention not to accept the highest bid should KAWASAKI decide to exercise its right to top under the ABSR. This reservation or qualification was made known to the bidders in a pre---‐bidding conference held on September 28, 1993. They all expressly accepted this condition in writing without any qualification.

4. Remedial Rights

a. Individual Suit

SANTIAGO CUA, JR., SOLOMON S. CUA and EXEQUIEL D. ROBLES, in their capacity as Directors of PHILIPPINE RACING CLUB, INC., Petitioners -versus- MIGUEL OCAMPO TAN, JEMIE U. TAN and ATTY. BRIGIDO J. DULAY, Respondents

GR. No. 181455-56, THIRD DIVISION, December 4, 2009, CHICO-NAZARIO, J.

It is well settled in this jurisdiction that where corporate directors are guilty of a breach of trust — not of mere error of judgment or abuse of discretion — and intracorporate remedy is futile or useless, a stockholder may institute a suit in behalf of himself and other stockholders and for thebenefit of the corporation, to bring about a redress of the wrong inflicted directly upon the corporationand indirectly upon the stockholders. A derivative suit, however, must be differentiated from individualand representative or class suits. Suits by stockholders or members of a corporation based onwrongful or fraudulent acts of directors or other persons may be classified into individual suits, classsuits, and derivative suits

FACTS

Philippine Racing Club Inc. (PRCI) was organi zed to carry on the business of a racecourse in all itsbranches and promote the breeding of better horses in the Philippines. P R CI owns two real properties : (1) the Sta. Ana Ractrack or the Makati property and (2) the ' Cavite property. P R CI managementdecided that it was best to spin off the management and development of the Makati property to awholly owned subsidiary. It then opted to ac quire another domestic corporation, JTH Davies Holdings,Inc. (JTH).

P R CI management determined that it could initially ac quire 41, 928, 290 shares, or 95.55% of theoutstanding capital stock of JTH. The P R CI Board of Directors held a meeting on 26 Sep 2006. Amongthe directors present were petitioners Santiago Sr., Santiago Jr., and Solomon, as well as respondent Dulay. After deliberating on the matter of the ac quisition of JT H by P R CI, all the directors present,eXcept respondent Dulay, voted affirmatively to pass and approve the following resolutions : (1) Declaration of Intention to Ac quire and Purchase Shares of Stock of Another Company (2) a SpecialStockholders meeting; (3) Authori zed Attorney in Fact and ProXy. The neXt day, P R CI entered into aSale and Purchase Agreement for the ac quisition from JME of 11.45 of the outstanding capital stockof JTH. In the Special Stockholders Meeting held on 7 November 2006, attended by stockholders with 481, 045,887 shares or 84.42% of the outstanding capital stock of P R CI, the ac quisition by P R CI of JTH was presented for approval. Several stockholders eXpressed their satisfaction with P R CI's decision to purchase JT H shares due to the latter's goodwill.

Thereafter, P R CI again engaged the assistance of SGv. It was then determined that the Makati property could be transferred to JTH in eXchange for the unissued portion of the latter's recently increase authori zed capital stock. The matter of the proposed eXchange was approved by the P R CI Board of Directors in its meeting, again with the lone dissent of respondent Dulay. Subse quently, the Annual Stockholders' Meeting of P R CI was scheduled. It included the property for Shares eXchange between P R CI and JT H, which was supposed to be presented for approval by stocKholders under their agenda during the special meeting.

However respondent Miguel, et al., as minority stockholders of PRCI filed before the RTC a complaint, denominated as a derivative suit with prayer for issuance of TRO/Preliminary Injunction, against the directors of PRCi and/or JTH based on their alleged devices or schemes amounting to fraud or misrepresentation.

ISSUE

Whether or not respondents complaint constituted a valid derivative suit? (No)

RULING

It is well settled in this jurisdiction that where corporate directors are guilty of a breach of trust — not of mere error of judgment or abuse of discretion — and intracorporate remedy is futile or useless, a stockholder may institute a suit in behalf of himself and other stockholders and for the benefit of the corporation, to bring about a redress of the wrong inflicted directly upon the corporation and indirectly upon the stockholders.

A derivative suit must be differentiated from individual and representative or class suits, thus:

Suits by stockholders or members of a corporation based on wrongful or fraudulent acts of directors or other persons may be classified into individual suits, class suits, and derivative suits. Where a stockholder or member is denied the right of inspection, his suit would be individual because the wrong is done to him personally and not to the other stockholders or the corporation. Where the wrong is done to a group of stockholders, as where preferred stockholders' rights are violated, a class or representative suit will be proper for the protection of all stockholders belonging to the same group. But where the acts complained of constitute a wrong to the corporation itself, the cause of action belongs to the corporation and not to the individual stockholder or member. Although in most every case of wrong to the corporation, each stockholder is necessarily affected because the value of his interest therein would be impaired, this fact of itself is not sufficient to give him an individual cause of action since the corporation is a person distinct and separate from him, and can and should itself sue the wrongdoer. Otherwise, not only would the theory of separate entity be violated, but there would be multiplicity of suits as well as a violation of the priority rights of creditors. Furthermore, there is the difficulty of determining the amount of damages that should be paid to each individual stockholder.

However, in cases of mismanagement where the wrongful acts are committed by the directors or trustees themselves, a stockholder or member may find that he has no redress because the former are vested by law with the right to decide whether or not the corporation should sue, and they will never be willing to sue themselves. The corporation would thus be helpless to seek remedy. Because of the frequent occurrence of such a situation, the common law gradually recognized the right of a stockholder to sue on behalf of a corporation in what eventually became known as a "derivative suit." It has been proven to be an effective remedy of the minority against the abuses of management. Thus, an individual stockholder is permitted to institute a derivative suit on behalf of the corporation wherein he holds stock in order to protect or vindicate corporate rights, whenever officials of the corporation refuse to sue or are the ones to be sued or hold the control of the corporation. In such actions, the suing stockholder is regarded as the nominal party, with the corporation as the party in interest.

The afore-quoted exposition is relevant considering the claim of respondents Miguel, et al., that its Complaint in Civil Case No. 07-610 is not just a derivative suit, but also an intracorporate action arising from devices or schemes employed by the PRCI Board of Directors amounting to fraud or misrepresentation. A thorough study of the said Complaint, however, reveals that the distinction is deceptive. The supposed devices and schemes employed by the PRCI Board of Directors amounting to fraud or misrepresentation are the very same bases for the derivative suit. They are the very same acts of the PRCI Board of Directors that have supposedly caused injury to the corporation. From the very beginning of their Complaint, respondents have alleged that they are filing the same "as shareholders, for and in behalf of the Corporation, in order to redress the wrongs committed against the Corporation and to protect or vindicate corporate rights, and to prevent wastage and dissipation of corporate funds and assets and the further commission of illegal acts by the Board of Directors." Although respondents Miguel, et al., also aver that they are seeking "redress for the injuries of the minority stockholders against the wrongdoings of the majority," the rest of the Complaint does not bear this out, and is utterly lacking any allegation of injury personal to them or a certain class of stockholders to which they belong.

Indeed, the Court notes American jurisprudence to the effect that a derivative suit, on one hand, and individual and class suits, on the other, are mutually exclusive, viz:

As the Supreme Court has explained: "A shareholder's derivative suit seeks to recover for the benefit of the corporation and its whole body of shareholders when injury is caused to the corporation that may not otherwise be redressed because of failure of the corporation to act. Thus, 'the action is derivative, i.e., in the corporate right, if the gravamen of the complaint is injury to the corporation, or to the whole body of its stock and property without any severance or distribution among individual holders, or it seeks to recover assets for the corporation or to prevent the dissipation of its assets.' [Citations.]" (Jones, supra, 1 Cal.3d 93, 106, 81 Cal.Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464.) In contrast, "a direct action [is one] filed by the shareholder individually (or on behalf of a class of shareholders to which he or she belongs) for injury to his or her interest as a shareholder. .... [T]he two actions are mutually exclusive: i.e., the right of action and recovery belongs to either the shareholders (direct action) *651 or the corporation (derivative action)." (Friedman, Cal. Practice Guide: Corporations, supra, 6:598, p. 6-127.)

Thus, in Nelson v. Anderson (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 111, 84 Cal.Rptr.2d 753, the 289 minority shareholder alleged that the other shareholder of the corporation negligently managed the business, resulting in its total failure. (Id. at p. 125, 84 Cal.Rptr.2d 753) The appellate court concluded that the plaintiff could not maintain the suit as a direct action: "Because the gravamen of the complaint is injury to the whole body of its stockholders, it was for the corporation to institute and maintain a remedial action. [Citation.] A derivative action would have been appropriate if its responsible officials had refused or failed to act." (Id. at pp. 125-126, 84 Cal.Rptr.2d 753) The court went on to note that the damages shown at trial were the loss of corporate profits. (Id. at p. 126, 84 Cal.Rptr.2d 753) Since "[s]hareholders own neither the property nor the earnings of the corporation," any damages that the plaintiff alleged that resulted from such loss of corporate profits "were incidental to the injury to the corporation."

Based on allegations in the Complaint of Miguel, et al., in Civil Case No. 07-610, the Court determines that there is only a derivative suit, based on the devices and schemes employed by the PRCI Board of Directors that amounts to mismanagement, misrepresentation, fraud, and bad faith.

d. Representative Suit

c. Derivative Suit

CATALINA R. REYES, Petitioner -versus- HON. BIENVENIDO A. TAN, as Judge of the Court of First Instance of Manila, Branch XIII and FRANCISCA R. JUSTINIANI, Respondents
G.R. No. L-16982, EN BANC, September 30, 1961, LABRADOR, J.

It is not denied by petitioner that the allocation of dollars to the corporation for the importation of raw materials was suspended. The importation of textiles instead of raw materials, as well as the failure of the Board of Directors to take action against those directly responsible for the misuse of dollar allocations constitute fraud, or consent thereto on the part of the directors.

Therefore, a breach of trust was committed which justified the derivative suit by a minority stockholder on behalf of the corporation

FACTS

Roxas-Kalaw Textile Mills, Inc. made several purchases aggregating $289,678.86 in New York for raw materials for the textile mill and shipped to the Philippines, which shipment were found out to consist not of raw materials but already finished products.

The Central Bank of the Philippines stopped all dollar allocations for raw materials for the corporation resulting to the paralyzation of the operation of the textile mill and its business.
The supplier of the aforesaid finished goods was the United Commercial Company of New York in which defendant Dalamal had interests, so as the letter of credit for said goods.

Plaintiff and some members of the board of directors urged defendants to proceed against Dalamal, exposing his offense to the Central Bank, and to initiate suit against Dalamal for his fraud against the corporation.

Defendants, petitioner in this certiorari case, refused to proceed against Dalamal and instead continued to deal with the Indian Commercial Company to the damage and prejudice of the corporation.

The prayer asks for the appointment of a receiver and a judgment marking defendants jointly and severally liable for the damages.

ISSUE

Whether the stockholders are justified in constituting the derivative suit. (YES)

RULING

It is not denied by petitioner that the allocation of dollars to the corporation for the importation of raw materials was suspended. The importation of textiles instead of raw materials, as well as the failure of the Board of Directors to take action against those directly responsible for the misuse of dollar allocations constitute fraud, or consent thereto on the part of the directors.

Therefore, a breach of trust was committed which justified the derivative suit by a minority stockholder on behalf of the corporation. It is well settled in this jurisdiction that where corporate directors are guilty of a breach of trust — not of mere error of judgment or abuse of discretion — and intra---‐corporate remedy is futile or useless, a stockholder may institute a suit in behalf of himself and other stockholders and for the benefit of the corporation, to bring about a redress of the wrong inflicted directly upon the corporation and indirectly upon the stockholders.

REPUBLIC BANK, represented in this action by DAMASO P. PEREZ, etc., Plaintiff-appellant – versus- MIGUEL CUADERNO, BIENVENIDO DIZON, PABLO ROMAN, THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE REPUBLIC BANK AND THE MONETARY BOARD OF THE CENTRAL BANK OF THE PHILIPPINES, Defendants-appellees

G.R. No. L-22399, EN BANC, March 30, 1967, REYES, J.B.L., J.

Whenever the officials of the corporation refuse to sue, or are the ones to be sued or hold the control of the corporation, an individual stockholder is permitted to institute a derivative or representative suit on behalf of the corporation wherein he holds stock, in order to protect or vindicate corporate rights. In such actions, the suing stockholder is regarded as a nominal party, with the corporation as the real party in interest.

In corporate derivative suits it is not important whether the corporation is made party plaintiff or party defendant because the trial court has the power to direct amendments of the pleadings, by adding or dropping parties, as may be required in the interest of justice. It is enough that the corporation is made a party to the suit so that judgment will be binding upon it to bar future relitigation of issues.

FACTS

